Pinnas bibere, Or, Ad pinnas bibere. The old cuſtom of drinking brought in by the Danes, was to fix a pin in the ſide of the waſſal bowl, and to drink exactly to the pin; as now is practiſed in a ſealed glaſs, &c. This kind of drunkenneſs was forbid the clergy, in the council at London, Anno 1102. Preſbyteri non eant ad potationes, nec ad pinnas bibant. Cowell.

Pipe, (Pipa) Is a roll in the Exchequer, otherwiſe called The Great Roll, anno 37 E 3. c. 4. See Clerk of the Pipe. It is alſo a meaſure of wine, containing two hogſheads, or half a ton, that, is one hundred and twenty-ſix gallons; mentioned in 1 R. 3. c. 3.

Piquant, A French word for ſharp, made uſe of to expreſs malice or rancour againſt any one. Law Fr. Dict.

Pirates, (Piratæ) Are common ſea rovers, without any fixed place of reſidence, who acknowledge no ſovereign and no law, and ſupport themſelves by pillage and depredations at ſea: But there are inſtances wherein the word pirata has been formerly taken for a ſea captain. Spelm.

The crime of piracy, or robbery and depredation upon the HIGH SEAS, is an offence againſt the univerſal law of ſociety; a pirate being, according to Sir Edward Coke, (3 Inſt. 113.) hoſtes humani generis. As therefore he hath renounced all the benefits of ſociety and government, and has reduced himſelf afreſh to the ſavage ſtate of nature, by declaring war againſt all mankind, all mankind muſt declare war againſt him: So that every community hath a right, by the rule of ſelf-defence, to inflict that puniſhment upon him, which every individual would in a ſtate of nature have been otherwiſe entitled to do for any invaſion of his perſon or perſonal property. Black. Com. 4 V. 71.

Pirates are enemies to all: They are denied ſuccour by the law of nations; and by the Civil law, a ranſom promiſed to a pirate, if not complied with, creates no wrong; for the law of arms is not communicated to ſuch, neither are they capable of enjoying that privilege, which lawful enemies are intitled to in the caption of another. Lex Mercat. 183. If a pirate enters a port or haven, and aſſaults and robs a merchant ſhip at anchor there; this is not piracy, becauſe it is not done upon the high ſea; but it is a robbery at the Common law, the act being infra corpus comitatus: And if the crime be committed either ſuper altum mare, or in great rivers within the realm, which are looked upon as common highways, there it is piracy. Moor 756.

It has been held, that piracy, being an offence by the Civil law only, ſhall not be included in a ſtatute ſpeaking generally of felonies, as to benefit of clergy, &c. which ſhall be conſtrued only of thoſe felonies which are ſuch by our law; as thoſe piracies are which are committed in a port or creek, within the body of a county. 2 Hawk. P. C. 345.

If a ſhip be riding at anchor at ſea, and the mariners part in their ſhip boat, and the reſt on ſhore, ſo that none are left in the ſhip; and a pirate attack her, and commits a robbery, it is piracy. 14 Ed. 3. And where a pirate aſſaults a ſhip, and only takes away ſome of the men, in order to ſell them for ſlaves; this is piracy: And if a pirate make an attack on a ſhip, and the maſter for the redemption is compelled to give his oath to pay a certain ſum of money, tho' there be no taking, the ſame is piracy by the Marine law; but, by the Common law, there muſt be an actual taking, as in caſe of robbery on the highway. Lex Mercat. 185. But the taking by a ſhip at ſea, in great neceſſity, of victuals, cables, ropes, &c. out of another ſhip, is no piracy; if that other ſhip can ſpare them, and paying or giving ſecurity therefore. Ibid. 183.

A pirate takes goods upon the ſea, and ſells them, the property is not altered, no more than if a thief on land had ſtolen and ſold them. 27 Ed. 3. cap. 13. Godb. 193. Yet, by the laws of England, if a man commit piracy upon the ſubjects of any other prince, and brings the goods into England and ſells them in a market-overt, the ſame ſhall be binding, and the owners be concluded. Hob. 79.

When goods are taken by a pirate, and afterwards the pirate making an attack upon another ſhip, is conquered and taken by the other, by the law marine the admiral may make reſtitution of the goods to the owners, if they are fellow ſubjects of the captures, or belong to any ſtate in amity with his ſovereign, on paying the coſts and charges, and making the captor an equitable conſideration for his ſervice. Lex Mercat. 184. If a pirate at ſea aſſault a ſhip, and in the engagement kills a perſon in the other ſhip, by the Common law, all the perſons on board the pirate ſhip are principals in the murder, altho' none enter the other ſhip; but, by the Marine law, they who give the wound only ſhall be principals, and the reſt acceſſaries, if the parties can be known. Yelv. 135. It has been holden, that there cannot be an acceſſary of piracy, but if it happens, that there is an acceſſary upon the ſea, ſuch acceſſary may be puniſhed by the Civil law before the Lord Admiral: And it was made a doubt, whether an acceſſary at land to a felony at ſea, was triable by the admiral, within the purview of 28 H. 8. c. 15. Though this is ſettled by 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 7. which provides that acceſſaries to piracy, before or after, ſhall be inquired of, tried and adjudged according to the ſaid ſtatute. 2 Hawk. 222.

In caſe the ſubjects of a prince in enmity with the crown of England, enter themſelves ſailors on board an Engliſh pirate, and a robbery is committed by them, who are afterwards taken; it is felony in the Engliſh, but not in the ſtrangers: But in ancient times it was petit treaſon in the Engliſh, and felony in the ſtrangers: And if any Engliſhman commits piracy upon the ſubjects of any prince or ſtate in amity with England, they are within the ſtatute 28 H. 8. c. 15. If the ſubjects of any nation or kingdom in amity with England, ſhall commit a piracy on the ſhips or goods of the Engliſh, the ſame is felony, and puniſhable by this ſtatute: And piracy committed by the ſubjects of France, or any other country in friendſhip with us, upon the Britiſh ſeas, is properly puniſhable by the crown of England only. Lex Mercat. 186, 187.

A piracy is attempted on the ocean, if the pirates are over-come, the takers may immediately inflict a puniſhment by hanging them up at the main-yard end; though this is underſtood where no legal judgment may be obtained; hence if a ſhip on a voyage to any part of America, or the plantations there, on a diſcovery of thoſe parts, is attacked by a pirate, but in the attempt the pirate is overcome; the pirates may be forthwith executed, without any ſolemnity of condemnation, by the Marine law. Ibid. 184.

By the ancient Common law, piracy, if committed by a ſubject, was held to be a ſpecies of treaſon, being contrary to his natural allegiance; and by an alien to be felony only: But now, ſince the ſtatute of treaſons, 25 Ed. 3. c. 2. it is held to be only felony in a ſubject. 3 Inſt. 113.

Formerly it was only cognizable by the admiralty courts, which proceed by the rules of the Civil law. But, it being inconſiſtent with the liberties of the nation, that any man's life ſhould be taken away, unleſs by the judgment of his peers, or the Common law of the land, the ſtatute 28 Hen. 8. c. 15. eſtabliſhed a new juriſdiction for this purpoſe; which proceeds according to the courſe of the Common law. Black. Com. 4 V. 71.

By ſtat. 28 Hen. 8. c. 15. all robberies committed by pirates, ſhall be inquired of, heard and determined in any county of England, by the King's commiſſion, as if the offences had been committed on land; and ſuch commiſſion ſhall be directed to the Lord Admiral, and other perſons, as ſhall be named by the Lord Chancellor, who ſhall determine ſuch offences after the common courſe of the laws of the kingdom uſed for felonies and robberies, &c. and award judgment and execution as againſt felons for any felony done on the land; and the offenders ſhall ſuffer death, loſs of lands and goods, as if they had been attainted of ſuch offence committed on land, &c.

This ſtatute doth not alter the offence of piracy, but leaves it as it was before, viz. Felony only by the Civil law; but giveth a trial according to the Common law, and inflicts death, &c. as if the offenders had been convicted of any felony done upon the land. 3 Inſt. 112. H. P. C. 77. And no attainder for this offence corrupts the blood, the ſtatute mentioning only that the offender ſhall ſuffer death, loſs of lands, &c. as if he were attainted of a felony at Common law; but ſays not, that the blood ſhall be corrupted. 3 Inſt. 112. Likewiſe the offender is to be tried on the ſtatute, to forfeit his lands, &c. which are not forfeited by the Civil law. 1 Lil. Abr.

11 & 12 W. 3. c. 7. enacts, That all piracies, committed on the ſea, or in any haven, &c. where the admiral hath juriſdiction, may be tried at ſea, or on the land, in any of his Majeſty's iſlands, &c. abroad, appointed for that purpoſe, by commiſſion, under the Great Seal, or ſeal of the admiralty, directed to ſuch commiſſioners as the King ſhall think fit; who may commit the offenders, and call a court of admiralty, conſiſting of ſeven perſons at leaſt, or, for want of ſeven, any three of the commiſſioners may call others; and the perſons ſo aſſembled may proceed according to the courſe of the admiralty, paſs ſentence of death, and order execution, &c. And commiſſions for trial of offences within the Cinque Ports, ſhall be directed to the warden of the Cinque Ports, and the trial to be by the inhabitants of the ports. And if any natural born ſubjects or denizens, ſhall commit piracy againſt any of his Majeſty's ſubjects at ſea under colour of any commiſſion from any foreign prince, they ſhall be adjudged pirates: If any maſter of a ſhip, or ſeamen give up the ſhip to pirates, or combine to yield up, or run away with any ſhip; or any ſeaman lay violent hands on his commander, or endeavour a revolt in the ſhip, he ſhall be adjudged a pirate, and ſuffer accordingly; alſo if any perſon diſcover a combination for running away with a ſhip, he ſhall be intitled to a reward of 10 l. for every veſſel of 100 tons, and 15 l. if above: And all perſons who ſet forth any pirate, or be aſſiſting to thoſe committing piracy; or that conceal ſuch pirates, or receive any veſſel or goods piratically taken, ſhall be deemed acceſſary to the piracy, and ſuffer as principals. The 8 Geo. 1. c. 24. makes the ſtat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 7. perpetual.

And by 8 Geo. 1. c. 24. Maſters of ſhips trading with pirates, or furniſhing them with ſtores, &c. and perſons correſponding with pirates, are declared guilty of piracy; and ſhall be tried according to 28 Hen. 8. c. 15. and 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 7. and ſuffer death, forfeit lands, &c. Ships fitted out with deſign to trade with pirates, and the goods ſhall be forfeited: And maſters of ſhips, and ſeamen of ſhips carrying guns, being attacked by pirates, if they do not defend their ſhips, ſhall forfeit their wages, and be impriſoned ſix months; but ſeamen wounded in defence of ſhips againſt pirates, ſhall be admitted into Greenwich hoſpital, &c. By 4 Geo. 1. c. 11. the benefit of clergy is taken from all offences of piracy.

When an Engliſh ſhip ſhall have been defended by fight againſt pirates, and any of the officers or ſeamen be killed or wounded, the judge of the admiralty, or mayor or chief officer of any port, aſſiſted by four merchants, may by proceſs levy a ſum not exceeding two per cent. of the value of the ſhip and goods defended, to be diſtributed among the officers and ſeamen, or the widows and children of the perſons killed. Lex Mercat. 186. Pirates are always excepted in general pardons: And indictment for piracy muſt alledge the fact to be done UPON THE SEA: and have both the words felonice and piratice, &c.

By 18 Geo. 2. c. 30. All ſubjects, who, during any war, ſhall commit hoſtilities on the ſea againſt any of his Majeſty's ſubjects by colour of any commiſſion from the enemy, or adhere, or give aid to the enemy upon the ſea, may be tried as pirates, in the court of Admiralty, on ſhip-board or on land, and being convicted ſhall ſuffer death, &c. as other pirates, &c. by the ſtat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 7. But perſons convicted on this act, ſhall not be tried for the ſame crime as for high treaſon; but if not tried on this act, may be tried for high treaſon on the ſtat. 28 H. 8. c. 15. Vide Staundſ. P. C 10. 3 Inſt. 112. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 369, 370. 1 Hawk. P. C. 98.

In the conſtruction of 28 H. 8. c. 15. the following opinions have been holden:

That it does not alter the nature of the offence, ſo as to make that, which was before a felony only by the Civil law, now become a felony by the Common law; for the offence muſt ſtill be alledged as DONE UPON THE SEA, and is no way cognizable by the Common law, but only by virtue of this ſtatute; which, by ordaining that in ſome reſpects it ſhall have the like trial and puniſhments as are uſed for felony at Common law, ſhall not be carried ſo far as to make it alſo agree with it in other particulars which are not mentioned; from hence it follows that this offence remains, as before, of a ſpecial nature, and that it ſhall not be included in a general pardon of all felonies. 3 Inſt. 112. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 370. Moor, 756. Co. Lit. 391.

From the ſame ground it follows, that no perſon in reſpect of this ſtatute be conſtrued to be, or puniſhed as acceſſaries to piracy before or after, as they might have been, if it had been made felony by the ſtatute, whereby all thoſe would incidentally have been acceſſaries in the like caſes in which they would have been acceſſaries to a felony at Common law; therefore acceſſaries to piracy, being neither expreſsly named in the ſtatute, nor by conſtruction included, remain as they were before, and were triable by the Civil law, if their offences were committed on the ſea; but on the land, by no law, until 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 7. for 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 24. which provides againſt acceſſaries in one county to a felony in another, extends not to acceſſaries to an offence committed in no county, but on the ſea; but by 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 7. they are triable in like manner as the principals are by 28 Hen. 8. c. 15 3 Inſt. 112. 1 Hawk. P. C. 99. (Acceſſaries to piracy are made principals, by 8 Geo. 1. c. 24.)

From the ſame ground it follows, that an attainder for this offence corrupts not the blood, for though the ſtatute ſays, that the offender ſhall ſuffer ſuch pains of death, &c. as if he were attainted of a felony at Common law, yet it ſays not, that the blood ſhall be corrupted. 3 Inſt. 112. 1 Hawk P. C. 99.

Yet it has been reſolved, that an offender ſtanding mute on an arraignment, by force of this ſtatute, ſhall have judgment of paine fort & dure; for the words of the ſtatute are, that a commiſſion ſhall be directed, &c. to hear and determine ſuch offences after the common courſe of the laws of the land. 3 Inſt. 114. Dyer 241. pl. 49, 308. pl. 73.

It hath been holden, that the indictment for this offence muſt alledge the fact to be done at ſea, and muſt have the words felonice and piratice; and that no offence is puniſhable by virtue of this act as piracy, which would not have been felony if done on the land, conſequently taking an enemy's ſhip, by an enemy, is not within the ſtatute. 3 Inſt. 112. 1 Rol. Rep. 175. 1 Hawk. P. C. 100.

It is agreed, that this ſtatute extends not to offences done in creeks or ports within the body of a county, becauſe they are, and always were, cognizable by the Common law. Moor 756. 1 Rol. Rep. 175. 1 Hawk. P. C. 100.

But the King ſhall have piratical goods, if the owner be not known. 10 Rep. 109. Dyer 269. Jenk. Cent. 325.

Piſcary, (Piſcaria, vel privilegium piſcandi) Is a right or liberty of fiſhing in the waters of another perſon: And there are three ſorts of piſcaries, Libera piſcaria; Separalis piſcaria; and Communis piſcaria.

In reſpect to the firſt, it is to be obſerved, that it is an excluſive right of fiſhing in a public river; is alſo a royal franchiſe; and is conſidered as ſuch in all countries where the feodal polity has prevailed: Though the making ſuch grants, and by that means appropriating what ſeems unnatural to reſtrain, the uſe of running water, was prohibited for the future by King John's great charter; and the rivers that were fenced in his time were directed to be laid open, as well as the foreſts to be diſafforeſted. This opening was extended, by the ſecond and third charters of Henry III. to thoſe alſo that were fenced under Richard I. ſo that a franchiſe of free fiſhery ought now to be at leaſt as old as the reign of Henry II. This differs from,

The ſecond, Separalis piſcaria; becauſe he that has a ſeveral fiſhery muſt alſo be the owner of the ſoil, which in a free fiſhery is not requiſite. It differs alſo from

The third, Communis piſcaria, a liberty of fiſhing in another man's water, in that the free fiſhery is an excluſive right, the common of piſcary is not ſo: and therefore in a free fiſhery, a man has property in the fiſh before they are caught; in a common of piſcary, not till afterwards. Black. Com. 2 V. 34, 39. which vide, and the ſeveral authorities there cited; alſo vide titles, Fiſhing, and Common of Piſcary.

Placard, (Fr. plaquart, Dutch placcaert) Hath ſeveral ſignifications: In France, it is a table, wherein laws, orders, &c. are written and hung up; in Holland, it is an edict or proclamation; alſo it ſignifies a writing of ſafe conduct; with us it is little uſed, but is mentioned as a licence to uſe certain games, &c. in the ſtat. 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 7. See 33 H. 8. c. 6.

Place, (Locus) Where a fact was committed, is to be alledged in appeals of death, indictments, &c. And place is conſiderable in pleadings, in ſome caſes: Where the law requires a thing to be ſet down in a certain place, the party muſt in his pleadings ſay, it was done there. Co. Lit. 282. When one thing comes in the place of another, it ſhall be ſaid to be of the ſame nature; as in caſe of an exchange, &c. Shep. Epit. 700. See Local.

Placita, Pleas, or pleadings, or debates and trials at law. Placita is a word often mentioned in our hiſtories, and law books; at firſt it ſignified the public aſſemblies of all degrees of men where the King preſided, and they uſually conſulted upon the great affairs of the kingdom, and theſe were called generalia placita, becauſe generalitas univerſorum majorum tam clericorum quam laicorum ibidem conveniebat: This was the cuſtom in France, as well as here, as we are told by Bertinian, in his Annals of France, in the year 767. Some of our hiſtorians, as Simeon of Durham, and others, who wrote above 300 years afterwards, tell us, that thoſe aſſemblies were held in the open fields: and that the placita generalia, and curia regis, were what we now call a parliament: It is true, the lords courts were ſo called, viz. Placita generalia, but oftner curiæ generales, becauſe all their tenants and vaſſals were bound to appear there.

We alſo meet with placitum nominatum, i. e. the day appointed for a criminal to appear and plead, and make his defence. Leg. H. 1. cap. 29. 46, 50. Placitum fractum, i. e. when the day is paſt. Leg. H. 1. cap. 59. Lord Coke tells us, that the word is derived from placendo, quia bene placitare ſuper omnia placet: this ſeems to be a very fanciful derivation of the word: it ſeems rather to be derived from the German plats, or from the Latin plateis, i. e. fields or ſtreets where theſe aſſemblies or courts were firſt held. But this word placita did ſometimes ſignify penalties, fines, mulcts, or emendations, according to Gervaſe of Tilbury, or the Black Book in the Exchequer, lib. 2. tit. 13. Placita autem dicimus pœnas pecuniarias in quas incidunt delinquentes. So in the laws of Hen. 1. cap. 12, 13. Hence the old rule or cuſtom, Comes habet tertium denarium placitorum, is to be thus underſtood; the Earl of the county ſhall have the third part of the money due upon mulcts, fines, and amerciaments impoſed in the aſſiſes and county courts. Cowell.

Placitator, A pleader: Ralf Flambard is recorded to be totius regni placitator. Temp. W. 2. See ſupra, the laſt clauſe of placita.

Plaint, (Fr. plainte, Lat. querela) Is the exhibiting any action, in writing; and the party making his plaint is called the plaintiff. Kitch. 231. A plaint in an inferior court is the entry of an action, after this manner: A. B. complains of C. D. of a plea of treſpaſs, &c. and there are pledges of proſecuting, that is to ſay, John Doe and Richard Roe.

The firſt proceſs in an inferior court is a plaint, which is in the nature of an original writ, becauſe therein is briefly ſet forth the plaintiff's cauſe of action; and on this plaint there may iſſue a pone, till the return of a nihil, upon which a capias will lie againſt the body of the defendant. 2 Lill. Abr. 294.

Where a plaint is levied in an inferior court, the defendant muſt be firſt diſtrained for non-appearance, by ſomething of ſmall value; then, if he doth not appear, a farther diſtreſs is to be taken to a greater value, and ſo on; if all his goods are diſtrained on the firſt diſtreſs, attachment may be iſſued out of B. R. againſt the officers, &c. Ibid. A plaintiff in an aſſiſe may abridge his plaint of any part whereupon a bar is pleaded. 21 Hen. 8. c. 3. See County Court. And Black. Com. 3 V. 273.

Plaint in a ſuperior court, is ſaid to be the cauſe for which the plaintiff complains againſt the defendant; and for which he obtains the King's writ: For as the King denies his writ to none, if there be cauſe to grant it; ſo he grants not his writ to any, without there be cauſe alledged for it. 2 Lill. 294.

Plantation, (Plantatio, Colonia) Is a place where people are ſent to dwell; or a company of people tranſplanted from one place to another, with an allowance of land for their tillage. Lit. Dict.

All waſtes, which the natives in any country make no uſe of, nor can receive any damage by their being in the hands of others, may lawfully be poſſeſſed by planters. If a nation or people be expelled out of their own land, they may ſeek void places in ſome other country, and there may juſtly plant; and the immediate poſſeſſing ſuch plantations creates a right againſt all perſons but he who hath empire there. Lex Mercat. 156. And where perſons having arrived in any territories and planted there, if, before they can reap the fruits of their labour, the neceſſities of human life are wanting, by the laws of nature they may force a ſubſiſtence from a neighbour planter; becauſe a ſubſiſtence belongs to every man unleſs he has merited to loſe the life he ſeeks to preſerve. Ibid.

Our plantations abroad are chiefly iſlands in America, and the Leeward Iſlands, &c. The plantation Iſlands being got by conqueſt, or by the King's ſubjects going in ſearch of ſome prize, and planting themſelves there, the King is not reſtrained by the laws of England to govern them by any particular laws, but may govern them by what law he will: but it has been adjudged, That the laws and cuſtoms by which the people of any iſland or plantation were governed before the conqueſt thereof, bind them until new laws are given; for there is a neceſſity that the former ſhall be in force till the new are obtained, and even then ſome of their old cuſtoms may remain, as they do in Barbadoes, &c. If an uninhabited country be newly found out by Engliſh ſubjects, all the laws of the kingdom of England are immediately in force there. 2 Salk. 411. 3 Mod. 159. 4 Mod. 225, 226.

Our American plantations were obtained in the laſt century either by conqueſt and driving out the natives (with what natural juſtice we ſhall not at preſent enquire) or by treaties. And therefore (ſays Blackſtone) the Common law of England, as ſuch, has no allowance or authority there; they being no part of the mother country, but diſtinct (though dependent) dominions. They are ſubject however to the controul of parliament; though not bound by any acts of parliament unleſs particularly named.

With reſpect to their interior polity our colonies are properly of three ſorts. 1. Provincial eſtabliſhments. 2. Proprietary governments. 3. Charter governments. The form of government in moſt of them is borrowed from that of England. They have a governor named by the King, (or in ſome proprietary colonies by the proprietor) who is his repreſentative or deputy. They have courts of juſtice of their own, from whoſe deciſions an appeal lies to the King in council here in England. Their general aſſemblies, which are their houſe of commons, together with their council of ſtate, being their upper houſe, with the concurrence of the King or his repreſentative the governor, make laws ſuited to their own emergencies. But all laws, &c. in the plantations that are repugnant to any law made, or to be made in this kingdom, are void. See Com. 1 V. 106.

For the ſeveral ſtatutes relating to the plantations, ſee Table to the Statutes.

Plate, Hoy, or ſmall water veſſel; it is mentioned in 13 Eliz. cap. 15. Alſo veſſels, &c. of gold and ſilver are called plate, as well in law, as in trade. By 29 G. 2. c. 14 A tax was laid on all perſons poſſeſſed of plate, but that ſtatute has been repealed by 17 G. 3. c. 39.

By 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 19. ſ. 3. Public houſes were prohibited to uſe plate. After this part of the act had lain dormant many years, a ſet of informers ſuddenly aroſe, and brought a number of actions for the penalties, forfeited by virtue of the act, whereupon many publicans raiſed a ſum of money to pay the expence of a bill to repeal this clauſe, and obtained an act for the repeal, which is the 9 Geo. 3. cap. 11. See Table to the Statutes title Gold.

Playhouſe, Playhouſes were originally inſtituted with a deſign of recommending virtue and expoſing vice and folly; therefore are not in their own nature nuſances: but it hath been holden, that a common playhouſe may be a nuſance, if it draw together great numbers of coaches, &c. as prove generally inconvenient to the places adjacent. 5 Mod. 142.

If any perſons in plays, &c. jeſtingly or profanely uſe the name of God, they forfeit 10*l.* 3 Jac. 1. c. 21. And players ſpeaking any thing in derogation of religion, &c. are liable to forfeitures and impriſonment. 1 Eliz. Alſo acting plays or interludes on a Sunday, is ſubject to penalties, by 1 Car. 1. cap. 1.

By 10 G. 2. c. 28. No perſon ſhall act any new play or addition to an old one, &c. unleſs a true copy thereof, ſigned by the maſter of the playhouſe, be ſent to the Lord Chamberlain fourteen days before acted; who may prohibit the repreſenting any ſtage play: And perſons acting contrary to ſuch prohibition, forfeit 50*l.* and their licences, &c. And no licence is to be given to act plays, but in the city and liberties of Weſtminſter, or places of his Majeſty's reſidence. Plea, (Placitum) Is that which either party alledges for himſelf in court, in a cauſe there depending to be tried.

Pleading, in a large ſenſe, contains all the matters which come after the declaration, till iſſue is joined; but is commonly taken for the defendant's anſwer to the declaration.

Pleas are divided into pleas of the crown, and common pleas; pleas of the crown are all ſuits in the King's name, for offences committed againſt his crown and dignity, and alſo againſt the peace. Common pleas are thoſe that are agitated between common perſons, in civil caſes: And pleas may be farther divided into as many branches as action; for they ſignify all one. S. P. C. cap. 1. 4 Inſt. 10.

A plea to the action is that which goes to the merits of the cauſe or action; and is general to the declaration, or a ſpecial plea: A general plea in debt or contract, is He owes nothing: In debt on bond, It is not his deed, or He paid it at the day; in action of the caſe upon a promiſe, He did not promiſe; in treſpaſs upon the caſe, Not guilty; in covenant, performance of covenants, &c.

A ſpecial plea contains the matter at large, concluding to the declaration or action; and ſpecial pleas are many, as by dureſs and per minas, and in juſtification, that in aſſault and battery, the plaintiff ſtruck the firſt blow, &c. In waſte, on nul waſte pleaded, the defendant cannot plead juſtifiable waſte; but he may give in evidence, lightning, enemies, &c. to prove it to be no waſte: He is to confeſs the fact, and plead ſpecially in theſe caſes. Finch 362, 378. Co. Lit. 282, 372.

Special pleas in anſwer to the declaration, are pleas in bar, or in abatement; and every plea muſt be pleaded either in bar to the action, or in abatement of the writ or bill, upon which the action is framed, or it is but a diſcourſe, and not a plea.

Special pleas are drawn up in form, ſetting forth the matter pleaded, &c. and muſt be ſigned by counſel, (ſome few excepted) or they will not be received: A foreign plea is to be ingroſſed in parchment, and ſigned by counſel, and be put in, on the oath of defendant, that the plea is true. Practiſ. Attorn. Edit. 1. pag 80. And when a defendant hath pleaded, the plaintiff anſwers the defendant's plea, which is called a replication; and the defendant anſwers the replication, by rejoinder: which the plaintiff may anſwer by ſurrejoinder; and ſometimes, (tho' ſeldom,) pleadings come to rebutter; in anſwer to ſurrejoinder; and ſurrebutter. Co. Lit. 303.

The order of pleading.

In good order of pleading, a perſon ought to plead,

1ſt, To the juriſdiction of the court.

3dly, To the writ.

4thly, To the action of the writ.

5thly, To the count or declaration.

A plea to the juriſdiction is called a foreign plea, becauſe it alledges that the matter ought to be tried in another court, &c.

Pleas to the perſon, have been formerly ſix, viz. villenage, outlawry, excommunication, the party an alien, out of protection, and profeſſed in religion; but the laſt is now no plea.

The plea to the writ, &c. is for variance between the writ and record, death of parties, miſnomer, joint-tenancy, &c. and may be to the writ and bill, or count together.

Pleas to the count or declaration are variance between the writ and count, ſpecialty or record, incertainty, &c. and all theſe are properly pleas in abatement.

Plea to the action of the writ is where one pleadeth ſuch matter which ſheweth the plaintiff had no cauſe to have the writ brought. And a plea in bar to the action itſelf, is when defendant pleadeth a plea which is ſufficient to overthrow the action. Kitch. 95. Lit. 196. Pleas in bar, ſuch as a releaſe, the ſtatute of limitations, agreement with ſatisfaction, &c. deſtroy the plaintiff's action for ever: but pleas in abatement are temporary and dilatory, and do not deſtroy the action, only ſtop the cauſe for a while, till the defect is removed; as where there is ſome fault in the writ or declaration, miſnomer of the defendant, where the plaintiff is excommunicate, &c. A plea to the juriſdiction, of miſnomer, or any other plea in abatement, cannot be pleaded after a general imparlance; tho' a plea in bar may, becauſe that goes to deſtroy the action. 2 Lutw. 1174.

Pleas in bar may come after a continuance, or general imparlance; but if ſuch plea be firſt pleaded, the defendant ſhall not be admitted afterwards to plead in abatement of the writ, which is allowed to be good by pleading in bar to the action; yet matter of record may be ſhewn in arreſt of judgment, and thereby the writ be abated. Hob. 280, 281.

Plea in abatement ought not to be received after a general imparlance; but if it be accepted, and the plaintiff doth demur to it, the demurrer is good: After defendant hath pleaded in abatement, and before he pleads directly in bar, he may demur to the declaration, as he may where he is adviſed that the declaration is inſufficient, &c. Pract. Solic. 235, 236.

It has been reſolved, That where a plea is in abatement, if it be of neceſſity that the defendant muſt diſcloſe matter of bar, he ſhall have his election to take it either by way of bar, or abatement. 2 Mod. 65. If a defendant can have no advantage by pleading in abatement, or by demurring, he may plead in general. A releaſe or defeaſance; acceptance of other things; tender of amends; concord or accord; arbitrament; auterfoits bar by former judgment; the ſtatute of limitation; diſability of plaintiff; privilege of defendant, or other matter: and ſeveral matters pleadable in abatement, may be pleaded in bar. Pract. Attorn. 1 Edit. 82. Alſo he may plead another action depending of the ſame nature, for the ſame thing, &c. and if a perſon miſtaking his firſt action, bring another action without diſcontinuing the firſt, this plea may be pleaded. 1 Salk. 392. But this is in abatement.

There is likewiſe a plea puis darrein continuance, where defendant hath pleaded a plea, and before trial there happens ſome new matter, which will avoid the action: It may be pleaded after iſſue joined, at any time before verdict; but after verdict, and before day in bank, there is no day to plead it; ſo that the remedy is by audita querela. Cro. Jac. 646.

A defendant with leave, may plead ſeveral matters; but if any ſuch matter be excepted to, and found inſufficient, coſts ſhall be given; And no dilatory plea ſhall be allowed in any court of record, unleſs the truth of it be proved by affidavit; or ſome probable matter be ſhewn. 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16.

When a declaration, or bar, are defective in circumſtances of time, place, etc. this may be helped by the pleading of the adverſe party to it; but not if it be inſufficient in matter. 2 Ventr. 222. 1 Danv. Abr. 156. If defendant pleads a dilatory and frivolous plea, to hinder plaintiff from going to trial; the court, on motion, will order defendant to abide by his plea, or plead inſtanter, ſuch a plea as he will abide by: When a dilatory plea in abatement is over-ruled, there ſhall be a reſpondeas ouſter, except an iſſue be joined on it. 6 Mod. 102. But if a plea in bar is over-ruled, judgment ſhall be given againſt defendant. Lutw. 42.

Where it is doubtful between the parties, whether a plea be good or not, it cannot be determined by the court on motion, but there ought to be a demurrer to the plea; and on arguing thereof, the court will judge of the plea, whether good or bad: And no advantage can be had of double pleading, without ſpecial demurrer. 2 Lill. Abr. 310. Lutw. 422. (This means where one plea, is, in itſelf double.) But tho' the court is to judge of pleading, they will not direct any perſon how to plead, notwithſtanding the matter be difficult; for the parties muſt plead at their peril, and counſel are to adviſe, &c.

If plaintiff's attorney will conſent, defendant may waive his plea pleaded, without moving the court; and if he will not conſent, it cannot be done without moving the court. Trin. 1651. A defendant may waive his ſpecial plea, before iſſue joined, and plead the general iſſue. The defendant, before joinder in demurrer, may amend his plea; and ſo after joinder in demurrer, before argued: And where defendant has demurred, and the plaintiff joined; the court will often allow him to withdraw his demurrer, and plead to the action, if plaintiff hath not been put by a trial. Practiſ. Solic. 303.

Defendant had leave to plead de novo in four days, within which time he ought to have pleaded in chief; but inſtead of that, he pleaded an outlawry of the plaintiff, &c. and thereupon plaintiff ſigned judgment for want of a good plea; but on payment of coſts, &c. and pleading to iſſue immediately, judgment was ſet aſide. Mod. Ca. in L. and E. 289. I do not ſuppoſe a court in Weſtminſter-hall, would now ſet aſide ſuch a judgment unleſs defendant had merits, and thoſe merits were ſworn to.

A plea may be amended, if it be but in paper, and not entered, paying coſts: If after the defendant hath pleaded, the plaintiff alters his declaration, the defendant may alter his plea. 2 Lill. 322. The ſtatutes of jeofails are extended to proceedings in Engliſh (except in criminal caſes). 4 Geo. 2. c. 26. Falſhood in a plea, if not hurtful to plaintiff, nor beneficial to defendant, doth no injury; as it doth where detrimental to plaintiff, &c. Ibid. 297. Tho' if an attorney pleads a falſe plea by deceit, it is againſt his oath, and he may be fined. 1 Salk. 515.

Concerning pleas in general.

All pleas are to be ſuccinct, without unneceſſary repetitions, and be direct and pertinent to the caſe, not by way of argument or rehearſal; and the plea of every man ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf. 2 Lill. 304. The plea muſt directly anſwer the charge in the declaration, or it will not be good. 1 Danv. Abr. 235. If it doth not anſwer all the matter contained in the declaration, the plaintiff ſhall have judgment, as for want of a plea: 1 Lev. 16. (i. e. to the part not anſwered.)

Defendant pleads that he did not receive 80 l. but doth not ſay or any part thereof; and the plea was adjudged ill, for he might receive 79 l. and yet not the whole, &c. 2 Mod. 146.

In pleading a tender, at the putting in of the plea, the money is to be brought into court, or the plea will not be accepted, but the plaintiff ſhall ſign judgment. 2 Lill. Abr. 308. But when judgment in ejectment is ſigned for want of a plea, if poſſeſſion be not delivered, a judge before the aſſiſes may compel plaintiff to accept a plea. 2 Salk. 516.

If a thing is ſhewn in pleading, and it is not afterwards traverſed or averred ſpecially to the contrary, it will be taken to be confeſſed: Tho' the confeſſion of one defendant in his plea, ſhall not prejudice another. Plowd. 48. Hob. 64. A releaſe pleaded to an action of treſpaſs without ſhewing when it was made, ſhall be taken before the treſpaſs done: And a plea of diſcharge or giving notice, &c. muſt ſhew how given. 10 Rep. 40. Plowd. 128. Dyer 41.

Every man muſt plead ſuch plea as is proper; but that need not be pleaded on one ſide, which will come properly on the other. Hob. 3, 78, 162.

Pleadings which amount to no more than the general iſſue, are not to be allowed, but the general iſſue ſhall be entered; and where defendant pleads the general iſſue, he ought to plead, ſo that the whole matter in queſtion may be tried. 2 Lill. 302. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1246. 1 Salk. 394.

If defendant is not conſtrained to plead a ſpecial plea, he may plead the general iſſue, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence: And in many caſes general pleadings are permitted, to avoid tediousneſs and multiplicity, and the particular ſhall come on the other ſide; as in caſe of a condition to perform covenants; but where a thing reſts in a man's own notice, he muſt plead it particularly. Co. Lit. 303. 8 Rep. 133. 2 Danv. Abr. 249. 2 Nelſ. 1249.

If a party pleading derives an eſtate to another, under which he doth not claim any thing, there general pleading is ſufficient, becauſe he hath no means to know another man's title; but it is otherwiſe where he himſelf claims under it. Carth. 209.

General eſtates in fee-ſimple may be generally alledged: Eſtates in tail, and particular eſtates, muſt be ſhewn. A plea of conveyance of lands, &c. inter alia, where the conveyance contains more than relates to the matter of the plea, is good. 1 Rol. Rep. 72.

Bonds and deeds are to be pleaded with a profert hic in curia, &c. Ibid. 1261.

If one comes in by act of law, the general allegation will ſuffice; and things ſpiritual, or where the plea conſiſts of matter infinite, may be generally pleaded: All neceſſary circumſtances implied by law, need not be expreſſed in the plea; but when any ſpecial or ſubſtantial matter is alledged, it ſhall be ſpecially anſwered; ſo matters of record, where they are the foundation of the ſuit, or ſubſtance of the plea. 10 Rep. 94. Cro. Car. 749. Plowd. 65.

That which is alledged by way of inducement to the ſubſtance of the matter, need not be certainly alledged, as the ſubſtance itſelf. Plowd. 81. He who pleads in the negative, is not bound to plead ſo exactly as he who pleads in the affirmative: And that which a man cannot have certain knowledge of, he is not bound certainly to plead. Plowd. 33, 80, 126, 129.

Every affirmative in pleading ought to be anſwered with an expreſs negative; and if a perſon be named to be dwelling at A. it is no plea to ſay, that he is an inhabitant at ſome other place; unleſs it conclude in the negative, and not at A. Co. Lit. 126. 19 H. 6. 1.

It is a rule in pleading, That when a man pleads ſpecial matter, and concludes generally, he thereby waives the ſpecial matter. Farreſl. Rep. 53. Pleas that are too general are not good. 1 Lutw. 239. 2 Salk. 521. And every plea ought to be ſingle and certain; and not double, or contain a multitude of diſtinct matters to one and the ſame thing, whereto ſeveral anſwers are required, which will not be allowed; nor where defendant pleads two matters, each being a ſufficient bar to the action, unleſs one depends on the other, or defendant cannot come at the one, without ſhewing the other, when it is good. 11 Rep. 52. 1 Vent. 48, 272. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1254.

Where the matter is indifferent to be well or ill, and the party pleads over, the court will intend it well. Mod. Caſ. 136. If there be a repugnancy in pleading, it is error. 2 And. 182. Jenk. Cent. 21. And a man ſhall not take advantage of his own wrong, by pleading, &c. Cro. Jac. 588. A man cannot plead any thing afterwards which he might have pleaded at firſt. Ibid. 318. Tho' ſurpluſage ſhall never make the plea vicious, but where it is contrary to the matter before. Raym. 8.

When a matter is expreſly pleaded by one party in the affirmative, which is expreſly denied by the other party, the next thing is to be an iſſue in order to trial, that they may not plead in infinitum. Raym. 199.

The law requires in every plea two things, viz. matter ſufficient; and that it be expreſs'd according to the form of the law. Hob. 164. But it is ſaid a man is not bound to one form of pleading, ſo he plead the ſubſtance of the matter. Plowd. 435.

The old way of pleading a record was to begin at the original, and not omit any continuance, &c. And there is a diverſity where a judgment is ſeveral, and when it is entire; for if forty acres of land are recovered, here a plea of recovery of twenty acres is ill; but it ſhould be pleaded of the forty acres, whereof twenty are parcel. Comber. 253.

All pleas are to be in Engliſh, and not in Latin: Each plea is to have its proper concluſion; and regularly all pleas that are affirmative conclude, And this he is ready to verify, &c. A plea in abatement begins, That the defendant ought not to anſwer the bill, &c. and concludes thus: Whereupon he prays judgment of the bill, or declaration aforeſaid; and that the bill be quaſhed, &c. In a plea in bar, the defendant in the beginning ſays, That the plaintiff ought not to have or maintain his action againſt him; and concludes to the action, viz. He prays judgment if the plaintiff ought to have or maintain his action againſt him, &c. A plea of a record ought to conclude, And this he is ready to verify by the record, &c. Pract. Solic. 236. 2 Nelſ. 1269.

It is ſaid that the concluſion makes the plea; for if it begins in bar, and concludes in abatement, it is a plea in abatement. Ld. Raym. 337.

The practice of the courts, reſpecting pleading.

The court never orders a defendant to plead peremptorily, till all the rules are out: And where the plaintiff amends and gives an imparlance, there ſhall be new rules given to plead, but not if there is no imparlance. 2 Salk. 517.

If defendant doth not plead on rule to anſwer, before the rule is expired, the plaintiff's attorney may afterwards enter up judgment by nil dicit. Pract. Solic. 303.

By an order of court, reciting that, by the former practice, defendants had uſually been allowed eight days time to plead; it was ordered, that four days only ſhould be allowed ſuch defendants from the time of giving any rules. Ord. Trin. 1727. And on proceſs returnable the firſt or ſecond returns of terms; defendant is to plead in four days, if he lives within twenty miles of London, and eight days if farther off; after delivery of the declaration, with notice to plead, &c. or on default, plaintiff may ſign judgment. Ord. Trin. 5 Geo. 1.

In B. R. ſpecial pleas are left with the clerk of the papers, and the plaintiff's attorney is to take a copy thereof from him, for which he pays 6*d.* per ſheet, and puts in his replication; and then he carries the declaration to him, who will make up the paper-book, and write a rule on the ſide: this paper-book is to be delivered to defendant's attorney, and he muſt pay for entering his warrant of attorney, and 10*d.* a folio for his pleading, etc. And if defendant doth not receive the paper-book, and return it to the attorney for the plaintiff, on his calling for it to be entered in four days; then a non proſ. may be entered for want of a plea. See 6 Mod. 22.

Pleas in criminal caſes. One indicted of felony, etc. ought not to be allowed to plead to the indictment, till he holds up his hand at the bar; which is in nature of an appearance, etc. A priſoner on his arraignment may plead the general iſſue, or in abatement, etc. or demur to the indictment; and he may plead in bar, auterfoits acquit, auterfoits convict before judgment, auterfoits attaint, etc. viz. That he was heretofore acquitted, convicted, or attainted of the ſame felony. H. P. C. 228. 3 Inſt. 213. 214. A criminal may alſo plead a pardon, or benefit of clergy; tho' this laſt is not uſually pleaded until he has otherwiſe pleaded before. Vide Auterfoits, Acquit. and Black. Com. 3 V. 40. 4 V. 2, 417.

To an indictment for an aſſault etc. if the proſecutor ſtruck firſt, the defendant is not, as in civil ſuits, to plead ſon aſſault demeſne, but the general iſſue, Not guilty, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence.

Pleadings, Are all the ſayings of the parties to the ſuit after the count or declaration, to wit, whatever is contained in the bar, replication and rejoinder, and not in the count itſelf; therefore defaults in the matter of the count are not comprized within miſ-pleading, or inſufficient pleading, nor are remedied by the ſtatute of jeofails, 32 H. 8. c. 30. but only the miſ-pleading, or inſufficient pleading committed in the bar, replication and rejoinder; but thoſe are now remedied alſo by 18 Eliz. cap. 13. Cowell.

Pleading in general, ſignifies the allegations of parties to ſuits when they are put into a proper and legal form; and are diſtinguiſhed, in reſpect to the parties who plead them, by the names of bars, replications, rejoinders, ſurrejoinders, rebutters, ſurrebutters, &c. and tho' the matter in the declaration or count does not properly come under the name of pleading, yet being often comprehended in the extended ſenſe of the word, it is generally conſidered under this head. 4 New Abr. 1.

Pleading, in ſtrictneſs, is no more than ſetting forth that fact, which in law ſhews the juſtneſs of the demand made by the plaintiff, or the diſcharge and defence made by defendant; and herein no greater certainty is required than is ſufficient to bring on a trial without inveigling judge or jury; and it ſeems, that originally pleadings were ſo formed, and were very plain and conciſe; but in progreſs of time pleaders and judges became too curious in them, ſo that the art of pleading, which in its uſe and deſign was only to render the fact intelligible, and to bring the matter to judgment with convenient certainty, began to degenerate from its primitive ſimplicity and true uſe, and end in nicety and curioſity, which how it hath improved therein in latter times, the length of the pleadings, the many unneceſſary repetitions, and the many miſcarriages of cauſes upon ſmall and trivial objections, ſufficiently teſtify. 4 New Abr. 1.

Pleas were anciently ore tenus, and afterwards minuted down by the prothonotaries, and entred of record in the Latin tongue, that being a dead language, and leaſt ſubject to variation, to remain as monuments and precedents of the law; that the pleading ſhould be in Latin is expreſsly enacted by the 36 Ed. 3. c. 15. which ſtatute was made to aboliſh a law introduced by William the Conqueror, which ordained, that the pleadings in the courts of juſtice ſhould be in French. 4 New Abr. 1. 10 Co. 132.

But now by 4 Geo. 2. c. 26. it is enacted, "That all proceedings in courts of juſtice ſhall be in Engliſh, and be written in ſuch common hand as acts of parliament are uſually ingroſſed in, the lines and words to be written at leaſt as cloſe as the ſaid acts uſually are, and not abbreviated; and all perſons offending againſt this act forfeit 50*l.* to any perſon who will ſue."

But by 6 Geo. 2. c. 14. it is provided, "That the above penalty ſhall not be extended to the expreſſing the names of writs, or technical words in the ſame language, as hath been uſed, nor to abbreviations uſed in the Engliſh language."

In pleading there are ſeveral general rules laid down in our books; as, that good matter muſt be pleaded in right form, apt time, and due order, but that which is only inducement or conveyance to the ſubſtance, need not be ſo certainly alledged, as that which is the git of the plea. Co. Lit. 303. Plow. 65, 81. Cro. Jac. 362.

That which is apparent, and appears from a neceſſary implication in the record, need not be averred. Co. Litt. 303. 7 Co. 40.

That every man's plea ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf, as every body is preſumed to make the moſt of his own caſe. Dyer 16. Co. Litt. 303. Hob. 234. Latch 186.

That what the parties have agreed in pleading ſhall be admitted, tho' the jury find otherwiſe. 2 Mod. 5.

That when a man will recover a thing from another, it is not enough for him to deſtroy ſuch perſon's title, but he muſt prove his own a better, according to the rule, melior eſt conditio poſſidentis. Vaugh. 58, 60.

That every man ſhall plead ſuch pleas as are proper, according to the quality of his caſe, eſtate, or intereſt. Co. Lit. 285, 303.

That the law requires in every plea, that it be in matter ſufficient, and that it be deduced and expreſſed according to the forms of law; and if either be wanting, it is cauſe of demurrer. Hob. 164.

That every plea in bar, being a confeſſion and avoidance of the plaintiff's action, muſt be ſubſtantive and certain, with an avoidance of plaintiff's demand, which he may traverſe, and thereon go to iſſue, becauſe the declaration ſtands confeſſed, as far as it is not avoided by defendant. Pledge, (plegius, may be derived from the Fr. pleige, fidejuſſor) As pleiger aucun, i. e. fide jubere pro aliquo, to be ſurety for a perſon; in the ſame ſignification is plegius uſed by Glanvil, lib. 10. ca. 5. and plegiatio for the act of ſuretiſhip in the interpreter of the Grand Cuſtomary of Normandy, c. 60. Plegii dicuntur perſonæ, quæ ſe obligant ad hoc, ad quod qui eos mittit, tenebatur; and in the ſame book, c. 89, 90. plegiatio is uſed in the ſame ſenſe with Glanvil; ſo alvi plegii are uſed for plegii. Pupil. Oculi. part. 5. c. 22. Charta de Foreſta. This word plegius uſed alſo for frankpledge ſometimes, as in the end of William the Conqueror's laws, ſet out by Lambard in his Archainom. 125. in theſe words: Omnis homo qui voluerit ſe teneri pro libero, ſit in plegio ut plegius eum habeat ad juſtitiam, ſi quid offenderit, &c. and theſe are called capital pledges. When writs were delivered to the ſheriff to be by him returned into C. B. he was obliged, before the return, to take pledges of proſecution, which, when the fines and amercements were conſiderable, were real and reſponſible perſons, and anſwerable for thoſe amercements. But they being now ſo inconſiderable, there are only formal pledges entered, viz. John Doe and Richard Roe. But there is a difference in debt and in treſpaſs; for in treſpaſs the attachment of the goods is the firſt proceſs, and becauſe the defendant is thereby hurt, therefore the writ commands the ſheriff to take pledges before he executes the proceſs. But in debt they begin with a ſummons, and ſo the defendant is not hurt in the firſt inſtance, therefore there is no command in the writ to the ſheriff to take pledges, but unleſs he does, there is not a ſufficient authority from the return to warrant further proceſs, unleſs pledges are put in above, as in B R. they always do on the bill. The reaſon why pledges were not taken in Chancery, but committed to the ſheriff, was, that he living in the county was ſuppoſed to know who were ſufficient ſecurity, and being to levy the amerciament afterward, they were to take ample ſecurity for them. Gilb. Hiſt. of C B. 6, 7.

The plaintiff's pledges that he ſhall proſecute his ſuit may be entered at any time pending the action; and the putting in of pledges is now a meer formal thing; yet if the pledges be not entered, it is error, becauſe the law directs plaintiff to find pledges. Trin. 22 Car. B. R. In the return of a venire facias, the omiſſion of returning the pledges is but matter of form, and not like to where pledges are omitted on an original writ; wherefore it has been adjudged to be helped by the ſtatute of jeofails. 2 *Nelſ. Pledging, Is where goods and chattels are delivered in ſecurity for money lent, and by ſuch pledging the pawnee hath more than the naked poſſeſſion in the nature of a bailment; for he hath the property and intereſt in the thing itſelf; and, by the better opinions, ſhall have a reaſonable uſe of it, ſo that it be without damage to the thing pledged. Doct. and Stud. 130. 1 *Rol. If a man pledge goods to B. and they are ſtolen, B. ſhall not anſwer for them, becauſe he hath a property in them; and his cuſtody is but a conſequent of that property; therefore he undertakes to keep them as his own; but a man who undertakes to ſecure what is another's, is bound to keep them at all adventures, ſince the right owner might poſſibly defend them with his life; but where a man is only obliged to keep them as his own, no unavoidable accident is to be imputed to him. But if a man pledge goods, and tenders the money to the pawnee, and he refuſes, this determines the qualified property, therefore if after ſuch tender the goods are ſtolen, &c. the bailor ſhall have ſatisfaction in an action of trover; for a tender and a refuſal muſt in thoſe caſes amount to a payment; becauſe otherwiſe no man could again come to his own, ſince pawns are over the value lent. *Cro. Yet though the borrower tender the money, and recover the goods in an action of trover, the pawnbroker may have an action of debt for his money; becauſe, though the ſecurity ceaſes, the duty remains, inaſmuch as the money lent is not paid back to the party from whence it came. Cro. Jac. 243. Yelv. 179. 1 Bulſt. 29, 31.

So if a man lend periſhable goods as a pledge, and they decay, yet the perſon to whom they are pledged, may have an action of debt for his money, becauſe the duty continues. Yelv. 179. Co. Lit. 209.

Goods thus taken to pledge, cannot be forfeited by the pawnee for his offence, nor can they be taken in execution, nor attached for his debt; for the abſolute property is in another; therefore they are not alienable, nor by conſequence forfeitable; becauſe they cannot be forfeited without loſs and danger to the abſolute owner; and all qualified poſſeſſors do take the property under the reſtriction to preſerve the property of the right owner. Br. Attachment in Aſſiſe 20.

If a man pledge goods, and after is attainted of felony, the King ſhall not have the goods without paying the ſum for which they were pledged; for the alteration of the general property doth not alter the ſpecial property in the pawnbroker. 2 H. 7. 1. 1 Bulſt. 29.

If a man pledge goods, and then is outlawed, he cannot redeem them, becauſe then the abſolute property is in the King; but if the outlawry is reverſed, then the perſon is reinſtated in his property as if there had been no outlawry, therefore may redeem them. 1 Bulſt. 29.

Plenarty, Is an abſtract of the adjective plenus, and is uſed in a Common law in matters of benefices, and where a church is full of an incumbent, plenarty and vacation are direct contraries. Staundf. Prærog. cap. 8. fol. 32. Weſtm. 2. cap. 5. A clerk inducted may plead his patron's title; and being inſtituted by the ſpace of ſix months, his patron may plead plenarty againſt all common perſons. Plowd. 501. Inſtitution by ſix months, before a writ of quare impedit brought, is a good plenarty againſt a common perſon; but plenarty is no plea againſt the King, till ſix months after induction. Co. Lit. 119, 344. Plenarty for ſix months is not generally pleadable againſt the King, becauſe he may bring quare impedit at any time, and nullum tempus occurrit regi: Though if a title devolves to the King by lapſe, and the patron preſents his clerk by uſurpation, who is inſtituted and inducted, and enjoys the benefice for ſix months, this is ſuch a plenarty as deprives the King of his preſentation. 2 Inſt. 361. And plenarty by ſix months after inſtitution is a good plea againſt the Queen Conſort; altho' ſhe claims the benefice of the King's endowment. Wood's Inſt. 160. Upon collation of a biſhop by lapſe, plenarty is not pleadable; for the collation doth not make a plenarty, by reaſon the biſhop would be judge in his own cauſe: The biſhop muſt certify whether the church is full, or not; and his collation is interpreted to be no more than to ſupply the cure till the patron doth preſent; and it is for this cauſe a plenarty by collation cannot be pleaded againſt the right patron: But by collation, plenarty may be a bar to any lapſe of the archbiſhop, and to the King, though it is no bar to the right patron. 6 Rep. 50. Co. Lit. 344. Cro. Jac. 207. Plenarty or not ſhall be tried by the biſhop's certificate, being acquired by inſtitution, which is a ſpiritual act; but in a quare impedit, the plenarty muſt be tried by a jury. 6 Rep. 49.

Plene adminiſtravit, Is a plea pleaded by an executor or adminiſtrator, where they have adminiſtred the deceaſed's eſtate faithfully and juſtly before the action brought againſt them.

On plene adminiſtravit pleaded by an executor, if it be proved that he hath goods in his hands which were the teſtator's, he may give in evidence that he hath paid to the value of HIS OWN money, and need not plead it ſpecially; for when executor before the action, hath paid the money for a debt in equal degree with that demanded by plaintiff, he may plead fully adminiſtred generally, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence. 2 Lil. Abr. 330. And where a teſtator, or inteſtate, was indebted to the executor or adminiſtrator, upon bond, they may plead plene adminiſtravit, and give their own bonds in evidence againſt any other bond; ſo likewiſe upon an indebitatus, having the privilege of paying themſelves firſt. Ibid. Plene adminiſtravit is no plea where an executor, &c. is ſued in the debet and detinet, becauſe he is charged for his own occupation. 1 Mod. 185. And if plene adminiſtravit be pleaded, omitting the words, And that he hath not any goods or chattels of the teſtator, nor had on the day of exhibiting the bill aforeſaid, or at any time after, &c. it is bad on a demurrer, and not helped by verdict. Cro. Jac. 132. 3 Lev. 28. Where the executor, &c. is to ſhew ſpecially, how he hath adminiſtred the goods, vide Aleyn 48. See Executors.

Plurality, (Pluralitas) Signifies the plural number; moſtly applied to ſuch clergymen who have more benefices than one: And Selden mentions trialities and quadrilities, where one perſon hath three or four livings. Seld. tit. Hon. 687.

Plurality of livings, is where the ſame perſon claims two or more ſpiritual preferments, with cure of ſouls; in which caſe the firſt is void ipſo facto, and the patron may preſent to it, if the clerk be not qualified by diſpenſation, &c. for the law enjoins reſidence, and it is impoſſible that the ſame perſon can reſide in two places at the ſame time. Count. Parſ. Compan. 94.

By the Canon law, no eccleſiaſtical perſon can hold two benefices with cure ſimul & ſemel, but that upon taking the ſecond benefice, the firſt is void: But the Pope by uſurpation did diſpenſe with that law; and at firſt every biſhop had power to grant diſpenſations for pluralities, till it was abrogated by a general council, held anno 1273, and this conſtitution was received till the ſtatute 21 H. 8. c. 13. Moor 119. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1271.

The ſtat. 21 H. 8. c. 13. ordains, that if any parſon having one benefice with cure, of the yearly value of 8*l.* or above in the King's books, accepts of another's benefice with cure, and is inſtituted and inducted, then the firſt ſhall be void: So that there may be a plurality within the ſtatute; and a plurality by the Canon law. 2 Lutw. 1306.

The power of granting diſpenſations to hold two benefices with cure, &c. is veſted in the King by the aforeſaid ſtatute: And it has been adjudged, that a diſpenſation is not neceſſary for a plurality, where the King preſents his chaplain to a ſecond benefice; for ſuch a preſentment imports a diſpenſation, which the King hath power to grant as ſupreme ordinary; but if ſuch a chaplain be preſented to a ſecond benefice by a ſubject, he muſt have a diſpenſation before he is inſtituted to it. 1 Salk. 161.

The archbiſhop's diſpenſation, and King's confirmation regularly are neceſſary to hold pluralities: And the ſtatute 21 H. 8. c. 13. ought to be conſtrued ſtrictly, becauſes it introduces non-reſidence, and plurality of benefices, againſt the Common law. Jenk. Cent. 272.

A man by diſpenſation may hold as many benefices, without cure, as he can get; and likewiſe ſo many with cure as he can get; all of them, or all but the laſt being under the value of 8*l. per annum* in the King's books; if the perſon to be diſpenſed withal, be not incapable thereof. Yet if a diſpenſation is made to hold three benefices with cure, whereof the firſt is of the yearly value of 8*l.* the diſpenſation is void, unleſs it be in caſe of the King's chaplains, &c. who may hold three benefices with cure, above the value of 8*l.* a year, where one of them is in the King's gift. Hob. 148.

If there be two parſons of one church, and each parſon hath the intire cure of the pariſh, and their benefices be ſeverally of the value of 8*l. per ann.* if one dies and the other ſucceeds, this is a plurality within the ſtatute. Cro. Car. 456. And though the act mentions inſtituted and inducted, when one is inſtituted into the ſecond church, the diſpenſation to hold two benefices comes too late; though he be afterwards inducted; for by inſtitution, the church is full of the incumbent. 4 Rep. 79.

By the ſtatute, if the firſt benefice be of the value of 8*l.* a year, or more, by the acceptance of a ſecond, it is actually void, to all intents: But benefices under that value, being not within the ſtatute, are only avoidable by accepting a ſecond, and not void on ſuch plurality, without a declaratory ſentence, &c. Mallor. Q. Imped. 104. In theſe caſes it hath been held, that the value of livings to make pluralities ſhall be determined by the King's books in the firſt-fruits office: Though the court hath been divided, whether the value ſhould be taken as it was in the King's books, or according to the true value of the living. 2 Lutw. 1301. 2 Nelſ. 1271.

No deanery ſhall be taken by our law, to be a benefice with cure, to need diſpenſation on having another benefice, &c. 21 H. 8. c. 13. 1 Leon. 316. And a parſonage and vicarage make not a plurality, but are only one cure; the vicarage being endowed out of the parſonage. Cro. Jac. 691.

Parſons may purchaſe a licence or diſpenſation, to take and keep two or more benefices with cure, according to the directions and qualifications in the ſaid ſtatute 21 H. 8. c. 13. And in ſome caſes, parſons may hold pluralities, without being retained as Chaplains, &c. purſuant to that ſtatute, viz. by birth, as being the ſon or brother of a lord; by univerſity degree, where a man is doctor of divinity, law, &c. or by office or employment, as a biſhop, ſtat. 26 H. 8. But when a parſon is made a biſhop, his former qualifications to hold plurality of livings is void. Hob. 158. See Chaplain.

Poiſon. The killing a perſon by poiſoning, has been held more criminal than any other murder, becauſe of its ſecrecy, which prevents all defence againſt it; whereas moſt open murders give the party killed, ſome opportunity of reſiſtance: For this reaſon offenders guilty of poiſoning any perſon, were anciently judged to a ſeverer puniſhment than other offenders. See 3 Nelſ. Abr. 363.

Richard Cole was attainted of high treaſon, for putting poiſon into a pot of pottage boiling in the biſhop of Rocheſter's kitchen, by which two perſons were poiſoned; and there was a particular ſtatute made for his puniſhment, viz. by the ſtatute 22 H. 8. cap. 9. it was enacted, That he ſhould be boiled to death. Anno 22 H. 8. Richard Cole's caſe.

Policy of Aſſurance, or Inſurance, (from the Ital. Poliza, i. e. ſchedula & aſſecuratio) Is an inſtrument entered into by inſurers of ſhips and merchandiſe, &c. to merchants obligatory for the payment of the ſum inſured, in caſe of loſs. Merch. Dict.

It is a courſe taken by thoſe who adventure goods to ſea, that they, unwilling to hazard the whole, give unto ſome other, called an Inſurer, a certain rate or proportionate ſum of ſo much per cent. to ſecure the ſafe arrival of the ſhip and goods, &c. at the place agreed on; ſo that if the ſhip and merchandiſe miſcarry, the inſurer maketh good to the adventurer ſo much as he promiſed to ſecure; but if the ſhip arrive ſafely, he gains that clearly, which the merchant compounded to pay him: And for the more equal dealing between the inſurer and inſured in this caſe, there was an officer ordained by ſtatute to ſet down in writing the ſum of their agreement, which is ſubſcribed or under written by the inſurer; and this was called Policy, to prevent any difference that might after happen between them. Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 12. and 14 Car. 2. c. 23. Pollards, or pollengers, Are ſuch trees as have been uſually cropped, therefore diſtinguiſhed from timber-trees. Plowd. 469.

Poll, (deed) A deed made by one party only, is not indented, but polled or ſhaved quite even; and is therefore called a deed-poll, or a ſingle deed. Black. Com. 2 V. 296.

Polls, Where one or more jurors are excepted againſt it is called a challenge to the polls. Co. Lit. 156. See Black. Com. 3 V. 361. 4 V. 346.

Polygamy, (Polygamia) Is where a man marries two or more wives together, or a woman has two or more huſbands at the ſame time; when the body of the firſt wife or huſband may be ſaid to be injured by the ſecond marriage, while either are living. 3 Inſt. 88. Wood's Inſt. 363.

Such ſecond marriage, living the former huſband or wife, is ſimply void, and a mere nullity, by the Eccleſiaſtical law of England: And yet the legiſlator has thought it juſt to make it felony, by reaſon of its being ſo great a violation of the public œconomy and decency of a well ordered ſtate. For polygamy can never be endured under any rational civil eſtabliſhment, whatever ſpecious reaſons may be urged for it by the Eaſtern nations, the fallaciouſneſs of which has been fully proved by many ſenſible writers: But in Northern countries the very nature of the climate ſeems to reclaim againſt ſuch a cuſtom; it never having obtained in this part of the world, even from the time of our German anceſtors, who, as Tacitus informs us, "Prope ſoli barbarorum ſingulis uxoribus contenti ſunt." It ſubjects the offender by the laws both of ancient and modern Sweden with death. And with us in England it is enacted by ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. c. 11. that if any perſon, being married, do afterwards marry again, the former huſband or wife being alive, it is felony; but within the benefit of clergy. The firſt wife in this caſe ſhall not be admitted as an evidence againſt her huſband, becauſe ſhe is the true wife; but the ſecond may, for ſhe is indeed no wife at all; and ſo vice verſa, of a ſecond huſband.

This act makes an exception to five caſes, in which ſuch ſecond marriage, though in the three firſt it is void, is yet no felony.

1. Where either party hath been continually abroad for SEVEN YEARS, whether the party in England hath notice of the other's being living or no.

2. Where either of the parties hath been abſent from the other ſeven years, WITHIN this kingdom, and the remaining party hath had no notice of the other's being alive within that time.

3. Where there is a divorce or ſeparation a menſa et thoro by ſentence in the Eccleſiaſtical court.

4. Where the firſt marriage is declared abſolutely void by any ſuch ſentence, and the parties looſed a vinculo. Or,

5. Where either of the parties was under the age of conſent at the time of the firſt marriage; for in ſuch caſe the firſt marriage was voidable by the diſagreement of either party, which this ſecond marriage very clearly amounts to. But, if at the age of conſent the parties had agreed to the marriage, which completes the contract, and is indeed the real marriage; and afterwards one of them ſhould marry again; it is apprehended, that ſuch ſecond marriage would be within the reaſon and penalties of the act. Black. Com. 4 V. 163, 4.

Pondus, Poundage, which duty, with that of tonnage, was anciently paid to the King according to the weight and meaſure of merchants goods. Cowell.

Pondus Regis, Is the ſtandard weight appointed by our ancient Kings. 35 Ed. 1. Pone, Is a writ whereby a cauſe depending in the county, or other inferior court, is removed into the Common Pleas; and ſometimes into the King's Bench: As when a replevin is ſued by writ out of Chancery, &c. then if the plaintiff or defendant will remove that plea out of the county-court into C. B. or K. B. it is done by pone. F. N. B. 4, 69. 2 Inſt. 339. And the writ pone lies to remove actions of debt, and of detinue, writ of right, of nuſance, &c. New Nat. Br. Alſo pone is a writ willing the ſheriff to ſummon the defendant to appear and anſwer the plaintiff's ſuit, on his putting in ſureties to proſecute, &c. Wood's Inſt. 570. And the writ to the ſheriff to take ſurety of one for his appearing is called Pone per Vadium.

A pone to remove cauſes, is of this form: Put at the petition of A. B. before our juſtices at Weſtminſter, the day, &c. The plea which is in your court by our writ, between the ſaid A. This form is only applicable to the Common Pleas; but if the writ of pone be to remove a cauſe into K. B. it ſhould be worded thus: "Put at the petition of, &c. before us whereſoever, &c. the plea, &c."

Pone per vadium, Is a writ commanding the ſheriff to take ſurety of one for his appearance at a day aſſigned. Of this ſee five ſorts in the table of the Regiſter Judicial, verbo Pone per vadium.

Pontage, (Pontagium) Is a contribution towards the maintenance, or re-edifying bridges. Weſtm. 2. c. 25. This was accounted one of the three public charges from which no perſon of what degree ſoever was exempted, viz. from the charge of an expedition to the wars, from building of caſtles, and from building and repairing bridges: And this was called Trinoda neceſſitas; from which, Ingulphus tells us, Nulli poſſunt laxari. And Selden in his Notes upon Eadmerus writes, that Ne quidem epiſcopi, abbates & monachi immunes erant. And Mat. Paris, anno 1244. tells us, that in all the grants of privileges to monaſteries, theſe three things were always excepted propter publicam regni utilitatem, that the people might the better reſiſt the enemy. Cowell.

Pontibus reparandis, Is a writ directed to the ſheriff, &c. requiring him to charge one or more, to repair a bridge, to whom it belongeth. Reg. Orig. 153.

Poor, (Pauper) A poor perſon is ſuch as is a burden to and charge upon a pariſh. The poor our law takes notice of, are,

1ſt, Poor by impotency and defect; as the aged or decrepit, fatherleſs and motherleſs; poor under ſickneſs, and perſons who are ideots, lunaticks, lame, blind, &c. theſe the overſeers of the poor are to provide for.

2dly, Poor by caſualty; ſuch as houſekeepers decayed or ruined by unavoidable misfortunes; poor perſons overcharged with children, labourers who are diſabled, and theſe, having ability, are to be ſet to work, but if not able to work, they are to be relieved with money.

3dly, Poor by prodigality and debauchery, alſo called Thriftleſs Poor; as idle ſlothful perſons, pilferers, vagabonds, ſtrumpets, &c. who are to be ſent to the houſe of correction, and be put to hard labour, to maintain themſelves; or work is to be provided for them, that they do not periſh for want; and if they become impotent by ſickneſs, or if their work will not maintain them, there muſt be an allowance by the overſeers of the poor for their ſupport. Dalt. c. 73. ſ. 35.

The law not only regards life and member, and protects every man in the enjoyment of them, but alſo furniſhes him with every thing neceſſary for their ſupport. For there is no man ſo indigent or wretched, but he may DEMAND a ſupply ſufficient to all the neceſſities of life, from the more opulent part of the community, by means of the ſeveral ſtatutes enacted for relief of the poor. A humane proviſion; yet, tho' dictated by the principles of ſociety, diſcountenanced by the Roman laws. For the edicts of the Emperor Conſtantine commanding the public to maintain the children of thoſe who were unable to provide for them, in order to prevent the murder and expoſure of infants, an inſtitution founded on the ſame principle as our Foundling Hoſpitals, tho' comprized in the Theodoſian code, were rejected in Juſtinian's collection. Black. Com. 1 V. 131.

It is not true, what ſome people imagined, that the Common law of England made no proviſion for the poor: The Mirror ſhews the contrary; but how it was done does not appear. Bur. 450.

None ſhall give alms to a beggar able to work, 23 Ed. 3. c. 7. Poor perſons who are impotent, ſhall abide in the ſame town, or in the next within the hundred that is able to maintain them 12 Rich. 2. c. 7. We ſhall now conſider this ſubject, in a more particular manner, under the following heads, viz.

1. Statutes concerning the poor.
2. Of appointing overſeers; their duty; and of compelling them to account.
3. Of the poor rate, who, and what ſhall be liable thereto; and of taxing others in aid.
4. Of the remedies for recovering rates; and of ſetting aſide rates.
5. Of relieving, and ordering maintenance for the poor.
6. Of parents and children being obliged to maintain each other.
7. Of the ſettlements of poor people.

1. Statutes concerning the poor.

By ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. The churchwardens of every pariſh, and four, three, or two ſubſtantial houſholders there, as ſhall be thought meet, to be nominated yearly, ſhall be called overſeers of the poor of the ſame pariſh: And ſhall take order from time to time, with conſent of two or more juſtices, for ſetting to work the children of ſuch whoſe parents ſhall not, by the ſaid churchwardens and overſeers, be thought able to maintain their children; and alſo for ſetting to work all perſons, having no means to maintain them, and who uſe no ordinary trade to get their living by: And alſo raiſe weekly, or otherwiſe, a convenient ſtock of flax, &c. to ſet the poor on work: And alſo competent ſums of money for the neceſſary relief of the lame, impotent, old, blind, and ſuch other among them, being poor, and not able to work, and alſo for the putting out ſuch children apprentices, to be gathered out of the pariſh, according to the ability of the pariſh; and to do all other things, as well for diſpoſing of the ſaid ſtock, or otherwiſe, as to them ſhall ſeem convenient.

Which churchwardens and overſeers ſhall meet together at the leaſt once every month, in the church after Divine ſervice, there to conſider of ſome good courſe to be taken, and for ſome meet order to be ſet down in the premiſſes.

If the juſtices perceive, that the inhabitants of any pariſh are not able to levy among themſelves ſufficient money for the purpoſes aforeſaid, then two juſtices may tax any other, of other pariſhes, or out of any pariſh within the hundred where the ſaid pariſh is, to pay ſuch money to the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor pariſh for the ſaid purpoſes, as the juſtices ſhall think fit, according to the intent of this law. And if the hundred ſhall not be thought able to relieve the ſeveral pariſhes not able to provide for themſelves, then the juſtices at their general quarter-ſeſſions, or the greater number of them, ſhall rate any other, of other pariſhes, or out of any pariſh within the county for the purpoſes aforeſaid, in their diſcretion.

And it ſhall be lawful, for the churchwardens and overſeers, or any of them, by warrant from any two juſtices of the peace, to levy as well the ſums of money, and all arrears, of every one who ſhall refuſe to contribute according as they ſhall be aſſeſſed, by diſtreſs and ſale of the offender's goods, as the money or ſtock which ſhall be behind on any account to be made, as aforeſaid, rendering to the parties the overplus: And in defect of ſuch diſtreſs, it ſhall be lawful for any two juſtices to commit him or them to the common gaol of the county, there to remain without bail until payment of the ſum, arrears and ſtock.

Churchwardens and overſeers may bind poor children apprentices, and may by leave of the lord of the manor build houſes on the waſte for the poor to inhabit, but not to be afterwards uſed for the habitation of any other, on the pains contained in the 31 Eliz. c. 7.

Provided, That if any perſon is grieved with any act done by the churchwardens or other perſons, or by the juſtices; then it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices at their general quarter-ſeſſions, or the greater number of them, to take ſuch order therein, as to them ſhall be thought convenient; the ſame to bind all parties.

The father and grandfather, and the mother and grandmother, and the children of every poor, old, blind, lame and impotent perſon, or other poor perſon not able to work, being of ſufficient ability, ſhall at their charges relieve and maintain every ſuch poor perſon in that manner, and according to that rate, as by the juſtices, or the greater number of them, at their general quarter-ſeſſions ſhall be aſſeſſed; on pain that every one of them ſhall forfeit 20 s. for every month they ſhall fail therein.

Mayors, &c. of corporations being juſtices, have the ſame authority within their limits, as juſtices of the county. And every alderman of London ſhall do ſo much, as is appointed to be done by one or two juſtices.

If any pariſh extend into more counties than one, or part lie within the liberties of any city, town or place corporate, and part without, then as well the juſtices of every county, as alſo the head officers of ſuch city, town or place corporate, ſhall intermeddle only in ſo much of the pariſh as lieth within their liberties, and not any farther. And every of them reſpectively within their ſeveral juriſdictions, to execute the ordinances concerning the nomination of overſeers, the conſent of binding apprentices, the giving warrant to levy taxations unpaid, the taking account of churchwardens and overſeers, and the committing to priſon ſuch as refuſe to account, or deny to pay the arrears due on their accounts; yet the churchwardens and overſeers, or the moſt part of them, of the pariſhes that extend into ſuch ſeveral limits and juriſdiction, ſhall without dividing themſelves duly execute their office within the pariſh, in all things to them belonging, and duly exhibit and make one account before the head officer of the town or place corporate, and one other, before the juſtices of peace, or any two of them.

For not appointing overſeers yearly, every juſtice, &c of the diviſion forfeits 5 l. The juſtices, or the more part of them, in their general ſeſſions to be holden next after the feaſt of Eaſter next, and ſo yearly as often as they ſhall think meet, ſhall rate every pariſh to ſuch a weekly ſum of money as they think convenient, ſo as no pariſh be rated above the ſum of 6 d. nor under the ſum of one halfpenny, weekly to be paid, and ſo as the total ſum of ſuch taxation of the pariſhes in every county amount not above the rate of 2 d. for every pariſh within the county. Which ſums ſo taxed, ſhall be yearly aſſeſſed by the agreement of the pariſhioners within themſelves, or, in default thereof, by the churchwardens and petty conſtables of the pariſh, or the more part of them, or, in default of their agreement, by order of ſuch juſtice or juſtices as ſhall dwell in the ſame pariſh, or (if none be there dwelling) in the pariſhes next adjoining.

And if any perſon refuſe or neglect to pay any portion of money ſo taxed, it may be levied by diſtreſs and ſale, in default of diſtreſs, ſuch perſon to be committed to priſon, there to abide without bail till he have paid the ſame.

There is a proviſion by the act, (ſ. 18.) for the inhabitants of the iſland of Foulneſs in the county of Eſſex.

Stat. 3 W. & M. c. 11. ſect. 11. There ſhall be kept in every pariſh, a book wherein the names of all perſons who receive collection ſhall be regiſtred, with the day and year when they were firſt admitted to have relief, and the occaſion: and yearly in Eaſter week, or as often as ſhall be thought convenient, the pariſhioners ſhall meet, before whom the book ſhall be produced, and all perſons receiving collection to be called over, and the reaſons of their taking relief examined, and a new liſt made of ſuch perſons as they think fit and allow to receive collection; and no other perſon ſhall be allowed to receive collection at the charge of the pariſh, but by authority under the hand of one juſtice reſiding within ſuch pariſh, or (if none be there dwelling) in the parts next adjoining, or by order of the juſtices in ſeſſions, except in caſes of peſtilential diſeaſes, plague or ſmall pox, for ſuch families as ſhall be therewith infected.

Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 30 ſect. 2. Every perſon who ſhall be on the collection, and receive relief of any place, and the wife and children of any ſuch perſon cohabiting in the ſame houſe, ſuch child only excepted, as ſhall be by the churchwardens and overſeers permitted to live at home, in order to attend an helpleſs parent, ſhall upon the ſhoulder of the ſleeve of the uppermoſt garment, in a viſible manner, wear a large Roman P. together with the firſt letter of the name of the pariſh or place, whereof ſuch poor perſon is an inhabitant, cut either in red or blue cloth, as by the churchwardens and overſeers ſhall be directed: and if any ſuch poor perſon ſhall neglect or refuſe to wear ſuch mark, it ſhall be lawful for one juſtice to puniſh ſuch offender, either by ordering his allowance to be abridged, ſuſpended or withdrawn, or otherwiſe by committing him to the houſe of correction, to be whipt, and kept to hard labour, not exceeding twenty-one days; and if any churchwarden or overſeer ſhall relieve any ſuch poor perſon, not wearing ſuch badge, and be thereof convicted on oath of one witneſs before one juſtice, he ſhall forfeit 20 s. by diſtreſs, half to the informer, and half to the poor.

Stat. 5 Geo. 1. c. 8. ſect. 1. Whereas ſometimes men run away, leaving their wives and children, and ſometimes women run away leaving their children on the charge of the pariſh, altho' ſuch perſons have eſtates which ſhould eaſe the pariſh of their charge; it ſhall be lawful for the churchwardens or overſeers, where any ſuch wife, child or children, ſhall be ſo left, on application to, and by warrant or order of two juſtices, to ſeize ſo much of the goods, and receive ſo much of the annual profits of the lands and tenements of ſuch huſband, father or mother, as ſuch two juſtices ſhall direct, towards the diſcharge of the place where ſuch wife, child or children are left, for bringing up and providing for ſuch wife, child or children; which warrant or order being confirmed at the next quarter-ſeſſions, it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices there, to make an order for the churchwardens or overſeers, to diſpoſe of ſuch goods by ſale or otherwiſe, or ſo much of them, for the purpoſes aforeſaid, as the court ſhall think fit, and to receive the profits, or ſo much of them as ſhall be ordered by the ſaid ſeſſions, of his or her lands and tenements for the purpoſes aforeſaid.

And the churchwardens and overſeers ſhall be accountable to the juſtices at the quarter-ſeſſions for all money they ſhall ſo receive.

9 Geo. 1. c. 7. ſ. 1. enacts, That no juſtice of peace ſhall order relief to any poor perſon dwelling in any Pariſh till oath made of ſome reaſonable cauſe for it; and that he had applied to the Pariſhioners, or to two overſeers of the Poor, and was refuſed, and till ſummons of two overſeers of the Poor to ſhew cauſe.

And any perſon ordered to be relieved ſhall be entred in the Pariſh books, to be relieved ſo long as the cauſe for ſuch relief continues, and no longer. And if any pariſh officer (except upon emergent occaſions) ſhall charge to the Pariſh account any monies given to any perſon not regiſtred, he ſhall forfeit 5 l. to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale, by warrant of two juſtices, to be applied to the uſe of the Poor of the Pariſh by direction of ſuch juſtices.

It ſhall be lawful for the churchwardens and overſeers, with conſent of the major part of the pariſhioners, to purchaſe or hire any houſe in the ſame pariſh, townſhip or place, and to contract with any for the lodging, keeping, maintaining, and imploying ſuch Poor as deſire relief, and there to keep, maintain and employ ſuch poor perſons, and take the benefit of their labour. And if any poor perſon refuſe to be lodged, &c. in ſuch houſe, he ſhall be put out of the Pariſh book, and ſhall not be intitled to receive relief: and where any pariſh or townſhip ſhall be too ſmall to purchaſe or hire ſuch houſe, it ſhall be lawful for two or more ſuch pariſhes, townſhips or places, with conſent of the major part of the Pariſhioners, and with the approbation of any juſtice of the peace, &c. to unite in purchaſing or taking ſuch houſe for lodging, &c. the Poor, and there to keep, maintain and employ the Poor, and to take and have the benefit of their labour, for the better relief of the poor there kept, &c. And if any Poor in the reſpective Pariſhes, &c. ſo uniting ſhall refuſe to be lodged, &c. in the houſe ſo hired, &c. he ſhall be put out of the collection book, and not intitled to aſk relief: and it ſhall be lawful for the churchwards and overſeers, &c. to contract with the churchwardens and overſeers of any other pariſh, &c. for the lodging, &c. of any poor perſon of ſuch other Pariſh, &c. as to them ſhall ſeem meet. And if any poor perſon of ſuch other pariſh, &c. ſhall refuſe to be lodged, &c. in ſuch houſe, he ſhall be put out of the collection book, and not be intitled to relief.

Stat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 3. Perſons authorized to take care of the Poor, ſhall give public notice in the church, of every rate for relief of the Poor, allowed by the juſtices of peace, the next Sunday after the ſame ſhall have been ſo allowed; and that no rate ſhall be valid ſo as to collect the ſame, unleſs ſuch notice ſhall have been given.

And that perſons authorized as aforeſaid, ſhall permit every inhabitant to inſpect every ſuch rate, at ſeaſonable times, paying one ſhilling for the ſame, and on demand, forthwith give copies of the ſame, or any part thereof, to any inhabitant, paying at the rate of ſixpence for every twenty-four names, on pain of forfeiting to the party grieved twenty pounds.

By Stat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 37. Where there ſhall be any diſpute or uncertainty in what pariſh or place, lands improved, or drained, lie, and ought to be rated; every occupier of ſuch lands, or houſes built thereon, tenements, tythes ariſing therefrom, mines therein, and ſaleable underwoods therein growing, ſhall be rated to the relief of the Poor, and to all other parochial rates within ſuch pariſh and place which lies neareſt to ſuch lands, in like manner, and ſubject to the ſame regulations, as other lands within ſuch pariſh and place are by law liable to be rated thereunto; if any difference ariſe touching what pariſh or place ſuch lands ought to be rated in, it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices, at their next general quarter-ſeſſions, to determine the ſame on the appeal of any perſon intereſted, and at ſuch ſeſſions to cauſe ſuch lands, &c. to be allotted to, and fairly aſſeſſed in ſuch pariſh or place as they ſee juſt. But not to affect or determine the boundaries of any pariſh or place, to any intent other than for the purpoſe of rating ſuch lands, &c. to relief of the Poor, and to all other parochial rates within ſuch Pariſh or Place to which they ſhall be ſo allotted.

Vide the Stat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 38. which regulates the mode and time of accounting by churchwardens and overſeers to their ſucceſſors, as alſo the delivery over of the money, goods and chattels in their hands, &c.

Alſo ſee Poſt, Diviſion 3.

The ſame ſtatute, ſect. 4. gives an appeal to the ſeſſions to any party aggrieved by any aſſeſſment, or having any material objection to any perſon being put on, or left out of ſuch rate, or to the ſum charged on any perſon, or ſhall have any material objection to ſuch account, or any part therein, or who ſhall find him, her, or themſelves aggrieved by any thing done.

And by ſect. 6. it is enacted, That on all appeals from rates, the juſtices (where they ſhall ſee juſt cauſe to give relief) are required to amend the ſame in ſuch manner only, as ſhall be neceſſary for giving relief, without altering ſuch rates, with reſpect to other perſons mentioned in the ſame; but if on an appeal from the whole rate it be found neceſſary to quaſh the ſame; then the juſtices are required to direct the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor to make a new equal rate.

And by ſect. 7. The goods of any perſon aſſeſſed and refuſing to pay, may be levied by warrant of diſtreſs, not only in the place for which ſuch aſſeſſment was made, but in any other place within the county or precinct; and if ſufficient diſtreſs cannot be found within the county or precinct, on oath made thereof before ſome juſtice of any other county or precinct, (which oath ſhall be certified under the hand of ſuch juſtice on the warrant) ſuch goods may be levied in ſuch other county or precinct by virtue of ſuch other warrant and certificate; and if any perſon be aggrieved by ſuch diſtreſs, it ſhall be lawful for ſuch perſon to appeal to the next general or quarter-ſeſſions of the peace for the county or precinct where ſuch aſſeſſment was made, and the juſtices there are required to finally determine the ſame.

In caſe any perſon refuſe to pay to overſeers, any ſum they ſhall be legally rated or aſſeſſed to, it ſhall be lawful for the ſucceeding overſeers to levy ſuch arrears, and out of the money levied to reimburſe their predeceſſors all ſums of money which they have expended for the uſe of the poor, and which are allowed to be due to them in their accounts.

And where any perſon ſhall occupy any houſe, &c. from which any other perſon aſſeſſed ſhall be removed, or which at the time of making ſuch rate was unoccupied, then every perſon removing from, and every perſon coming into or occupying the ſame, ſhall be liable to pay to ſuch rate in proportion to the time that ſuch perſon occupied the ſame reſpectively, in the ſame manner, and under the like penalty of diſtreſs, as if ſuch perſon ſo removing had not removed, or ſuch perſon ſo coming in or occupying had been originally rated in ſuch rate; which proportion in caſe of diſpute ſhall be aſcertained by any two or more juſtices.

And it is further enacted, That true copies of all rates for relief of the poor be fairly entered in a book, to be provided for that purpoſe, by the churchwardens and overſeers, who ſhall take care that ſuch copies be entred accordingly, within fourteen days after all appeals from ſuch rates are determined, and ſhall atteſt the ſame by putting their names thereto; and every ſuch book ſhall be carefully preſerved by the churchwardens and overſeers, or one of them, in ſome place whereto all perſons aſſeſſed or liable to be aſſeſſed may freely reſort; and ſhall be delivered over from time to time to the ſucceeding churchwardens and overſeers, as ſoon as they enter into their office, and ſhall be produced by them at their general or quarter-ſeſſions, when any appeal is to be determined.

And overſeers of the poor within every townſhip or place, where there are no churchwardens, ſhall execute every act, concerning the poor, as churchwardens and overſeers of the poor may execute by this act, or any former ſtatute concerning the poor, and ſhall ſuffer ſuch pains and penalties for neglect, as churchwardens and overſeers are liable to.

Churchwardens of every pariſh] See the Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 1. The juſtices of peace, by the general words of this ſtatute, have power to name overſeers in all Pariſhes; and it muſt extend as well to extraparochial places as to all Pariſhes in general, and no ſubſequent words ſhall controul the general words in the enacting part; and certainly all the poor acts ſhall be conſtrued to extend to ſuch places, as well as to other Pariſhes, when they are within the ſame miſchief, and ſhall be ſubject to the controul of the juſtices of peace. Moſt of the foreſts in England are extraparochial, and ſo is Chriſt-church in Oxford, but they ought to maintain their own poor; therefore a peremptory mandamus was granted to the juſtices of peace to chooſe overſeers in the town of Rufford, being an extraparochial place. 8 Mod. 39. But ſuch extraparochial place muſt be a townſhip or village. See Stran. 1004, 1071, 1143.

Four, three, or two] On motion to quaſh an indictment againſt B. for that he, with four others, being appointed overſeers of the poor, refuſed to take upon him that office, &c. It was objected, that the ſtatute directs the nomination but of four, three or two, with the churchwardens. And per Parker Ch. J. That is very true, tho' in many places more are appointed than four; for the act ſays four, three, or two ſhall be nominated of the inhabitants, at the diſcretion of the juſtices (ſcil.) they may nominate four, three, or two; it is not a limitation of the juſtices power, but it is in the very authoritative part thereof. Where more than four are added, they are not puniſhable by the act, and they can be only added as aſſiſtants. Per Powell, the queſtion will be whether the words of the act will be any more than directory, or a limitation of their authority. In moſt of the pariſhes about London there are more than four, therefore we need not determine this point; but the indictment was quaſhed for another fault. 16 Vin. Abr. 415.

But no greater number than four can be appointed. Burrow 445, 453.

Subſtantial houſholders there] The appointment of overſeers muſt ſtile them ſubſtantial houſholders. Stran. 1261.

It was moved for a mandamus to J. H. and J. T. juſtices of peace in the county of Dorſet, &c. to nominate two ſubſtantial houſholders to be overſeers of the poor upon this ſtatute; and there was an affidavit, that at a meeting of the pariſh after Eaſter, one John B. and Mary F. were elected overſeers, and at a meeting of the juſtices they approved of Mr. B. and refuſed the woman, as being an unfit perſon to ſerve as overſeer; and the old overſeers refuſing to nominate any other, the juſtices approved B. only. Per Powell, A woman is not to be an overſeer of the poor; and there can be no cuſtom in a Pariſh, to put her in, on account of her being a houſekeeper; becauſe this is an officer created by act of parliament. Per Parker Ch. J. The nomination is to be by the juſtices, and it ſeems the overſeers are to continue but one year. The Pariſh here was obſtinate in not having another inſtead of the woman, and the juſtices ſhould have nominated one of the old ones, ſince they were ſo ſtiff; but (becauſe the juſtices had done well in refuſing the woman) he directed that they ſhould apply to the juſtices to have another nominated; and if they refuſed, then to apply to the court for a mandamus the next term. 16 Vin. Abr. 415.

A citizen of London who lived in the country in the ſummer, was choſen overſeer of the poor, the court ſeemed to diſcountenance ſuch choice of one who was reſident there only ſome part of the ſummer, and was actually an inhabitant of another Pariſh in London. Carth. 161.

Yearly in Eaſter week, or within one month after Eaſter. The court ſeemed to think an appointment of overſeers on a Sunday, to be a good appointment: for it may be in Eaſter week, and this is the firſt day of the week. Foley 4.

An appointment of overſeers is good, tho' not made within one month after Eaſter. Stran. 1123.

And many other counties in England and Wales] See ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. ſect. 21.—In treſpaſs a ſpecial verdict found this ſtatute, and that the Pariſh of Kenilworth in the county of Warwick (not being any of the counties named in this ſtatute) is a large Pariſh, having two townſhips, but it is not found that it is ſo large that parochial diſtribution cannot be made; and the queſtion was, if the county of Warwick, not being named in the ſtatute, ſhall be taken within the general words, (and divers other counties;) and Hopkins ſerjeant cited a caſe to be adjudged in C. B. that the ſtatute did not extend to other counties than thoſe which are expreſsly named; and to this Hale inclined; but the court would ſee the precedent before they gave judgment; by which adjornatur. 2 Lev. 142. But afterwards it was adjudged, that this ſtatute did not extend to any other counties, but only to thoſe that are named therein. Ibid. Freem. 401. Hale Ch. J. ſaid, by the words it ſeems to be intended for all counties in England, becauſe the words are (or other counties;) but ſerjeant Hopkins cited the judgment in C. B. in caſe of Wilſon and Bonner, between Chipping-Campden and Broad-Campden in Glouceſterſhire, where the judges held, that this act extended to no counties but thoſe named. Ibid. 412. The court gave judgment for the defendant becauſe tho' it was found to be a large Pariſh, yet it was not found to be ſo big that by reaſon of the largeneſs they could not reap the benefit of the act of 43 Eliz. c. 2. according to the ſtatute, and for that reaſon the court gave judgment, and ſo did not poſitively rule, that no other counties were within the act but thoſe named; but Hale ſtrongly inclined that no other counties were within the act, and ſaid the inconvenience would be very great; for by that means the poor boroughs would be charged with poor, and the vills where men of good eſtates lived, but perhaps no poor, would be at no charge at all. But 2 Salk. 486. pl. 44. in marg. there is a note, That in the caſe of the inhabitants of Stokelane and Dolting, Hill. 11 Ann. it was adjudged, That by virtue of this act the juſtices may exerciſe the powers given by 43 Eliz. c. 2. and this act in all extraparochial places containing more houſes than one, ſo as to come under the denomination of a vill or townſhip. And in the caſe of Hinam and Churcham Pariſhes in Glouceſterſhire, Hil. 1738. Lee Ch. J. cited the ſaid caſe of Stokelane and Dolting, in which he ſaid it was held, that this ſtatute extended by equity to all the counties in England, and that it was ſo held upon great deliberation. 16 Vin. Abr. 421.

Every poor, needy, impotent and lame perſon] This ſtatute relates only to the maintenance of poor and impotent perſons, and not to baſtards, who are provided for by other ſtatutes. 1 Salk. 123.

Two or three overſeers of the poor] The court held, that this clauſe plainly extends to towns and villages in extraparochial places as well as within Pariſhes; for the law makers had in view the inconvenience, that ſome towns and villages would have the benefit of 43 Eliz. c. 2. This ſtatute is of (towns, &c. in counties) and not (in Pariſhes); and towns and villages in extraparochial places are plainly within the words, tho' not directly within the view of the act; and tho' there be not officers appointed in extraparochial places, yet the juſtices ought to do it upon complaint. 16 Vin. Abr. 421.

When the Pariſh is not large, and conſiſting of ſeveral townſhips, ſo as the 43 Eliz. c. 2. may be of benefit to them, the juſtices ought not to appoint particular overſeers according to this ſtatute. 16 Vin. Abr. 421.

As to the duty of the overſeers of the poor, ſee Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 2, 6, 11. and Stat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 38. ſect. 1, 11, 13, 14.

Make and yield up to ſuch juſtices of peace a true and perfect account] See Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſ. 2.—The juſtices authority in ſtating this account, cannot be delegated to any other. 16 Vin. Abr. 415.

Shall pay and deliver over] Mandamus to the juſtices, to grant a warrant for levying 30 l. 17 s. 11 d. being the balance of the laſt overſeers account in their hands. They return, that there was ſuch a balance, but that the veſtry had ordered them to return it, and employ an attorney to ſue for charity money, and get it laid out for the benefit of the poor; that one Young was ſo employed, and the balance exhauſted in fees, and that the overſeers had engaged to pay Young; & ea de cauſa they had refuſed to grant the warrant: and per curiam, There muſt go a peremptory mandamus, for the ſtatute 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſays, the balance ſhall be paid over to the new overſeers, under a penalty; and it is not in the power of the veſtry to diſpenſe with the ſtatute. Stran. 992.

Negligent in their office] If an overſeer does not provide for the poor, he is indictable; and if he relieves the poor when there is no neceſſity, it is a miſdemeanor. MS. Caſes. Paſch 3 Ann. B. R. Tawney's caſe.

For every ſuch default of abſence or negligence twenty ſhillings] This penalty for not meeting in the church ſhall never be inflicted on the overſeers of extraparochial places, becauſe they have no church to meet in. 8 Mod. 40.

If any of theſe officers be convicted of any of the penalties in this act; the other muſt levy it. 16 Vin. Abr. 415.

To commit every one of the ſaid churchwardens and overſeers] See Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 4. If accounts be adjuſted, and the overſeers refuſe to pay the balance, they cannot be committed immediately, but a warrant muſt iſſue to diſtrain them, and upon a return thereof there may be a commitment. 16 Vin. Abr. 416.

The juſtices cannot commit an overſeer for bringing in an account to which they object, but they ought to hear it, ſtrike out what is amiſs, and balance the account. 16 Vin. Abr. 416.

The defendant, being an overſeer, was committed by two juſtices of peace by a warrant, which recited, that he had appeared before them, and being demanded to give a juſt account of all monies he had received and paid, he had only produced an account in groſs of his receipts and payments, and refuſed to give a particular account, or produce his books, &c. and they believing this to be no account according to this ſtatute, and defendant refuſing to give any other, therefore they commit him to be detained till he ſhall make a true account. And upon a habeas corpus he was diſcharged. Per tot. cur. Becauſe the juſtices had no authority to commit in this manner by this ſtatute, for that an account was confeſſed to have been rendered. &c. Show 395.

An order made at the ſeſſions relating to accounts of overſeers of the poor was moved to be quaſhed, becauſe it did not appear the accounts had been before two juſtices quorum unus, and they cannot come per ſaltum to the ſeſſions; and Salk. 533. was cited. On the other ſide it was ſaid, that it appeared there was an allowance, for the appeal is ſaid to be againſt the diſburſements and allowance thereof, which the court will preſume was regular; and being in general, is not like the caſe in Salk. Which was ſaid to be by two juſtices without quorum unus. Sed per curiam, It does not follow, that this was an allowance by two juſtices, for the Pariſh might do it; therefore for want of juriſdiction this order muſt be quaſhed. Stran. 983. See Burn and Seſſions Caſes.

3. Of the poor rate, who, and what ſhall be liable thereto; and of taxing other pariſhes in aid.

By taxation of every inhabitant] See Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 1, 3. & 17 Geo. 2. c. 38. ſect 12. Aſſeſſments for the poor ought to be made according to the viſible eſtate of the inhabitants there, both real and perſonal, and no inhabitant there is to be taxed to contribute to the relief of the poor in regard of any eſtate he hath elſewhere in any other town or place, but only in regard of the viſible eſtate he hath in the town where he dwells, not for any other land he hath in any other place or town. 2 Bulſ. 354.

Rent is no ſtanding rule for making a poor rate; for circumſtances may differ, and there ought to be regard ad ſtatum & facultates. Comb. 478.

The ſeſſions, upon ſetting aſide a rate, may make a new one themſelves, or order the churchwardens and overſeers to make a new one, they having it in their diſcretion to make a new rate at ſeſſions, or remand it to the churchwardens, &c. to make a new one. 2 Salk. 483.

The churchwardens and overſeers may make a rate of themſelves. 2 Salk. 531.

H. took part of a houſe in the Pariſh of D. on the third of December; he was rated as an inhabitant, and was diſtrained for a quarter's rate the Chriſtmas following; but the diſtreſs was taken before Chriſtmas on a general warrant made for the whole year: and in replevin it was ruled upon evidence by Holt, 1ſt, That if two ſeveral houſes are inhabited by ſeveral families, who make and have but one common entrance for both; yet in reſpect of their original both houſes are rateable ſeverally; for they were at firſt ſeveral houſes; and if one family goes, one houſe is vacant: but if one tenement be divided by a partition and inhabited by different families, viz. the owner in one, and a ſtranger in another, theſe are ſeveral tenements, ſeverally rateable while they are thus ſeverally inhabited, but if the ſtranger and his family go away it becomes one tenement. 2*dly*, That H. could not be rated for the whole quarter, for poor rates are to be aſſeſſed MONTHLY by the ſtatute, and by this means a man cannot move in the middle of a quarter, but he muſt be twice charged. 2 Salk. 532.

When goods are rated, it ought to be according to the value of lands, viz. goods of the value of 100 l. ſhall be rated 5 l. per annum, as lands are, and the perſon muſt be charged only in the place where the goods are at the time of the aſſeſſment; for if he has no goods where aſſeſſed, if diſtrained he may have an action of treſpaſs, &c. Dalt. Juſt. 233. cap. 73.

By the words and meaning of the ſtatute 43 Eliz. 2. the occupiers of the land are to be aſſeſſed, and not the leſſor who receives the rents; the occupier of the land being by law only to pay the aſſeſſment, unleſs it be ſpecially provided for as to this payment between him and his leſſor. 2 Bulſt. 354.

Parſons ought to contribute to the poor. 3 Keb. 252.

A mandamus was prayed to the mayor of Chicheſter, to ſign a tax made on the palace, &c. of the biſhop of Chicheſter, being within the pariſh of Subdeanry, and per cur. it was granted; becauſe againſt this there can be no preſcription, and all the prebendaries who live in the ſame cloſe, which is a fourth part of the town, pay it. 3 Keb. 573.

A parſon who lets his tithes to the pariſhioners may be taxed upon the poor rate; for the letting is but an agreement with the pariſhioners to retain the tithes, and the parſon has a modus for his tithes; though it was objected that the pariſhioners were occupiers, and ſo the parſon not taxable. MS. caſes Paſch. 7 Ann. The Queen v. Bartlet.

Thoſe ought only to be contributory who were livers there the year before, and none elſe. Settlements 48. pl. 71.

A. ſeiſed of lands, demiſed the ſame to B. reſerving the yearly rent of 10*l.* A. covenanted with B. that he ſhould quietly enjoy the land, and to indemnify him againſt all charges and taxes whatſoever to be impoſed upon the lands, except tithes. B. entered, and was poſſeſſed, and the churchwardens and overſeers of the Pariſh where the land lay, and of which A. was an inhabitant, made a poor rate, and B. by reaſon of the lands was charged with ſuch a ſum of the rate which he paid, and he brought covenant againſt A. and aſſigned the breach, in that A. did not indemnify againſt the poor rate, &c. And after argument on both ſides the court unanimouſly agreed that the poor rate was not within the covenant, and therefore gave judgment for defendant. Gibb. 297.

The Doctor agreed with ſeveral of the pariſhioners to take ſo much for his tithes, and made a leaſe to F. The Doctor was rated for the tithes to the pariſh levies, who appealed; and the matter being found ſpecially, the queſtion was, who ſhould be ſaid to be the occupier, the Doctor's leſſee or the inhabitants; and per cur. The leſſee muſt be ſaid to be the occupier, in regard there is no certain time limited for how long, but only from year to year; and per Eyre J. The letting of them is in nature of a ſale, and the party looked upon as a vendee; no manner of advantage is given to the inhabitants; for they give the full value for their tithes; otherwiſe had it been a contract for years. Poor's Settlements. 104. pl. 140.

Defendant being aſſeſſed towards the poor rate for his tithes as vicar, appealed to the ſeſſions, where he was abſolutely diſcharged. But by the court; As vicar he is chargeable by 43 Eliz. c. 2. and the ſeſſions hath only power to moderate, not diſcharge: And the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed. Stran. 77.

Where the parſon agrees that the tenant ſhall retain the tithes, yet the rate for them muſt be upon the parſon. Stran. 525.

All things which are real and bring in a yearly revenue, may be rated and taxed to the poor. Shaw's Pariſh Law 221.

On a motion to confirm a tax laid by the juſtices of peace on a toll of the corporation of W. for a rate to the poor, Hale Ch. J. ſaid, that he was of opinion that the toll was chargeable, though part of it was to maintain the mayor; and per cur. A mandamus was granted to the mayor and juſtices to execute the order, niſi. 3 Keb. 540.

Note; It hath been reſolved by the court, that ground rents are liable to pay the poors rate. Comb. 62.

Hoſpital lands are chargeable to the poor, as well as others; for no man by appropriating his lands to an hoſpital, can exempt them from taxes to which they were ſubject before, and throw a greater burden upon their neighbours. 2 Salk. 527.

The queſtion was whether a houſe converted into a conventicle, and uſed for no other purpoſes, was rateable to the poors tax; the court ſaid, they never knew it, and ordered them to ſhew cauſe; and afterwards the order was quaſhed. Poor's Settlements 124, pl. 109.

A farmer ſhall be taxed for his riches and ſtock, in caſe the ſtock is more than is neceſſary for the carrying on his farming and paying his rent; for then it is like a ſtock in trade; but for ſtock neceſſary to his farming he ſhall not be taxed. So for extraordinary ſtock he ſhall not be charged, if it be not more than is neceſſary; for the act ſays, (every inhabitant, &c. and of land) ſo that there may be an inhabitant that is not an occupier of land, and he muſt be charged in reſpect of his perſonal eſtate and ability, and ſo it is uſual to tax clothiers, &c. N. B. Thoſe farmers were never taxed before, nor were the tradeſmen ever before, until within theſe few years, and the order above was for rating the farmers for the corn and hay, which was in their barn and ſtable. Rex v. Inhabitants of Barking. Vin. Abr. tit. Poor, 426. And Foley's Poor Laws 30.

A ſhopkeeper ſhall be charged to the poor's rates for the goods, &c. in his ſhop. Juſt. Caſe Law 233.

On a motion to quaſh a poor's rate made at the quarter-ſeſſions in Marlborough, becauſe it was aſſeſſed for trade, and the corporation would not aſſeſs the toll of their market, or their own lands, and they would not hear the matter at their ſeſſions. Per cur. It will be inconvenient to quaſh poor rates; but you may take a mandamus to aſſeſs you according to law, as in the caſe of The town of Cambridge MS. caſes. 16 Vin. Abr. 426.

In the caſe of the governor and company for ſmelting lead againſt Richardſon and others, it was determined by the court of King's Bench in Michaelmas term 3 Geo. 3. That a leſſee of lead mines, whereon no rent is reſerved other than a certain proportion of the ore to be raiſed, is not rateable to the poor under the ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2.

By 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 3. If the juſtices do perceive, that the inhabitants of any pariſh are not able to levy among themſelves ſufficient ſums for the purpoſes in the act before mentioned, then the ſaid two juſtices (one of the quorum) ſhall tax, &c. any other of other pariſhes, or out of any pariſh within the hundred, to pay ſuch ſums to the churchwardens and overſeers of the ſaid poor pariſh, for the ſaid purpoſes, as the ſaid juſtices ſhall think fit.

If ſeveral inhabitants of A. have lands in the pariſh of B. and their tenants are ſo poor that they are not able to pay to the relief of the poor of B. the landlord's inhabiting in the pariſh of A. ſhall be no diſcharge to them, but they ſhall pay for their lands, which they have in the pariſh of B. 2 Bulſtr. 352.

Sir James Mountague, attorney general, moved to quaſh an order of two juſtices, made upon this ſtatute; his exception was, that it does not appear that the pariſhes taxed are within the hundred; for it is only ſaid that they are within the county of the city of Norwich; and two juſtices by the act have not power to tax the county but only the hundred, or the pariſhes within the hundred. To which it was anſwered, that if two juſtices cannot relieve in this caſe, there can be no relief given; for it is well known there are no hundreds within cities, and the city, and the county of the city are the ſame, and the power given to the juſtices muſt ariſe upon a defect in the hundred, and where there is no hundred there can be no ſuch defect, and the ſeſſions could have made no order in this caſe. But per Powell; This is not caſus omiſſus out of the ſtatute; and though the two juſtices have no power, here being no hundred, yet the ſeſſions have a juriſdiction, and may tax the county of the city in part or at large, to which the reſt agreed, and quaſhed the order, being made by two juſtices only. 11 Mod. 269.

There are two ways by this ſtatute to make one pariſh contributory to the poor of another, viz. either the juſtices may tax particular perſons in aid to that pariſh which cannot relieve it's own poor; or they may aſſeſs the whole pariſh in a certain ſum, and leave it to the churchwardens and overſeers to levy the ſame on particular perſons. 2 Salk. 481. Shaw's Pariſh Law 219.

Mandamus to the juſtices to make a rate for ſupport of the poor which was oppoſed, becauſe the pariſh officers ought to make the rate, and the juſtices are only to ſign it; to which it was anſwered, that this motion was grounded on the contributory clauſe in the ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. and thereupon a mandamus was granted, directed to the juſtices; and as this is a matter of right, they ought to make a return. 2 Shaw's Pract. Juſt. 47. Shaw's Pariſh Law 219.

An order of ſeſſions was returned upon ſtatute 43 Eliz. c. 2. for rating the adjacent pariſhes &c. for relief of a poor pariſh. Exception was taken, that by the ſtatute this ought to have been done by the two next juſtices, whereas this order was made at ſeſſions. And by the ſolicitor general, If it be made by all the juſtices, &c. then it is by two, and they ſhall be ſuppoſed to be at the general ſeſſions. But per Wythens, You have not purſued the ſtatute, and do hereby prevent the appeal. Adjornatur; and it was afterwards at another day quaſhed for that reaſon. Comb. 25.

A pariſh in Colcheſter being ſurcharged with poor, the juſtices made an order that two other pariſhes in Colcheſter ſhould pay to the relief of the poor within this pariſh, viz. the one 5*s.* and the other 8*s. per* week, and that the overſeers ſhould collect it; and the order being removed by certiorari, Alibone moved to quaſh it, becauſe not purſuant to the direction of 43 Eliz. c. 2. which ſays, others, of other pariſhes; ſo that it ought to be aſſeſſed by the juſtices upon particular perſons, and not generally: But the court ſeemed to be of opinion, that it was right; and that the juſtices are only to aſſeſs the quantum, and then the rate is to be made by the overſeers of the poor of the pariſh, and ſuch was the opinion of the court. Skin. 258.

It was moved to quaſh an order made by two juſtices, that the inhabitants of L. G. ſhould pay a yearly ſum to Whetſtone, becauſe it was not ſaid quorum unus, but the exception was diſallowed. Comb. 241.

Upon an order for contribution to the relief of a poor pariſh it was ruled, that the juſtices may either charge particular perſons or the whole pariſh, and they to levy it; but here a ſum in groſs was laid for a whole year, which (it was objected) was unreaſonable; for their ability may change; nevertheleſs the order was confirmed. Comb. 309.

Holt Ch. J. ſaid, that poſſibly a place extraparochial may be taxed in aid of a pariſh; but a pariſh ſhall not be taxed in aid of that. 2 Salk. 486.

In a city where one pariſh is not able to relieve their poor, the next pariſh, being able, is to aid them by a weekly allowance, but when the cauſe ceaſes, ſuch allowance is to ceaſe alſo. Juſt. Caſe Law 234.

In caſe a pariſh is not able to maintain its poor, two juſtices may tax any other pariſh within the hundred towards their relief, and if the hundred be not of ability to relieve their pariſhes, the juſtices in their ſeſſions may tax any other pariſh or pariſhes within the county. 2 Shaw's Pract. Juſt. 42.

An order was made by the juſtices of the borough, for the pariſh of St. Peter's to pay to the officers of St. Mary's the ſum of 20*s.* weekly, until the juſtices ſhould ſee fit to order the contrary. It was objected, 1ſt, That it does not appear that the pariſh of St. Mary's is overburthened with poor, but over-ruled; for the order follows the words of the ſtatute. 2dly, It is ſaid, that they are juſtices of the town and borough, and it appears upon the order, that the pariſh of St. Mary's is within the borough, but not within the town and borough. But per cur. they are juſtices of both. 3dly, The order is, until we ſhall ſee fit to order the contrary, where the act never gave the juſtices ſuch an authority, and it is in effect making a perpetual order; for if one of the juſtices die or be removed, no other juſtice can alter it till the ſaid juſtices ſhall ſee fit to alter. And it was quaſhed for the laſt objection. Poor's Settlements 121. pl. 165.

The pariſh of H. and a vill called S. time out of mind have been within the rectory of H. But there is a church in S. which from the time of Hen. 6. hath been uſed and reputed as a pariſh, and had all parochial rights, and churchwardens, and S. diſtant two miles from H. Richardſon Ch. J. held clearly, that this is a pariſh within 43 Eliz. c. 2. and that the overſeers, &c. might aſſeſs it to the relief of the poor; and the finding that from Henry the VIth's time till now it hath been uſed as a pariſh, does not exclude, that it was not uſed ſo before. And this ſtatute being made for relief of the poor, to prevent their wandering, the intent of it was to confine the relief to pariſhes then in eſſe, and ſo uſed. Judgment for plaintiff. Hut. 93. Lit. Rep. 73.

Cro. Car. 92. S. C. adjudged, that this is ſuch a pariſh as is chargeable for relief of Stoke-Godlingham, and not for the poor of Hinkley; and though by the finding it ſhould not be intended to be a pariſh before Henry the VIth's time, yet being found that it was a church then, and that there were churchwardens there, it is a pariſh within the ſtatute, although it be but a reputative pariſh; for being in uſe ſo long before, and at the time of the ſtatute, the ſtatute appoints that the churchwardens and three or four overſeers joined with them ſhall, &c. Now, no churchwardens of H. are churchwardens of S. and ſo have nothing to do there; and the churchwardens of S. are only to meddle with the church there, and conſequently with the poor of the pariſh.—S. P. As to Tatteridge and Hatfield, where for ſixty years then paſt, and at the time of making the ſtatute, and ever ſince, T. was commonly reputed a pariſh of itſelf, and the inhabitants there choſe conſtables, churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, and made and levied their own rates to the poor, and repaired their church, without contributing to that of H. and though it was alſo found that anciently the vill of T. was parcel of the pariſh of H. and never ſevered by any legal act, and that the tithes of T. have been time out of mind paid to the parſon of H. who always uſed to find a curate at T. and that there is no parſon at T. yet T. ſhall be charged by itſelf, and for their own poor only. Cro. Car. 394, 395.

Pariſhes in reputation only are within the ſtatute, as other pariſhes are, if the uſage of ſuch pariſh to chooſe overſeers has been conſtant without interruption; but otherwiſe the overſeers and collectors of the mother church are only within the ſtatute. 2 Rol. Rep. 160.

There were two vills in one pariſh, which had uſed ſeverally to maintain their own poor, and now there being overſeers made of the whole pariſh, they were rated together. The queſtion was, whether having been uſed time out of mind to pay ſeverally, they might now by the ſtatute of 43 Eliz. cap. 2. be rated together? Per Hale Ch. J. If there be no chapel within the vill, where the church does not ſtand, it is not ſufficient to make it a reputed pariſh within the ſtatute of 43 Eliz. c. 2. Freem. 401.

The pariſh of St. Botolph without Algate lies in two counties, viz. London and Middleſex, and hath one churchwarden and ſeveral overſeers, and the pariſh rates are ſeveral. And in regard it appeared that each part of the pariſh had diſtinct officers, and made diſtinct rates, and had uſed time out of mind to make diſtinct accounts to the juſtices of each county, the court looked upon each diviſion as a ſeveral pariſh, and ordered it accordingly. Raym. 476, 477.

Upon a diſpute whether A. was a vill in the pariſh of B. or a pariſh of itſelf, to prove it a vill the evidence was, that there were but two churchwardens, two overſeers of the poor, and that all parochial rights were done at B. and that the inhabitants of A. contributed to the repair of the church at B. And, to prove that A was a pariſh of itſelf, the evidence was, that in the reign of Edw. 3. there was a public chapel there, and divine ſervice read in it at the time of making this ſtatute, that they had formerly diſtinct conſtables, and repaired their own highways in 1634, and then the difference between A. and B. was ſettled by a judge of aſſiſe, that a rate was made in A. in 1654. But this was held not ſufficient to make A. a pariſh in reputation at the time of the ſtatute, without all other parochial rights, and therefore held to be a vill in the pariſh of B. 4 Mod. 158.

To make A. a reputed pariſh within the 43 Eliz. c. 2. it muſt have a parochial chapel and chapel-wardens, and ſacraments, at the time the ſtatute was made; and becauſe A. had but one chapel warden, whoſe office was to collect the rates taxed upon A. and pay them to B. they were held part of the pariſh of B. and not a reputed pariſh within the 43 Eliz. c. 2. and their having a diſtinct overſeer, and maintaining their own poor, was not ſufficient to make them a diſtinct pariſh. 2 Salk. 501.

A chapel's having ſacraments only, makes it not independent of the pariſh, but it muſt have other badges, as ſepultures, &c. 12 Mod. 504.

See ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 4, 13, 19.

Holt Ch. J. ſaid, that a man could not be diſtrained by virtue of a general warrant made before the rate, but there ought to be a ſpecial warrant on purpoſe; and he ſaid that a diſtreſs could not be taken for a quarter's rate before the quarter ended; but the jury ſaid, the cuſtom was otherwiſe. Holt anſwered, If he remove into another pariſh in the ſame county, they might diſtrain by warrant from the juſtices as well as in the ſame pariſh; but if he removed out of the county, he agreed the remedy failed. So he gave way to the uſage in that point. 2 Salk. 532. 6 Mod. 214. S. C.

A warrant to diſtrain for a poor's rate ought not to be granted before demand made; for the firſt ought to be only a confirmation of the aſſeſſment for the poor, and afterwards upon refuſal, &c. a new warrant is to be made for diſtreſs, &c. and Holt ſaid, that ſtrictly it was ſo, but the practice having been in the caſe of taxes to grant ſuch a conditional warrant to diſtrain, communis error facit jus. Comb. 342.

By 17 Geo. 2. c. 38. ſect. 11. Succeeding overſeers are to levy arrears for the purpoſe of reimburſing their predeceſſors, ſuch money as they may have expended for the uſe of the poor.

The churchwardens and overſeers, by warrant from any two juſtices of the peace, (quor. 1.) may levy the tax by diſtreſs and ſale, where any perſon refuſes payment of the ſum aſſeſſed; and if there be no diſtreſs whereby the ſame may be levied, he ſhall be committed to the common gaol, there to remain till payment. 2 Shaw's Pract Juſt. 42.

A mandamus was moved for, and a rule obtained for an alderman to ſhew cauſe why he refuſed to grant his warrant to diſtrain for a tax for relief of the poor; who ſhewed that the churchwardens had made a tax for the whole year, when they ſhould have made only a quarterly tax, and thereupon a rule was made that he ſhould grant his warrant quarterly. 8 Mod. 10.

Working tools in a ſhop may be diſtrained for a poor rate. 2 Show. 126. Before this act, neither the juſtices of peace nor conſtables had any power concerning poor. Sid. 282.

It was affirmed on error in B. R. on this ſtatute, that though the ſtatute expreſſes by name only ſale and diſtreſs of goods, yet if the plaintiff voluntarily delivers any goods for what he is aſſeſſed to the poor, and after brings treſpaſs thereof againſt the overſeers, this is within the ſtatute; for theſe words, ſale and diſtreſs, are put in the act only for examples; and the ſtatute ſhall be conſtrued largely, becauſe it tends ad opus charitatis; and treſpaſs brought after ſuch voluntary delivery is a vexation which the ſtatute extends to ſuppreſs. Yelv. 176.

B brought treſpaſs againſt certain perſons who pleaded Not guilty, and at Niſi prius the defendants juſtified as overſeers of the poor, and ſhewed this ſpecial matter in evidence by this ſtatute; and after the jury was charged, and returned again, plaintiff was non-ſuited. And now the court was moved to grant a writ of inquiry, for the treble damages which they ought to recover againſt the plaintiff by this ſtatute; and on oyer of the ſtatute, which was, that the damages ſhall be aſſeſſed, &c. Dod. ſaid, This is to be intended that it ſhall be tried by writ of inquiry of damages in ſuch caſes as it ought to be by law, viz. upon diſcontinuance or demurrer; for the words, "as the caſe requires," imply as much; and by the law, when a jury ought to have found a thing, and do not find it, this ſhall not be ſupplied by a writ of inquiry of damages; and this was ſo ruled that ſuch defect ſhall not be ſupplied by writ of inquiry of damages, becauſe then the party ſhall not be ouſted of his attaint. But in the caſe at bar, the writ of inquiry of damages was granted inaſmuch as the plaintiff was nonſuited, ſo that the jury could not aſſeſs the damages; and damages were found accordingly. Rol. Rep. 272.

As to ſetting aſide rates, ſee ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſ. 6. ——Upon an appeal from a poor rate, the juſtices refuſed to hear the appeal, becauſe it was not made at the next quarter-ſeſſions. But per cur. The party grieved may appeal at any ſeſſions; the juſtices may not have power to alter the rate at diſcretion, but they ought not to refuſe to hear the appeal. MS. Caſes, Mich. 8 Ann. B. R. The Queen v. The inhabitants of St. Giles.

T. P. and S. being overſeers of the poor, got their account allowed by the juſtices. The pariſh appealed againſt it, and the ſeſſions ſet aſide this account, and then directed a re-examination of the matter to the ſame two juſtices. This order being removed, it was objected, that here was a matter delegated by the court, who were finally to determine the matter in queſtion. Per Parker Ch. J. The overſeers have four days time to paſs their accounts, and they may go before any two juſtices for the doing it; till the time is paſt there is no compulſion uſed, but if this time is ſlipt, the pariſh may go before any two juſtices, and when theſe have entered upon the examination, no other juſtice is afterwards to intermeddle; and when this matter comes to the ſeſſions, they are to take ſuch order therein as to them ſhall ſeem convenient, but need not finally determine. MS. Caſes, Hill. 10 Ann. B. R. Townſend, Parſons and Smith's caſe (overſeers of Whitechapel.)

There are four adjacent towns within the pariſh of Banbury, and there is an overſeer within each town, and alſo an overſeer within the borough; they all join in one account, and there is but one rate made for all the pariſh, but the overſeers of each particular town collect and pay the money within ſuch town; one who is tenant of lands in one of theſe towns lives in the borough, and is aſſeſſed by the overſeer of the borough for the lands within the town, and paid to the overſeer of the borough; and the like is done in the other towns; ſo that the overſeer of the borough had a ſurpluſage for the poor within the borough, and the overſeers of the towns wanted money for relief of the poor within the towns, though the poor within the towns were leſs than thoſe within the borough; and upon this the juſtices ordered, that there ſhould be a diſtribution made; and this order with others being removed, it was moved to be quaſhed, but confirmed; and though the ſtatute of 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. ſ. 21. was cited, and this caſe urged to be within that ſtatute, it was not agreed to be within that ſtatute. *Skin.*258

Although a poor's rate be really made at the ſeſſions on an appeal, yet if it does not appear by the order itſelf, as by recital of the former order, &c. the latter order ſhall be quaſhed, and the court refuſed to ſupply this defect in the order by affidavits. Comb. 133, 134.

The churchwardens and overſeers, and ſome of the inhabitants made a poor's rate, which was confirmed by two juſtices, in which ſeveral were not taxed for their perſonal eſtates, (which was erroneous) but the whole lay on the real eſtates of the pariſh; on which ſeveral of the inhabitants appealed to the ſeſſions, and they ordered that the rate ſhould be annulled, and a new one made; accordingly the churchwardens made a new rate both on the real and perſonal eſtates, which rate was confirmed by two juſtices. But in the new rate there was a great inequality, the real eſtates being rated in proportion ten times more than the perſonal; for which ſeveral of the inhabitants appealed again to the ſeſſions, where another order was made to diſcharge the rate. And theſe two orders of ſeſſions being removed by certiorari into B. R. it was moved to quaſh them; becauſe the ſeſſions can only relieve particular perſons grieved by the rate, and cannot ſet aſide the whole rate. Sed per tot. cur. The juſtices at ſeſſions on an appeal by particular perſons grieved, may, if they ſee reaſon, ſet aſide the whole rate. The juſtices have a large power, and in both theſe caſes, either on the firſt rate where the perſonal eſtates were not charged, or upon the ſecond where they are unequally charged, it is impoſſible for them to give relief without ſetting aſide the whole rate; which therefore they may legally do, being impowered by the act to take order herein according to their diſcretion; by virtue of which, as they may ſet aſide the whole rate, ſo they may make a new rate themſelves, or order the overſeers, &c. and churchwardens to make a new one, as was done in this caſe; wherefore thoſe two orders were confirmed. 12 Mod. 212.

If a poor rate be made for a whole year, it cannot be confirmed in part, but muſt be for the whole year or no part. 8 Mod. 10.

If the rate be illegal, the juſtices may refuſe to ſign it, but as to the ſums, or parties aſſeſſed they have nothing to do with it, the remedy is by appeal; and though the aldermen of Dorcheſter refuſed to ſign a rate, becauſe of inequality; yet the court granted a mandamus, and after a return a peremptory mandamus, and then an attachment, in order that the parties grieved might appeal, cited per cur. MS. Caſes, Mich. 8 Geo. B. R. in caſe of The King v. Beecher.

A rate that is of itſelf good, may be quaſhed, where it ſays it ſhall be a ſtanding rate. Poor's Settlements 23. pl. 33.

To quaſh a poor's rate the parties aggrieved appealed to the ſeſſions, the ſeſſions made an order to levy the money on account of the rate according to the land tax; it was moved to quaſh it, becauſe perſons who do not pay to the land tax, yet contribute to the poor's rate, as perſons who have a conſiderable ſum of money. Quaſhed, per cur. Poor's Settlements 73. pl. 96.

See ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 1, 13. 3 Wil. & M. c. 11. 8 & 9 Wil. 3. c. 30.

Exception was taken to an order of the juſtices made againſt the pariſh of Stretton, becauſe the juſtices ordered them to keep a woman, being poor, the cottage wherein ſhe lived, being uncertain whether in this vill or another; but the court refuſed to quaſh it, tho' it was not averred that ſhe was impotent, becauſe in theſe caſes the courts uſe a diſcretion. 2 Keb. 37.

An order of juſtices for the maintenance of a poor woman was confirmed, though it appeared that ſhe was able of body to work; but the juſtices of the peace are judges of that. Vent. 69.

A poor child was left in Chriſt-Church hoſpital; upon complaint of the wardens of the hoſpital two juſtices made an order on the overſeers of the poor of the pariſh to receive and maintain the child; but this order was quaſhed, becauſe it was not ſaid that the parents were unknown, or likely to become chargeable to the pariſh: For though a child of three months old be helpleſs, yet the parents are bound to provide for it. As to the principal matter which was hinted, viz. that the hoſpital was bound to provide for poor children there expoſed. the court thought there was nothing in that. 2 Salk. 485.

An order of juſtices was made for relieving a woman and four poor children, until further order, but did not ſet forth ſhe was indigent; it was quaſhed for the laſt matter, and bad for the other, which ſhould have been during her poverty. 10 Mod. 220.

It was moved to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, which ordered that the overſeers ſhould pay to one R. D. 2*s. per* week for his maintenance. It was objected, 1ſt, That it is not ſaid that they had any money in their hands; 2dly, That it is not ſaid that R. D. is a pariſhioner there. Quaſhed niſi. Poor's Settlements 12. pl. 17.

Two juſtices made an order for the overſeers of the poor to pay 2*s. per* week to Elizabeth Reddiſh. It was objected, That it is not ſaid that ſhe is poor and impotent; otherwiſe the ſtatute gives them no ſuch power. Per cur. The 43 Eliz. c. 2. does not give them power, unleſs they are upon the poor rate; let them ſhew cauſe. Poor's Settlements 21. pl. 30.

An order to continue the weekly payment of 2*s.* to R. G. and all the arrears, till they find him a houſe; quaſhed, becauſe the overſeers have no power to find him a houſe; that muſt be done by the lord of the manor, or by the juſtices. Shaw's Pariſh Law 200.

An order of juſtices, requiring the churchwardens to pay a ſcrivener 5*l.* due to him for drawing indentures for ſetting out children to trades, was quaſhed, as being a thing out of their power; but the way had been to order a pariſh rate for levying ſo much a week till a convenient ſum were raiſed; and in that caſe as ſoon as money was raiſed, an action would lie for the ſcrivener againſt the churchwardens. 12 Mod. 417.

6. Of parents and children being obliged to maintain each other.

See Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſ. 7. and 5 Geo. 1. c. 8.

If a man marries a grandmother, and has an eſtate with her in marriage; for this eſtate he ſhall be charged towards the maintenance of the grandchild within the meaning of this ſtatute, but otherwiſe, if he has not any eſtate or advancement by marriage with her. But he ſhall be charged with keeping the grandchild during the life of his wife; and if ſhe dies, he ſhall not be charged after her death. 2 Bulſt. 346. But if the grandmother has no means, and ſhe marries with one who has, he ſhall not be charged with keeping the child. 2 Bulſt 346. So if the huſband becomes of ability after marriage, the grandmother having no means at the time of the marriage, he ſhall not be bound to provide for the child. Ibid. Contra per Holt Ch. J. That if the wife dies he muſt maintain the grand children, though the relation be determined. Comb. 321, 405.

[But in the caſe in Bulſt. 346. it does not appear that the grandmother was dead, nor is there any reſolution, the juſtices differing in their opinions.]

A ſon-in-law was obliged by an order to maintain his wife's mother, having an eſtate with her at the intermarriage. Per cur. He is not within the words of the ſtatute, nor within the meaning of it; the ſtatute extends to thoſe perſons who ought by the law of nature to relieve their parents; and ſome perſons were ſo hard-hearted as to refuſe; therefore this law was made to inforce them to do that which by the law of nature they were obliged to before. Poor's Settlements, 91. pl. 123.

It was moved to diſcharge an order made againſt a feme covert to keep a grandchild of hers, becauſe a feme covert was not bound by ſuch an order. Roll Ch. J. anſwered, That the huſband is to keep his wife's grandchild by the ſtatute; but in regard that the huſband is not charged by the order, but the wife who is covert is only charged; therefore let the order be quaſhed. Sty. 283.

An order of ſeſſions was made, That defendant ſhould pay 2 s. a week towards the ſupport of his father till the court ſhould order the contrary, which was held good, becauſe it was indefinite, and no ſet time limited, and if an eſtate happened to fall to him they might apply to the juſtices; otherwiſe if a time was limited. 2 Salk. 534.

An order that the grandfather ſhould keep the grandchild, the father being living, but unable to do it, and alſo to pay ſo much money for the time paſt, while he was chargeable as well as for the time to come, was allowed good per cur'. MS. Caſes, Mich. 6 Ann. B. R. The Queen v. Joyce.

An order of two juſtices to compel Daviſon to allow ſo much a week for the maintenance of his wife and family. It was moved to quaſh the order, for that the juſtices have not juriſdiction in this caſe, it being properly alimony, and belonging to the ſpiritual court. Powell ſaid, that the juſtices have no juriſdiction in this caſe, but this is not alimony. If a man runs away from his family, he may be puniſhed as a rogue and a ſturdy beggar; but whilſt he continues reſident, they cannot charge him in this manner; and quaſhed the order. 11 Mod. 268.

An order of juſtices was made, that the father-in-law ſhould maintain his ſon's widow. But it not being ſet forth in the order, that the father was of ſufficient ability, in which caſe only the act enables the juſtices, it was quaſhed, 10 Mod. 221.

An order of ſeſſions for the father to pay ſo much a week for maintenance of his daughter was quaſhed; becauſe it was not ſet forth that ſhe was unable to work, without which the juſtices have no juriſdiction. 10 Mod. 307.

Juſtices at their quarter-ſeſſions, upon complaint of the overſeers, that Nicholas Tripping had left his wife, and that ſhe was become poor and impotent, and become chargeable to the pariſh, and that Richard Tripping, her father-in-law was of ſufficient ability, did (upon its being proved that Richard was of ability to relieve her) order him to pay 2 s. 6 d. per week. The order was quaſhed for want of an adjudication that ſhe was chargeable; and it was held, that an adjudication that the perſon is become chargeable, is as neceſſary in an order of the quarter-ſeſſions, as in an order of two juſtices. MS. Caſes, Trin. 4 Geo. B. R. The King v. Tripping.

Order, reciting, that Munden had a good fortune with his wife, and that her mother was poor, therefore he is ordered to provide for her. And in maintenance of the order 1 Bulſt. and 2 Bulſt. 345. Styles 283. were cited. Et per Pratt Ch. J. On conſideration, we are all of opinion, that the ſon-in-law is not bound, either within the words or intent of the ſtatute, which provides only for natural parents. By the law of nature a man was bound to take care of his own father and mother; but there being no temporal obligation to inforce that law of nature, it was found neceſſary to eſtabliſh it by act of parliament, and that can be extended no farther than the law of nature went before, and the law of nature doth not reach to this caſe in 1 Bulſt. it is plain the word not was left out only by miſtake, for the ſenſe of the clauſe leads you to read it not obliged, and beſides the judges were divided. The caſe indeed in 2 Bulſt. is an authority in point as far as it will go, but that is no judicial authority, only a caſe at a judge's chamber. The ſame was alſo ſaid obiter in the caſe of The Queen v. Fane, Paſch. 10 Ann. but it never came judicially before the whole court till now. And therefore as it is res integra, we are of opinion the order muſt be quaſhed. Stran. 190.

If juſtices of peace in ſeſſions, &c. make orders for maintenance of perſons who are not impotent, but able to work, or having any thing to live upon; thoſe orders are againſt law. Dalt. 166. A father has been ordered to make an allowance to his ſon's wife, while his ſon was beyond ſea: and if the father of children leaves the Pariſh, and there is a grandfather to be found, this grandfather, if he be of ability, is chargeable with keeping the children, and not the Pariſh. 2 Bulſt. 2 Lill. 333. A father-in-law, or a grandfather-in-law, married to the mother or grandmother of children, of ability to keep them, is within 43 Eliz. c. 2. Style 283. A perſon was ordered by juſtices in ſeſſions to pay ſo much a week towards the ſupport and maintenance of his father, till that court ſhould order the contrary; and it was held good; and if an eſtate happen to fall to the father, the juſtices might be applied to: otherwiſe if a time was limited. 2 Salk. 534.

7. Of the ſettlements of poor people.

Settlements of poor are gained,

By inheritance; as when a child claims a ſettlement in a pariſh, becauſe his father was there ſettled.

By being born in a Pariſh; and

By commorancy

As to the firſt, if the father has a legal ſettlement, the child is ſettled where the father is: and if the father has no legal ſettlement, the child regularly gains a ſettlement in the Pariſh where born. 2 Bulſt. 351. But this ſettlement by birth may be defeated ſeveral ways;

1ſt, If the parent is removed by an illegal order; and from the order an appeal is duly made, pending which the child is born; in this caſe, on quaſhing the order, the child ſhall be ſent back with the mother.

2. By practice; if a woman near her time is clandeſtinely ſent to another Pariſh, and there delivered.

3. If a woman with child be ſent to the houſe of correction, and is there delivered, the child ſhall not gain a ſettlement by its birth in the Pariſh where the houſe of correction is; but in the Pariſh where the mother dwelt when ſent to the houſe of correction, as the place where ſhe had otherwiſe probably been delivered. 2 Bulſt. 358, 381. 1 Salk. 121.

If a travelling woman, having a ſmall ſucking child, ſhall be apprehended for felony, and be ſent to gaol, and afterwards arraigned and hanged, this child is to be ſent to the place of its birth, there to be ſettled and maintained, if the ſame be known; but otherwiſe it muſt be ſent to the town where the mother was apprehended: and children born in common gaols, their parents being priſoners, are to be maintained at the charge of the county. Dalt. 157.

If a man and his family be illegally thruſt out of a Pariſh, and during that time he have a child born; he muſt be returned to the place where he was legally ſettled, and the child with him. and perſons, whoſe intereſt in houſes or lands is determined, cannot be put out of the town where they were legally ſettled, nor can they be ſent to the place of their birth, or laſt habitation, but according as they are able or impotent ſhall be ſet to work, or relieved in the town where ſo ſettled; tho' if they wander and beg, then they may be taken up and ſent to the place of their birth. Dalt 58, 166.

Baſtard children gain a ſettlement by their birth; but it has been uſual for preventing any charge to the Pariſh, if a ſingle woman with child come into a Pariſh, by a juſtice's warrant to remove her to the place of her laſt legal ſettlement: baſtards of vagrants muſt be with the mother while nurſe children until ſeven years of age; and then be ſent to the Pariſh where born. Ibid. Till ſeven years of age, children are accounted nurſe children; yet afterwards they muſt have maintenance from the Pariſhes where they themſelves were ſettled.

If a poor man ſettled at A. marries a poor woman who is ſettled at B. and has children by a former huſband, the wife ſhall be removed with him to A. and the children under ſeven years old ſhall be removed, but only for nurture;

ture; ſo that they ſhall be kept at the charge of the Pariſh from whence they are removed: but the children above ſeven years of age are not removeable. 2 Salk. 470, 482.

Generally a wife is to be ſent to, and ſettled with the huſband, tho' he be an inmate or ſervant; as all children are generally to be ſent to, and ſettled with the parents: but if a man hireth a houſe in A. and being there with his wife and children, afterwards bind himſelf a ſervant to one in B. his wife and children are not to be ſent to B. but are to remain ſtill at A. where they were once ſettled. Dalt. 166. Tho' it hath been adjudged, where a man ſerved and had board wages, and lay out of his maſter's houſe in another Pariſh, he gained a ſettlement in the Pariſh where he lived and ſerved, and not in the Pariſh where he lay. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 370.

A man and his wife ſettled at one pariſh, came privately into another pariſh, and there a child was born; the father died in the King's ſervice; the queſtion was, Who ſhould keep the child? Per Holt Ch. J. The death of the father doth not alter the child's ſettlement; which muſt be ſetled where the father was laſt ſettled as well as the mother. Comberb 380.

Settlement gained by commorancy, is where a perſon continues in ſome other place than that in which he was before legally ſettled; and ſuch continuation makes a ſettlement: formerly, every one who was ſettled as a native, houſholder, apprentice, or ſervant, for a month, without a juſt complaint made to remove them, were lawfully ſettled. Dalt. But ſince, this month has been enlarged to forty days, where a perſon ſhall come into a pariſh, and rent a tenement under 10 l. per annum, by the ſtatutes 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. 3 W. & M. c. 11. And by ſtatute renting 10*l.* a year; executing a public office in the pariſh on a man's own account; paying a ſhare to the pariſh taxes, as church or poor rates, &c. Living as a hired ſervant for a year in the pariſh, being unmarried, &c. and ſerving or being bound as an apprentice in a pariſh, all make a legal ſettlement: ſo that a perſon being ſettled by any ſuch means, and not having acquired a ſettlement elſewhere, if he falls into povery, ſhall be intitled to relief from the pariſh where he laſt gained ſuch ſettlement; and where he is ſettled his family muſt follow him. Wood's Inſt. 94.

It has been held, in reſpect to a ſettlement within the ſtatute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. That coming into a pariſh publickly, taking a houſe, and being rated to the poor on the pariſh book, is ſufficient notice; the ſtatute being made againſt private and clandeſtine removals, and not public ones, which the pariſh can take notice of itſelf. Show. 12.

A perſon rented a houſe of 3 l. per annum in a town, and his landlord paid the taxes; and whilſt he lived in the pariſh, he took his freedom of the corporation, and voted as a freeman at the election of bailiffs, &c. And it was adjudged that ſince the explanatory act of 3 W. 3. c. 11. nothing makes a ſettlement that is not within the words of the ſtatute, which implies a negative to any thing elſe not contained in it; and that, as to his voting, it doth not imply a ſettlement, for it is an act which relates to the corporate body, and not to the pariſh. 2 Salk. 534.

A man rents two tenements of 5 l. per annum each, he thereby gains a ſettlement; but if he rent a piece of land of 10*l.* a year, and there is no houſe belonging to it, it is otherwiſe. If one rents a houſe of 10*l. per annum* by continuing therein 40 days, he gains a ſettlement within the meaning of 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. By Parker C. J. Renting a water-mill of 10 l. per annum, &c. makes a ſettlement; for a mill is a tenement. 2 Salk. 536.

But no ſettlement can be legal in any pariſh, when the reſidence of the party is uncertain, as coming now and then, and lying in barns, outhouſes, &c. or where the party is under diſturbance by officers. A poor man appointed to be a pariſh clerk, and executing the office a year, has been adjudged to make a good ſettlement; and it is not material whether he come in by the appointment of the parſon, or by the election of the pariſhioners, for he is in for life; and this is executing a public annual office and charge within the meaning of the ſtatute. 2 Salk. 536.

A ſervant was hired firſt from Lady-Day to Michaelmas, and from thence to Lady-Day following; and this was reſolved to be a good ſettlement, for there was a hiring for a year: but it muſt be one intire hiring, and one intire ſervice (tho' different times are mentioned) for one whole year, that muſt make a ſettlement according to the ſtatute. A ſervant being hired at A. for a year, his maſter lives there half a year, and then at B. another half year; adjudged the ſervant is ſettled in the laſt place, for the ſtatute doth not tie the ſervant down to one place. Tho' if a poor man be hired for a year, to ſerve in a boat which plies between one place and another; by this ſervice, he gains no ſettlement. Fitzgib. 255.

An unmarried perſon, hired as a ſervant for a year, married before the year was expired; and it was held, that he could not be removed, and that on performing his ſervice he would gain a ſettlement. 3 Salk. 527.

A man hired a maid ſervant for a year; but ſhe falling ſick, her maſter turned her out of his ſervice: The ſervant in her paſſage to the place of her nativity begged for relief, and ſhe was ſent as a vagrant to the pariſh where ſhe was born; whereupon ſhe was ſent back by that pariſh, to the pariſh where ſhe was an hired ſervant; but by order of ſeſſions ſhe was ſettled at the place of her birth: This was removed by certiorari into B. R. and the court determined the ſettlement to be at the pariſh where ſhe was an hired ſervant, and not where ſhe was born. Style 168.

If a ſervant continues in the ſervice of a viſitor in a pariſh, he gains a ſettlement there; and is not removeable, unleſs the pariſh ſhew that he was brought or came thither on purpoſe that he might have ſuch ſettlement: and tho' a maſter or miſtreſs are only viſitors, and no lodgers, yet their ſervants may be ſaid to be hired in every pariſh where they ſerve. 8 Mod. 50, 51. If an apprentice be bound to one who is a lodger only in a pariſh, and hath no ſettlement; reſolved that the apprentice is well ſettled there, altho' the maſter is not, nor doth his ſettlement depend upon his maſter, as that of a wife on her huſband. Where an apprentice continues forty days in the ſervice of his maſter, there it is ſaid he will have a ſettlement: and wherever any perſon ſerves the laſt forty days of his apprenticeſhip, that is the place of his laſt legal ſettlement. An apprentice bound to a maſter living in one pariſh, and ſerving ſome part of his apprenticeſhip there, was by agreement turned over to another maſter in another pariſh; and this was held a good ſettlement in that pariſh where he laſt ſerved; for it ſhall be intended it was but a continuance of his apprenticeſhip upon that agreement. 8 Mod. 169.

A perſon ſerved an apprenticeſhip in a pariſh, where he married and had ſeveral children; his wife dying, he married another woman, who had a term for years in another pariſh, to which place he removed, and reſided there for a year; afterwards he returned to the firſt pariſh, was rated to the poor, lived there two years, and then he died: in a ſhort ſpace after his death, his widow and children were removed by order of two juſtices to the other pariſh where he had lived a year, but on appeal to this order at the ſeſſions, the ſeſſions adjudged them to be inhabitants ſettled in the firſt pariſh. Where a man lives in a pariſh, and hath lands of his own there, or in right of his wife, this will make a ſettlement; but if he hath land in one pariſh, and lives in another, the land will not make a ſettlement of him in that pariſh where it lies and he doth not live. 2 Salk. 524.

If a man be ſettled where he will, he cannot, tho' likely to became chargeable to the pariſh where he goes to reſide in, be removed from thence, if he have any eſtate there. 5 Mod. 416. But ſee Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 7. A ſettlement not to be gained by a purchaſe under 30*l.*

A man who was not legally ſettled in a pariſh, but had lived there ſome time, procured a certificate, by virtue of which he went into another pariſh; afterwards being poor, the pariſh from whence he came took him again; and on enquiry found, that he was never lawfully ſettled with them, but had gained a ſettlement in another place, before they gave this certificate; and thither they removed him by order: the pariſh to which he was removed appealed, becauſe thoſe who had given the certificate, had owned ed him to be an inhabitant ſettled with them; but the certificate was held only to be an evidence of a ſettlement, and thereupon the firſt order was confirmed. 2 Salk. 530. It has been ſince adjudged, that a certificate concludes the pariſh giving it, not only againſt the pariſh to which it is given, but as to all other pariſhes. Ibid.

The law unſettles none who are lawfully ſettled, nor permits it to be done. If one had but hired a houſe, the law unſettles not ſuch perſon; and if any by indirect means hinder a poor man from hiring a houſe, he may be indicted; alſo it is finable to remove any out of the pariſh who ought not to be put out, and the perſons removed may be ſent back. Dalt. 98. And if a pariſh will have a man born in A. but ſettled with them, to go and wander and beg in B. that he may be ſent to A. and he doth ſo, he ſhall be ſent back to the pariſh from whence he came. Ibid. But when two juſtices of peace of one county, ſend a poor perſon to a pariſh in another county, two juſtices of the county whither ſuch perſon is ſent, cannot make an order to remove him back again, or to ſend him to any other place; the town to which ſuch perſon was ſent, hath no other remedy than by appeal to the ſeſſions of that county from whence the party was ſent. 2 Salk. 488.

A ſettlement by order of ſeſſions on an appeal is good and binding; but if it doth not appear that the cauſe came before the juſtices in ſeſſions by way of appeal, it may be quaſhed; for without that they have no juriſdiction: if a poor family, after order of ſeſſions for their removal on appeal, return to the pariſh from whence they were removed the ſeſſions muſt ſee their order of ſettlement obeyed; tho' if ſuch poor family go into another pariſh not concerned in the appeal, two juſtices of peace ought by an origininal order to remove them to the pariſh where they were ſettled by the ſeſſions order. 2 Salk. 481, 482, 489.

The ſeſſions having made an original order for removal of a poor perſon to a third pariſh, after an order of two juſtices, it was quaſhed upon motion: and adjudged, that the ſeſſions could only confirm, or reverſe the order of ſettlement of the two juſtices; and thereupon a new order might be made by two juſtices for removal to the third pariſh, &c. 2 Salk. 475. A general order to remove a man and his family is not good; it muſt be particular, for ſome of the family may be chargeable, and others not. And where juſtices make ſuch orders of ſettlement, it muſt appear, that the parties are likely to become chargeable; and that the perſon removed is removeable; and contain an adjudication of the laſt legal ſettlement of the party, &c. 2 Salk. 485, 491. 5 Mod. 149, 321. And according to the opinion of Holt, the moſt regular way to proceed on the ſtatute 14 Car. 2. c. 12. in removing a poor perſon, is for the juſtices to make a record of the adjudication of the laſt ſettlement, and the complaint of the churchwardens and overſeers, and upon that to make a warrant or order under their hands and ſeals to the churchwardens, &c. to convey the perſons to the pariſh to which they ought to be ſent, and to deliver in the record at the next ſeſſions, to be kept among the records; and this record may be removed by certiorari. 1 Salk. 406. But on a motion in B. R. to ſet aſide an order for the ſettling a poor perſon in a pariſh, ſent thither by warrant of two juſtices, and confirmed in the ſeſſions, upon an appeal: the court refuſed to enter into the merits of the cauſe; the order of ſeſſions being in this caſe final, unleſs it be made appear that there is error in the form of proceeding. Ventr. 310. And it is a ſtanding rule in the court of King's Bench, That if, on an appeal, the order of two juſtices is either affirmed or quaſhed, upon the merits of the caſe, in relation to ſettlements, it ſhall be concluſive between the two pariſhes. Paſch. 10 Ann.

The order of two juſtices not appealed from, binds the pariſh upon which it is made, till a new ſettlement is gained: an order reverſed is final only between the parties; but an order confirmed, &c. is final to all the world. 2 Salk. 472, 492.

A poor perſon himſelf, as well as the pariſh, may appeal from an order of removal, tho' it has been objected that appeal is only given to the pariſh aggrieved. Carth. 223. And where a poor perſon is viſited with ſickneſs, he ought not to be removed from the pariſh where he is, farther to endanger his health; and if two juſtices grant an order to remove him it is a miſdemeanor in the juſtices. Mod. Caſ. in L. and E. 326.

On appeals to juſtices in ſeſſions, they are to cauſe defects in form in orders to be rectified without charge, and then to proceed, &c. 5 Geo. 2. c. 19. By law, the place that the poor were laſt legally ſettled at, is the place that is to provide for them Trin. 5 Ann. B. R.

By the Stat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 5 If a woman wandering and begging, be delivered of a child in a pariſh to which ſhe does not belong, ſhe may be committed to the houſe of correction till the next ſeſſions, where the juſtices may order her to be whipp'd, and detained in the houſe of correction not exceeding ſix months. The churchwardens of the place where ſhe ſhall be delivered to be repaid all charges by the treaſurer of the county, and the ſettlement of the mother ſhall be deemed the ſettlement of the child tho' it be a baſtard.

By the Stat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 38. The churchwardens and overſeers of the poor ſhall yearly, within fourteen days after other overſeers be nominated, deliver to ſuch ſucceeding overſeers an account of all ſums received, or rated and not received by them, and of all goods in their hands, and monies paid by them, and of all other things concerning their office, which account ſhall be verified by oath. Any perſon aſſeſſed may inſpect ſuch account paying 6*d*. and have copies paying 6*d*. for every 300 words. Perſon not accounting, &c. as aforeſaid, may be committed until he do account. If an overſeer dies, removes, or becomes inſolvent before the expiration of his office, two juſtices may appoint another in his room. If any overſeer removes, he ſhall before his removal account as aforeſaid, under the ſame penalty. And if any overſeer dies, his executors ſhall within forty days deliver over all things belonging to his office, and pay what due, previous to other debts. No diſtreſs for money juſtly due for relief of the poor ſhall be deemed unlawful, or the party a treſpaſſer, on account of any defect or want of form in the warrant, for apppointment of ſuch overſeer, or in the rate or warrant of diſtreſs; nor ſhall the party be deemed a treſpaſſer ab initio, on account of any irregularity afterwards done by the party. And no plaintiff ſhall recover for any ſuch irregularity, if tender of amends be made before the action brought. Succeeding overſeers may levy arrears to reimburſe former overſeers. If any perſon remove out of a pariſh, and another comes to occupy the houſe, &c he left, the perſon removing and the perſon coming in, ſhall be liable to pay to the rate aſſeſſed, in proportion to the time he occupied the ſame.

Fair copies of all rates for the poor, ſhall be entered in a book within fourteen days after all appeals determined, and all perſons aſſeſſed ſhall have acceſs to them. See Vagrants

Pope, (Papa) Was antiently applied to ſome clergymen in the Greek church; but by uſage is particularly appropriated in the Latin church to the biſhop of Rome, who is called the Pope; and formerly had great authority here. As to the incroachments of the ſee of Rome, it is ſaid to be the general opinion, that Chriſtianity was firſt planted in this iſland by ſome of the Eaſtern church; which is very probable from the antient Britains obſerving Eaſter always on the fourteenth day of the month, according to the cuſtom of the Eaſt: But the Saxons being converted about the year 600, by perſons ſent from Rome, and wholly devoted to the intereſt thereof, it could not be expected that ſuch an opportunity of enlarging the juriſdiction of that ſee, ſhould be wholly neglected; and yet there are few inſtances of the Papal power in England before the Norman conqueſt, tho' four or five perſons were made biſhops by the Pope at the firſt converſion, and there was an inſtance or two of appeals to Rome, &c. But Pope Alexander II. having favoured and ſupported William the Firſt, in his invaſion of this kingdom, made that a handle for enlarging his incroachments; and in this King's reign, began to ſend his legates hither. He ſent here Ermenfroy, biſhop of Sion, as his legate; and this prelate was the firſt who had ever appeared with that character in any of the Britiſh iſlands. And afterwards Paſcal II. prevailed with Henry I. to give up the donation of biſhopricks. In the reign of Stephen the pontifical authority was permitted to make farther encroachments: Appeals to the Pope, which had been always ſtrictly prohibited, became now common in every eccleſiaſtical controverſy. And in the reign of Hen. II. Pope Alexander III. exempted all clerks from the ſecular power: Indeed this King at firſt ſtrenuouſly withſtood thoſe innovations; but on the death of Becket, who, for having violently oppoſed the King, was ſlain by ſome of his ſervants, the Pope got ſuch an advantage over him, that he was never able to execute the conſtitutions of Clarendon. And not long after this, by a general excommunication of the King and people, for ſeveral years, becauſe they would not ſuffer an archbiſhop to be impoſed on them, John was reduced to ſuch ſtraits, that he ſurrendered his kingdoms to Pope Innocent III. to receive them again, and hold them of him under the rent of a thouſand marks: And in the reign of Hen. III. partly from the profits of our beſt church benefices, which were generally given to Italians, and others reſiding at the court of Rome, and partly from the taxes impoſed by the Pope, there went yearly out of the kingdom ſeventy thouſand pounds ſterling, a great ſum in thoſe days: The nation, being thus burdened and under neceſſity, was obliged to provide for the prerogative of the prince, and the liberties of the people, by many ſtrict laws. And hence in the reign of Edw. I. it was declared in parliament, that the Pope's taking upon him to diſpoſe of Engliſh benefices to aliens, was an encroachment not to be endured; and this was followed with the Stat. 25 Ed. 3. called the ſtatute of proviſors, againſt popiſh bulls, and diſturbing any patron to preſent to a benefice, &c. In the conſtruction of which ſtatute, it has been held, that he who knowing the contents of a popiſh book, written beyond ſea, brings it over, and ſecretly ſells, or conveys it to a friend; or having read the book, or heard of its contents, doth after in diſcourſe allow it to be good, &c. is in danger of the ſtatute; but not he who, having heard thereof, buys and reads the ſame. Selden's Janus Anglor. Davis 90, &c. Dyer 282. 2 Inſt. 580. Port, (Portus) A harbour or place of ſhelter, where ſhips arrive with their freight, and cuſtoms for goods are taken. The ports in England are London, Ipſwich, Yarmouth, Lynn, Boſton, Hull, Newcaſtle, Berwick, Carliſle, Cheſter, Milford, Cardiff, Glouceſter, Briſtol, Bridgwater, Plymouth, Exeter, Poole, Southampton, Chicheſter and Sandwich; all which are declared lawful ports, & infra corpus comitatus: To theſe ports there are certain members belonging, and a number of creeks, where commonly officers are placed, by way of prevention of frauds in the cuſtoms; but they are not lawful places of exportation or importation, without particular licence from the port, or member under which they are placed. Lex Mercat. 132. See 1 Eliz. c. 11.

The King has the prerogative of appointing ports and havens, or ſuch places only, for perſons and merchandize to paſs into and out of the realm, as he in his wiſdom ſees proper. By the feodal law all navigable rivers and havens were computed among the regalia, and were ſubject to the ſovereign of the ſtate. And in England it hath always been held, that the King is lord of the whole ſhore, and particularly is the guardian of the ports and havens, which are the inlets and gates of the realm: And therefore, ſo early as the reign of King John, we find ſhips ſeized by the King's officers for putting in at a place that was not a legal port. Madox Hiſt. Exch. 530. Theſe legal ports were undoubtedly at firſt aſſigned by the crown; ſince to each of them a court of portmote is incident, the juriſdiction of which muſt flow from the royal authority; The great ports of the ſea are alſo referred to, as well known and eſtabliſhed, by Stat. 4 Hen. 4. c. 20. which prohibits the landing elſewhere under pain of confiſcation; And 1 Eliz. c. 11. recites that the franchiſe of lading and diſcharging had been frequently granted by the crown.

But tho' the King had a power of granting the franchiſe of havens and ports, yet he had not the power of reſumption, or of narrowing and confining their limits when once eſtabliſhed; but any perſon had a right to load or diſcharge his merchandize in any part of the haven; Whereby the revenue of the cuſtoms was much impaired and diminiſhed, by fraudulent landing in obſcure and private corners. This occaſioned the ſtatutes of 1 Eliz. c. 11. and 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 11. ſ. 14. which enable the crown by commiſſion to aſcertain the limits of all ports, and to aſſign proper wharfs and quays in each port, for the excluſive landing and loading of merchandize. Black. Com. 1 V. 264.

Portion, Is that part of a perſon's eſtate, which is given or left to a child. Somner's Gavelkind 135. Hen. 3. granted by charter to the city of London——Quietantiam murdri, &c. infra urbem & in Portſokne, viz. within the walls of the city, and the liberties without the walls. Placit. Temp. Ed. 1.

Portuas, (mentioned in 3 & 4 Ed. 6. 10.) Is a reckoned amongſt books prohibited by that ſtatute; it is a breviary. Cowell. It is alſo by ſome, called portuos or portboſe.

Poſitive Proof, Is always required, where from the nature of the caſe it appears it might poſſibly have been had. But, next to poſitive proof circumſtantial evidence, or the doctrine of preſumptions muſt take place: For when the fact itſelf cannot be demonſtratively evinced, that which comes neareſt to the proof of the fact, is the proof of ſuch circumſtances which either neceſſarily, or uſually, attend ſuch facts; and theſe are called preſumptions, which are only to be relied on till the contrary be actually proved. Black. Com. 3 V. 371.

Poſſe, Is an infinitive mood, but uſed ſubſtantively, to ſignify a poſſibility, as we ſay, ſuch a thing is in poſſe, that is, ſuch a thing may poſſibly be; but of a thing in being, we ſay it is in eſſe.

Poſſe Comitatus, The power of the county, according to Lambard, contains the aid and attendance of all knights, and other men above the age of fifteen, within the county; becauſe all of that age are bound to have harneſs, by the ſtatute of Wincheſter: But eccleſiaſtical perſons, and ſuch as labour under any infirmity, are not compellable to attend. Perſons able to travel being required to be aſſiſtant in this ſervice; it is uſed where a riot is committed, a poſſeſſion is kept on a forcible entry, or any force or reſcue made contrary to the commandment of the King's writ, or in oppoſition to the execution of juſtice. Stat. 2 H. 5. c. 8.

But with reſpect to writs that iſſue, in the firſt inſtance to arreſt in civil ſuits, ſuch as a bailable latitat, bill of Middleſex or capias, &c. the ſheriff is not bound to take the poſſe comitatus, to aſſiſt him in the execution of them. Vide Eſcape. Though he may, if he pleaſes, on forcible reſiſtance to the execution of the proceſs. See 2 Inſt. 193. 3 Inſt. 161. And vide poſt.

Sheriffs are to be aſſiſting to juſtices of peace in ſuppreſſing riots, &c. and raiſe the poſſe comitatus, by charging any number of men to attend for that purpoſe, who may take with them ſuch weapons as ſhall be neceſſary; and they may juſtify the beating, and even killing ſuch rioters as reſiſt, or refuſe to ſurrender, and perſons refuſing to aſſiſt herein, may be fined and impriſoned. 17 R. 2. cap. 8. 2 Hen. 5. cap. 8. 13 Hen. 4. cap. 7. Lamb. 313, 318. Cromp. 62. Dalt. cap. 46. 2 Inſt. 193.

Juſtices of peace, having a juſt cauſe to fear a violent reſiſtance, may raiſe the poſſe in order to remove a force in making an entry into or detaining lands: And a ſheriff, if need be, may raiſe the power of the county to aſſiſt him in the execution of a precept of reſtitution; therefore if he make a return thereto, that he could not make a reſtitution by reaſon of reſiſtance, he ſhall be amerced. 1 Hawk. P. C. 152, 156.

Alſo it is the duty of a ſheriff, or other miniſter of juſtice, having the execution of the King's writs, and being reſiſted in endeavouring to execute the ſame, to raiſe ſuch a power as may effectually enable them to quell ſuch reſiſtance; though it is ſaid not to be lawful for them to raiſe a force for the execution of a civil proceſs, unleſs they find reſiſtance. 2 Inſt. 193. 3 Inſt. 161.

It is lawful for a peace officer, or a private perſon, to aſſemble a competent number of people, and ſufficient power to ſuppreſs rebels, enemies, rioters: but there muſt be great caution, leſt under a pretence of keeping the peace, they cauſe a greater breach of it; and ſheriffs, &c. are puniſhable for uſing needleſs violence, or alarming the country in theſe caſes, without juſt grounds. 1 Hawk. P. C. 156, 161. See Black. Com. 1 V. 343. 4 V. 122.

Poſſeſſio fratris. Where a man hath a ſon and a daughter by one woman or Venter, and a ſon by another Venter, and dies, if the firſt ſon enters and dies without iſſue, the daughter ſhall have the land as heir to her brother, although the ſecond ſon by the ſecond Venter is heir to the father: But if the eldeſt ſon dies without iſſue, not having made an actual entry and ſeiſin, the younger brother by the ſecond wife, as heir to the father, ſhall enjoy the eſtate; not the ſiſter Co. Lit. 11, 15.

Lands are ſettled on a man, and the heirs of his body, and he hath iſſue a ſon and a daughter by one woman, and a ſon by another, and dieth; and then the eldeſt ſon dies, before any entry made on the lands either by his own act, or by the poſſeſſion of another, the younger brother ſhall inherit, he claiming as heir of the body of the father, and not generally, as heir to his brother; yet if the eldeſt brother enter, and by his own act gained the poſſeſſion; or if the lands were leaſed for years, or in the hands of a guardian, there the poſſeſſion of the leſſee or guardian doth veſt the fee in the elder brother, and then on his death the ſiſter ſhall inherit as heir to her brother, for there is poſſeſſio fratris. 3 Rep. 42. There can be no poſſeſſio fratris of a dignity; in ſuch caſe the younger brother is hæres natus: Lord Grey being created a baron to him and his heirs, had iſſue a ſon and a daughter by one Venter, and a ſon by another; and after his death, the eldeſt being poſſeſſed of the barony, and dying without iſſue, it was adjudged, that the younger brother, and not the ſiſter, ſhould have it. Cro. Car. 437. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 923.

Poſſeſſion, (Poſſeſſio, quaſi pedis poſitio) Is either actual, where a perſon actually enters into lands or tenements deſcended or conveyed to him; or, in law, when lands, &c. are deſcended to a man, and he hath not actually entered into them: Alſo before, or till an office is found of lands eſcheated to the King by attainder, he hath only a poſſeſſion in law. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 17.

Poſſeſſion beyond the memory of man, eſtabliſhes a right; but if by the knowledge of man, or proof of record, &c. the contrary is made out, though it exceeds the memory of man, this ſhall be conſtrued within memory. Co. Lit. 115. A long poſſeſſion the law favours, as an argument of right, although no deed can be ſhewn; rather than an ancient deed, without poſſeſſion. Co. Lit. 6. Continued quiet poſſeſſion is a violent preſumption of a good title: And where two perſons enter into and claim the ſame land, the poſſeſſion will always be adjudged in him who has right, &c. 2 Inſt. 256, 323.

He who is out of poſſeſſion, if he brings his action, muſt make a good title: And to recover any thing from another, it is not ſufficient to deſtroy the title of him in poſſeſſion; but you muſt prove your own better than his. Vaugh. 8, 58, 60. But in action againſt a perſon for digging of coney-boroughs in a common, &c. it was held, that the action being grounded on the poſſeſſion of the tenement, to which the common belonged, the plaintiff need not ſhew a title; and in this caſe the defendant may be a ſtranger; beſides the title is not traverſable, but ought to be given in evidence upon the trial of the iſſue. 3 Salk. 12.

A defendant in treſpaſs, &c. for taking cattle damage-feaſant, has been allowed to juſtify the taking on his poſſeſſion, without ſhewing his title; the matter of juſtification being collateral to the title of the land. 2 Mod. 70. 3 Salk. 220.

In replevin, if defendant had the poſſeſſion, it is a good bar againſt the plaintiff if he has no title; but there cannot be a return, unleſs he ſhews a property in the goods. Paſch. 2 Ann.

Action of the caſe lies for ſhooting at and frightning away ducks from a decoy pond, which is in the plaintiff's poſſeſſion, without ſhewing that he had any property in them. 3 Salk. 9.

A man on a leaſe and releaſe of lands, &c. is in poſſeſſion to all intents, except bringing treſpaſs, which cannot be without an entry, pedis poſitio. 2 Lil. Abr. 335. And to make poſſeſſion good on entry, the former poſſeſſor and his ſervants, &c. are to be removed from the land; and if poſſeſſion be loſt by entry of another, it muſt be regained by re-entry, &c. Paſch. 1650.

A perſon in poſſeſſion may bring an action, for loſs of his ſhade, ſhelter, fruit, when trees are injured; and he in reverſion for ſpoiling the trees. 3 Lev. 209. One in defence of his lawful poſſeſſion, may aſſemble his friends to reſiſt thoſe who threaten to make an unlawful entry into a houſe, &c. 5 Rep. 91. There is an unity of poſſeſſion, when by purchaſe the ſeigniory and tenancy, become in one man's poſſeſſion. Kitch. 134. See 16 Vin. Abr. 454, 460. And Black. Com. 2 V. 163, 195, 196, 389. 3 V. 177, 179, 180, 202, 412. xii.—As to poſſeſſory action, ſee ib. 2 V. 198. 3 V. 180.

Poſſibilitas, Is taken for an act wilfully done, and impoſſibilitas for a thing done againſt our will. Si autem oculos aſnaſſet reddat weram ejus, & poſſibilitatis accuſetur in eo facto, where factum poſſibilitatis is a wilful act. Leg. Alfred. cap. 38. So in the laws of Canutus, c. 66. Et ſi quis agat impoſſibiliter, non eſt omnino ſimile ſi voluntarie faciat. Leg. Sax. Edw. ſenior. c. 88.

Poſſibility, In our law is defined to be an uncertain thing, which may or may not happen. 2 Lil. Abr. 336. And it is either near or remote; as for inſtance: Where an eſtate is limited to one, after the death of another, this is a near poſſibility; but that one man ſhall be married to a woman, and then that ſhe ſhall die, and he be married to another; this is a remote or extraordinary poſſibility: And the law doth not regard a remote poſſibility, that is never like to be. 15 H. 7. 10. Hardr. 417. 2 Rep. 50. A poſſibility cannot be granted over; no poſſibility, right or choſe in action, &c. may be granted or aſſigned to a ſtranger. 4 Rep. 66. 10 Rep. 48. This is at Common law, but by ſtatute and the law merchant, notes and bills of exchange, &c. are aſſignable.

A leaſe was made to huſband and wife of a term of years, for their lives, remainder to the executors of the ſurvivor; the huſband granted the term, and it was adjudged, that it ſhould not bind the wife, the huſband having only a poſſibility to have it, if he ſurvived his wife, and no intereſt till then. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1274.

If huſband and wife are tenants in ſpecial tail, and the huſband only levies a fine of the lands, &c. the wife's eſtate is turned into a poſſibility, and only reducible by entry, if ſhe ſurvive. Hob. 257.

Where a leaſe is made for life, the remainder to the right heirs of J. S. this is good; for by common poſſibility J. S. may die during the life of tenant for life. 2 H. 7. 13. 3 Shep. Abr. 36.

A man made a leaſe to his brother for life, and that if he married, and his wife ſhould ſurvive, then ſhe ſhould have it for her life; the leſſee, before he married, made a feoffment of the lands to another, and afterwards the leſſor levied a fine to him; then the leſſee married, and died, and his wife ſurvived: And it was held, that the remainder to the wife for life was gone by this feoffment, and the poſſibility of her having it was included in the fine, which was likewiſe barred. Moor 554.

A teſtator, poſſeſſed of a leaſe for years, deviſed the profits thereof to W. R. for life, remainder to another; and afterwards the deviſee for life entered with the aſſent of the executor, and then he in remainder for life aſſigned all his intereſt to another, and after the deviſee for life died; it was reſolved, that this aſſignment was void, becauſe whilſt the deviſee for life was living, he in remainder had only a poſſibility to have the term, for the deviſee for life had an intereſt in it ſub modo, and might have ſurvived the whole term. 4 Rep. 64.

The deviſee of the poſſibility of a term is void; as where a term is deviſed to A. for life, remainder to B. and B. deviſes this remainder to C. and dies; and then A. dies; this deviſe to C. is void, and the executors of B. ſhall have it. 3 Lev 427.

A poſſibility founded on a truſt, differs from a mere poſſibility; the firſt may be deviſed, but the other cannot. Moor 808. 2 Nelſ. 1275. See Black. Com. 2 V. 290.

Poſt, A ſwift or ſpeedy meſſenger to carry letters, &c. And the Poſt Office is of the greateſt conſequence to this kingdom, being a country of trade. The firſt law that introduced this very great convenience, was made in the reign of King Car. 2.

By the 12 Car. 2. cap. 35. a general letter or Poſt Office was erected, &c. and the rates for carriage of letters appointed. See the Table to the Statutes. And 9 Ann. c. 10.

A perſon having incloſed Exchequer bills in a letter ſent by the poſt, which were loſt, the owner brought an action againſt the poſtmaſter; and by three judges it was held, that the action did not lie, becauſe the office is for INTELLIGENCE ONLY; and it is impoſſible the Poſtmaſter General, who is to execute this office in ſuch diſtant places, by ſo many ſeveral hands, ſhould be able to ſecure every thing, and for that, this is not a conveyance for treaſure: But Holt was of a contrary opinion; he conſidered this as a letter loſt in the office, not on the road, and held that the Poſtmaſter General is liable, the whole care being committed to him, and the law makes the officer anſwerable for himſelf and his deputies; he has a reward, which is the reaſon why innkeepers, carriers, &c. are liable for goods loſt; and where a man takes on him a public employment, he is bound to ſerve the public, or action lies againſt him, &c. 1 Salk. 17.

The conveyance of poſt letters extends to every conſiderable market-town, and is ſo expeditious, that every twenty-four hours the poſt goes ſixſcore miles.

By 26 Geo. 2. c. 13. Letters containing incloſed ſeveral patterns of cloth, ſilk, or other goods, not exceeding one ounce weight, ſhall be paid for only as for a double letter. See Maſter of the Poſts. And Black. Com. 1 V. 321.

Penny-Poſt, Letters or parcels, not exceeding ſixteen ounces weight, or ten pounds value, are conveyed daily by the penny poſt, to and from all places within the Bills of Mortality, and ten miles diſtance from the General Poſt-Office, for 1*d.* each packet, letter, &c. Stat. 9 Ann. c. 10. And ſeveral general offices are kept at convenient diſtances, to receive penny-poſt letters every day, Sundays excepted: Alſo letters that come from all parts by the general poſt, directed to perſons in any country towns to which the penny-poſt goes, are delivered the ſame day they come to London: And the anſwers are carried every Poſt night to the General Poſt-Office in Lombard-ſtreet, being left at the receiving houſes.

Penny-poſt men carrying letters out of the cities of London and Weſtminſter, or borough of Southwark, and the ſuburbs thereof, may demand and take 1*d.* at delivery for every letter, above the penny paid on putting the letters into the Penny-poſt Office; except letters paſſing by the general poſt, &c. Stat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 33.

Poſt, writ of entry in. It is given by the ſtatute of Marlbridge, 52 Hen. 3. c. 30. which provides, that when the number of alienations or deſcents exceed the uſual degrees, a new writ ſhall be allowed, without any mention of degrees at all. And accordingly this writ has been framed, which only alledges the injury of the wrong doer, without deducing all the intermediate title from him to the tenant: ſtating it in this manner; that the tenant had no legal entry unleſs after, or ſubſequent to, the ouſter or injury done by the original diſpoſſeſſor; "non habuit ingreſſum niſi poſt intruſionem quam Gulielmus in illud fecit;" and rightly concluding, that if the original title was wrongful, all claims derived from thence muſt participate of the ſame wrong. Black. Com. 3 V. 182.

Poſt Conqueſtum, Were words inſerted in the King's title, by King Edw. 1. and conſtantly uſed in the time of Edw. 3. Clauſ. 1 Edw. 3. indorſ. m. 33.

Poſt Diem, Is where a writ is returned after the day aſſigned, for which the cuſtos brevium hath a fee of 4*d.* whereas he hath nothing if it be returned at the day.

Poſt-Diſſeiſin, Is a writ that lies for him who having recovered lands or tenements by præcipe quod reddat, on default or reddition, is again diſſeiſed by the former diſſeiſor; then he ſhall have this writ, and recover double damages, and the party ſhall be puniſhed by impriſonment, &c. Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 26. Reg. Orig. 208. F. N. B. 190.

The writ of poſt-diſſeiſin ought to be brought by the parties who firſt recovered, or ſome of them, and of the ſame land which was recovered, or part thereof, and againſt thoſe or ſome of them, againſt whom the recovery was: But if a man recover by a præcipe quod reddat, and after is diſſeiſed by him againſt whom he recovered, and the diſſeiſor makes a feoffment, and takes back an eſtate to him and another, a poſt-diſſeiſin may be had againſt him and his jointenant; and if he who loſeth the land by default, &c. after diſſeiſe him who recovered, and make a feoffment to another perſon, he who recovered ſhall have this writ againſt the diſſeiſor, although he be not tenant of the land; for in a writ of poſt-diſſeiſin, the demandant ſhall not have judgment to recover the land; but the ſheriff ſhall reſtore the plaintiff to his poſſeſſion, if the diſſeiſin be found, and take the defendant and keep him in priſon. New Nat. Br. 423. And the defendant is not to be delivered out of priſon, until he hath paid a fine to the King, and without the King's ſpecial command, upon a certiorari to remove the record into B. R. whereupon a writ ſhall go to the ſheriff to deliver him. Ibid.

Nontenure is no plea in a poſt-diſſeiſin, for the defendant ought to anſwer the diſſeiſin, &c. See Black. Com. 3 V. 188. This title is now rather obſolete, ejectments anſwering moſt purpoſes, unleſs twenty years have elapſed before the title accrued.

Poſtea, Is the return of the judge, before whom a cauſe was tried, after a verdict, of what was done in the cauſe; and is indorſed on the back of the Niſi prius record: It begins, POSTEA die & loco, &c. wherefore it is ſo called. 2 Lil. 337.

A poſtea is a record of the court, truſted with the attorney in the cauſe by the clerk of the aſſiſe; and the attorney ſo intruſted, is to deliver it into the office, that the judgment may be entered by it by the officer of the court. Trin. 1651.

It is brought into court at the day in bank, and recorded there and delivered back to the attorney, who gives a rule for judgment upon it; and if there be no rule to the contrary, after the rule for judgment is out, the attorney brings his poſtea to the ſecondary, who ſigns his judgment, and then he enters all this matter on the iſſue roll. 2 Lil. 337.

The court may ſtay the bringing in of the poſtea, and entering up the judgment upon a verdict, if they find cauſe to do it, for any undue practice in the proceedings to trial: And if the party for whom the verdict paſſed, will not bring in the poſtea, upon notice given by the other party, that he intends to move in arreſt of judgment; the court, on motion, will order judgment to be ſtayed, until four days after the poſtea is brought in, allowed to ſpeak in arreſt of judgment. Mich. 22 Car. B. R.

Although the verdict, be prejudicial to the plaintiff, he ought to bring in the poſtea; for he muſt abide by the trial.

There is no general rule of court for the clerk of aſſiſe, &c. to bring the poſtea into court of B. R. by a preciſe time; but if it be not returned in convenient time, the court may be moved at the ſide bar for a rule to bring it in ſpeedily. 2 Lil. 337. If the clerk of aſſiſe hath miſtaken in drawing up the poſtea, he may amend it by his notes, before it is filed; and the return of a poſtea hath been amended by the memory of a judge, who tried the cauſe. Cro. Car. 338. See Black. Com. 3 V. 386. xi. And poſteas are amended by the judges minutes, on motion.

Poſteriority, (Poſterioritas) Signifies the being or coming after, and is a word of compariſon and relation in tenures, the correlative whereof is priority: As a man holding lands or tenements of two lords, holds of his ancienter lord by priority, and of his latter lord by poſteriority. Staundf. Prærog. 10, 11. 2 Inſt. 392. See Priority.

Poſt-Fine, Is a duty to the King for a fine formerly acknowledged in his court, paid by the cogniſee after the fine is fully paſſed, and it is ſo much, and half ſo much as was paid to the King for the præ-fine, collected by the ſheriff of the county where the land lies of which the fine was levied, to be anſwered by him into the Exchequer. Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. See ſtat. 32 Geo. 2. c. 14. See Black. Com. 2 V. 350.

Poſthumous, Is where a child is born after his father's death, &c. And Poſthumous children are enabled to take eſtates by remainder in ſettlements, as if born in their father's life-time, though no eſtate be limited to truſtees to preſerve them till they come in eſſe. 10 & 11 W. 3. cap. 16. See in Ventre ſa mere. And Black. Com. 2 V. 169.

Poſt-man, in the Exchequer. In the court of Exchequer two of the moſt experienced barriſters, called the Poſt-man and the Tub-man, (from the places in which they ſit) have a precedence in motions. Black. Com. 3 V. 28.

Poſtnatus, Is a word that ſignifieth the ſecond ſon, or one born afterwards; often mentioned in Bracton, Glanvile, Fleta, and other ancient writers; and as to poſtnati and antenati, it was ſolemnly adjudged, that thoſe who after the deſcent of the crown of England to King James 1. were born in Scotland, were not aliens here in England: But the antenati, or thoſe born in Scotland, before the deſcent, were aliens here, in reſpect of the time of their birth. Calvin's caſe. Children of perſons attainted of treaſon, born after the King's pardon, may inherit lands; though not thoſe born before, &c. Co. Lit. 391.

Poſts. See Highways, Incloſures.

Poſt-Terminum, Is the return of a writ, not only after the return thereof, but after the term; on which the cuſtos brevium takes 20*d.* It is alſo uſed for the fee ſo taken.

Poſtulation, (Poſtulatio) Signifies a petition. Formerly when a biſhop was tranſlated from one biſhoprick to another, he was not elected to the new ſee; for the Canon law is electus non poteſt elegi; and the pretence was, that he was married to the firſt church, which marriage could not be diſſolved but by the Pope; thereupon he was petitioned, and conſenting to the petition, the biſhop was tranſlated, and this was ſaid to be by poſtulation: But being an uſurpation, and againſt law, it was reſtrained by 16 R. 2. and 9 H. 4. c. 8. Since which, tranſlations of biſhops have been by election, and not by poſtulation. 1 Jones 160. 1 Salk. 137.

Poſtulations were made on the unanimous voting any perſon to a dignity or office; of which he was not capable by the ordinary canons or ſtatutes, without ſpecial diſpenſation;

penſation: And by the ancient cuſtoms, an election could be made by a majority of votes; but a poſtulation muſt have been nemine contradicente.

Pound, (Parcus) Is generally any place incloſed, to keep in beaſts; but eſpecially a place of ſtrength to keep cattle which are diſtrained, or put in for any treſpaſs done by them, until they are replevied or redeemed. In this ſignification, it is called pound overt and pound covert; a pound overt is an open pound, uſually built on the lord's waſte, and which he provides for the uſe of himſelf and tenants, and is alſo called the lord's or the common pound; and a backſide, yard, &c. whereto the owner of beaſts impounded may come to give them meat, without offence, is a pound overt: A pound covert is a cloſe place, as the owner of the cattle cannot come to, without giving offence; ſuch as a houſe, &c. Kitch. 144. Terms de Ley. Co. Lit. 96.

There is a difference between a common pound, an open pound, and a cloſe pound, as to cattle impounded: For where cattle are kept in a common pound, no notice is neceſſary to the owner to feed them; but if they are put into any other open place, notice is to be given; and if beaſts are impounded in a pound cloſe, in part of the diſtrainer's houſe, &c. he is to feed them, at his peril. Co. Lit. 47.

A common pound belongs to a townſhip, lordſhip, or village; and ought to be in every pariſh, kept in repair by them who have uſed to do it time out of mind: The overſight whereof, is to be by the ſteward in the leet, where any default herein is puniſhable. Dyer 288. Noy 52. See Diſtreſs. And Black. Com. 3 V. 12.

Poundage, Is a ſubſidy to the value of twelve-pence in the pound, granted to the King, of all merchandize exported or imported; and of ſuch ſubſidies, ſee 1 & 2 Edw. 6. cap. 13. and 1 Jac. c. 33. 12 Car. 2. cap. 4. 14 Car. 2. cap. 24. And Black. Com. 1 V. 315. 4 V. 430.

Pound-breach. If a diſtreſs be taken and impounded, though without juſt cauſe, the owner cannot break the pound, and take away the diſtreſs; if he doth, the party diſtrained may have his action, and retake the diſtreſs wherever he finds it: And for pound-breaches, &c. action of the caſe lies, whereon treble damages may be recovered. Co. Lit. 261. 2 W. & M. c. 5. Alſo pound-breaches may be inquired of in the ſheriff's turn; as they are common grievances, in contempt of the authority of the law. 2 Hawk. P. C. 67. See Black. Com. 3 V. 146.

Pound in Money, (from the Sax. pund, i. e. pondus) Is twenty ſhillings: In the time of the Saxons it conſiſted of 240 pence, as it doth now: and 240 of thoſe pence weighed a pound, but 720 ſcarce weigh ſo much at this day. Lambard 219.

Pour fair proclaimer, que null inject Fimes on Ordures en Foſſes, ou Rivers, pres Cities, &c. Is an ancient writ directed to the mayor or bailiff of a city or town, requiring them to make proclamation, That none caſt filth into places near ſuch city or town, to the nuſance thereof: and if any be caſt there already, to remove the ſame: It is founded on the ſtat. 12 R. 2. c. 13. F. N. B. 176. Indictments for nuſances now ſupply the place of this writ.

Pourparty, (Propars, propartis, propartia) Is contrary to pro indiviſo: For to make pourparty is to divide the lands that fall to parceners, which before partition they hold jointly and pro indiviſo. Old Nat. Brev. 11.

Pourpreſture, (Pourpreſtura, from the Fr. pourpris. conſeptum, an incloſure) Is thus defined by Glanvile, lib. 9. cap. 11. Pourpreſtura eſt proprie quando aliquid ſuper Dominum Regem injuſte occupatur; ut in Dominicis Regis, vel in viis publicis obſtructis vel in aquis publicis tranſverſis a recto curſu, vel quando aliquis in civitate ſuper Regiam plateam aliquid ædificando occupaverit, & generaliter quoties aliquid ſit ad nocumentum Regii tenementi vel Regiæ viæ vel civitatis.

Crompton, in his Juriſd. 152. defines it thus: Pourpreſture is properly when a man taketh unto himſelf, or incroacheth any thing he ought not, whether it be in any juriſdiction, land or franchiſe; and generally when any thing is done to the nuſance of the King's tenants. See Kitchin, 10. and Manwood's Foreſt Laws, cap. 10.

Skene de verbor. ſignif. verbo Pourpreſture, makes three ſorts of this offence, one againſt the King, a ſecond againſt the lord of the fee, the third againſt a neighbour by a neighbour. See 2 Inſt. 38 & 272. Et lib. niger in ſcac. 37 & 38. That againſt the King happens by the negligence of the ſheriff or deputy, or by the long continuance of wars, inaſmuch as thoſe who have lands near the crown lands, take or incloſe part of it, and lay it to their own.

Pourpreſture againſt the lord, is when the tenant neglects to perform what he is bound to do for the chief lord, or in any wiſe deprives him of his right. Cowell.

Pourpreſture againſt a neighbour is of the ſame nature: It is mentioned in the Monaſt. 1 tom. 843. and in Thorn. 2623. Et de purpreſtura quam Bercarius abbas purprehendit ſuper prædictum Heliam.

Pour ſeiſir terres le feme que tient en dower, &c. Was a writ whereby the King ſeiſed the land which the wife of his tenant who held in capite deceaſed, had for her dowry, if ſhe married without his leave; was grounded on the ſtatute of the king's prerogative, cap. 3. See F. N. B. 174. This writ does not now lie. Vide Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24.

Pourſuivant, (from the Fr. pourſuivre, i. e. perſequi) Signifies the King's meſſenger attending him, to be ſent on any occaſion or meſſage; as for the apprending a perſon accuſed or ſuſpected of any offence: Thoſe employed in martial cauſes are called purſuivants at arms, 24 H. 8. 13. See Herald.

Stow, ſpeaking of Richard the Third's death, page 784. hath theſe words, His body was naked to the ſkin, not ſo much as one clout about him, and was truſſed behind a PURSUIVANT AT ARMS like a hog, or a calf, &c.

The reſt are uſed upon other meſſages in time of peace, and eſpecially in matters touching juriſdiction. Nicholas Upton, in his book De Militari Officio, viz. lib. 1. c. 11. mentions the ancient form of making theſe purſuivants, and tells us, that they were called milites linguares, becauſe their chief honour was in cuſtodia linguæ, and he divides them into curſores equitantes and proſecutores. Cowell.

Pourveyance or Purveyance, Is the providing neceſſaries for the King's houſe.

By 12 Car. 2. c. 24. it is provided, "That no perſon by colour of buying or making proviſion or purveyance ſhall take any thing of any ſubject, without the full and free conſent of the owner, obtained without menace or force," &c. See the Antiquity of Pre-emption and Purveyance, and 3 Inſt. 82.

The profitable prerogative of purveyance and pre-emption, was a right enjoyed by the crown of buying up proviſions and other neceſſaries, by the intervention of the King's purveyors, for the uſe of his royal houſhold, at an appraiſed valuation, in preference to all others, and even without conſent of the owner; and alſo of forcibly impreſſing the carriages and horſes of the ſubject, to do the King's buſineſs on the public roads, in the conveyance of timber, baggage, and the like, however inconvenient to the proprietor, upon paying him a ſettled price.

A prerogative, which prevailed pretty generally throughout Europe, during the ſcarcity of gold and ſilver, and the high valuation of money conſequential thereupon. In thoſe early times the King's houſhold (as well as thoſe of inferior lords) were ſupported by ſpecific renders of corn, and other victuals, from the tenants of the reſpective demeſnes; and there was alſo a continual market kept at the palace gate to furniſh viands for the royal uſe. 4 Inſt. 273. And this anſwered all purpoſes, in thoſe ages of ſimplicity, ſo long as the King's court continued in any certain place. But when it removed from one part of the kingdom to another, (as was formerly very frequently done) it was found neceſſary to ſend purveyors beforehand, to get together a ſufficient quantity of proviſions and other neceſſaries for the houſhold: And, leſt the unuſual demand ſhould raiſe them to an exorbitant price, the powers before-mentioned were veſted in theſe purveyors; who in proceſs of time greatly abuſed their authority, and became a great oppreſſion to the ſubject, tho' of little advantage to the crown; ready money in open market (when the royal reſidence was more permanent, and ſpecie began to be plenty) being found upon experience to be the beſt proveditor of any. Wherefore by degrees the powers of purveyance have declined, in foreign countries as well as our own; and particularly were aboliſhed in Sweden by Guſtavus Adolphus, towards the beginning of the laſt century. And, with us in England, having fallen into diſuſe during the ſuſpenſion of monarchy, King Charles at his reſtoration conſented, by 12 Car. 2. c. 24. to reſign intirely theſe branches of his revenue and power; And the parliament, in part of recompence, ſettled on him, his heirs, and ſucceſſors, for ever, the hereditary exciſe of fifteen pence per barrel on all beer and ale ſold in the kingdom, and a proportionable ſum for certain other liquors. Black. Com. 1 V. 287, 8. and 4 V. 116, 417, 432.

Pourveyor or Purveyor, (Proviſor, derived from the French pourvoir, i. e. providere) Signifies an officer of the King or Queen, or other great perſonage, who provideth corn and other victual for their houſe. See Magna Charta, c. 22. and 3 Ed. 1. cap. 7. & 31. & anno 28. ejuſdem. Articuli ſuper chartas 2. and other ſtatutes. The name of purveyor was ſo odious in times paſt, that by ſtatute 36 Edw. 3. 2. the heinous name of purveyor was changed into buyer; but the office is reſtrained by ſtat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24.

Pow-dike. To perverſely and maliciouſly cut down or deſtroy the pow-dike, in the fens of Norfolk and Ely, is felony, by 22 Hen. 8. c. 11.

Power, Is an authority which one man gives another to act for him; and is ſometimes a reſervation which a perſon makes in a conveyance for himſelf to do ſome acts, as to make leaſes, or the like. 2 Lill. Abr. 339.

We ſhall here conſider,

1. Upon what eſtate, and by what words a power ſhall be raiſed.
2. How a power ſhall be expounded.

1. Upon what eſtate, and by what words, a power ſhall be raiſed.

In conveyances to an uſe, a man may direct or model the uſe, as he pleaſes, and the ſtat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. executes the poſſeſſion to the uſe: Therefore he may annex powers to eſtates, which cannot be annexed to them by a conveyance at the Common law. Co. L. 237. a. Mo. 610. And therefore to the limitation of an uſe for life, he may annex a power to make leaſes for years, or lives, or to make a jointure to a wife. Mo. 381. 2 Lev. 58. Or to grant annuities, raiſe portions, &c. Mo. 381. Or to make a jointure, and alſo a leaſe to commence after his death for portions, &c. Hard. 413. So he may annex a power of revocation of all uſes limited, and to make a limitation of new uſes, and this will not be repugnant. Co. L. 237. a. Mod. 610.

So a power may be annexed to an eſtate by another deed, executed at the ſame time, tho' it be not in the ſame conveyance by which the eſtate is conveyed. 1 Vent. 279. So a man may give a power or authority by will, which is a naked authority, not annexed to an eſtate: As, if he deviſes to A. for life, and afterwards that it ſhall be at his diſpoſal to any of his children then living; he hath but an eſtate for life, with a naked power to diſpoſe, in the manner directed by the will. 1 Salk. 24. 3 Salk. 276. So he may give a power to a ſtranger, which is a naked collateral power, and annexed to an eſtate. Or a power in groſs, which takes effect after his eſtate is determined. Hard. 415.

If a power be to A. or his aſſigns, to make leaſes, &c. the power runs with the eſtate to the aſſignee in deed, or in law. 1 Vent. 340. 2 Jon. 110. So in all caſes a power coupled with an intereſt may be aſſigned; As, a power to a leſſor, and his aſſigns, to cut down trees. 2 Mod. 317. But a man cannot annex a power of revocation to a feoffment, or grant, for that will be void. Co. Lit. 237. a. Mo. 610. So if a man ſeiſed in fee, covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, with power to make leaſes, remainder to another in fee, the power is not well raiſed. Ca. Ch. 161. If the conſideration of the covenant does not extend to the power to make leaſes. Mo. 145. 1 Co. 175. Ray. 248. So upon ſuch covenant he cannot reſerve a power to make leaſes, jointures, or for preferment of younger children, &c. Mo. 381, 383.

Words which ſhew the intent of the party, are ſufficient to create a power; as if a power be to demiſe or leaſe, tho' the intent is, that he declare the uſes of the firſt ſettlement for life or years: For the leaſe does not take effect by demiſe, but by declaration of the uſes. Mo. 611. So, if a man expreſſes the power only by implication, it is well: As, provided, that he ſhall not have power to alien, &c. otherwiſe than to make a jointure, and leaſes for 21 years; it is a good power to make a jointure and leaſes. 1 Leo. 148. So, if a deviſe be to A. for life, to ſet, let and make eſtates out of it as I might, and afterwards to his daughter in tail; A. has power to make leaſes, it being the cuſtom of the country where the land lies, to let for lives or years. 2 Rol. 261. l. 35.

But a power, being executory, may be reſtrained or enlarged by a ſubſequent deed: As, if a power be general, to revoke; by a covenant afterwards, that he will not revoke without the conſent of B. the power is reſtrained. Jon. 411. So, if the conſideration upon which the power was founded, does not extend to the perſon to whom the leaſe is made, the leaſe ſhall be void: As, if a man covenant, in conſideration of natural affection, to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, &c. with power to make leaſes, &c. a leaſe to a ſtranger is void: For he is not within the conſideration. 2 Rol. 260. l. 30. So, if a power, at its creation, be to make leaſes to a perſon, to whom the conſideration does not extend, it will be void, tho' the leaſe be executed to a perſon within the conſideration. 2 Rol. 260. l. 35.

A power ſhall be expounded ſtrictly; therefore if a man has power to make leaſes generally, this extends to make leaſes in poſſeſſion only, and not in reverſion. 2 Roll. 261. c. 5. Cro. Jac. 318. Yel. 222. Roy. 248. 1 Ld. Raym. 267. 2 Salk. 537. 1 Lev. 168. 6 Co. 33. a. Mo. 199 1 Leo. 35. 3 Leo. 131. Nor a leaſe to commence in futuro. Ray. 248. 1 Leo. 35. Yel. 222. Cro. Jac. 318 Mo. 494. So, if the power be to make leaſes for two or three lives, he cannot make a leaſe to one not in eſſe; as, to the ſon of B. not born, &c. Per Wind. Ray. 163. So, if the power be to make leaſes in poſſeſſion, he cannot make a leaſe of land in reverſion, tho' it be to commence in præſenti. 1 Sid. 101. Ca. Ch. 18.

So, if part of a leaſe be in reverſion, the whole leaſe ſhall be void. 3 Salk. 276. So, if the power be to make leaſes in poſſeſſion, or in reverſion, he cannot make a leaſe in poſſeſſion, and another leaſe of the ſame land in reverſion; but his power to leaſe in reverſion extends only to make leaſes of the land, which was not then in poſſeſſion. 1 Ld. Ray. 269. 2 Salk. 537. So a power to make a leaſe of three lives or three years in poſſeſſion, or for two lives or thirty years in reverſion, warrants only a concurrent leaſe for two lives; for a leaſe for lives cannot commence at a future day. 1 Ld. Raym. 269. 2 Salk. 537.

But if a power be annexed to the eſtate of him in reverſion, to make leaſes generally, he may make a leaſe in præſenti of the reverſion. 1 Lev. 168. Tho' the power be to make leaſes in poſſeſſion. Ca. Ch. 18. 1 Lev. 168. 1 Sid. 260, 261. So, if a fine be to the conuſee for 15 years, afterwards to B. for life, &c. with power to leaſe for three lives, or twenty-one years in poſſeſſion; he may make a leaſe during the 15 years of land in leaſe at the time of the fine, when ſuch leaſe expires. 2 Rol. 260. l. 50. Cro. Jac. 347. 1 Rol. 12. 2 Rol. 216. So if huſband and wife leaſe purſuant to the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. And then, by act of parliament, the eſtate is ſettled to the huſband for life, with power to leaſe for three lives or 21 years; he may make leaſes of the reverſion during the firſt leaſe by the huſband and wife. 2 Rol. 261. l. 15. 1 Lev. 36. Cont. Dyer 357. a. So, if a power be to make leaſes in reverſion for three lives, &c. he may leaſe for three lives, when there is another life in eſſe, though the power does not ſay to make leaſes of the reverſion; for there is no prejudice. 2 Rol. 261. l. 30. So he may make a leaſe for years determinable upon three lives, to commence after the end of the former leaſe in eſſe. 8 Co. 70. See 16 Vin. Abr. tit. Power.

Poyning's Law, Is an act of parliament made in Ireland, in the reign of Hen. VII. ſo called becauſe Sir Edward Poyning was Lieutenant there when it was made, whereby all the ſtatutes in England were declared of force in Ireland; which before that time were not, nor are any ſince that time, but by ſpecial words. 12 Rep. 109. Practice. The law loves plain and fair practice, and will not countenance fraud in proceedings, nor ſuffer advantage to be taken thereby. 2 Lil. 342. Private clandeſtine proceedings, in ſeveral caſes, are ſaid to be by practice.

Præceptories, (Præceptoriæ) Were a kind of benefices having their name from being poſſeſſed by the more eminent Templars, whom the chief maſter by his authority created and called Præceptores Templi: And of theſe Præceptors there are recorded ſixteen, as belonging to the Templars in England, viz. Creſſing Temple, Balſhal, Shengay, Newland, Yeveley, Witham, Templebruere, Willington, Rotheley, Ovenington, Temple Combe, Trebigh, Ribſtane, Mount St. John, Temple Nuſum and Temple Hurſt. Præcipe. Original writs are either optional or peremptory; or, in the language of our law, they are either a præcipe, or a ſi te fecerit ſecurum. The præcipe is in the alternative, commanding the defendant to do the thing required, or ſhew the reaſon wherefore he hath not done it. The uſe of this writ is where ſomething certain is demanded by the plaintiff, which is in the power of defendant himſelf to perform; as, to reſtore the poſſeſſion of land, to pay a certain liquidated debt, to perform a ſpecific covenant, to render an account, and the like: In all which caſes the writ is drawn up in the form of a præcipe or command, to do thus, or ſhew cauſe to the contrary; giving the defendant his choice, to redreſs the injury or ſtand the ſuit. Black. Com. 3 V. 274.

Præcipe in capite, Was a writ iſſuing out of the Chancery, for a tenant holding of the King in capite, viz. in chief as of his crown. Magn. Chart. cap. 24. Reg. Orig. 4. Black. Com. 3 V. 195.

Præcipe quod reddat, Is the form of a writ, which extends as well to a writ of right, as to other writs of entry or poſſeſſion, beginning præcipe A. quod reddat B. unum meſſuagium, &c. Old Nat. Br. 13. See Black. Com. 2 V. 358. xvii. As to Præcipe in Fines, ſee ib. 350. xiv. And as to Tenant to the Præcipe, ſee ib. 3 V. 182.

Præcipitium, Was a puniſhment inflicted on criminals, by caſting them from ſome high place. Malmſ. lib. 5. p. 155.

Prædict', Prædictus, (Lat.) In Engliſh, aforeſaid, Is a word uſed in pleadings, applied to places, towns, lands, names, parties, &c. before mentioned. In a deed or grant, the words prædict. manerii are a deſcription of the manor before named: And a town, repeated by the name of pariſh prædict. ſhall be held all one; for the word aforeſaid couples them. Hob. 6. A difference as to prædict. term granted, &c. See 10 Rep. 65.

Præfectus Villæ, Is the ſame as præpoſitus villæ, i. e. the mayor of a town. Leg. Ed. Confeſ. c. 28.

Præfine, Is that fine which on ſuing out the writ of covenant on levying fines, is paid before the fine is paſſed.

Præmunire, Is taken either for a writ ſo called, or for the offence whereon the writ is granted; the one may be underſtood by the other.

The church of Rome, under pretence of her ſupremacy, and the dignity of St. Peter's chair, took on her to beſtow moſt of the eccleſiaſtical livings of any worth in England, by mandates, before they were void; pretending therein great care to ſee the church provided of a ſucceſſor before it needed, Whence theſe mandates or bulls were called gratiæ expectativæ or proviſiones, whereof ſee a learned diſcourſe in Duarenus de beneficiis, lib. 3. cap. 1.

Theſe proviſions were ſo common, that at laſt Edward the Third, not digeſting ſo intolerable an incroachment, made a ſtatute in the twenty-fifth year of his reign, ſtat. 5. cap. 22. and another ſtat. 6. cap. 2. and a third anno 27. againſt thoſe who drew people out of the realm, to anſwer things belonging to the King's court; and another anno 28 ſtat. 2. cap. 1, 2, 3 & 4. whereby he greatly reſtrained this liberty of the pope; who notwithſtanding ſtill adventured to continue the proviſions; inſomuch that Richard the Second likewiſe made ſeveral ſtatutes againſt them, but moſt expreſsly that of 16 Ric. 2. 5. which appoints their puniſhment to be thus, That they ſhould be OUT OF THE KING'S PROTECTION, attached by their bodies, and loſe their lands, tenements, goods and chattels. After him Henry the Fourth, in like manner aggrieved at other abuſes, not fully met with in the former ſtatutes, in the ſecond year of his reign, c. 3 & 4. adds certain new caſes, and lays on the offenders the ſame puniſhment. See alſo 9 Hen. 4. c. 8. and 3 Hen. 5. c. 4. and Smith de Republ. Angl. lib. 3. cap. 9.

Some later ſtatutes inflict this puniſhment upon other offenders.

The word is moſt commonly applied to the puniſhment firſt ordained by the ſtatutes beforementioned, for ſuch as tranſgreſſed them: For where it is ſaid, that any man for an offence committed, ſhall incur a præmunire, it is meant that he ſhall incur the ſame puniſhment as is inflicted on thoſe who tranſgreſs 16 Ric. 2. c. 5. commonly called the ſtatute of præmunire; which kind of application is not unuſual in our ſtatutes.

As to the etymology of the word, it proceeds from the verb præmonere, being barbarouſly turned into præmunire, to forewarn or bid the offender to take heed; For which a reaſon may be gathered from the words of 27 Ed. 3. c. 1. and the form of the writ, in Old Nat. Brev. 143. Præmunire facias præfatum præpoſitum, & J. R. procuratorem, &c. quod tunc ſint coram nobis, &c. which words can be referred to none but parties charged with the offence. Cowell. See 3 Inſt. 110. and Black. Com. 4 V. c. 8. p. 102, 421.

We ſhall here further conſider,

2. Of the puniſhment in a præmunire.
3. To what time the attainder ſhall relate.

1. What offences come under the notion of a præmunire.

The offences coming under the notion of a præmunire, or for which the party incurs a præmunire, are reduced by Hawkins to the following particulars:

1. Making uſe of papal bulls is made a præmunire, by many ſtatutes, to which purpoſe it is enacted by 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 6. called the ſtatute of proviſors, that whoever ſhall by a papal proviſion diſturb any patron to preſent to a benefice, &c. ſhall be fined and impriſoned till he make full renunciation. And by 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 5. cap. 22. If any one purchaſe a proviſion of an abbey or priory, he ſhall be out of the King's protection; and by 38 Ed. 3. ſt. 2. c. 2. and 12 Ric. 2. cap. 15, and 13 Ric. 2. ſtat. 2. cap. 2. Whoever ſhall accept a benefice contrary to 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 6. ſhall be baniſhed; and by 13 Ric. 2. ſtat. 2. cap. 3. Whoever ſhall bring a ſentence of excommunication againſt any perſon for executing the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. ſhall ſuffer pain of life and member; and by 16 Ric. 2. c. 5. Whoever ſhall purchaſe or purſue, or cauſe to be purchaſed or purſued, in the court of Rome or elſewhere, any tranſlations, proceſſes, ſentences of excommunication, bulls, inſtruments, or other things contrary to the tenure of that ſtatute, or bring them within this realm, or receive, &c. ſhall be out of the King's protection; and their lands and tenements, goods and chattels forfeited to the King, and be attached by their bodies; and by 2 Hen. 4. c. 3. Whoever ſhall purchaſe from Rome a proviſion of exemption from ordinary obedience; and by 2 Hen. 4. cap. 4. Whoever ſhall put in execution bulls purchaſed by thoſe of the order of Ciſteaux, to be diſcharged of tithes, ſhall incur the like penalty; they are further reſtrained by 6 Hen. 4. cap. 1. 7 Hen. 4. cap. 8. 9 Hen. 4. cap. 8. and 3 Hen. 5. cap. 4. by which the ſtatutes abovementioned are inforced and explained; and by 23 Hen. 8. cap. 2. ſect. 22. Whoever ſhall ſue for or execute any licence, diſpenſation or faculty from the ſee of Rome; and by 28 Hen. 8. cap. 16 (by which all bulls, briefs, &c. obtained from Rome are made void) Whoever ſhall uſe, allege, or plead the ſame in any court, unleſs they were confirmed by this ſtatute, or afterwards by the King, ſhall incur the like penalty. Vide Reg. 54. 3 Inſt. 127.

By the 13 Eliz. cap. 2. Thoſe who purchaſe any bulls, &c. from Rome, are guilty of high treaſon; but thoſe antient ſtatutes continue ſtill in force, and it is in the election of the crown to proceed either upon them, or 13 El. c. 2. Alſo the aiders of ſuch offenders, after the offence, to the intent to uphold the ſame uſurped power, incur a præmunire. Davis 84.

Secondly, Derogating from the King's Common law courts, is ſaid to have been an high offence at Common law, and is made a præmunire by many antient ſtatutes; for by 27 Ed. 3. cap. 1. of proviſors, If any ſubject draw any out of the realm in plea, whereof the cognizance pertains to the King's court, or of things whereof judgments be given in the King's courts, or ſue in any other court to defeat or impeach the judgments given in the King's courts, he ſhall be warned to appear, &c. in proper perſon, at a day, containing the ſpace of two months, at which if he appear not, he and his proctors, &c. ſhall be put out of the King's protection, his lands and chattels forfeited, his body impriſoned, and ranſomed at the King's will, &c. See 16 R. 2. c. 5.

In the conſtruction of theſe ſtatutes it hath been held, that certain commiſſioners of ſewers, for ſummoning one before them who had got a judgment at law, and impriſoning him till he would releaſe it, were guilty of a præmunire. 2 Bulſt. 299. 3 Inſt. 125. Cro. Jac. 336.

Alſo ſuits in the admiralty or eccleſiaſtical courts within the realm, for matters which upon the face of the libel itſelf appear to belong only to the cognizance of the temporal courts, are ſaid to be within 16 Rich. 2. by force of the words, "or elſewhere." 1 Hawk. P. C. 51.

And it hath been formerly holden, that even ſuits in a court of equity, to relieve againſt a judgment at law, are within the danger of theſe ſtatutes, eſpecially if they tend to controvert the very point determined at law, or to relieve in a matter relievable at law. 4 New Abr. 146.

Thirdly, Appeals to Rome are made præmunires by 24 Hen. 8. cap. 12. and 25 Hen. 8. cap. 19. by which it is enacted, That ſuch appeals as formerly were made to Rome ſhall be made henceforth to Chancery.

Fourthly, Exerciſing the juriſdiction of a ſuffragan without the appointment of the biſhop of the dioceſe, is made a præmunire by 26 Hen. 8. cap. 14. which ſets forth at large how ſuffragans are to be nominated, &c.

Fifthly, By 25 Hen. 8. cap. 20. If a dean and chapter refuſe to elect one named in the King's letter for a biſhoprick, and to certify ſuch election to the King within twenty days after the licence come to his hands, or if any archbiſhop or biſhop after ſuch election (or nomination by the King in default thereof, &c.) refuſe to confirm and conſecrate within twenty days the perſon ſignified to them by the King's letters patent, they incur a præmunire.

Sixthly, Maintaining the pope's power is made a præmunire by 5 Eliz. cap. 1.

Seventhly, By 13 Eliz. cap. 7. "If any one bring into the realm, &c. any ſuperſtitious things, pretended to be hallowed by the biſhop of Rome, &c. and deliver or offer the ſame to any ſubject to be uſed in any wiſe; or if any one receive the ſame to ſuch intent, and not diſcover the offender, &c. or if a juſtice of peace, having any offence in that act declared to him, do not within ſixteen days declare it to a privy counſellor, he incurs a præmunire."

Eighthly, By 27 Eliz. c. 2. "Sending relief to any jeſuit, ſeminary prieſt, or college of prieſts or jeſuits beyond the ſeas, or to one not returning out of ſuch college into England, incur a præmunire.

Ninthly, Perſons refuſing to take the oaths, incur a præmunire by ſeveral ſtatutes, as 1 and 5 Eliz. 3. and 7 Jac. 1. 1 W. & M. &c.

Tenthly, By the 6 Ann. cap. 7. If any perſon maliciouſly and directly, by preaching, teaching, or adviſed ſpeaking, declare, maintain and affirm, that the pretended Prince of Wales hath any right or title to the crown of this realm, or that any other perſon hath any right or title to the ſame, otherwiſe than according to 1 W. & M. cap. 2. and 2 W. 3. cap. 2. and the acts then lately made in England and Scotland mutually for the union of the two kingdoms; or that the Kings or Queens of this realm with the authority of parliament are not able to make laws to limit the crown and the deſcent, &c. thereof, ſhall incur a præmunire.

2. Of the puniſhment in a præmunire.

Moſt of the ſtatutes of præmunire refer the puniſhment to 16 Ric. 2. c. 5. which enacts, "That thoſe who offend ſhall be PUT OUT OF THE KING'S PROTECTION, and their lands and tenements, goods and chattels forfeited to the King; and that they be attached by their bodies if they may be found, and brought before the King and his council, to anſwer; or that proceſs be made againſt them by præmunire facias, in manner as is ordained in other ſtatutes of proviſors."

The judgment in præmunire at the ſuit of the King, againſt the defendant being in priſon, is, that he ſhall be out of the King's protection; and that his lands and tenements, goods and chattels ſhall be forfeited to the King; and that his body ſhall remain in priſon at the King's pleaſure; but if the defendant be condemned on his default of not appearing, whether at the ſuit of the King or party, the ſame judgment ſhall be given as to the being out of the King's protection and the forfeiture; but inſtead of the clauſe, that the body ſhall remain in priſon, there ſhall be awarded a capiatur. Co. Lit. 129. b. 3 Inſt. 125, 218. 2 Hawk. P. C. 444.

As the 16 R. 2. cap. 5. expreſsly ſaith, that ſuch offenders ſhall be put out of the King's protection; and alſo the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 5. cap. 22. had farther added, that any one might do with a purchaſer of the proviſions therein prohibited, as with the King's enemy; and that he who ſhould offend againſt ſuch a one in body, lands or goods, ſhould be excuſed; it was formerly holden, that a perſon attainted in a præmunire might lawfully be ſlain by any one, as being the King's enemy, and out of the protection of the laws; but the later opinions ſeem to have diſapproved of this ſeverity; and it is now expreſsly enacted by 5 Eliz. cap. 1. ſect. 21, 22. "That it ſhall not be lawful to kill any perſon attainted in a præmunire, ſaving ſuch pains of death or other puniſhment, as might without danger of law be done on any perſon that ſhall ſend or bring into the realm, or within the ſame ſhall execute any proceſs, &c. from the ſee of Rome." Co. Lit. 12. 68. 130. 3 Inſt. 128. Bro. Car. 197. Jenk. 199.

It is clearly agreed, that a perſon attainted in a præmunire can bring no action; neither is it ſafe for any one, knowing him to be guilty, to give him any relief. Co. Lit. 130.

A ſtatute, by appointing that an offender ſhall incur the penalty and danger mentioned in 16 Ric. 2. c. 5. does not confine the proſecution for the offence to the particular proceſs thereby given. 1 Vent. 173.

It is holden, that the ſtatute of præmunire, which gives a general forfeiture of all the lands and tenements of the offender, extends not to lands in tail. Co. Lit. 130. See poſt diviſion 4.

It hath been adjudged, that a pardon of all miſpriſions, treſpaſſes, offences and contempts, will pardon a præmunire. Cro. Jac. 336. 2 Bulſt. 299.

The defendant in a præmunire muſt regularly appear in perſon, whether he be a peer or commoner, unleſs he is diſpenſed with by ſome writ or grant for that purpoſe; but in the caſe of Sir Anthony Mildmay, he was allowed to plead a pardon to a præmunire by attorney; but it has been thought that there was ſome clauſe to this effect in the pardon. 3 Inſt. 125. 1 Roll. Rep. 190. 2 Bulſt. 290. 2 Hawk. P. C. 273.

On an indictment of a præmunire, a peer of the realm ſhall not be tried by his peers. 12 Co. 92.

On an information on 6 Geo. 1. c. 18. for ſetting up a bubble called the South Sea, it was determined that the court was not obliged by that act to give the whole judgment, as in caſe of a præmunine, againſt defendant, but only ſuch parts of it as in their diſcretions they ſhould think fit; and accordingly a fine of 5 l. was ſet on the party convicted, and judgment that he ſhould remain in priſon during the King's pleaſure. 2 Ld. Raym. 361.

3. To what time the attainder ſhall relate.

A perſon being ſeiſed in fee of lands, was indicted for a præmunire upon 13 Eliz. c. 2. but before conviction be made an entail of his lands; and it was adjudged, that the attainder ſhould relate to the time of the offence, and that was before he entailed the lands, and not the time of the judgment which was afterwards; and the freehold being in him at the time of the attainder, ſhall not be deveſted without an inquiſition under the Great Seal. Cro. Car. 123, 172.

4. To what eſtates the ſtatute of præmunire doth not extend, and of the ſuit, &c.

It is ſaid the ſtatute of præmunire doth not extend to the forfeiture of rents, annuities, fairs, &c. or any other hereditaments that are not within the word terræ. 3 Inſt. 126.

This ſuit need not be by original in B. R. for if defendant be in cuſtodia mareſchalli, the ſuit may be againſt him by bill; and defendants cannot be ſued in any other court when they are in cuſtodia mareſchal'. And if a defendant come not at the day, &c. or if he appears and pleads, and the iſſue be found againſt him, or he demurs in law, &c. judgment ſhall be given, that he ſhall be out of protection, &c. 3 Inſt. 124.

Tenant in tail is attainted in a præmunire, he ſhall forfeit his lands only during life; and afterwards the iſſue in tail ſhall inherit. 11 Rep. 56.

The laws making offences to be præmunire, it has been obſerved, are ſo very ſevere, that they are ſeldom put in execution: And notwithſtanding the ſtatutes, the King may protect and pardon an offender; for this protection is given him by the law of nature. 2 Bulſt. 299. A præmunire is ſaid to be a defence of the crown, and the laws of the land, from the tyranny and oppreſſion of the pope's juriſdiction, &c. The præmunire clauſe in the bubble act leaves power in the court to moderate the judgment. 1 Strange 472. See Pope.

Præpoſitus-Eccleſiæ, Is uſed for a church-reve, or church-warden.

Præpoſitus Villæ, Sometimes is uſed for the conſtable of a town, or petit-conſtable. Cromp. Juriſd. 205. Yet the ſame author, 194. ſeems to apply it otherwiſe; for there quatuor homines præpoſiti are thoſe four men, who muſt appear for every town before the juſtices of the foreſt in their circuit. It is ſometimes uſed for an head or chief officer of the King, in a town, manor or village, or a reeve. See Reeve. Animalia & res inventæ coram ipſo (præpoſito) & ſacerdote ducenda erant. LL. Edw. Confeſſor. cap. 28. This præpoſitus villæ, in our old records does not anſwer to our preſent conſtable, or head-borough of a town; but was no more than the reeve, or bailiff of the lord of the manor, ſometimes called ſerviens villæ.

By the laws of Henry the Firſt, the lord anſwered for the town where he was reſident; where he was not, his dapifer, or ſeneſchal, if he were a baron: But if neither of them could be preſent, then præpoſitus & quatuor de unaquaque villa, i. e. the reeve and four of the moſt ſubſtantial inhabitants were ſummoned. Prayers of the Church. Vide Common Prayer.

Preaching. Every beneficed preacher, reſiding on his benefice, and having no lawful impediment, ſhall in his own cure, or ſome neighbouring church, preach one ſermon every Sunday of the year: And if any beneficed perſon be not allowed to be a preacher, he ſhall procure ſermons to be preached in his cure by licenſed preachers; and every Sunday whereon there ſhall not be a ſermon, he or his curate is to read one of the homilies: No perſon not examined and approved by the biſhop, or not licenſed to preach, ſhall expound the Scripture, &c. nor ſhall any be permitted to preach in any church, but ſuch as appear to be authorized thereto, by ſhewing their licence; and church-wardens are to note in a book the names of all ſtrange clergymen who preach in their pariſh; to which book every preacher is to ſubſcribe his name, the day he preached, and the name of the biſhop of whom he had licence to preach. Can. 44, 45, 49.

If any perſon licenſed to preach, refuſes to conform to the eccleſiaſtical laws, after admonition, the licence of every ſuch preacher ſhall be void: And if any parſon preach doctrine contrary to the word of God, or the articles of religion, notice is to be given of it to the biſhop by the churchwardens, &c. So likewiſe of matters of contention and impugning the doctrine of other preachers in the ſame church; in which caſe, the preacher is not to be ſuffered to preach except he faithfully promiſe to forbear all ſuch matter of contention in the church, until the biſhop hath taken farther order therein. Can. 53, 54.

No miniſter ſhall preach or adminiſter the ſacrament in any private houſe, unleſs in times of neceſſity, as in caſe of ſickneſs, &c. on pain of ſuſpenſion for the firſt offence, and excommunication for the ſecond; which laſt puniſhment is alſo inflicted on ſuch miniſters as meet in private houſes, to conſult on any matter tending to impeach the doctrine of the church of England. Can. 71, &c.

Preamble, (Procœmium, from the prepoſition præ, before, and ambulo, to walk; as to walk before) The beginning of an act is called the preamble; which is a key to the intent of the makers of the act, and the miſchiefs which they would remedy by the ſame.

Pre-audience. A cuſtom has of late years prevailed of granting letters patent of precedence to ſuch barriſters, as the crown thinks proper to honour with that mark of diſtinction; whereby they are intitled to ſuch rank and pre-audience as are aſſigned in their reſpective patents; ſometimes next after the King's Attorney-General, but uſually next after his Majeſty's counſel then being. Theſe (as well as the Queen's Attorney and Solicitor-General) rank promiſcuouſly with the King's counſel, and together with them ſit within the bar of the reſpective courts, but receive no ſalaries, and are not ſworn; therefore are at liberty to be retained in cauſes againſt the crown.

Pre-audience in the courts is reckoned of ſo much conſequence, that it may not be amiſs to ſubjoin a ſhort table of the precedence which uſually obtains among the practiſers.

1. The King's præmier Serjeant, (ſo conſtituted by ſpecial patent.)
2. The King's ancient Serjeant, or the eldeſt among the King's Serjeants.
3. The King's Advocate-General.
4. The King's Attorney-General.
5. The King's Solicitor-General.
6. The King's Serjeants.
7. The King's Counſel, with the Queen's Attorney and Solicitor.
8. Serjeants at Law.
9. The Recorder of London.
10. Advocates of the Civil law.
11. Barriſters.

In the court of Exchequer two of the moſt experienced barriſters, called the poſt-man and the tub-man, (from the places in which they ſit) have alſo a precedence in motions Block. Com. 3 V. 28.

Prebend, (Præbenda) Is the portion which every prebendary of a cathedral church receives, in right of his place, for his maintenance; as canonica portio is properly uſed for that ſhare, which every canon receiveth yearly out of the common ſtock of the church. And præbenda is a ſeveral benefice riſing from ſome temporal land, or ſome church, appropriated towards the maintenance of a clerk, or member of a collegiate church, and is commonly named of the place whence the profit ariſes.

Præbenda, ſtrictly taken, is that maintenance which daily præbetur to another; but now it ſignifies the profits belonging to the church, divided into thoſe portions called præbenda, and is a right of receiving the profits for the duty performed in the church, ſufficient for the ſupport of the parſon in that divine office where he reſides. Decret. tit. De Præbend.

The ſpirituality and temporality make a prebend, but the ſpirituality is the higheſt and moſt worthy; and a perſon is not a complete prebend, to make any grant, &c. before inſtallation and induction. Dyer 221.

Prebends are ſimple and dignitary.

A ſimple prebend hath no more than the revenue for its ſupport; but a

Prebend with dignity hath always a juriſdiction annexed, and for this reaſon the prebendary is ſtiled a dignitary, and his juriſdiction is gained by preſcription.

Prebends are ſome of them donative; and ſome are in the gift of laymen, but in ſuch caſe they muſt preſent the prebendary to the biſhop, and the dean and chapter inducts him, and places him in a ſtall in the cathedral church, and then he is ſaid to have locum in choro; at Weſtminſter, the King collates by patent, and by virtue thereof the prebendary takes poſſeſſion, without inſtitution or induction. 2 Rol. Abr. 356.

As a prebend is a benefice without cure, &c. a prebend and a parochial benefice are not incompatible promotions; for one man may have both without any avoidance of the firſt: For though prebendaries are ſuch as have no cure of ſouls, yet there is a ſacred charge incumbent on them in thoſe cathedrals where they are reſident, and they are obliged to preaching by the canons of the church; and it is not lawful for a prebendary to poſſeſs two prebends in one and the ſame collegiate church. Rol. Abr. 361.

Prebendaries are ſaid to have an eſtate in fee-ſimple in right of their churches, as well as biſhops of their biſhopricks, deans of their deaneries, &c.

Corpus præbendæ, is that which is received by a prebendary above the profits which are always for his daily maintenance. Præbenda and probenda were alſo in old deeds uſed for proviſions, provand or provender.—— Pro equo ſuo unum buſhel avenarum pro præbenda capienda. Coucher Book in Dutchy-Office, tom. 1. fol. 45. Cowell.

Prebendary, (Prebendarius) Is he who hath ſuch a prebend; ſo called, not a præbenda auxilium & conſilium epiſcopo, &c. but from receiving the prebend: And if a manor be the body of a prebend, and is evicted by title paramount; yet the prebendary is not deſtroyed. 3 Rep. 75.

There is a golden prebendary of Hereford, otherwiſe termed prebendarius epiſcopi, who is one of the the twenty-eight minor prebendaries there, and has ex officio the firſt canon's place that falls; he was anciently confeſſarius of the cathedral church, and to the biſhop, and had the offerings at the altar, whereby, in reſpect of the gold commonly given there, he had the name of golden prebendary. Blount. See Black. Com. 1 V. 383.

Precariae, Are days works, which tenants of ſome manors are bound, by reaſon of their tenure, to do for their lord in harveſt; and in divers places are vulgarly called bind-days for biden-days, which in the Saxon dies precarias ſonat: For biden is to pray or intreat. This cuſtom is plainly ſet forth in the great book of the Cuſtoms of the Monaſtery of Battel, tit. Appelderham, fol. 60. Cowell.

Precedence. Statute for regulating precedence of lords and other great officers in parliament, 31 Hen. 8. c. 10. As to patent of precedence, ſee tit. Pre-audience, and Black. Com. 3 V. 28.

Precedent Conditions. See Black. Com. 2 V. 154.

Precedents, Are authorities to follow in determinations in courts of juſtice.

Precedents have always been greatly regarded by the ſages of the law: The precedents of the courts are ſaid to be the laws of the courts; and the court will not reverſe a judgment, contrary to many precedents. 4 Rep. 93. Cro. Eliz. 65. 2 Lil. Abr. 344. But new precedents are not conſiderable; precedents without judicial deciſion on argument are of no moment; and an extrajudicial opinion given in or out of court, is no good precedent. Vaugh. 169, 382, 399, 429.

It has been held, that there can be no precedent in matters of equity, as equity is univerſal truth; but, according to Lord Keeper Bridgman, precedents are neceſſary in equity to find out the reaſons thereof for a guide; and, beſides the authority of thoſe who made them, it is to be ſuppoſed they did it on great conſideration, and it would be ſtrange to ſet aſide what has been the courſe for a long ſeries of time. 1 Mod. 307. If a man doubt whether a caſe be equitable, or no, in prudence he will determine as the precedents have been; eſpecially if made by men of good authority and learning. Ibid.

Precedents muſt be ſhewn by plaintiff for the court to go againſt what is generally held. 1 Keb. 47. And where precedents are alledged contrary to the opinion of the court, a day may be given to produce them. Mod. Caſ. 199.

Precedents in ſome caſes may make an act good, which otherwiſe would be void in ſtrictneſs of law: And though the forms of writs ought not to be altered, yet precedents and conſtant uſage muſt be obſerved. Jenk. Cent. 162, 172.

If there be cauſe to alter an ancient precedent of a writ, by reaſon of any new ſtatute, &c. the curſitors are not to keep to the old form, but to alter it as the caſe requires; to prevent abatement of writs, and vexation to the people. Trin. 1650.

Lord C. Talbot ſaid, He thought it much better to ſtick to the known general rules, than to follow any one particular precedent which may be founded on reaſons unknown to us. Such a proceeding would confound all property. And then citing the caſe of Lady Laneſborough v. Fox, as of the ſtrongeſt authority to the caſe in point, his Lordſhip ſaid, that though it had not been in the houſe of Lords, he ſhould have thought himſelf bound to go according to the general and known rules of law. Caſes in Chan. in Ld. Talbot's time 26, 27.

It is dangerous to alter old eſtabliſhed forms. Caſes in Chan. in Ld. Talbot's time 196. See 16 Vin. Abr. tit. Precedents. And vide Innovation.

Prece partium, Is when a ſuit is continued by the prayer, aſſent or agreement of both parties. Stat. 13. Ed. 1. c. 27.

Precept, (Præceptum) Is diverſly taken in law, as ſometimes for a command in writing, by a juſtice of peace, or other officer, for bringing a perſon or records before him; of which there are many examples in the table of the Regiſter Judicial. And in this ſenſe it ſeems to be borrowed from the cuſtoms of Lombardy, where præceptum ſignifieth ſcripturam vel inſtrumentum. Hotom. in verb. Feudal. & lib. 3. Commentar. in libros feudor. in præfatione. Sometimes it is taken for the provocation, whereby one man incites another to commit a felony, as theft, murder, &c. Staundf. Pl. Cor. 105. Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 9. calls it præceptum or mandatum. Whence we may obſerve three diviſions of offending in murder, præceptum, fortia, conſilium; præceptum being the inſtigation uſed beforehand; fortia the aſſiſtance in the fact, as to help to bind the party murdered or robbed; conſilium, advice either before or in the fact. The Civilians uſe mandatum in this caſe. Cowell.

Precept of election to parliament, ſee Black. Com. 1 V. 177.

Pre-contract, (mentioned in ſtat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 23.) Is a contract made before another contract, but hath relation eſpecially to marriage, ſee Black. Com. 1 V. 434.

Predial tithes, (Decimæ prædiales) Are thoſe which are paid of things ariſing and growing from the ground only, as corn, hay, fruit of trees, and ſuch like. 2 Ed. 6. 13 See Inſt. 649. and Black. Com. 2 V. 24. See Tithes.

Pre-emption, (Præ-emptio) Signifies the firſt buying of a thing; and it was a privilege allowed the King's Purveyor, to have the choice and firſt buying of proviſions for the King's houſe. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. See Pourveyance.

Pregnancy, (Plea of.) Where a woman is capitally convicted, and pleads her pregnancy, though this is no cauſe to ſtay the judgment, yet it is to reſpite the execution till ſhe is delivered. This is a mercy dictated by the law of nature, in favorem prolis; and therefore no part of the bloody proceedings, in the reign of Queen Mary, hath been more juſtly deteſted than the cruelty, that was exerciſed in the iſland of Guernſey, of burning a woman big with child: For when, through the violence of the flames, the infant ſprang forth at the ſtake, and was preſerved by the by-ſtanders, after ſome deliberation of the prieſts who aſſiſted at the ſacrifice, they caſt it again into the fire AS A YOUNG HERETICK. A barbarity which they never learned from the laws of ancient Rome; which directs, with the ſame humanity as our own, “quod pregnantis mulieris damnatæ pœna differatur, “quoad pariat:” Which doctrine has alſo prevailed in England, as early as the firſt memorials of our law will reach.

In caſe this plea be made in ſtay of execution, the judge muſt direct a jury of twelve matrons, or diſcreet women, to enquire the fact: and if they bring in their verdict quick with child (for barely with child, unleſs it be alive in the womb, is not ſufficient) execution ſhall be ſtaid generally till the next ſeſſion; and ſo from ſeſſion to ſeſſion, till either ſhe is delivered, or proves by the courſe of nature not to have been with child at all.

But if ſhe once hath had the benefit of this reprieve, and been delivered, and afterwards becomes pregnant again, ſhe ſhall not be intitled to the benefit of a farther reſpite for that cauſe. For ſhe may now be executed before the child is quick in the womb; and ſhall not, by her own incontinence, evade the ſentence of juſtice. Black. Com. 4 V. 387, 8.

Premiſſes, Is that part in the beginning of a deed, the office of which is to expreſs the grantor and grantee, and the land, or thing granted or conveyed. 5 Rep. 55.

No perſon, not named in the premiſſes, can take any thing by the deed, though he be afterwards named in the habendum, becauſe the premiſſes of the deed makes the gift; therefore when the lands are given to one in the premiſſes, the habendum cannot give any ſhare of them to another, becauſe that would be to retract the gift made, and conſequently to make a deed repugnant in itſelf; thus for inſtance, If a charter of feoffment be made between A. of the one part, and B. and D. of the other part, and A. gives lands to B. habendum to B. and D. and their heirs; D. takes nothing by the habendum, becauſe all the lands were given to B. conſequently D. cannot hold thoſe lands which are given before to another; but in this caſe, if the habendum had been to B. and D. and their heirs, to the uſe of B. and D. this had been a good limitation of a uſe, conſequently the ſtatute of uſes would carry the poſſeſſion to the uſe, and B. and D. thereby become joint-tenants. Co. Lit. 6. a. 9 Co. 47. b. Hob. 275, 313. 2 Rol. Abr. 65. Cro. Jac. 564. Cro. Eliz. 58. 13 Co. 54. Poph 126.

If lands be given to a huſband, habendum to him and his wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies, the wife takes nothing, becauſe ſhe was not mentioned in the premiſſes; therefore ſhall take nothing of that which was before given intirely to her huſband. 2 Rol. Abr 67.

But there are four exceptions to this rule: 1. If lands be given in frank-marriage, the woman who is the cauſe of the gift may take by the habendum, though ſhe be not named in the premiſſes; as if lands be given to J. S. habendum maritagium una cum the woman who is daughter of the donor; this is a good eſtate in frank-marriage to them both; becauſe, the gift being totally on her account, it is neceſſary to the creation of the eſtate in the huſband that the wife ſhould take. Co. Lit. 21. Plowd. 158. Cro. Jac. 454. Poph. 126. 2 Rol. Abr. 67.

2. In grants of copy of court roll; as If a copyholder ſurrenders to his lord, without limiting any uſe, and then the lord grants it in this manner; J. S. cepit de domino, habendum to the ſaid J. S. and his wife, and the heirs of their bodies begotten, this is a good eſtate-tail in the wife; for theſe cuſtomary grants, that are made in purſuance of a former ſurrender, are conſtrued according to the intention of the parties, as wills are; beſides, the cuſtom of the manor is the rule for the expoſition of ſuch ſort of grants, and in many manors ſuch form is uſual. Poph. 125, 126. Cro. Jac. 434. 2 Rol. Abr. 67. Cro. Eliz. 323.

3. A man not named in the premiſſes may take an eſtate in remainder by limitation in the habendum. 2 Rol. Abr. 68. Hob. 313. Cro. Jac. 564.

4. In wills; for if a man deviſes lands to J. S. habendum to him and his wife, this is a good deviſe to the wife; becauſe, in conſtruction of wills, the intention of the deviſor is chiefly regarded; and wherever that diſcovers itſelf it ſhall take place, though it be not expreſſed in thoſe legal forms that are required in conveyances executed in a man's life-time. Plowd. 158, 414. 2 Rol. Abr. 68. See Black. Com. 2 V. 298.

Premium, (Præmium) A reward: Amongſt merchants it is uſed for the money the enſured gives the enſurer for enſuring the ſafe return of any ſhip or merchandize. Stat. 19 Ca. 2. c. 4.

Prender, Is the power or right of taking a thing before it is offered; from the French prendre, i. e. accipere: it lies in render, but not in prender. Rep. 1. Sir John Peter's caſe.

Prender de Baron, Signifieth literally to take an huſband; and it is uſed for an exception to diſable a woman from purſuing an appeal of murder, againſt one who killed her former huſband. S. P. C. lib. 3. c. 59.

Prepenſed, (Præpenſus) Forethought; as prepenſed Malice is Malitia Præcogitata; which makes killing, murder: and when a man is ſlain on a ſudden quarrel, if there were malice prepenſed formerly between the parties, it is murder, or as it is called by the ſtatute prepenſed Murder. 12 H. 7. c. 7. 3 Inſt. 51. See Murder.

Prerogative, (from præ, ante, and rogare, to aſk or demand) Is a word of large extent, including all the rights which by law the King hath, as chief of the Commonwealth, and as intruſted with the execution of the laws. 4 New Abr. 149. See Stamf. Prærog. c. 1. Co. Lit. 90.

The nature of our conſtitution is that of a limited monarchy, in which the legiſlative power is lodged in the King, Lords, and Commons; but the King is intruſted with the executive part, and from him all juſtice is ſaid to flow; hence he is ſtiled the head of the Commonwealth, ſupreme governor, parens patriae, &c. but ſtill HE IS TO MAKE THE LAW OF THE LAND THE RULE OF HIS GOVERNMENT; THAT BEING THE MEASURE AS WELL OF HIS POWER, AS OF THE SUBJECTS OBEDIENCE: for as the law aſſerts, maintains and provides for the ſafety of the King's royal perſon, crown and dignity, and all his juſt rights, revenues, powers and prerogatives; ſo it likewiſe declares and aſſerts the rights and liberties of the ſubject. 1 And. 153. Co. Lit. 19, 75. 4 Co. 124. 4 New Abr. 149.

Hence it hath been eſtabliſhed as a rule, that all prerogatives muſt be for the advantage of the people, otherwiſe they ought not to be allowed by law. Moor 672. Show. P. C. 75. 4 New Abr. 149.

The rights and prerogatives of the crown are in moſt things as ancient as the law itſelf; for though the ſtat. 17 Ed. 2. c. 1. commonly called the ſtatute De praerogativa Regis, ſeems to be introductive of ſomething new, yet for the moſt part it is but a collection of certain prerogatives that were known law long before: As that the King's wardſhip of lands held in capite, did attract the wardſhip of land held of others; that the grant of a manor did not paſs an advowſon appendant, unleſs named; that the King hath a right to eſcheats, wrecks, royal fiſhes, and many others which were ancient prerogatives of the crown. Bendl. 117. 2 Inſt. 263, 496. 10 Co. 64. 4 New Abr. 149.

3. Of the King's prerogative over the perſons of his ſubjects, in reſtraining them from going abroad, and commanding them to return home.

1. Of the commencement of the King's reign, and his prerogative as univerſal occupant.

On the death or demiſe of the King, his heir is that moment inveſted with the regal power, and commences his reign the ſame day his anceſtor dies; whence it is held as a maxim, that the King never dies. 7 Co. 12. in Calvin's caſe. 6 Co. 27. 7 Co. 30. See Perpetuity of the King.

The King is a political entity: a corporation, not ſubject to natural death, though the body of this or that perſon, holding and exerciſing the kingly office, is, like all other bodies, ſubject to diſſolution.

N. B. Diſcontinuance of proceſs by demiſe of the King, is remedied by ſtatute.

It may not be improper here to explain another maxim in law, viz. "That the King can do no wrong:" The King cannot miſuſe his power without the advice of evil counſellors, and the aſſiſtance of wicked miniſters. Theſe men may be examined and puniſhed. The conſtitution hath provided by means of indictments and parliamentary impeachments, that no man ſhall dare to aſſiſt the crown in contradiction to the laws of the land. But it is at the ſame time a maxim in thoſe laws, that the King himſelf can do no wrong; ſince it would be a great weakneſs and abſurdity in any ſyſtem of poſitive law, to define any poſſible wrong without any poſſible redreſs. Black. Com. 1 V. 244.

See the author's ſentiments as to the exertion (on particular occaſions) of the inherent (though latent) powers of ſociety, which no climate, no time, no conſtitution, no contract can ever deſtroy, or diminiſh.

N. B. He is treating of the glorious revolution. Com. 1 V. 245. And ſee tit. Oppreſſion of the Crown.

But, to proceed, as to the King's prerogative, &c.

With reſpect to the deſcent of the crown, the rules of deſcent are the ſame with thoſe that govern private inheritances, except only as to the rule of poſſeſſio fratris; which does not hold in the deſcent of the crown or its poſſeſſions: Neither is half blood any impediment in ſuch caſe; for the brother of the half blood ſhall be preferred to the ſiſter, in the enjoyment of the crown, as the moſt capable of the two, by the advantage and prerogative of his ſex.

Therefore, if the King hath iſſue a ſon and a daughter by one venter, and a ſon by another venter, and purchaſes lands and dies, and the eldeſt ſon enters, and dies without iſſue, the daughter ſhall not inherit thoſe lands, nor any other fee-ſimple lands of the crown, but the younger brother ſhall have them together with the crown. Co. Lit. 15. b.

As the King commences his reign from the day of the death of his anceſtor, it hath been held, that compaſſing his death before coronation, or even before proclamation, is compaſſing of the King's death within the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. he being King preſently, and the proclamation and coronation only honourable ceremonies for the further notification thereof. 3 Inſt. 7. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 101.

Every King for the time being in the actual poſſeſſion of the crown, is a King within the intention of the abovementioned ſtatute; for there is a neceſſity that the realm ſhould have a King, by whom and in whoſe name, the laws are to be adminiſtered; and the King in poſſeſſion, being the only perſon who either doth or can adminiſter thoſe laws, muſt be the only perſon who hath a right to that obedience which is due to him who adminiſters thoſe laws; and ſince by virtue thereof he ſecures to us our lives, liberties and properties, and all other advantages of government, he may juſtly claim return of duty, allegiance and ſubjection. 1 Hawk. P. C. 35.

All judicial acts done by Henry the Sixth, while he was King, and alſo all pardons of felony and charters of denization granted by him, were valid; but a pardon made by Ed. 4. before he was actually King, was void even after he came to the crown. 1 Hawk. 36.

The right heir of the crown, during ſuch time as the uſurper is in plenary poſſeſſion of it, and no poſſeſſion thereof in the heir, is not a King within this act; as was the caſe of the houſe of York, during the plenary poſſeſſion of the crown in Hen. 4. Hen. 5. Hen. 6. But if the right heir had once the poſſeſſion of the crown, as King, though an uſurper had got the poſſeſſion thereof, yet the other continues his ſtile, title and claim thereto, and afterwards re-obtains the full poſſeſſion thereof; a compaſſing the death of the rightful heir, during that interval, is compaſſing of the King's death within this act for he continued a King ſtill, quaſi in poſſeſſion of his kingdom; which was the caſe of Ed. 4. in that ſmall interval wherein Hen. 6. re-obtained the crown; and the caſe of Ed. 5. notwithſtanding the uſurpation of his uncle Rich. 3. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 104.

King Car. 2. was King de facto as well as de jure, from his father's death; therefore all thoſe who acted againſt and kept him out of poſſeſſion, in obedience to the powers then in being, were traitors. Keeling 14, 15. 1 Keb. 315. No perſon was in poſſeſſion of any ſovereign power known to our laws. 1 Hawk. P. C. 36.

By the 1 M. ſt. 3. c. 1. ſ. 3. "The kingly office of this realm, and all prerogative, royal power, authorities, and juriſdiction thereunto annexed, being inveſted in either male or female, are as abſolutely inveſted in the one as the other."

By 1 W. & M. ſt. 2. c. 2. ſ. 9. "Every perſon who ſhall be reconciled to, or hold communion with, the ſee or church of Rome; or ſhall profeſs the popiſh religion; or ſhall marry a papiſt, ſhall be incapable to inherit or enjoy the crown, and in ſuch caſe the people ſhall be abſolved of their allegiance, and the crown ſhall deſcend to ſuch perſons, being proteſtants, as ſhould have inherited the ſame, in caſe the perſon ſo reconciled, &c. were dead."

And by ſect. 10. "Every King and Queen, who ſhall come to and ſucceed in the crown, ſhall, on the firſt day of the meeting of the firſt parliament, next after coming to the crown, ſitting in the throne in the houſe of peers, in the preſence of the lords and commons, or at the coronation, before ſuch perſon as ſhall adminiſter the coronation oath, at the time of taking the oath, (which ſhall firſt happen) make, ſubſcribe and repeat the declaration mentioned in the ſtatute 30 Car. 2. ſtat. 2. for preſerving the King's perſon and government, by diſabling papiſts from ſitting in either houſe of parliament."

The King, as King, cannot be a minor; ſo that grants, leaſes, &c. made by him, though under age, bind preſently, and cannot be avoided by him, either during his minority, or when he comes of age; for the politic rules of government have thought it neceſſary, that he who is to govern the kingdom, ſhould never be conſidered as a minor incapable of governing his own affairs. Dyer 209. pl. 22. Plowd. 209. Co. Lit. 43. 5 Co. 27. Raym. 90.

The King by law is univerſal occupant, and all property is preſumed to have been originally in the crown; and that he partitioned it out in large diſtricts to the great men who deſerved well of him in the wars, and were able to adviſe him in time of peace. Hence the King hath the direct dominion; and all lands are holden mediately or immediately from the crown. Co. Lit. 1. Dyer 154. 1 Bendl. 237. Seld. Mare Clauſ'.

If the ſea leaves any ſhore by the water ſuddenly falling off, ſuch derelict lands belong to the King; but if a man's lands lying to the ſea are increaſed by inſenſible degrees, they belong to the ſoil adjoining. Dyer 326. 2 Rol. Abr. 170.

So, if a river, ſo far as there is a flux of the ſea, leaves its channel, it belongs to the King; for the Engliſh ſea and channels belong to the King; and, having never diſtributed them out to ſubjects, he hath a property in the ſoil. 2 Rol. Abr. 170.

But if a river, in which there is no tide, ſhould leave its bed, it belongs to the owners on both ſides; for they have in that caſe the property of the ſoil; this being no original part or appendix to the ſea, but diſtributed out as other lands. 2 Rol. Abr. 170.

If land be drowned, and ſo continue for years; if it be after regained, every owner ſhall have his intereſt again, if it can be known by the boundaries. 8 Co. Sir Francis Barrington's caſe.

It is ſaid, that there is a cuſtom in Lincolnſhire, That the lords of the manors ſhall have derelict lands; and that as ſuch it is a reaſonable cuſtom; for if the ſea waſh away the lands of the ſubject, he can have no recompence, unleſs he ſhould be intitled to what he regains from the ſea.

2. Of the King's prerogative in eſcheats; in ſeas and navigable rivers; in ſwans and fiſh; in beacons and light-houſes; in wreck; in coins and mines; in derelict goods, and in waifs, ſtrays and treaſure trove.

An eſcheat may be either per defectum ſanguinis, or per delictum tenentis; but it is ſaid, That in caſe of an attainder of felony, the eſcheat to the lord is pro defectu tenentis; and the not deſcending, the conſequence of the corruption of the blood; but in caſe of treaſon, the lands come to the crown as an immediate forfeiture, and not as an eſcheat. Co. Lit. 13, 92. Godb. 211.

If the King's tenant dies without heir, the lands ſhall eſcheat and revert again to the crown; but the lands holden of any other lord ſhall, for want of heirs of the tenant, eſcheat to the lord. 2 Inſt. 34. Kelw. 104. 2 Rol. Rep. 251. 4 Inſt. 224.

If lands be held of the King, as of an honour come to him by a common eſcheat, as the tenants dying without heir, or committing felony, theſe lands are part of the honour; otherwiſe if forfeited for treaſon, for then they come to the King by reaſon of his perſon and crown; and if he grants them over, &c. the patentee ſhall hold of the King in chief. 2 Inſt. 64.

It was found by ſpecial verdict, That the prior of Merton was ſeiſed of a houſe in Southwark, held of the archbiſhop of Canterbury, as of his borough of Southwark; and 30 Hen. ſurrendered it to Hen. 8. who granted it and other lands to J. S. and his heirs, to hold of him in libero burgagio, by fealty, for all ſervices and demands, and not in capite; and afterwards Queen Mary granted the manor and borough of Southwark to the mayor and commonalty of London; and the tenant of the meſſuage died without iſſue; and the queſtion was, whether Queen Eliz. or the patentees of the borough ſhould have the eſcheat; and adjudged for the Queen; for the firſt patentee of the meſſuage held it of the Queen in ſocage in capite, as of a ſeigniory in groſs; and the words in libero burgagio are meerly void; for the land out of the borough cannot be held in libero burgagio; and there ſhall not be ſeveral tenures, for one tenure was reſerved by the King for all; therefore of neceſſity it ſhall be a tenure in ſocage of the King. Cro. Eliz. 120.

The King hath the ſovereign dominion in all ſeas and great rivers, which is plain from Selden's account of the ancient Saxons who dealt very ſucceſsfully in all naval affairs; therefore the territories of the Engliſh ſeas and rivers always reſided in the King. Seld. Mar. Cl. 251, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 168, 169. 1 Co. 141. 5 Co. 106.

And as the King hath a prerogative in the ſeas, ſo hath he likewiſe a right to the fiſhery and to the ſoil; ſo that if a river as far as there is a flux of the ſea leaves its channel, it belongs to the King. Dyer 326. 2 Rol. Abr. 170.

Hence the Admiralty court, which is a court for all maritime cauſes or matters ariſing on the high ſeas, is deemed the King's court, and its juriſdiction derived from him who protects his ſubjects from pirates, and provides for the ſecurity of trade and navigation. 4 Inſt. 142. Molloy 66.

From the King's dominion over the ſea it was holden, that the King, as protector and guardian of the ſeas, might before any ſtatute made for commiſſions of ſewers, provide againſt inundations by lands, banks, &c. and that he had a prerogative herein as well as in defending his ſubjects from pirates, &c. 10 Co. 141.

But notwithſtanding the King's prerogative in ſeas and navigable rivers, yet it hath been always held, that a ſubject may fiſh in the ſea; which being a matter of common right, and the means of livelihood, and for the good of the commonwealth, cannot be reſtrained by grant or preſcription. 8 Ed. 4. 18, 19. Bro. Cuſtom, 46. Fitz. Bar. 1 Mod. 105. 2 Salk. 637.

Alſo it is held, that every ſubject of common right may fiſh with lawful nets, &c. in a navigable river as well as in the ſea; and the King's grant cannot bar them thereof; but the crown only has a right to royal fiſh, and that the King only may grant. 6 Mod. 73. 1 Salk. 357. S. C. & S. P.

The King, as a perpetual ſign and acknowledgment of his dominion of the ſeas, hath ſeveral creatures reſerved to him under the denomination of royal creatures, as ſwans, ſturgeons and whales; all which are natives of ſeas and rivers. 7 Co. 16.

It is clearly agreed, that the king only has a prerogative in beacons and light-houſes, and that he may erect any ſuch, and in ſuch places as will be moſt convenient for the ſafety and preſervation of ſhips, mariners and navigation; alſo it ſeems to be the better opinion, that this being for the public utility, and one of the prerogatives that he is intruſted with for the ſafety of the whole realm, he may erect ſuch beacon, &c. as well in the ſoil of a ſubject as in that of the crown; and that he may do this without the ſubjects conſent. 4 Inſt. 148. 12 Co. 13. Carter 90. 2 Keb. 114. 3 Inſt. 204.

Alſo it is clear, that the ſubject hath not any power to erect any ſuch beacon, &c. without the King's licence and authority for that purpoſe. See the authorities ſupra and Carter 90.

But by the 8 Eliz. it is enacted, "That the maſter, wardens and aſſiſtants of the Trinity houſe of Deptford Strand, may erect ſuch beacons, marks and ſigns for the ſea, as to them ſhall ſeem meet; whereby dangers may be avoided, and the ſhips better come to their ports; and all beacons, marks and ſigns ſo erected, ſhall be maintained at the charges of the maſter, wardens and aſſiſtants."

By the Common law the King hath an undoubted right to wrecks; and his prerogative herein is founded on the dominion he has over the ſeas; and being ſovereign thereof and protector of ſhips and mariners, he is intitled to the derelict goods of the merchant; which is the more reaſonable, as it is a means of preventing the barbarous cuſtom of deſtroying perſons who in ſhipwrecks approach the ſhore, by removing the temptations to inhumanity. Gro. Jur. Belli 117, 132, 141. 2 Inſt. 167. Molloy 237. Moor 224.

The King hath a prerogative in, and is intitled to, all royal mines of gold and ſilver, and treaſures of gold and ſilver hid in the earth; and is intruſted with the coinage and making money current; and he alone can bring the treaſure of any conquered country into uſe, by coining them into his money; and this prerogative is lodged in the King as he adminiſters juſtice to all; therefore the regulation of that which is the common ſtandard and meaſure of commerce is committed to his care. Dav. 19. 2 Rol. Abr. 166. 1 Co. 146. 5 Co. 114.

Alſo this prerogative is given to the King as a neceſſary conſequence of the power of war and peace; for there can be no war without the expence and conſumption of treaſure. Plowd. 315.

Beſides, if any other perſons had power of mines of gold and ſilver, they might by theſe immenſe treaſures grow too formidable, and wreſt that authority from the King which was depoſited in his hands only. Plow. 316.

All derelict goods, and in which no man hath a property, belong to the King as well as derelict lands; ſo of extraparochial tithes, tho' things of an eccleſiaſtical nature. Bro. tit. Prærog. pl. 12. 2 Vent. 267, 8. 5 Co. 18. 2 Inſt. 646.

So if a perſon dies inteſtate, and without kindred, his goods belong to the King; and herein the uſual courſe is ſaid to be for a perſon to procure the King's letters patent, and then the ordinary admits the patentee to adminiſtration. 1 Salk. 37.

As to goods waived, theſe belong to the King, and are in him without any office; becauſe the property is not in any body, therefore by public agreement is put out of the finder, in whom it was by the ſtate of nature, and is veſted in the King, in recompence for his trouble in the execution of juſtice. 5 Co. 109.

But at the Common law, the owner purſuing the felon, and the felon waiving the goods, the owner may retake them; alſo upon an appeal of felony, the owner is intitled to a writ of reſtitution; and as a farther encouragement for the proſecution of felons, by the 21 H. 8. c. 11. it is provided, that if the party comes in as evidence on the indictment, and attaint the felon, he ſhall have a writ of reſtitution awarded by the judge of aſſiſe. 4 New Abr. 164.

3. Of the King's prerogative over the perſons of his ſubjects, in reſtraining them from going abroad, and commanding them to return home.

All perſons born in any part of the King's dominions and within his protection are his ſubjects, and alſo thoſe born in Ireland, Scotland, Wales, the King's plantations or on the Engliſh ſeas; who by their birth owe ſuch an inſeparable allegiance to the King, that they cannot by any act of theirs renounce or transfer their ſubjection to any foreign prince. 7 Co. 1, &c. Calvin's caſe. Molloy 370. Co. Lit. 129. Dyer 300. See Aliens.

All the ſubjects of a foreign prince coming into England, and living under the protection of our King, may, in reſpect of that local ligeance which they owe him, be guilty of high treaſon, and indicted that they contra dominum regem (the words naturalem dominum ſuum being omitted) did compaſs &c. contra ligeantiæ ſuæ debitum; and it is ſaid, that even an ambaſſador committing treaſon againſt the King's life, may be condemned and executed here, and that for other treaſons he ſhall be ſent home. 3 Inſt. 4, 5. Dyer 145. Salk. 630. 1 Hawk. P. C. 35. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 59.

But aliens who in an hoſtile manner invade the kingdom, whether their King were at war or peace with ours, and whether they come by themſelves, or in company with Engliſh traitors, cannot be puniſhed as traitors, but ſhall be dealt with by martial law. 1 Hawk. P. C. 35.

If the King makes a new conqueſt of any country, the perſons there born are his ſubjects; for by ſaving the lives of the people conquered he gains a right and property in ſuch people, and may impoſe on them what laws he pleaſes. Dyer 224. Vaugh. 281.

But until ſuch laws given by the conquering prince, the laws of the conquered country hold place; (unleſs where theſe are contrary to our religion, or enact any thing that is malum in ſe, or are ſilent;) for in all ſuch caſes the laws of the conquering country prevail. 2 P. Will. 75, 76.

If there be a new and uninhabited country found out by Engliſh ſubjects, as the law is the birth-right of every ſubject, ſo wherever they go they carry their laws with them, therefore ſuch new found country is to be governed by the laws of England; tho' after ſuch country is inhabited by the Engliſh, acts of parliament made in England, without naming the foreign plantations, will not bind them. 2 P. Will. 75. 2 Salk. 411.

By the Common law every ſubject may go out of the kingdom for merchandize or travel, or other cauſe, as he pleaſes, without any licence for that purpoſe; this appears from the ſtatute 5 R. 2. cap. 2. made to reſtrain perſons paſſing out of the realm, but excepts lords, great men and notable merchants; as alſo by the ſtatute 26 H. 8. cap. 10. which gave power to the King during his life to reſtrain perſons from trading to certain countries; which acts had been vain and idle, if the King by his prerogative might have done it. F. N. B. 85. Dyer 165, 296. 2 Rol. Rep. 12. 3 Mod. 131. Stil. 442.

But notwithſtanding this general liberty allowed by the Common law, it appears plainly that the King by his prerogative, and without any help of an act of parliament, may prohibit his ſubjects from going out of the realm; but this muſt be by ſome expreſs prohibition; as by laying on embargoes, which can be only done in time of danger, or by writ of Ne exeat Regno, which, from the words Quamplurima nobis & coronæ noſtræ præjudicialia ibidem proſequi intendis, appears to be a ſtate writ, tho' it is never granted univerſally, but to reſtrain a particular perſon, on oath made that he intends to go out of the realm; indeed Fitzherbert ſays, that the King may reſtrain his ſubjects by proclamation; and aſſigns as a reaſon for it, that the King may not know where to find his ſubject, ſo as to direct a writ to him. 12 Co. 33. 11 Co. 92. Fitz. N. B. 89. 2 Inſt. 54.

As the King may reſtrain any of his ſubjects from going abroad, in like manner he may command them to return home; and diſobeying a privy ſeal for this purpoſe is the higheſt contempt.

1ſt, It is a diſobedience to the command of the King himſelf directed to the party.

2dly, The command is, that he ſhall return upon his faith and allegiance, which is the ſtrongeſt compulſion that can be uſed.

3dly, The thing required by the King is the principal duty of a ſubject, viz. to be at the ſervice of his King and country. Dyer 128. b. Lane 44. Moor 109. 3 Inſt. 179.

The puniſhment for this offence is, ſeizing the party's eſtate till he return; and of this there are many inſtances in our books. And when he does return he ſhall be fined 1 Hawk. P. C. 59, 60.

William de Brittain in the 19 of Ed. 2. refuſing to return on the King's writ, his goods and chattels, lands and tenements, were ſeiſed into the King's hands; ſo in the caſe of Edward of Woodſtock, Earl of Kent, in the ſame reign. Dyer 128. b.

So in the caſe of one Bartue, who married the Dutcheſs of Suffolk, they obtained a licence from Q. Mary to go out of the realm, under pretence of recovering debts as executors to the Duke; when in reality it was on account of the religion eſtabliſhed by Queen Mary, and living with other fugitives under the protection of the Palſgrave of the Rhine in Germany, who was an eminent Calviniſt, were ſent to by privy ſeal; but the meſſenger, in endeavouring to ſerve them with his letters, being obſtructed and abuſed by their attendants, a certificate was made of this, and their lands and tenements ſeized. Dyer 176. Jenk. Cent. 220.

So in the caſe of Sir Francis Engleſield, who departed the kingdom on a licence obtained for three years; but not returning at the expiration of the three years, a privy ſeal was ſent to him by Queen Elizabeth, which he not obeying, and this matter being certified into Chancery by the Queen, under her ſign manual, his lands and tenements were ſeiſed in the fifth year of her reign by virtue of a commiſſion under the Great ſeal. 1 Leon. 9. Moor 109. 1 And. 95. S. C. See alſo 7 Co. 18. Poph. 18. 4 Leon. 135.

So in the caſe of Sir Robert Dudley, who, intending to travel, obtained a licence from James the Firſt to go to Venice; but before his departure he by indenture inrolled for valuable conſideration, as was expreſſed in the deed (but none paid) conveyed the manor of Killingworth with other lands to the Earl of Nottingham and others in fee, with a proviſo, that on tender of an angel of gold all ſhould be void; and with a covenant on the part of the bargainees that they ſhould make all ſuch eſtates as the ſaid Sir Robert ſhould appoint; the bargainees were not parties to the deed, nor had they notice of it 'till ſometime after; but afterwards they made a leaſe to Sir Robert Lee, to the intent that Lady Dudley ſhould take the profits of part of the premiſſes for ten years, if their eſtate continued ſo long unrevoked. The King, hearing that Sir Robert had been guilty of ſome bad practices beyond ſea, in the fifth year of his reign ſent his Privy ſeal to him, which he not obeying, the great queſtion in this caſe was, Whether thoſe lands thus conveyed were forfeited; and adjudged that they were, the conveyance being fraudulent as to the King. Lane 42, &c.

In theſe caſes it hath been held, that the King hath only an intereſt in the offender's lands, till he return; and that his reſtoring them is not a matter of grace but of right. Lane 48.

4. Of the King's prerogative in relation to Civil and Eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction; in creating officers, and making war and peace.

All juriſdiction exerciſed in theſe kingdoms that are in obedience to our King, is derived from the crown; and the laws, whether of a temporal, eccleſiaſtical or military nature, are called his laws; and it is his prerogative to take care of the due execution of them. Hence all judges derive their authority from the crown, by ſome commiſſion warranted by law; and muſt exerciſe it in a lawful manner, and without any the leaſt deviation from the known and ſtated forms. Fleta, c. 17. Co. Lit. 99. a. 144.

So altho' the King is the fountain of juſtice, and intruſted with the whole executive power of the law, yet he hath no power to alter the laws which have been eſtabliſhed, and are the birthright of every ſubject; for by thoſe very laws he is to govern; and as they preſcribe the extent and bounds of his prerogative, in like manner they declare and aſcertain the rights and liberties of the people, therefore admit of no innovation or change but by act of parliament. 4 Inſt. 164. 2 Inſt. 54, 478. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 131, 282. Vaugh. 418. 2 Salk. 510.

From the inherent right inſeparable from the King to diſtribute juſtice among his ſubjects, it hath been held, that an appeal from the Iſle of Man lies to the King in council, without any reſervation in the grant of the Iſle of Man of any ſuch right; and tho' there had been excluſive words, yet the grant muſt have been conſtrued to be void on the King's being deceived, rather than the ſubject ſhould be deprived of a right inſeparable to him as a ſubject, of applying to the crown for juſtice. 1 P. Will. 329.

The ſupremacy of the crown of England in matters eccleſiaſtical, is a moſt unqueſtionable right, which may be proved by records of undoubted authority; and tho' the pope made great incroachments on this right, yet theſe were always complained of as illegal; and thoſe incroachments are now taken off by the 25 Hen. 8. cap. 19, 20, 21. and 26 Hen. 8. cap. 1.

So that the King doth not recognize any foreign authority in this kingdom, neither do the laws of the emperor or pope of Rome, as ſuch, bind in the kingdom of England; but all the ſtrength that either the papal or imperial laws have obtained in this kingdom, is only becauſe they are and have been admitted, either by conſent of parliament, or immemorial uſage and acceptation in ſome particular courts and matters, and not otherwiſe. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 16.

The King is ſaid to have two juriſdictions, one temporal, the other eccleſiaſtical; the latter of which is derived from the Common law, tho' the form of the proceedings, and the coercive power exerciſed in the eccleſiaſtical courts, is after the form of the Canon and Civil law, and this being an indulgence, the judges give credit to their proceedings in matters in which they have a juriſdiction, and believe them conſonant to the law of holy church, altho' againſt the reaſon of the Common law; and if there be a gravamen it muſt be redreſſed by appeal. 1 Show. Rep. 218. 1 Rol. Abr. 530. 4 Co. 29. 7 Co. 42. 5 Co. 7. 2 Vent. 43.

The King, as the fountain of juſtice, hath an undoubted prerogative in creating officers, and all officers are ſaid to derive their authority mediately or immediately from him; thoſe who derive their authority from him are called the officers of the crown, and are created by letters patent; ſuch as the great officers of ſtate, judges &c. and there needs no ſtronger evidence of a right in the crown herein, than that the King hath created all ſuch officers time immemorial. Dyer 176. 2 Roll. Abr. 152. 4 Co. 32. 2 Inſt. 425, 540. 12 Co. 116. 1 Roll. Rep. 206. Show. Par. Ca. 111. 1 Lev. 219.

But tho' all ſuch officers derive their authority from the crown, and from whence the King is termed the univerſal officer and diſpoſer of juſtice, yet it hath been held, that he hath not the office in him to execute it himſelf, but is only to grant or nominate; nor can the King grant any new powers to ſuch officers, but they muſt execute their offices according to the rules preſcribed by law. Co. Lit, 3, 114. 2 Vent. 270. 4 Inſt. 125. 6 Co. 11, 12.

NEITHER CAN THE KING CREATE ANY NEW OFFICE INCONSISTENT WITH OUR CONSTITUTION OR PREJUDICIAL TO THE SUBJECT. 2 Inſt. 540. 2 Sid. 141. Moor 808. 4 Inſt. 200.

And on this foundation an office created by letters patents for the ſole making of all bills, informations and letters miſſive in the council of York, was unreaſonable and void. 1 Jon. 231.

The power of making war or peace is inter jura ſummi imperii, and in England is lodged ſingly in the King; tho' it ever ſucceeds beſt when done by parliamentary advice. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 159. 7 Co. 25.

A general war is of two kinds, 1. Bellum ſolenniter denunciatum.

2. Bellum non ſolenniter denunciatum. The firſt is, When war is ſolemnly declared or proclaimed by our King againſt another prince or ſtate, which is the moſt formal ſolemnity of a war now in uſe.

2dly, When a nation ſlips ſuddenly into a war without any ſolemnity, which happens by granting letters of marque, by a foreign prince invading our coaſts, or ſetting on the King's navy at ſea; and hereupon a real, tho' not a ſolemn war may and hath formerly ariſen; therefore to prove a nation to be at enmity with England, or to prove a perſon to be an alien enemy, there is no neceſſity of ſhewing any war proclaimed; but it may be averred, and ſo put upon the trial of the country, whether there was a war or not. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 163.

5. Of the King's prerogative in relation to his debts.

By 9 H. 3. c. 8. "The King nor his bailiffs ſhall levy any debts upon lands or rents ſo long as the debtor hath goods and chattels to ſatisfy, neither ſhall the pledges be diſtrained ſo long as the principal is ſufficient; but if he fail, then ſhall the pledges anſwer the debt; howbeit they ſhall have the debtor's lands and rents until they be ſatisfied, unleſs he can acquit himſelf againſt the pledges."

Goods and chattels] By order of the Common law, the King for his debt had execution of the body, lands and goods of his debtor; this is an act of grace, and reſtrains the power the King had before. 2 Inſt. 19.

Pledges be diſtrained] This act does not extend, nor was ever taken to extend to ſureties in a bond or recognizance, if they may be ſo called, being bound themſelves equally with the principal, as ſureties to perform covenants and agreements are in like manner; but to pledges and manucaptors only, who by expreſs words are not reſponſible, unleſs their principals become inſolvent, and ſo are conditional debtors only. And ſo the act has always been conſtrued, and the words themſelves imply as much, Hard. 378.

By Stat. 9 Hen. 3. c. 18. "The King's debtor dying, "the King ſhall be ſerved before the executor."

By this ſtatute, the King by his prerogative ſhall be preferred in ſatisfaction of his debt by the executors before any other. And if the executors have ſufficient to pay the King's debt, the heir nor any purchaſer of his lands ſhall not be charged. 2 Inſt. 32.

Stat. Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 19. enacts, "That the ſheriff having received the King's debt, upon his next account ſhall diſcharge the debtor thereof, in pain to forfeit three times ſo much to the debtor, and to make fine at the King's will. And the ſheriff and his heirs ſhall anſwer all monies that they whom he employed receive; and if any other that is anſwerable to the Exchequer by his own hands do ſo, he ſhall render thrice ſo much to the plaintiff, tiff, and make fine as before. And on payment of the King's debt, the ſheriff ſhall give a talley to the debtor, and the proceſs for levying the ſame ſhall be ſhewed him on demand without fee, on pain to be grievouſly puniſhed."

The King's debt] Under this word debt all things due to the King are comprehended, and not only debt in the proper ſenſe, but duties on things due, as rents, fines, iſſues, amercements and other duties to the King received or levied by the ſheriff; for debt in its large ſenſe ſignifies whatever a man doth owe; and debere dicitur quia deeſt habere; debitori enim deeſt quod habet, cum ſit creditoris, maxime in caſu domini regis. 2 Inſt. 198.

The ſheriff and his heirs ſhall anſwer] This is to be underſtood, quoad reſtitutionem, but not quoad pœnam; that is for the civil but not for the criminal part; for it is a maxim in law, pœna ex delicto defuncti hæres teneri non debet; and again in reſtitutionem non in pœnam hæres ſuccedit. 2 Inſt. 198.

Stat. 28 Ed. 1. cap. 12. enacts, "That beaſts of the plough ſhall not be diſtrained for the King's debts ſo long as others may be found, on ſuch pain as is elſewhere ordained by ſtatute (viz. by the ſtatute de diſtrictione ſcaccarii, 51 H. 3. ſt. 4.) And the great diſtreſſes ſhall not be taken for his debts, nor driven too far; and if the debtor can find convenient ſurety, the diſtreſs ſhall in the mean time be releaſed; and he that does otherwiſe ſhall be grievouſly puniſhed."

This is an act of grace, and on this act there lies a writ directed to the ſheriff, commanding him to receive ſurety according to this act, which if he refuſes, an attachment lies againſt him, or the party offering ſurety according to this act, if it be refuſed, may have an action againſt the ſheriff, &c. 2 Inſt. 565.

Stat. 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 5. cap. 19. enables a common perſon to ſue a debtor of his (who is likewiſe a debtor to the King) to judgment, but he cannot proceed to execution, unleſs the plaintiff gives ſecurity to pay the King's debt firſt, and then he may take execution for his own and the King's debt too.

For otherwiſe, if without giving ſuch ſecurity, the party takes forth execution upon his judgment, and levies the money, the ſame money may be ſeized upon to ſatisfy the King's debt.

Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 39. ſ. 2. enacts, "That all obligations and ſpecialties concerning the King and his heirs, or made to his or their uſe, ſhall be made to his Highneſs and to his heirs, Kings, in his or their name or names, by theſe words, domino regi, and to no other perſon to his uſe, and to be paid to his Highneſs, by theſe words, ſolvend' eidem domino regi haered' vel executoribus ſuis, with other words uſed in common obligations, which obligations and ſpecialties ſhall be in the nature of a ſtatute ſtaple."

None other are to be charged, but ſuch as were liable to the bond when it was made. Sav. 10.

An obligation for performance of covenants is within this act, after the covenants are broken. 7 Rep. 20. b. Hard. 368, 442.

By ſect. 3. of the ſaid act 33 Hen. 8. c. 39. All ſuch obligations, the debt not being paid, ſhall come, remain, and be to the heirs or executors of the King as he ſhall appoint; and if any perſon take any obligation to the uſe of the King or his heirs, otherwiſe than as aforeſaid, he ſhall ſuffer ſuch impriſonment as ſhall be adjudged by the King or his honourable council.

Sect. 6. Coſts and damages are given to the King.

Sect. 7. Directs debts to be ſued for in proper courts.

Sect. 13. And every of the courts are impowered to ſet ſuch fines, &c. on perſons for their defaults, &c. as to the courts ſeem expedient. And all trials ſhall be by due examination of witneſſes, writings, proofs or ſuch other way as by the courts ſhall be thought expedient.

Sect. 25. And in all actions in any of the courts for any debt due to the King by reaſon of any attainder, outlawry, forfeiture, gift of the party, or by any other collateral ways or means, it ſhall be ſufficient in law to ſhew and alledge generally, that the party to whom the ſaid debt did belong, ſuch a year and day did give the ſame to the King, or was attainted, outlawed, &c. whereby the ſaid debt did accrue to the King; and the ſame ſhall be of the ſame effect, as if the whole matter had been declared at large according to the order of the Common law.

Sect. 26. If any ſuit be commenced, or any proceſs awarded for the King, for the recovery of any debt, then the ſame ſuit and proceſs ſhall be preferred before any perſon. And that the Lord, his heirs and ſucceſſors, ſhall have firſt execution againſt any defendant for his debt, before any perſon: ſo always that the King's ſuit be commenced, or proceſs awarded for the debt, at the ſuit of the King, his heirs or ſucceſſors, before judgment given for the other perſon.

This ſtatute abridges the prerogative, and controuls the Common law; and here is a negative implied, tho' the ſtatute ſounds in the affirmative; for it enacts a new thing, and the ita quod makes a condition precedent and a limitation: And the words are introductive. Hard. 27.

Strange Arg. ſaid That on this act he took it, the ſuit muſt be ſaid to be then taken or commenced when the firſt ſtep is made towards the proceeding to execution, and the firſt ſtep to be taken is to procure a fiat of a baron, and then it is in fact that the proceſs is awarded. G. Eq. R. 222.

Sect. 27. All manors, lands, tenements, poſſeſſions and hereditaments, which be, or that hereafter ſhall be, in the hands, poſſeſſion, occupation, or ſeiſin of any perſon, to whom the manors, &c. have heretofore or hereafter ſhall deſcend, revert or remain in fee-ſimple or in fee-tail, general or ſpecial, by, from, or after the death of any anceſtor as heir, or by gift of his anceſtors whoſe heir he is, which anceſtor was, is, or ſhall be indebted to the King or to any perſon to his uſe, by judgment, recognizance, obligation or other ſpecialty, the debt whereof is or ſhall not be paid; then in every ſuch caſe the ſame manors, &c. ſhall be chargeable for payment of the debt.

All manors] A. ſeiſed of the manor of F. in conſideration of a marriage to be had between B. his ſon and M. daughter of J. S. covenanted to levy a fine to the uſe of himſelf and wife for their lives, remainder to the uſe of B. and M. and the heirs of their bodies with remainders over; afterwards A. acknowledged a recognizance to the Queen and died. His wife died; the manor is extended for the Queen's debt, by force of the ſtatute. It was argued by Coke, that the manor is not chargeable by the ſtatute; but it was made for the King's benefit in two points. 1. To make lands intailed liable for the King's debts, where they were not ſo before, againſt the iſſue. 2. To make bonds taken by the officers of the King to the uſe of the King, as effectual as ſtatutes; that the words (was or ſhall be indebted) ſhall not be intended after the gift made; that (ſhall be) is to be intended of future debts after the ſtatute, whereas at the time of the ſettlement A. was not receiver or other officer to the Queen; the words are (by gift after the debt acknowledged to the Queen): that this caſe is not within the ſtatute; for the words are (of the gift of his anceſtor) but here B. has not the manor of the gift of A. but rather by the ſtatute of uſes, and ſo he is in the poſt, and not in the per, by his anceſtor; for the fine was levied to divers perſons to the uſes aforeſaid, nor was the gift a meer gratuity, but in conſideration that he ſhould marry the daughter of J. S. and the debt accrued not till after the gift. He admitted that had there been any fraud in the caſe, or any purpoſe in A. when he made the conveyance, to become the King's debtor or officer, it would be within the ſtatute, and the gift had been a meer gratuity, &c. and afterwards (as Coke reported) B. and his lands were diſcharged. 2 Le. 90, 91.

Shall be indebted] This is intended an immediate debt, and not ſuch debts as are due to the ſubject and accrue to the King by any collateral means; for which this ſtatute has a clauſe for the writ and general manner and form of pleading in ſuch caſes, of the part of the King for the recovery of them, that the party ſuch a year and day, &c. (which ſee at ſ. 25. above.) So that the ſeveral manners of penning theſe two branches manifeſt the intention of the makers of the act to prefer immediate debts due to the King by judgment, &c. before debts of the ſubject which accrue to the King by aſſignment, attainder, outlawry, &c. and the reaſon was, becauſe debts due immediately to the King by judgment, recognizance, obligation, or other ſpecialty, are in their nature more high, and may be better known, and upon ſearch found, than debts due to ſubjects. 7 Rep. 2. a. Jenk. 226. pl. 99. S. P. But for ſuch debts the King is left at Common law. If the King's debtor, officer or accountant has leaſes for years or goods; theſe leaſes and goods are not liable if the debtor ſold them bona fide: But if he ſold them by covin it is otherwiſe. If land be purchaſed with the King's money, it is liable to ſatisfy the King.

The debt ought to be immediately to the King himſelf, or if it be to any other than to the King, it ought to be originally to the uſe of the King. 7 Rep. 22. a.

If tenant in tail becomes indebted to the King, unleſs it be by judgment, recognizance, obligation or other ſpecialty, and dies, the lands in the ſeiſin of the iſſue in tail by force of this act ſhall not be extended by this act for ſuch debt; for the ſtatute extends only to the ſaid four caſes, and all other debts remain at Common law. 7 Rep. 21. b.

The iſſue in tail (the land being in his hands) is alſo liable in either of the ſaid four caſes, but not the bona fide alienee of the iſſue; for the words of the ſtatute do not extend to this alienee; the Common law did not help the King in theſe caſes; the ſtatute helps the King in the caſe againſt the iſſue in tail. Jenk. 226. pl. 99. S. P. Ibid. 285. pl. 19.

The iſſue in tail ſhall not be charged by this ſtatute for the penalty on a conviction of recuſancy of the tenant in tail by proclamation, by the ſtatute 29 Eliz. c. 6. but otherwiſe it had been if he had been convicted by the 23 El. c. 1. 1 Rol. Rep. 94.

In every ſuch caſe] By the expreſs purview of this act, the land ſhall be ſolely extended as long as it is in the poſſeſſion or ſeiſin of the heir in tail; for this act ſays, That in every ſuch caſe the land ſhall be charged, And as the land againſt the iſſue in tail was not extendable before this act, the King has benefit to extend it in the poſſeſſion of the heir in tail, which he could not do before; but the King cannot extend the lands of the alienee; for the ſtatute does not extend to this, and the makers of the act have reaſon to favour the purchaſers, farmers, &c. of the heir in tail, more than the heir himſelf; for they are ſtrangers to the debts of tenant in tail, and they come to the land on good conſideration. 7 Rep. 21. b.

The ſame manors] If the goods and chattels of the King's debtors be ſufficient, and ſo can be made appear to the ſheriff, whereupon he may levy the King's debt, then the ſheriff ought not to extend the lands of the debtor or his heir, or of any purchaſer or tenant. 2 Inſt. 19.

Sect. 28. The King ſhall not be excluded to demand his debts againſt any of his ſubjects, as heir to any perſon indebted to his Highneſs or to his uſe, albeit this word heir be not comprized in ſuch recognizance or ſpecialty, or that ſuch perſons ſhall ſay, that they have not any hereditaments to them deſcended, but only ſuch as be intailed or given to them by their anceſtors.

By this clauſe the intent of the makers of the act appears, that the heir in tail ſhall be only charged with the debt of the King; but lands in fee-ſimple were extendable at the Common law in whatever hands they came, therefore as to them this ſtatute was only declarativum antiqui juris: But as to the eſtates in tail, it was introductivum novi juris againſt the iſſue in tail. 7 Rep. 21. b.

One P. was indebted to the Queen, and one W. was bound to P. in 100 l. in which obligation W. did not mention his heirs; P. aſſigned the obligation in which W. was bound to him, to the Queen, and on this proceſs was made againſt the heir of W. And it was held by the court, that as W. did not oblige himſelf and his heirs, that the heir by the death of the father was diſcharged: And if the aſſignment had been made in the life-time of the father, and then the father had died, the heir ſhould be diſcharged, but the ſon may be charged as executor or adminiſtrator, &c. Sav. 2.

Sect. 29. Provided, That the King may at his liberty demand his debts of any executors or adminiſtrators of any perſon indebted, if the executors, &c. have aſſets.

J. S. was obliged to Sir Richard Cavendiſh, Treaſurer of the Chamber to Henry VIII. in 100 l. who was indebted to the King, on which proceſs was made againſt thoſe who were tertenants of J. S. tempori confectionis ſcripti præd' made to the ſaid Sir Richard. Per Manwood Ch. B. The tertenants are not chargeable in this caſe, but the heirs and executors. Per Shute ſecond Baron, If an obligation be made to the King, it ſhall be of the ſame nature as a ſtatute ſtaple to all intents, by this ſtatute; but obligations made to other perſons to the uſe of the King, ſhall be executory againſt the obligor, his heirs, executors or adminiſtrators, and not againſt other perſons, but if J. N. be bound to J. S. and J. S. aſſigns this to Sir Richard Cavendiſh, and he over to the King, no proceſs ſhall be made thereon, to which the court and all the clerks agreed. And it was held, that if obligor, after the obligation made, voluntarily makes feoffment of lands, ſuch feoffees ſhall be charged; otherwiſe it is of purchaſers before the obligation made in caſe of the King. Sav. 12.

Sect. 30. If the hereditaments be evicted out of the poſſeſſion of ſuch perſons by juſt title without fraud, whoſe hereditaments ſhall be chargeable as is aboveſaid; then ſuch hereditaments ſhall be acquitted of the debts.

B. was indebted to the Queen, for the payment of which debt certain lands, of B. at the time of the debt, were purchaſed by one W. againſt whom and one C. and D. the ſaid B. exhibited his bill in the Exchequer-chamber, praying, that the equity of the caſe might there be examined. Before any anſwer made W. payed the debt, and then demanded judgment if the court would hold further plea, as the cauſe of privilege was determined, which is the debt due to the Queen. And it was held, that on this reaſon the court ought to diſmiſs the cauſe, and ſo it was done. Sav. 15.

Sect. 31. If any perſon of whom any ſuch debt ſhall be demanded, ſhew ſufficient matter, in law, reaſon, or good conſcience, why ſuch perſons ought not to be charged with the ſame, and it be ſufficiently proved, the courts have power to allow the proof, and acquit all perſons ſo impleaded.

Sufficient matter in law] This proviſo gives benefit not only to him who has matter in good conſcience, but alſo to him who has good and ſufficient cauſe, and matter in law, reaſon (and then comes) good conſcience; and without queſtion the firſt words, viz. cauſe and matter in law, ſhall extend to all the debts of the King, and proceſs thereupon, as well at Common law as on this act. And the concluſion of the branch does not make againſt it. For the ſenſe thereof was, that he ſhould plead matter in law or good conſcience, and that nothing contained in the act ſhould be an impediment thereto. 7 Rep. 19. b.

Scire facias iſſued againſt Sir W. H. as heir, to M. H. his father, on a recognizance acknowledged to Edward VI. by the ſaid M. H. the ſheriff returned ſcire feci, and on his default judgment was given. And becauſe in truth he never was ſummoned, and had good matter, if he had had notice thereof, to plead in diſcharge of the recognizance acknowledged, all which he ſhewed in certain in a bill in the Exchequer; upon which, on conference had by Manwood and the other Barons, with the two Ch. J. he was diſcharged of the recognizance. 7 Rep. 20. a. As 3 Rep. Trin. 37 Eliz. Sir William Herbert's caſe.

In law, reaſon or good conſcience] A. obtained of the King a privy ſeal, whereby the forfeiture of certain recognizances for appearing at the ſeſſions, amounting in the whole to 800 l. was granted her. And it was made a queſtion, Whether the court might compound thoſe forfeitures by virtue of their privy ſeal which was granted before the privy ſeal and grant to A.? And it was doubted whether the privy ſeal did not take away and revoke the power given to the court in this particular? But it was held clearly, that the court might upon good matter in equity diſcharge theſe debts by virtue of this ſtatute. And the caſe in queſtion ſeemed a hard caſe to the court, becauſe the party himſelf was the cauſe why there was no appearance, by beating the party ſo heinouſly the very day before they ought to have appeared, that they were diſabled thereby to appear. Hard. 334.

W. put 100 l. out at intereſt to defendant, and took bond in the name of one J. who became felo de ſe, and the plaintiff was relieved againſt the King on this truſt, in equity upon this ſtatute. Sed quære, Whether this ſtatute extends to any equity againſt the King, otherwiſe than in caſe of pleas by way of diſcharge? But it was likewiſe decreed in this cauſe that the plaintiff ſhould be ſaved harmleſs from all others. Hard. 176.

[And the matter ſo ſhewed be ſufficiently proved] Scire facias iſſued againſt T. the father and T. the ſon, to ſhew cauſe wherefore they did not pay the King 1000*l.* for the meſne profits of certain lands holden by them from his Majeſty, for which land judgment was given for him in the Exchequer, and the meſne rates were found by inquiſition, which returned that the ſaid meſne profits came to 1000*l.* upon which inquiſition this ſcire facias iſſued; whereupon the ſheriff returned that T. the father was dead, and T. the ſon appeared, and pleaded that he took the profits but as a ſervant to his father, and by his command, and rendered an account to his father for the profits, and alſo the judgment for the lands was given againſt his father and him for default of ſufficient pleading, and not for the truth of the fact; and he ſhewed this ſtatute, which he pretended aided him for his equity: Whereupon the King demurred. Tanfield Ch. B. ſaid, that the matter in equity ought to be ſufficiently proved, and here is nothing but the allegation of the party, and the demurrer for the King; and if the demurrer be in law an admittance of the allegation, and ſo a ſufficient proof within the ſtatute, is to be adviſed on; and for that point the caſe is but this: A ſcire facias iſſues to have execution of a recognizance, which, within this act, ought by pretence and allegation of the defendant to be diſcharged for matter in equity, and the defendant pleads his matter in equity, and the King, ſuppoſing this not to be equity within this ſtatute, demurs in law, whether that demurrer be an inſufficient proof of the allegation within the ſtatute or not? Adjornatur. Lane 51.

Sect. 33. This act ſhall not take away any liberties belonging to the dutchy and county palatine of Lancaſter.

Sect. 34. Proceſs and executions for debts in the court of Exchequer ſhall be made in the Exchequer by ſuch officer as hath been uſed, as by this act is limited.

13 Eliz. cap. 4. ſect. 1. enacts, That all the lands, &c. which any accomptant of the Queen, her heirs and ſucceſſors, hath while he remains accountable, ſhall for the payment of the debts of the Queen, her heirs and ſucceſſors, be liable, and put in execution in like manner, as if ſuch accomptant had ſtood bound by writ obligatory (having the effect of the ſtatute-ſtaple) to her Majeſty, her heirs and ſucceſſors, for payment of the ſame.

The Queen by her letters patents, granted catalla utlegatorum & felonum de ſe, within ſuch a precinct; one who was indebted to the Queen is felo de ſe within the precinct. It was ruled, that notwithſtanding the grant by the letters patents, the Queen ſhall have the goods for ſatisfying her debt. 3 Le. 113. Mo. 126, 127. S. C. between The Queen of the firſt part, the Biſhop of Sarum of the ſecond part, and Oliver Coxhead of the third part; and there per Manwood Ch. B. the patent does not extend to have the goods of felo de ſe againſt the Queen for her debt, becauſe it wanted the words (licet tangat nos;) but he agreed, that if the lands of the felon be liable to [ſufficient to anſwer] all the debt of the Queen, the court may in diſcretion take all the lands in extent, and leave the goods to the patentee. And as to a petition of Coxhead praying a diſcharge of the lands, &c. by him purchaſed of the officer debtor to the Queen, it was anſwered, that the land was ſubject to the Queen's extent for all arrears of receipts by his office received before the conveyance thereof, though the recipt be after the conveyance, and that by reaſon of the ſtatute; but as to another office accepted after the conveyance of the land, the arrears of that ſhall not charge the land ſo conveyed.

B. L. having purchaſed a long term for years in houſes, afterwards purchaſed the inheritance; afterwards he became receiver of North Wales, and having occaſion for 500*l.* aſſigned over the term by way of mortgage to J. S. Afterwards on the marriage of E. L. his ſon, he ſettled the houſes in St. Clement's (inter alia) on himſelf for life, remainder to E. L. his ſon, and the heirs of his body. There was iſſue of the marriage a daughter, the wife of P. after this B. L. mortgages theſe houſes to N. for 1800*l.* The King extends theſe houſes for the debt of B. L. N. gets an aſſignment of the extent, and a privy ſeal for the debt. Reſolved, 1ſt, That, by the ſtatute of Elizabeth, the land and the real eſtate of B. L. was bound and ſtood liable to anſwer the King's debt, although he was not actually a debtor to the King, nor any extent againſt him in ſeveral years after. 2dly, That where a term is attendant on the inheritance, he ſhall have a right to the term; but if it be a term in groſs, and aſſigned before any actual extent, the aſſignment will ſtand good, and the term not liable to the King's debt. 2 Vern. 389, 390.

Sect. 2, 3. If either of the Queen's officers, on rendering of his account, ſhall be found in arrear, and ſuch arrears ſhall not be paid within ſix months after the account paſt, the Queen, &c. may ſell ſo much of his eſtate as will anſwer the debt, and the overplus of the ſale is to be rendered to the accomptant or his heirs, by the officer that receives the purchaſe money, withour further warrant.

Upon this ſtatute many queſtions were moved. 1ſt, If the debtor died, whether the land might be ſold? 2dly, When the account is determined after his death? 3dly, When the accountant, after becoming debtor, and in arrear, makes feoffment, or other eſtate over, or charges or incumbers the land, either to his iſſue, or others of his blood, to prevent the Queen's ſelling, or on other conſideration, whether ſhe may ſell the land, the words of the act being make ſale, &c. of ſo much of the lands, &c. of every ſuch accountant or debtor ſo found in arrear, &c. and that the ſale ſhall be good and available in law againſt the party accountant, and his heirs claiming as heirs. 4thly, If the accountant was ſeiſed of land in tail, whether this land might be ſold to be good againſt the iſſue; for the ouſting of which doubts the ſtatute of 27 Eliz. cap. 3. was made, but this gives remedy only, that the land ſhall be ſold after the death of the debtor, and when the account is made after his death, therefore to remedy the other miſchiefs, the ſtatute 29 Eliz. cap. 7. was made [But the ſame being only a temporary act is expired.] Mo. 646, &c. pl. 895. Anon', [where part of the laſt mentioned act is ſet forth and explained.]

Sect. 5. If ſuch accountant or debtor purchaſe lands in others names in truſt for their uſe, that being found by office or inquiſition, thoſe lands alſo ſhall be liable to ſatisfy the debt in ſuch manner as before is expreſſed.

Sect. 6. Lands purchaſed by accountants ſince the beginning of the Queen's reign, either in their own names, or in the names of others in truſt for their uſe, ſhall be alſo liable to be ſold for the diſcharge of their debts as aforeſaid, rendring the overplus to the accountant.

Sect. 9. Provided, That biſhops lands ſhall be only chargeable for ſubſidies or tenths, as they were before making this act, and not otherwiſe.

Sect. 10. Neither ſhall this act extend to charge any accountant whoſe yearly receipt exceeds not 300*l.* otherwiſe than as he was lawfully chargeable before this act.

Sect. 11, 12. Neither ſhall this act extend to ſuch accountants, as by order of their offices, and charge, immediately after their accounts paſt, are to lay out money again; ſuch as are treaſurers of war, garriſons, navy, proviſion of victuals, or for fortifications or buildings, and the maſter of the wardrobe; unleſs the Queen, &c. command preſent pay.

Sect. 13. Neither does this act extend to ſheriffs, eſcheators or bailiffs of liberties, concerning whoſe accounts the courſe remains the ſame as before.

Sect. 14. Lands bought of an accountant bona fide, and without notice of any fraudulent intent in the accountant ſhall be diſcharged; and if they be bound by office, yet ſhall they on traverſe be diſcharged without livery, ouſter le main or other ſuit.

If a man is receiver to the King, and not indebted, but is clear and ſells his land, and ceaſes to be receiver, and afterwards is appointed receiver again, and then a debt is contracted with the King, the former ſale is good. 2 Mod. 247.

Sect. 15. The Queen, &c. being ſatisfied by ſale of lands, the ſureties ſhall be diſcharged for ſo much, and if any yet remain unpaid, the ſureties ſhall pay the reſidue rateably according to their abilities.

By 27 Eliz. cap. 3. ſect. 2. The Queen, &c. may make ſale of the accountant's lands, &c. as well after his death as in his life-time, and as well where the account is made, and the debt known within eight years after his death, as where the account is made, and the debt known in his life-time.

Sect. 3. Provided, that after the accountant's death, and before the lands be ſold, a ſcire facias ſhall be awarded to garniſh the heirs, to ſhew cauſe why lands, &c. ſhould not be ſold, &c. whereupon, if the heir, upon ſuch garniſhment or two nihils returned, do not prove that the executors or adminiſtrators of the accountant have ſufficient, then ten months after ſuch two nihils or garniſhment returned, the land, &c. ſhall be ſold and diſpoſed according to the ſtatute of 13 Eliz. cap. 4.

Sect. 4. Nevertheleſs, the heir's ſale bona fide upon good conſideration before the ſcire facias awarded, ſhall be good to him who is not conſenting to defraud the Queen, &c.

Sect. 5. This ſtatute ſhall extend to all officers of receipts and accounts to her Majeſty, and to no other.

Sect. 6. If the debt grow in the courts of the dutchy of wards, a Privy ſeal ſhall iſſue out againſt the heir to appear at a certain day, to ſhew cauſe, &c. when, if he appear not, on affidavit made that it was duly ſerved, an attachment with proclamation ſhall iſſue againſt him, to be proclamed in ſome open market in the county where he dwelt twenty days (at leaſt) before the return thereof, whereupon, if he appear not, the lands, &c. ſhall be ſold and diſpoſed as aforeſaid.

Sect. 7. The heir's land ſhall not be ſold during his minority; but at any time within eight years after his full age they ſhall be liable as aforeſaid.

Prerogative court, (Curia prærogativa Archiepiſcopi Cantuarienſis) Is the court wherein all wills are proved, and all adminiſtrations taken which belong to the Archbiſhop by his prerogative; that is, in caſe where the deceaſed had goods of any conſiderable value out of the dioceſe wherein he died; and that value is ordinarily 5 l. except it be otherwiſe by compoſition between the Archbiſhop, and ſome other Biſhop, as in the dioceſe of London it is ten pounds: And if any contention grow between two or more, touching ſuch will or adminiſtration, the cauſe is properly decided in this court. The Judge whereof is termed Judex curiæ Prærogativæ Cantuarienſis, the Judge of the Prerogative court of Canterbury.

Preſcription, (Præſcriptio) Is a title acquired by uſe and time, and allowed by law; as when a man claims any thing, becauſe he, his anceſtors, or they whoſe eſtate he hath, have had or uſed it all the time, whereof no memory is to the contrary: Or it is where for continuance of time, ultra memoriam hominis, a particular perſon hath a particular right againſt another. Kitch. 104. Co. Lit. 114. 4 Rep. 32.

Preſcriptions are properly perſonal, therefore are always alledged in the perſon of him who preſcribes, viz. That he, his anceſtors, or all thoſe whoſe eſtate he hath, &c. or of a body politic or corporation, they and their predeceſſors, &c. Alſo a parſon may preſcribe, quod ipſe & prædeceſſores ſui, and all they whoſe eſtate, &c. for there is a perpetual eſtate, and a perpetual ſucceſſion, and the ſucceſſor hath the very ſame eſtate which his predeceſſor had, which continues, though the perſon alters, like the caſe of anceſtor and heir. 3 Salk. 279.

There is a difference between preſcription, cuſtom, and uſage.

Preſcription hath reſpect to a certain perſon, who by intendment may have continuance for ever; as for inſtance; he and all they whoſe eſtate he hath in ſuch a thing, this is a preſcription: But

Cuſtom is local, and always applied to a certain place, as time out of mind there has been ſuch a cuſtom in ſuch a place, &c. And preſcription belongeth to one or a few only; but cuſtom is common to all:

Uſage differs from both, for it may be either to perſons or places; as to inhabitants of a town, to have a way, &c. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1277.

A cuſtom and preſcription are in the right; uſage is in poſſeſſion; and a preſcription that is good for the matter and ſubſtance, may be bad by the manner of ſetting it forth; but where that which is claimed as a cuſtom, in or for many, will be good, that regularly will be ſo when claimed by preſcription for one. Godb. 54.

Preſcription is to be time out of mind; though it is not the length of time, that begets the right of preſcription, nothing being done by time, although every thing is done in time, but it is a preſumption in law, that a poſſeſſion cannot continue ſo long quiet, if it was againſt right, or injurious to another. 3 Salk. 278.

A preſcription cannot be annexed to any thing but an eſtate in fee, which muſt be ſet forth; but it is always applied to incorporeal inheritances, one cannot make title to land by preſcription; but only to rent, or profit out of land. 2 Mod. 318. 4 Rep. 31.

A perſon may make title by preſcription, to an office, a fair, market, toll, way, water, rent, common, park, warren, franchiſe, court-leet, waifs, eſtrays, &c. But nothing may be preſcribed, which cannot be raiſed by grant, and a preſcription muſt not be laid in an uncertainty; no perſon can preſcribe againſt an act of parliament, or againſt the King where he hath a certain eſtate and intereſt, againſt the public good, religion, &c. Nor can one preſcription be pleaded againſt another, unleſs the firſt is anſwered or traverſed; or where one may ſtand with the other. Lutw. 381. Raym. 232. 2 Rol. Abr. 264. 2 Inſt. 167. 7 Rep. 28. Cro. Car. 432. 1 Bulſt. 115. 2 Lil. 346.

Tenants in fee-ſimple are to preſcribe in their own name, and tenants for life or years, &c. though they may not preſcribe in their own names, yet they may in the name of him who hath fee: and where a perſon would have a thing that lies in grant by preſcription, he muſt preſcribe in himſelf and his anceſtors, whoſe heir he is by DESCENT; not in himſelf, and thoſe whoſe eſtate, &c. (unleſs the que eſtate is but a conveyance to the thing claimed by preſcription;) for he cannot have their eſtate that lies in grant without deed, which ought to be ſhewn to the court. Co. Lit. 113. Wood's Inſt. 297.

A copyholder, by reaſon of the baſeneſs of his tenure, cannot lay a preſcription in himſelf and his anceſtors; but he may preſcribe in the name of the lord of the manor, that the lord and his anceſtors have had common, &c. for themſelves and tenants, &c. And this ſerves where perſons cannot preſcribe in their own name, or of any certain perſon.

Pariſhioners cannot generally preſcribe, but they may alledge a cuſtom; and inhabitants may preſcribe in a matter of eaſement, way to a church, burying place, &c. 2 Saund. 325. 1 Lev. 253. Cro. Eliz. 441. Cro. Car. 419. 2 Rol. 290.

To lay a preſcription for common, a man muſt ſhew, that he and his anceſtors, or all thoſe whoſe eſtate he hath, have time out of mind had and uſed to have common of paſture in ſuch a place, being the land of another, &c. And as a preſcription is a title or claim of a real intereſt or profit in the land of another perſon, it muſt be pleaded according to certain rules; and they are not like cuſtoms, or improper preſcriptions, that are by way of diſcharge, or for eaſements, or for matters of perſonal exemption or privilege. Wood's Inſt. 298, 299.

A preſcription may be laid in ſeveral perſons, where it tends only to matters of eaſement or diſcharge; though not where it goes to matter of intereſt or profit in alieno ſolo, for that is a title, and the title of one doth not concern the other; therefore ſeveral men having ſeveral eſtates, cannot join in making a preſcription. 1 Mod. 74. 3 Mod. 250.

The word eaſement is a genus to ſeveral ſpecies of liberties, which one may have in the ſoil of another, without claiming any intereſt in the land itſelf; but where the thing was ſet forth in a preſcription to catch fiſh in the water of another, &c. and no inſtance could be given of a preſcription for ſuch a liberty by the word eaſement, a rule was made to ſet the preſcription right, and to try the merits. 4 Mod. 362.

In treſpaſs for breaking the plaintiff's cloſe, the defendant preſcribed, that the inhabitants of ſuch a place, time out of mind, had uſed to dance there, at all times of the year, for their recreation, and ſo juſtified; iſſue being taken on this preſcription, defendant had a verdict; it was objected againſt it, that a preſcription to dance in the freehold of another, and ſpoil his graſs was ill, eſpecially as laid in the defendant's plea, viz. At all times of the year, and not at ſeaſonable times, and for all the inhabitants; who, though they may preſcribe in eaſements which are neceſſary, as a way to a church, &c. they cannot in eaſements for pleaſure ONLY: But adjudged, that the preſcription is good, iſſue being taken on it, and found for defendant; although it might have been ill on demurrer. 1 Lev. 175. 2 Nelſ. 1280.

A cuſtom that the farmers of ſuch a farm have always found ale, &c. to ſuch a value at perambulations, was held naught; becauſe it is no more than a preſcription in occupiers, which is not good in matter to charge the land. 2 Lev. 164.

Preſcription by the inhabitants of a pariſh to dig gravel in ſuch a pit, the ſoil of W. R. it was doubted whether this was good or not, though it was to repair the highway; but the inhabitants may preſcribe for a way, and by conſequence for NECESSARY MATERIALS to repair it. 2 Lutw. 1346. Sed. q. and ſee Gateward's caſe. 6 Co. 60. Where preſcription for common for every inhabitant of an ancient meſſuage in a pariſh is held not to be good.

Defendant pleaded, that within ſuch a pariſh, all occupiers of a certain cloſe habent, & habere conſueverunt, a way leading over the plaintiff's cloſe, to the defendant's houſe; this was held ill, for it is not like a preſcription to a way to the church or market, which are neceſſary, & pro bono publico. 2 Ventr. 186.

Where a man preſcribes for a way to ſuch a cloſe, he muſt ſhew what intereſt he hath in the cloſe: Aliter if he preſcribes for a way to ſuch a field; becauſe that may be a common field by intendment. Latch. 160.

Plaintiff declared, that the occupiers of the adjoining field have, time out of mind, repaired the fences, which being out of repair, his beaſts eſcaped out of his own ground, and fell into a pit; it is good without ſhewing any eſtate in the occupiers; but it had not been ſo if defendant had preſcribed. 1 Ventr. 264.

It ſhould ſeem, that a preſcription by the owner of land, adjoining to a wood, to take underwood there growing to repair the fences belonging to the wood, is not good: For of common right the making of the hedge doth appertain to the owner of the wood: And the preſcription is no more than to take wood in the lands of another to make the hedges of the ſame land in which the wood groweth, which cannot be a good preſcription, for it ſounds only in charge, and not to the profit of him who preſcribes. 1 Leon. 313.

A man may claim a fold-courſe, and exclude the owner of the ſoil by preſcription. 1 Saund. 153. But a diverſity has been taken where a preſcription takes away the whole intereſt of the owner of the land; and where a particular profit is reſtrained: In one caſe it is good, in the other void. 1 Leon. 11.

If a perſon preſcribes for common appurtenant it is ill, unleſs it be for cattle levant & couchant, &c. And the reaſon is, becauſe by ſuch a preſcription the party claims only ſome part of the paſture, and the quantum is aſcertained by the levancy and couchancy, the reſt being left for the owner of the ſoil; therefore if he who thus preſcribes, ſhould put in more cattle than are levant and couchant on his tenement, he is a treſpaſſer. Noy 145. 2 Saund. 324.

In a preſcription to have common, the jury found it to be paying every year a penny: Here the preſcription is entire, whereof the payment of one penny is parcel; which ought to be entirely alledged in the preſcription in the plea, or it will not be good. Cro. Eliz. 563, 564. But where the payment is collateral from the preſcription, a preſcription may be good without alledging it. Cro. Eliz. 405.

It was a queſtion, Whether a toll, independent of markets and fairs, might be claimed by preſcription, without ſhewing that the ſubject hath ſome benefit; and ſome arguments were brought for it, from an authority in Dyer 352. Though by Holt this preſcription cannot be good, becauſe there was no recompence for it; and every preſcription to charge the ſubject with a duty, muſt import ſome benefit to him who pays it; or elſe ſome reaſon muſt be ſhewn why the duty is claimed. 4 Mod. 319.

A court-leet is derived out of the hundred; and if a man claims a title to the leet, he may preſcribe that he and his anceſtors, and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he hath in the hundred, time out of mind had a leet. Co. Lit. 125.

There may be a preſcription for a court to hold pleas of all actions, and for any ſum or damage, and it will be good. Jenk. Cent. 327. If a court held by preſcription is granted and confirmed by letters patent; this doth not deſtroy the preſcription, but it is ſaid the court may be held by preſcription as before. 2 Rol. Abr. 271.

A grant may enure as a confirmation of a preſcription; and the preſcription continue unaltered by a new charter, &c. where the charter is not contrary to the preſcription. Moor 818, 830. But in ſome caſes it is intended, that a preſcription ſhall begin by grant; and as to preſcriptions in general, the law ſuppoſes a deſcent, or purchaſe originally. Cro. Eliz. 709. *Co. Preſentation, (Preſentatio) Is properly the act of a patron, offering his clerk to the biſhop of the dioceſe, to be inſtituted in a church or benefice of his gift, which is void. 2 Lil. Abr. 351.

Anciently preſentation was ſaid to be in the biſhop of common right, till ſince it has been adjudged to the laity, to encourage them to build and endow churches; and now if the patron neglects to preſent to the church, then this right returns to the biſhop by lapſe, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr.

An alien born cannot preſent to a benefice in his own right; for if he purchaſe an advowſon, and the church becomes void, the King ſhall preſent after office found that the patron is an alien. 2 Nelſ. 1290. And by ſtatute no alien ſhall purchaſe a benefice in this realm; nor occupy the ſame, without the King's licence, on pain of a præmunire. 7 R. 2. c. 12.

Papiſts are diſabled to preſent to benefices, and the univerſities are to preſent, &c. But a Popiſh recuſant may grant away his patronage to another, who may make preſentation, where there is no fraud. Stat. 3 Jac. 1. cap. 5. ſect. 18, 19. 1 W. & M. c. 26. 12 Ann. c. 14. 1 Jon. 19. But by 11 Geo. 2. cap. 17. ſect. 5. Grants of advowſons by Papiſts are void, unleſs made for a valuable conſideration to a proteſtant purchaſer, and deviſes of advowſons, by papiſts, are alſo void.

All perſons who have ability to purchaſe or grant, have likewiſe ability to preſent to vacant benefices: but a dean and chapter cannot preſent the dean; nor may a clergyman who is patron preſent himſelf, though he may pray to be admitted by the ordinary, and the admiſſion ſhall be good.

An infant may preſent, becauſe guardians have not power to do it in right of the heir; a guardian in ſocage cannot preſent to a church, he being not to meddle with any thing, but for what he may account, which he cannot do for a preſentation, for he is to take nothing for it: If a feme covert hath title to preſent, the preſentation ought to be in the name of huſband and wife, and not by her alone; or he may preſent in his own name during coverture: Coparceners are but as one patron, and ought to agree in the preſentation of one perſon; if they cannot agree, the eldeſt ſhall preſent firſt alone, and the biſhop is obliged to admit her clerk, and afterwards the others in their order ſhall prefer their clerks; jointenants and tenants in common muſt regularly join in preſentation, and if either preſent alone, the biſhop may refuſe his clerk, as he may alſo the clerk preſented by the major part of them; but if there are two jointenants of the next avoidance, one may preſent the other, and two jointenants may preſent a third, but not a ſtranger.

The next preſentation was granted to four perſons, & eorum cuilibet conjunctim & diviſim, &c. And the church becoming void, one of the grantees alone preſented one of the others; and it was adjudged, that this preſentation by one was good.

When an aggregate corporation preſents, it muſt be under their common ſeal, and by the true name of their corporation. The King may preſent by letters patent under the Great Seal, and by theſe words, viz. Damus & concedimus; for this amounts to a warrant for the biſhop to admit the clerk; it is ſaid the King may preſent by word, or in writing under any ſeal, who cannot do any other legal act but by matter of record; and, in the opinion of ſome, the King may preſent to a church by his letter ſent to the ordinary to inſtitute and induct ſuch a one his clerk to the living; but the moſt ſecure way is to have a preſentation under the Great Seal. If a rector is made biſhop, the King ſhall preſent to the rectory, unleſs he grant to the biſhop, before he is conſecrated, a diſpenſation to hold it with his biſhoprick; and if an incumbent of a church is made a biſhop, and the King preſents or grants that he ſhould hold the church in commendam, which is quaſi a preſentation, a grantee of the next avoidance or preſentation hath loſt it, the King having the next preſentation. If the King preſent to a church by lapſe, where he ought to preſent pleno jure, and as patron of the church, ſuch a preſentation is not good; for the King is deceived in his grant, by miſtaking his title, which may be prejudicial to him; the preſenting by lapſe intitling only that preſentation: The Lord Chancellor preſents to the King's benefices under 20*l*. &c. 2 Rol. Abr. 354. 3 Inſt. 156. Co. Lit. 186. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1288, 1290. 2 Lil. 351.

The King may repeal a preſentation, before his clerk is inducted; and this he may do by granting the preſentation to another, which, without any farther ſignification of his mind, is a revocation of the firſt preſentation. Dyer 290, 360.

A patron may revoke his preſentation before inſtitution, but not afterwards; a preſentation being no more than a power given to the ordinary to admit the clerk, and if the patron die before induction, his preſentation is determined. But this was in the caſe of the King; for in the caſe of a common perſon, if he die after inſtitution, and before induction; the preſentation is not determined by his death. Latch. 191. Dyer 348.

If two patrons preſent their clerks to a church, the biſhop is to determine who ſhall be admitted by a jus patronatus, &c. And two patrons pretending a title to preſent, one of them preſented W. R. but the biſhop refuſed inſtitution; whereupon he ſued in the court of audience of the Archbiſhop, and had an inhibition to that biſhop, and on that ſuit he obtained an inſtitution by the archbiſhop, on which he was inducted; afterwards the biſhop, who was inhibited, granted inſtitution upon the preſentation of the other patron, and his clerk was likewiſe inducted; and thereupon W. R. who had been inſtituted and inducted before, on a motion procured a prohibition, becauſe by the firſt induction the incumbency was determined: So that quoad the incumbence, the prohibition was granted, but not as to the contempt of the ordinary after he had been inhibited. Moor 499.

The father was incumbent, and after his death the patron preſented his ſon, who was refuſed by the biſhop, becauſe by the Canon law Filius non poteſt ſuccedere patri in eadem eccleſia, and the patron preſented another perſon; then the ſon who was firſt preſented, obtained a diſpenſation non obſtante the canon; but the ordinary admitted the ſecond preſentee, who was alſo inſtituted and inducted; thereupon the ſon ſued him and the biſhop in the Spiritual court, but a prohibition was granted. Latch 191.

A clerk may be refuſed by the biſhop, if the patron is excommunicate; or if the clerk is not perſona idonea, which includes ability of learning, and honeſty in converſation, &c. But in a quare impedit brought againſt the biſhop for refuſal of a clerk, he muſt ſhew the cauſe for his refuſal ſpecially and directly; and becauſe the clerk is of ill life, or a ſchiſmatic in general, is not ſufficient, without ſhewing what crimes, or ſort of ſchiſm he has been guilty of: And the temporal court then will judge whether the cauſe be juſt or not; and if the party denies the ſame, the court may write to the metropolitan to examine the matter, and certify; and tho' the matter be of a ſpiritual nature, it ſhall be tried by a jury: For whether the cauſe be temporal or ſpiritual, the examination of the biſhop concludes not the clerk; he is judge of the ability, but not the ultimate judge: but in caſe of refuſal for inſufficiency in learning, it hath been adjudged, that the ordinary is not accountable to any temporal judge; and that in litteratura minus ſufficiens, &c. is a good plea, without ſetting forth the kind of learning by degrees of it. 5 Rep. 58. 2 Inſt. 631. 3 Lev. 311. Show. 88. Wood's Inſt. 32, 33. That the preſentee hath a benefice already, is no good cauſe of refuſal, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 355.

If the biſhop refuſes to admit the clerk preſented, he muſt give notice of his refuſal, with the cauſe of it forthwith; and on ſuch notice the patron muſt preſent another clerk, within ſix months from the avoidance, if he thinks the objection againſt his firſt clerk contains ſufficient cauſe of refuſal; but if not, he may bring his quare impedit againſt the biſhop. 2 Rol. Abr. 364. And where a church becomes void by deprivation by the Canon law, or reſignation, the patron muſt have notice from the ordinary, to preſent another perſon: But if the church becomes void by the act of God, as death of the incumbent; or by creation, or ceſſion, &c. the patron is bound to take notice himſelf of the avoidance, and to preſent, &c. Wood's Inſt. 154.

If a defendant, or any ſtranger, preſents a clerk pending a quare impedit, and afterwards the plaintiff obtains judgment, he cannot by virtue of that judgment remove him who was thus preſented; but he is to bring a ſcire facias againſt him to ſhew cauſe quare executionem non habet; and then, if it be found that he had no title, he ſhall be amoved.

The way to prevent ſuch a preſentation, is to take out a ne admittas to the biſhop; and then the writ quare incumbravit lies, by virtue whereof the incumbent ſhall be amoved, and put to his quare impedit, let his title be what it will; but if a ne admittas be not taken out, and another incumbent ſhould come in by good title pendente lite, he ſhall hold it. Sid. 93. Cro. Jac. 93.

A man muſt ſet forth a preſentation in himſelf, or thoſe under whom he claims, in a quare impedit; and it ought to be alledged in him who hath the inheritance: And when ſix months paſs pending the writ, &c. by the diſturbance of any one, ſo that the biſhop hath a right to preſent by lapſe, damages ſhall be recovered by two years value of the church, if the perſon loſe his preſentation; and if he recovers his preſentation within the ſix months, damages to half a year's value, &c. 2 Inſt. 362. Vaugh. 7, 57. Cro. Eliz. 518. 13 Ed. 1. c. 5.

Where a perſon gets the fee to his preſentation, which is his title, he muſt in his declaration alledge the preſentation to be tempore pacis, or it may be intended to be tempore belli, and then it is no title; but where the bare preſentation is not his title, but only in purſuance of a former right, in ſuch caſe he may alledge it generally: As for inſtance; where he declares that A. B. was ſeiſed of the manor of D. as of fee, to which an advowſon was appendant, and that being ſo ſeiſed he preſented W. R. and afterwards granted the next avoidance to the plaintiff; this is good, for plaintiff ſhews a precedent right, and doth not make the preſentation itſelf his title. 1 Mod. 130. 2 Mod. 183. 3 Salk. 280.

If a church becomes void in the life-time of a biſhop, he cannot deviſe the next preſentation; but if the biſhop, or any incumbent of a church, hath the advowſon in fee, and then either of them deviſeth, that on the next avoidance his executor, ſhall preſent; this is good, tho' they deviſe the inheritance to another. Dyer 285.

When a biſhop hath a preſentation in right of his biſhoprick, and dies, neither his executor, nor heir, ſhall have the void turn; but the King, in whoſe hands are the temporalties, and he hath a right to preſent on an avoidance after the ſeizure, on death of the biſhop; tho' where an incumbent was ſeiſed of the advowſon in fee, and died; on a queſtion who ſhould preſent, either his heir or executor, the advowſon not deſcending to the heir till after the death of his anceſtor, and immediately upon his death the church was void, therefore that avoidance was veſted in the executor; it was adjudged, that the heir ſhall preſent, becauſe the deſcent to him, and the avoidance to the executor, happened at one and the ſame inſtant, and where two titles concur in an inſtant, the elder title ſhall be preferred. 3 Lev. 47.

A grant was made of the next preſentation to a church, the grantee died, and then the church became void; and it was held, that the executor of the grantee ſhall have the preſentation as a chattel. Glanvil, lib. 6. c 7. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1286. But in a quare impedit, defendant pleaded, that the patron granted the next preſentation to B. B. who died, and made his executor, who preſented the defendant; iſſue was taken upon non conceſſit, and the jury found, that the patron granted the preſentation to B. B. during his life, and that he died before the church became void; adjudged that this was not an abſolute grant of the next preſentation, but reſtrained during the life of the grantee; wherefore it ſhall not go to the executor, unleſs the church became void in the life-time of the teſtator. Cro. Car. 363.

Tenant in tail of an advowſon, and his ſon and heir, joined in a grant of the next preſentation, tenant in tail died; this grant was held void as to the ſon and heir, becauſe he had nothing in the advowſon at the time that he joined with his father in the grant. Hob. 45.

The right of preſenting to the next avoidance, may be deviſed by will to any perſon; and by deed, the next avoidance of a church may be granted, where the church is then full; alſo whilſt a church is void, the next avoidance that ſhall happen, or the inheritance of the advowſon may be granted away, and by deed or grant, the right of preſenting will paſs: but the void turn itſelf is not grantable by any common perſon, tho' it may be granted by the King, and be good; for it is a meer ſpiritual thing annexed to the perſon of the patron, and during the time of the vacation it is a thing in right and in action, the fruit and execution of the advowſon, not the advowſon itſelf. Cro. Jac. 371. Clergym. Law 154.

As a void turn is not grantable; ſo if two have a grant made to them of a next avoidance, and after the church is void, one releaſe all his right and title which he had in the advowſon and preſentation to his companion, who preſents to the church, this preſentation is void; becauſe after the avoidance, the intereſt was attached in both, and both had a power to preſent, which could no more be releaſed by one to the other, than it could be granted in that manner, being but a right, and not a chattel IN POSSESSION. But a releaſe in this caſe may be good, if it be made before the church is void; and the party to whom made may preſent, &c. 1 And. 223. Cro. Car. 173. Moor 467.

If a preſentation itſelf bears date whilſt the church is full of another clerk, it is void: And where two or more have a title to preſent by turn, one of them preſents, his clerk is admitted, inſtituted and inducted, and afterwards deprived, he ſhall not preſent again, but that preſentation ſhall ſerve his turn: tho' where the admiſſion and inſtitution of his clerk is void, there the turn ſhall not be ſerved; as if after induction he neglects to read the thirty-nine articles, &c. his inſtitution is void by the Stat. 13 Eliz. and the patron may preſent again. F. N. B. 33. 5 Rep. 102.

The right of preſenting to a church, may paſs from one ſeiſed of the ſame by the patron's acknowledging of a ſtatute, &c. which being extended, if the church becomes void, during the conuſee's eſtate, the conuſee may preſent. Owen 49.

Every church living is to be given and received by preſentation, collation, &c. And wherever a writ of quare impedit, or right of advowſon will lie for any man on a diſturbance; there he hath a right to the preſentation for that time at leaſt. 1 Shep. Abr. 240, 241.

Where the patron of a church hath an eſtate in the manor or other thing to which it is appendant, or has it in groſs for life or years only; if the church becomes void during his eſtate, he may preſent to it: Or he may grant the next avoidance to another for a term; and this will be good, if it happen in the time. But if one be diſſeiſed of his manor, and the diſſeiſor die ſeiſed, and after the church become void; in this caſe the diſſeiſee cannot preſent till he hath recontinued the manor, but before the dying ſeiſed he might do it. Co. Lit. 120. 8 Rep. 145. Dyer 29. Plowd. 500.

A preſentation by a perſon who had not right, at Common law, put the rightful patron out of poſſeſſion, and obliged him to bring the writ of right of advowſon, &c. And preſentment by uſurpation, and admiſſion upon it, gains the fee to the preſentor, till he be evicted by action. 6 Rep. 30. 1 And. 300. Yel. 91.

One may not make a deputy to preſent for him: And yet a preſentation by a proctor is ſaid to be good, as if done by the party himſelf. F. N. B. 35. If a man preſent in time of war, the law hath ſuch regard to the original act, viz. the preſentation, that all which follows thereon is void. 6 Ed. 3. 41. 2 Rep. 93.

Where a common perſon is patron, he may preſent by parol; as well as by writing to the biſhop. Co. Lit. 120. A preſentation doth not carry with it the formality of a deed; but it is in the nature of a letter miſſive, by which the clerk is offered to the biſhop; and it paſſeth no intereſt, as a grant doth, being no more than a recommendation of a clerk to the ordinary to be admitted. Young Clergym. Lawyer 17, 18. But where a plaintiff declared upon a grant of the next preſentation, and on oyer of the deed it appeared to be only a letter written by the patron to the father of the plaintiff, that he had given his ſon the next preſentation; adjudged, that It would not paſs by ſuch letter, without a formal deed. Owen 47.

Where the crown has a right to preſent on promoting the incumbent to a biſhoprick, it is not neceſſary to be done during the life of the promotee. 2 Strange 841. See Black. Com. 1 V. 389. 2 V. 23. As to Preſentative Advowſons, ſee ib. 2 V. 22.

TO all to whom theſe preſents ſhall come, A. B. of, &c. the true and undoubted patron of the rectory or pariſh church of D. in the county and dioceſe of, &c. ſend greeting. Know ye, that the ſaid A. B. for divers good cauſes and conſiderations him thereunto moving, hath given, granted and confirmed, and by theſe preſents doth, for him and his heirs, give, grant and confirm unto C. D. of, &c. his executors, adminiſtrators and aſſigns, the firſt and next advowſon, preſentation, free diſpoſition and right of patronage, of and to the parſonage, rectory, or pariſh church of D. aforeſaid, with all its appurtenances, with full power and authority to and for the ſaid C. D. his executors, adminiſtrators and aſſigns, to preſent a learned and fit perſon to the ſaid parſonage, rectory, or pariſh church, with all its rights and appurtenances, whenſoever the ſame ſhall firſt and next happen to become void, by the death, reſignation, ceſſion, or deprivation of E. F. the preſent incumbent, or otherwiſe however; and to do and perform all and every other act and acts, thing and things whatſoever, in order to the ſame, in as full and ample manner, to all intents and purpoſes, as the ſaid A. B. or his heirs might, or hereafter could have done, if this preſent grant had not been made. In witneſs, &c.

Right of preſentation may be forfeited in ſeveral caſes: As by attainder of the patron, or by outlawry, and then the King ſhall preſent; and if the outlawry be reverſed, where the advowſon is forfeited by the outlawry, and the church becomes void after, the preſentation is veſted in the crown; but if at the time of the outlawry the church was void, then the preſentation is forfeited as a chattel, and on reverſing the ſame, the party ſhall be reſtored to it. By appropriation without licence from the crown, right of preſentation may be forfeited; tho' the inheritance in this caſe is not forfeited, only the King ſhall have the preſentation in nature of a diſtreſs, till the party hath paid a fine for his contempt. By alienation in fee of the advowſon, by a grantee for life of the next avoidance, a preſentation is forfeited; and after ſuch alienation the grantor may preſent, but then he muſt enter for the forfeiture of the grantee in the life-time of the incumbent, to determine his eſtate before the preſentation veſts in him on the incumbent's death. And by ſimony it may be likewiſe forfeited and loſt, where any perſon for money, &c. preſent to a benefice. Moor 269. Plowd. 299. 2 Roll. Abr. 352. Stat. 31 Eliz. cap. 6. ſect. 5. Preſentee, The clerk preſented to a church by the patron. In our ſtatutes there is mention of the King's preſentee, that is, he whom the King preſents to a benefice. 13 R. 2. c. 1.

Preſentment, Is a mere denunciation of jurors, or ſome officers, &c. (without any information) of an offence inquirable in the court whereto it is preſented. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 4. c. 5. Or preſentment is an information made by the jury in a court, before a judge who hath authority to puniſh an offence: It is that which a grand jury finds and preſents to the court, without any bill or indictment delivered; and it is afterwards reduced into the form of an indictment. 2 Inſt. 739.

The preſentment is drawn up in Engliſh by the jury, in a ſhort note, for inſtructions to draw the indictment by; and differs from an indictment, in that an indictment is drawn up at large, and brought ingroſſed to the grand jury to find. 2 Lill. Abr. 353.

There are preſentments of juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions, of offences againſt ſtatutes, in order to their puniſhment in ſuperior courts; and preſentments taken before commiſſioners of ſewers, &c. But a preſentment of commiſſioners of ſewers was quaſhed, becauſe it did not appear in the preſentment by what authority the commiſſioners did ſit who took the preſentment, or that any of them were of the quorum, as directed by ſtatute. Hill. 1649. Preſentments are made in courts leet and courts baron, before ſtewards: and in the latter of ſurrenders, grants, &c. Alſo by conſtables, churchwardens, ſurveyors of the highways, &c. of things belonging to their offices. See Black. Com. 2 V. 369. 4 V. 298.

Preſident of the Council, Relates to the function of the perſon, and is the fourth great officer of ſtate: He is as ancient as the reign of King John; and hath ſometimes been called Principalis Conſiliarius, and other times Capitalis Conſiliarius.

The office of Preſident of the Council was ever granted by letters patent under the Great Seal durante bene placito; and this officer is to attend on the King, to propoſe buſineſs at the council table, and report to his Majeſty the tranſactions there: Alſo he may aſſociate the Lord Chancellor, Treaſurer and Privy Seal, at naming of ſheriffs; and all other acts limited by any ſtatute, to be done by them. 21 H. 8. c. 20. Preſſing, for ſea-ſervice. In time of war, the King has power to impreſs ſeamen; tho' he ought not to impriſon them. Comber. 340. But watermen withdrawing themſelves during the time of preſſing, ſhall be liable to impriſonment, &c. Stat. 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 16.

Where a man receives preſs-money to ſerve the King, and is delivered over to a captain; (not a common preſs-maſter) if he runs away without licence, it is felony, having benefit of clergy, by the 7 Hen. 7. cap. 1. Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 678.

See Navy.

It is not improper to obſerve, that the power of impreſſing men for the ſea ſervice by the King's commiſſion, has been a matter of diſpute, and ſubmitted to with great reluctance, tho' (as obſerved by Blackſtone 1 V. 418.) it hath been very clearly and learnedly ſhewn, by Sir Michael Foſter, that the practice of impreſſing and granting powers to the admiralty, for that purpoſe, is of very antient date, and hath been uniformly continued by a regular ſeries of precedents to the preſent time: whence he concludes it to be part of the Common law. See Foſter's Reports, fo. 154. Broadfoot's caſe.

Preſt, Is uſed for a duty in money, to be paid by the ſheriff on his account, in the Exchequer, or for money left, or remaining in his hands. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 4.

Preſt-money, Is ſo called from the French word preſt, that is, promptus expeditus, for that it binds thoſe who receive it, to be ready at all times appointed, being meant commonly of ſoldiers. 18 H. 6. 19. 7 H. 7. 1. 3 H. 8. 5. and 2 Ed. 6. 2.

Preſumption, (Preſumptio) Is a ſuppoſition, opinion or belief previouſly formed; and is of three ſorts; 1. Violent, which is many times a full proof; as if one be killed in a houſe, and a man is ſeen to come out of the houſe with a bloody ſword, and no other perſon was at that time in the houſe; this, tho' but preſumption, is as a proof.

2. Probable, which hath but a ſmall effect.

3 Levis, ſeu temeraria, which is of no prevalence at all: So in caſe of a charter of feoffment, if all the witneſſes to the deed be dead; the violent preſumption, which ſtands for a proof, is continual and quiet poſſeſſion. Co. on Lit. lib. 1. c. 1. ſect. 1.

Præſumptio ſtat in dubio, it is doubted of, yet accounted veritatis comes, quatenus in contrarium nulla eſt probatio, ut regula ſe habet, ſtabitur præſumptio donec probetur in contrarium. Cowell.

If defendant pleads payment to a bond, and it appears that the debt is long ſtanding by the bond, and hath not been demanded, nor intereſt paid for many years, it ſhall be preſumed that the money is paid, tho' the plaintiff hath the bond in his cuſtody: Alſo if a rent be behind and in arrear for twenty years, and the landlord gives a receipt for the laſt year that is due, all the reſt is preſumed to be paid, &c. Co. Lit. 6, 375. Wood's Inſt. 599.

Where many houſes are let by one leaſe, the court will preſume that the leſſee is in poſſeſſion of them all, if he be in poſſeſſion of any one of them, and the contrary doth not appear to the court: So in other caſes, tho' preſumption is what may be doubted of, yet it ſhall be accounted truth, if the contrary be not proved. 2 Lill. Abr. 354. But no preſumptions ought to be admitted againſt the preſumptions of law, and wrong ſhall never be preſumed. Co. Lit. 232, 273.

If the eldeſt ſon be beyond ſea at the death of the anceſtor, and the youngeſt enters into the land, he is not accounted in law a diſſeiſor; becauſe the law preſumes, that he preſerves the poſſeſſion for his brother; but if on his brother's return he keeps him out of poſſeſſion, then the law looks on him as a diſſeiſor. Lat. 68.

Where the law intruſts perſons with the execution of a power, the court ought to give credit to them in the execution of that power; tho' if they make a falſe return whereby the party and juſtice are abuſed, they may be puniſhed. 12 Mod. 382; See Black. Com. 3 V. 371.

Preſumptio, Was anciently taken for intruſion, or the unlawful ſeizing of any thing. Leg. Hen. 1. c. 11.

Preſumptive Evidence of Felony, Should be admitted cautiouſly; for the law holds, that it is better that ten guilty perſons eſcape, than that one innocent ſuffer. And Sir Matthew Hale in particular lays down two rules, moſt prudent and neceſſary to be obſerved:

1. Never to convict a man for ſtealing the goods of a perſon unknown, meerly becauſe he will give no account how he came by them, unleſs an actual felony be proved of ſuch goods: And

2. Never to convict any perſon of murder or manſlaughter, till at leaſt the body be found dead; on account of two inſtances he mentions, where perſons were executed for the murder of others, who were then alive, but miſſing. 2 Hal. P. C. 290.

Preſumptive Heirs, Are ſuch, who, if the anceſtor ſhould die immediately, would in the preſent circumſtance of things be his heirs; but whoſe right of inheritance may be defeated by the contingency of ſome nearer heir being born: As a brother, or nephew, whoſe preſumptive ſucceſſion may be deſtroyed by the birth of a child; or a daughter, whoſe preſent hopes may be hereafter cut off by the birth of a ſon. Nay, even if the eſtate hath deſcended, by the death of the owner, to ſuch brother, or nephew, or daughter; in the former caſe the eſtate ſhall be deveſted and taken away by the birth of a poſthumous child; and, in the latter, it ſhall alſo be totally deveſted by the birth of a poſthumous ſon. Black. Com. 2 V. 208.

Pretended Titles. No one ſhall ſell or purchaſe any pretended right or title to land, unleſs the vendor hath received the profits thereof for one whole year before ſuch grant, or hath been in actual poſſeſſion of the land, or of the reverſion or remainder; on pain that both purchaſer and vendor ſhall each forfeit the value of ſuch land to the King and the proſecutor. This offence relates chiefly to the commencement of civil ſuits. 32 Hen. 8. c. 9. Black. Com. 4 V. 135.

Pretenſed Right (Jus Prætenſum) Is where one is in poſſeſſion of land, and another who is out of poſſeſſion claims and ſues for it; here the pretenſed right or title is ſaid to be in him who ſo claims and ſues for the ſame. See Mod. Caſ. 302.

Pretium Sepulchri, Is applied to thoſe goods which accrue to the church when a corpſe is buried. Iriſh Can. lib. 19. c. 6.

Price. Things are to be ſold at reaſonable prices: And, juſtices in corporations, &c. may ſet the price of victuals and other things, by ſtatute 23 Ed. 3. c. 6. 3 H. 8. c. 8. See Black. Com. 2 V. 446, 454.

Pride-gavel, (from prid. the laſt ſyllable of lamprid, and gavel, a rent or tribute) In the manor of Rodeley in the county of Glóceſter is a rent paid to the lord, by certain tenants, in duty and acknowledgment to him for the privilege of fiſhing for lampreys or lamprids in the river Severn. Tayl. Hiſt. Gavelk. 112.

Prieſts, In general ſignification, are any miniſters of a church; but in our law, this word is particularly uſed for miniſters of the church of Rome. Prieſts ſaying maſs forfeit 200 marks, by Stat. 23 Eliz. c. 1. And perſons apprehending a Romiſh prieſt, ſaying maſs, have 100 l. from the ſheriff of the county, to be paid within four months after conviction of the offence, &c. And ſuch prieſts, &c. keeping ſchools, are liable to perpetual impriſonment. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 4. See Jeſuits, Papiſts, Recuſants, Rome, and Black. Com. 1 V. 388.

Primage, Is a duty at the water-ſide, due to the maſter and mariners of a ſhip; to the maſter for the uſe of his cables and ropes, to diſcharge the goods of the merchant; and to the mariners for loading and unloading in any port or haven; it is uſually about 12 d. per tun, or ſix-pence per pack or bale, according to cuſtom. Merch. Dict. See 32 H. 8. c. 14.

Primer Fine, On ſuing out the writ or præcipe, called a writ of covenant, there is due to the King, by ancient prerogative, a primer fine, or a noble for every five marks of land ſued for; that is, one tenth of the annual value. Black. Com. 2 V. 350.

Primicerius, The firſt of any degree of men; ſometimes it ſignifies the nobility. Primicerios totius Angliæ were the nobility of England. Mon. 1 tom. p. 838.

Primier ſeiſin, (Prima ſeiſina) The firſt poſſeſſion, or ſeiſin was heretofore uſed as a branch of the King's prerogative, whereby he had the firſt poſſeſſion, that is, the entire profits for a year of all the lands and tenements, whereof his tenant (who held of him in capite) died ſeiſed in his demeſne as of fee, his heir being then at full age, until he do homage, or, if under, until he were of age. Staundf. Prærog. cap. 3. and Bracton, lib. 4. tract. 3. c. 1. But all the charges ariſing by primier ſeiſins are taken away by 12 Car. 2. c. 24. See Black. Com. 2 V. 66, 88. 4 V. 411.

Primier Sergeant, Is the King's firſt Serjeant at Law.

Primo beneficio, The firſt benefice in the King's gift, &c. See Beneficio.

Primogeniture, (Primogenitura) The title of an elder brother in right of his birth: The reaſon of which Co. upon Lit. ſays, is, Qui prior eſt tempore, potior eſt jure; affirming moreover, That, in King Alfred*'s time, knights fees deſcended to the* eldeſt ſon; becauſe, by the diviſion of ſuch fees between males, the defence of the realm might be weakened. And Doderidge in his treatiſe of nobility ſaith, (pag. 119.) it was anciently ordained, That all knights fees ſhould come unto the eldeſt ſon by ſucceſſion of heritage, whereby he, ſucceeding his anceſtors in the whole inheritance, might be the better enabled to maintain the wars againſt the King's enemies, or his lords: And that the ſocage ſhould be partible among the male children, to enable them to increaſe into many families, for the better furtherance in, and increaſe of huſbandry. Cowell. and Leg. Alfred Dodd. Treat. Nobil. 119. See Black. Com. 1 V. 194. 2 V. 214. 4 V. 414.

Prince, (Princeps) Is ſometimes taken at large for the King himſelf; but more properly for the King's eldeſt ſon, who is called Prince of Wales.

It it ſaid by ſome writers, that the King's eldeſt ſon is Prince of Wales by nativity; but others ſay, that he is born Duke of Cornwall, and afterwards created Prince of Wales, tho' from the day of his birth he is ſtiled Prince of Wales, a title originally given by Edward 1. And all his titles are, Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall, and Earl of Cheſter.

Before Edw. 2. who was the firſt Prince of Wales, and born at Carnarvan in that principality, (his mother being ſent there big with child by Edward 1. to appeaſe the tumultuous ſpirit of the Welch) the eldeſt ſon of the King was called Lord Prince; but Prince was a name of dignity long before that time in England. Staundf. Prærog. cap. 22. 75. See 27 H. 8. c. 26. and 28 H. 8. 3. And Stow's Annals, p. 303. But Prince was a name of dignity long before that time in England; for in a charter of King Offa, after the biſhops had ſubſcribed their names, we read, Brordanus Patritius, Binnanus princeps; and afterwards the dukes ſubſcribed their names. And in a charter of King Edgar in Mon. Ang. tom. 3. pag. 302. Ego Edgarus Rex rogatus ab epiſcopo meo Deorivolſe, & principe meo Alfredo, &c. And in Matt. Paris, pag. 155. Ego Halden princeps Regis pro viribus aſſenſum præbeo, & ego Turketillus dux concedo.

As Duke of Cornwall, and likewiſe Earl of Cheſter, the Prince of Wales is to appoint the ſheriffs, and other officers in thoſe counties, by 1 Geo. 2. c. 5. The Prince of Wales, beſides the principality of Wales, dutchy of Cornwall, &c. has alſo a revenue, ſettled on him by parliament. See the Table to the Statutes. See alſo Black. Com. 1 V. 225. 4 V. 81.

Principal, (Principalium) Is variouſly uſed in our law; as an heir loom, &c.

The word principal, was alſo ſometimes uſed for a mortuary, or corſe-preſent——Item lego equum meum vocatum le Bay-Gelding, ut offeratur ante corpus meum in die ſepulturæ meæ, nomine Principalii. Ult. volun. Johannis Marclefield. 9 Hen. 5.

In Urchenfield, in the county of Hereford, certain principals, as the beſt beaſt, the beſt bed, the beſt table, &c. paſs to the eldeſt child, and are not liable to partition. Alſo the chief perſon in ſome of the inns of Chancery is called principal of the houſe. Cowell.

Principal and acceſſary. The principal is the perſon who actually commits a crime; and the acceſſary he who is aſſiſting in the doing thereof. 2 Lill. Abr. 355. And if one wilfully hold a man in his arms, whilſt another kills him, he is a principal. 9 Rep. 67.

A man is preſent, and moves a perſon to kill another, who doth ſo; by this he is as much a principal as he who killeth the perſon: And all thoſe who come in company in any place or aſſembly, where any murder, robbery, or felony is committed, if they come there for that cauſe, are principals, altho' they do nothing. Staundf. P. C. cap. 45. Fitz. Coron. 314, 350. Poult. 138. But if one happen to be preſent when another is killed, or a felony done, and he came not in company of the felons, nor is of their confederacy; he will not be a principal or acceſſary. Fitz. Coron. 314, 395.

No man can regularly be a principal in felony, without being preſent, unleſs it be in caſe of wilful poiſoning, wherein if the perſons intended or any others take the poiſon in the abſence of him who lays it, he is a principal. Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 615.

In the higheſt offences, as in treaſons, &c. all are principals; ſo in the loweſt, ſuch as riots, forcible entries, and other treſpaſſes, there are no acceſſaries. Co. Lit. 71.

By the Common law, if a principal be pardoned before judgment, or hath his clergy, the acceſſary may not be tried; but if it be after attainder the acceſſary ſhall be arraigned: And where the principal dies before attainted, or is acquitted by verdict, &c. the acceſſary ſhall be diſcharged: Alſo if the principal appears not, tho' the acceſſary may be put to anſwer, he ſhall not be tried till the principal is attainted, &c. 4 Rep. 43 H. P. C. 47. Dalt. 339. But this is altered by ſtat. 1 Ann. cap. 9.

Whatever will make a man an acceſſary before in felony, will make him a principal in high treaſon and treſpaſs; as battery, riot, forcible entry, and even in forgery and petit larceny. Therefore, wherever a man commands another to commit a treſpaſs, who afterwards commits it in purſuance of ſuch command, he ſeems by neceſſary conſequence to be as guilty of it, as if he had done it himſelf; from whence it follows, that being in judgment of law a principal offender, he may be tried and found guilty, before any trial of the perſon who actually did the fact. 2 Hawk. P. C. 310.

It ſeems agreed, that whoever agrees to a treſpaſs on lands or goods, done to his uſe, thereby becomes a principal in it; but that no one can become a principal in treſpaſs on the perſon of a man by any ſuch agreement: alſo it ſeems agreed, that no one ſhall be adjudged a principal in any common treſpaſs, or inferior crime of the like nature, for barely receiving, comforting and concealing the offender, tho' he knew him to have been guilty, and that there is a warrant out againſt him, which by reaſon of ſuch concealment cannot be executed. And if he cannot be puniſhed as a principal, it is certain that he cannot be puniſhed as an acceſſary; becauſe, in ſuch offences, all who are puniſhed as partakers of the guilt of him who did the fact, muſt be puniſhed as principals in it, or not at all. Yet if a man knowing there is a warrant againſt ſuch offender; adviſe him to abſent himſelf, perhaps he may be indictable for a contempt of the law in hindering the due courſe of juſtice. 2 Hawk. P. C. 311. See Acceſſary, and 2 Hawk. P. C. 311—326. and Black. Com. 4 V. 34.

Principal challenge, A ſpecies of the challenge to jurors for ſuſpicion or partiality. And takes place, where the cauſe aſſigned carries with it prima facie evident marks of ſuſpicion, either of malice or favor. For the ſeveral cauſes of this challenge. Vide Black. Com. 3 V. 363.

Prior, Was firſt in dignity next to the Abbot, or the chief of a convent, &c. And there was a Lord Prior of S

St. John's of Jeruſalem. 26 H. 8. cap. 2. See Black. Com. 1 V. 155.

Priors aliens, (priores alieni) Were certain religious men, born in France and Normandy, governors of religious houſes erected for foreigners here in England; but were ſuppreſſed by Henry 5. and afterwards their livings were given to other monaſteries and houſes of learning, and eſpecially towards the erecting of the King's colleges, at Cambridge and Eaton. 2 Inſt. 584. See Stow's Annals, pag. 582. and 1 Hen. 5. c. 7.

Priority, (Prioritas) Is an antiquity of tenure, in compariſon of another leſs ancient. Old Nat. Br. 94. So, to hold by poſteriority, is uſed in Staundf. Prærog. cap. 2, 11. And Cromp. in his Juriſd. fol. 117. uſeth this word in the ſame ſignification. The lord of the priority ſhall have the cuſtody of the body, &c. and fol. 120. If the tenant hold by priority of one, and by poſteriority of another, &c. To which effect, ſee alſo F. N. B. 142. See Poſteriority.

Priority of debts and ſuits. A prior ſuit depending may be pleaded in abatement of a ſubſequent action or proſecution for the ſame matter.

A prior mortgage ought to be firſt paid off; and debts firſt due ſhould be firſt ſatisfied; for as the firſt creditor advances his money before his debtor is incumbred, it is but reaſonable he ſhould be paid his debt before the diſcharge of the ſubſequent incumbrances: but debts firſt due muſt likewiſe be firſt proſecuted; otherwiſe in ſome caſes priority will not be allowed. Comp. Attorn. 120.

There is no priority of time, in judgments; for the judgement firſt executed ſhall be firſt paid.

Wherever any ſuit on a penal ſtatute may be ſaid to be actually depending, it may be pleaded in abatement of a ſubſequent proſecution, being EXPRESSLY averred to be for the ſame offence. Neither will it be any exception to ſuch a plea, that the offence in the ſubſequent proſecution is laid on a day different from that in the former. Neither doth a miſtake in ſuch a plea of the very day, whereon the ſuit pleaded as prior was commenced, ſeem to be material on the iſſue of nul tiel record, if it appear in truth to have been commenced before the other, and for the ſame matter.

And if two informations be exhibited on the very ſame day, it ſeems that they may mutually abate one another, becauſe there is no priority to attach the right of the ſuit in one informer, more than in the other. Alſo it ſeems, that an information or bill the ſame day that they are filed, may be ſo far ſaid to be depending before any proceſs ſued on them, that they may be pleaded in abatement of any other ſuit on the ſame ſtatute. And from the ſame reaſon it ſeems alſo, that a writ of debt may be ſo pleaded in abatement of any other ſuit on the ſame ſtatute. And from the ſame reaſon it ſeems alſo, that a writ of debt may be ſo pleaded after it is returned; becauſe then it ſeems to be agreed, that it may be properly ſaid to be depending; and whether it may not alſo be ſo pleaded before it be returned, ſeems queſtionable; becauſe, according to ſome opinions, a writ may be ſaid to be depending as ſoon as purchaſed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 275.

Thoſe points of law, where Hawkins ſeems to doubt, are now, in general, pretty clearly ſettled, according to what ſeemed to be his opinion. See Black. Com. 2 V. 511.

Priſage, (Priſagium) Is that ſhare which belongs to the King, or Admiral, out of ſuch merchandiſes as are taken at ſea, by way of lawful priſe, which is uſually a tenth part.——Priſagium eſt jus priſas capiendi, &c. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 5.

And priſage of wines is an ancient duty or cuſtom on wines, payable at certain ports, except London, Southampton, &c. It is where the King claims out of every ſhip or veſſel laden with wines, containing twenty tons or more, two tons of wine, the one before, the other behind the maſt, at his price, which is twenty ſhillings for each ton; but this varies according to the cuſtom of places; and at Boſton every bark laden with ten tons of wine or above, pays priſage: This word is almoſt out of uſe, being now called butlerage, becauſe the King's chief butler receives it.

1 Hen. 8. cap. 5. 4 Inſt. 30. Calthorp's Rep. 20. See Black. Com. 1 V. 314.

If ſhips are laden with contraband goods, both ſhip and goods may be taken as priſe; and inſtruments and proviſions of armature for ſea or land, bound for an enemy from a neuter nation, &c. ſhall be taken as a priſe; ſo money, &c. in time of neceſſity. Lex Mercat. 178.

Whether a ſhip be priſe or not, ſhall be tried in the Admiralty, and no prohibition be granted; And if a ſuit be commenced between the captor of a priſe and a claimant, and a decree is obtained either for or againſt the claimer; on giving ſecurity, ſuch ſentence or decree ſhall be put in execution, notwithſtanding any appeal, &c. 1 Sid. 320. 2 Keb. 158. See Privateers, and Table to the Statutes.

Priſon, (Priſona) Is a place of confinement for the ſafe cuſtody of perſons, in order to their anſwering any action, civil or criminal: And it has been obſerved, that the Salva cuſtodia muſt be only cuſtodia; for carcer ad homines cuſtodiendos, non ad puniendos dari debet. Co. Lit. lib. 3. cap. 7.

Any place where a man is reſtrained of his liberty, is a priſon: And when any one is arreſted on proceſs, he is to be committed to priſon, or be bound in recogniſance with ſureties, or give bail, according to the nature of the caſe, to appear at a day in court, and anſwer what is alledged againſt him. Dalt. 421.

If one is brought before a juſtice of peace for ſuſpicion of felony, where a felony has been committed, the juſtice may ſend him to priſon, or bail him; and if no felony be done, he hath power to diſcharge him. H. P. C. 98. But when a perſon is committed to priſon for treaſon, or felony, he cannot regularly be diſcharged from priſon, till indicted, and acquitted, &c. Though one taken and committed to priſon in a civil cauſe, may be releaſed by the plaintiff in the ſuit. 3 Inſt. 209. H. P. C. 94. But ſee Habeas Corpus, &c. Vide Gaol.

Priſon-breaking, Is not only where a felon is formerly committed to gaol by mittimus; but if he be put in the ſtocks, or kept in the conſtable's houſe, &c. and he break priſon, it is felony. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 610. And if A. arreſt B. for ſuſpicion, and carry him to the common gaol, and there deliver him; if he breaks priſon, and be indicted on it, there muſt be an averment in the indictment, that there was a felony done, and that A. having probable cauſe did ſuſpect B. and arreſted and committed him, and that he broke the priſon, all which muſt be proved on the trial: But where a felon is taken by capias, and committed, and break priſon, there needs no ſuch averment, &c. becauſe all appears by matter of record. 2 Inſt. 590. Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 610.

The felony of breach of priſon is within clergy, though the offence for which the party was committed be excluded clergy. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 612. See Eſcape. And Black. Com. 4 V. 130.

Priſoner, (Priſonarius, Fr. Priſonnier) Signifies one confined in priſon, on an action, or commandment: And a man may be a priſoner on matter of record, or of fact; a priſoner on matter of record, is he who, being preſent in court, is by the court committed to priſon; and the other is on an arreſt, by the ſheriff, &c. Staundf. P. C. 34, 35.

A priſoner at the ſuit of the King may not be charged in an action at the ſuit of the ſubject, without leave of the court. 1 Lev. 125, 146.

The court of King's Bench hath power to ſend for a priſoner out of the Marſhalſea court, by rule of court, and need not iſſue an habeas corpus, as that priſon belongs to this court; but they cannot ſend for a priſoner out of any other priſon, without writ of habeas corpus. Mich. 1650.

Every judge of B. R. may remit priſoners, with their indictments, to the places where the offences wherewith they are charged were committed; and a priſoner for debt may be removed from the Fleet to the King's Bench, and thence to the Marſhalſea, on ſomething charged againſt him in the habeas corpus or return, or on bringing him into court. Dyer 275. 2 Lil. Abr. 357.

Priſoners in the King's Bench and Fleet priſons, on meſne proceſs, &c. are to be actually confined within the priſons, or rules of the ſame, till diſcharged; and the profits of the marſhal's and warden's places are liable to ſequeſtration for payment of debt on judgment, on an eſcape, beſides the common remedy.

Judgment may be ſigned againſt a priſoner, in the Fleet, in a perſonal action, entering a declaration, and leaving a copy thereof with the priſoner, &c. after a rule to plead, to be out at eight days, &c. Priſoners in the King's Bench are not to pay above 2 s. 6 d. per week, chamber-rent, on pain of keepers taking more, to forfeit 20 l. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 7. And priſoners going at large, may be taken up on an eſcape warrant. 1 Ann. cap. 6. But priſoners may go out of the rules, on a day-rule of court, about their buſineſs, ſo as they do not go into the country, or to plays, diverſions, &c. 2 Lil. 366.

A perſon in execution in the King's Bench priſon, was put in irons by the marſhal; and the court ordered the marſhal to keep his priſoner according to law: though they ſaid he might juſtify putting him in irons, if he feared an eſcape, or if the priſoner was unruly. Farreſt. 52. In the ſecond year of Geo. 2. Sir William Rich being laid in irons in the Fleet priſon, had his irons taken off by order of the Houſe of Commons; who thereupon begun an inquiry into the conduct of gaolers to priſoners, &c.

Priſoners diſcharged. A variety of acts have been made, on liberal principles, for relief of inſolvent debtors. It is immaterial to ſet them forth, as they in general vary in ſome particulars, and the laſt is too prolix, to inſert at large, and yet too particular, to admit of a proper abridgment. Vide the Stat. 9 Geo. 3. c. 26.

Prit. See Black. Com. 4 V. 339.

Privateers, Are a kind of private men of war, the perſons concerned wherein adminiſter at their own coſts a part of a war, by fitting out theſe ſhips of force, and providing them with all military ſtores; and they have, inſtead of pay, leave to keep what they take from the enemy, allowing the Admiral his ſhare, &c.

Privateers may not attempt any thing againſt the laws of nations; as to aſſault an enemy in a port or haven, under the protection of any prince or republic, whether he be friend, ally, or neuter; for the peace of ſuch places muſt be inviolably kept; therefore by a treaty made by King William and the States of Holland, before a commiſſion ſhall be granted to any privateer, the commander is to give ſecurity, if the ſhip be not above 150 tons, in 1500 l. and if the ſhip exceeds that burden, in 3000 l. that they will make ſatisfaction for all damages which they ſhall commit in their courſes at ſea, contrary to the treaties with that ſtate; on pain of forfeiting their commiſſions, and the ſhip is made liable. Lex Mercat. or Merch. Compan. 177, 178.

Beſides theſe private commiſſions, there are ſpecial commiſſions for privateers, granted to commanders of ſhips, &c. who take pay, who are under a marine diſcipline; and if they do not obey their orders, may be puniſhed with death: And the wars in latter ages, have given occaſion to princes to iſſue theſe commiſſions, to annoy the enemies in their commerce, and hinder ſuch ſupplies as might ſtrengthen them, or lengthen out the war; and likewiſe to prevent the ſeparation of ſhips of greater force from their fleets or ſquadrons. Ibid.

Ships taken by privateers, were to be divided into five parts; four parts whereof to go to the perſons intereſted in the privateer, and the fifth to his Majeſty: And as a farther encouragement, privateers, &c. deſtroying any French man of war, or privateer, ſhall receive for every piece of ordnance in the ſhip ſo taken 10 l. reward, &c. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 25.

By a particular ſtatute lately made, the Lord Admiral, or Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, may grant commiſſions to commanders of privateers, for taking ſhips, &c. which being adjudged prize, and the tenth part paid to the Admiral, &c. wholly belong to the owners of the privateers and the captors, in proportions agreed on between themſelves; and the officers and ſeamen of ſhips of war, are to have the ſole property of all ſhips they take, to be divided as his Majeſty ſhall order by proclamation: Alſo if any ſhips belonging to the Engliſh be taken by the enemy, and afterwards retaken by any of our men of war or privateers, they are to be reſtored to the owners, on paying an eighth part of the value, in lieu of ſalvage, after having been in the enemy's poſſeſſion twenty-four hours; and if above that time, paying further to a moiety, &c. And ſhips of war or privateers, taking any ſhip of war or privateer of the enemy, the officers and ſeamen ſhall be paid by the treaſurer of the navy 5 l. for every man who was on board ſuch ſhip at the beginning of the engagement. Stat. 13 Geo. 2. c. 4. Privation, (Privatio) A taking away or withdrawing; moſt commonly applied to a biſhop or rector, when by death, or other act, they are deprived of their preferments; it ſeems to be an abbreviation of the word deprivation Co. Lit. 329.

Privies, (From the Fr. Prive, i. e. Familiaris) Are theſe who are partakers, or have an intereſt in any action or thing, or any relation to another: As every heir in tail is privy to recover the land entailed, &c. Old Nat. Br. 117.

There are five ſeveral kinds of privies, viz. Privies of blood, ſuch as the heir to the anceſtor; privies in repreſentation, as executors or adminiſtrators to the deceaſed; privies in eſtate, between donor and donee, leſſor and leſſee, &c. Privies in reſpect of contract; and privies on account of eſtate and contract together. 3 Rep. 23, 123. 4 Rep. 123. Latch. 260.

If a fine be levied, the heirs of him who levied it, are termed privies If a leſſor grants his reverſion, the grantee and leſſee are privies in eſtate: And privies in contract extend only to the perſons of the leſſor and leſſee; and where the leſſee aſſigns all his intereſt, here the leſſor and leſſee remain privy in contract, but not in eſtate, which is removed by the aſſignment. 3 Rep. 23.

Privies in reſpect of eſtate and contract appears, where the leſſee aſſigns his intereſt, but the contract between the leſſor and leſſee as to action of debt continues, the leſſor not having accepted of the aſſignee. 3 Lev. 295. But where there are privies in contract, and the privity is altered by aſſignment of an executor, &c. before any rent due, and after the privity of eſtate by the aſſignment of the executor's aſſignee, nothing remains whereby to maintain any action. Latch 260.

There are likewiſe privies in deed, or in law; where the deed makes the relation; or the law implies it, in caſe of eſcheats to the lord, &c. And only parties and privies ſhall take advantage of conditions of entry on lands, &c. Co. Lit. 516. See Black. Com. 2 V. 355. and Privity and Privy.

Privilege, (Privilegium) Is defined by Cicero in his oration pro domo ſua, to be lex privata homini irrogata. It is, ſays another, Jus ſingulare, whereby a private man, or a particular corporation is exempted from the rigor of the Common law. It is ſometimes uſed in law for a place which hath ſome ſpecial immunity. Kitchin, 118.

Privilege is either perſonal or real: A perſonal privilege is, that which is granted to any perſon, either againſt or beyond the courſe of the Common law: As for example, A member of parliament may not be arreſted, nor any of his ſervants. See poſt.

A privilege real is that which is granted to a place, as to the univerſities, that none of either may be called to Weſtminſter-Hall, on any contract made within their own precincts, or proſecuted in other courts: And one belonging to the Court of Chancery cannot be ſued in any other court, certain caſes excepted; and if he be, he may remove it by writ of privilege, grounded on the ſtatute

18 E. 3. Cowell. Officers of the court are to be ſued in the petty bag office.

Privilege is an exemption from ſome duty, burthen or attendance, to which certain perſons are intitled, from a ſuppoſition of law, that the ſtations they fill, or the offices they are engaged in, are ſuch as require all their care; that therefore without this indulgence it would be impracticable to execute ſuch offices to that advantage which the public good requires. 4 New Abr. 215.

The officers, miniſters and clerks of the courts in Weſtminſter-Hall are allowed particular privileges in reſpect of their neceſſary attendance on thoſe courts; they are regularly to ſue and be ſued in the courts they reſpectively belong to, and cannot (except in certain caſes) be impleaded elſewhere; which privilege ariſes from a ſuppoſition of law, that the buſineſs of the court or their clients cauſes would ſuffer by their being drawn into another than that in which their perſonal attendance is required. 2 Inſt. 551. 4 Inſt. 71. Vaugh. 154. Dyer 377. a. pl. 30.

Anderſon Ch. J. of C. B. brought treſpaſs by bill for breaking his houſe in the city of Worceſter, againſt a citizen of the city; the mayor and commonalty came and ſhewed a charter granted by Edward VI. and demanded conuſance of pleas; but it was refuſed, becauſe the privilege of that court, of which the plaintiff was a chief member, is more ancient than the patent; for the juſtices clerks and attornies ought to be there attending their buſineſs, and ſhall not be impleaded or compelled to implead others elſewhere; and this privilege was given the court on the original erection of it. 3 Leon. 149.

An attorney, ſo long as he remains on record, (and continues in practice) ſhall have his privilege; therefore where it was moved, that J. S. ſhould put in ſpecial bail, being an attorney at large, and having diſcontinued his practice, the court ſaid, that attornies at large have the ſame privilege with the clerks of the courts, and are to appear de die in diem; and they were not ſatisfied that he had diſcontinued his practice. Bro. tit. Attorney 67. Tit. Bill 24. 1 Vent. 1.

But where J. S. was arreſted in B. R. and after the arreſt he procured himſelf to be made an attorney of C. B. and prayed his privilege, it was diſallowed, becauſe it accrued pendente lite. 2 Rol. Rep. 115.

In debt againſt the warden of the Fleet, by bill of privilege, he refuſed to appear; the court doubted how they could compel him, as they could not forejudge him the court, he having an inheritance in his office; but it being ſurmiſed that he made a leaſe of his office, it was held, that he ſhould not have his privilege, for that the leſſee, and not he, was the officer during the leaſe. 2 Leon. 173.

So if the marſhal of B. R. grants his place for life; the grantor has no privilege during that time. 1 Vent. 65.

A clerk of B. R. was ſued in an inferior court for a debt under five pounds, and had a writ of privilege allowed; for the ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. c. 23. never intended to take away the privilege of attornies. Palm. 403.

In the court of Exchequer there are three ſorts of privilege: 1ſt, As debtor. 2dly, As accountant. 3dly, As officer. Hard. 365.

J. S. was ſued in London, which he removed into B. R. and afterwards prayed his privilege of the court of Exchequer; and on the puiſne Baron's coming into court, and bringing the red book of the Exchequer, which ſhewed that he was an eſcheator, and ſo an accountant to the King, the privilege was allowed. Noy 40. Sed qu. as to the law, the officer having choſen the court of B. R. for determination of his ſuit, and thereby, as I conceive, had ſubmitted to the juriſdiction of B. R?

If one holds of the Queen as of her manor, he ſhall not have the privilege of the Exchequer for that cauſe; but if the King grants tithes, and thereupon reſerves a rent nomine decimæ, and a tenure of him, there he ſhall have privilege. 2 Leon. 21.

A Latitat being ſued out againſt the commiſſioners of the Treaſury, the puiſne Baron of the Exchequer came into the court of B. R. and brought the red book of the Exchequer, which is deemed a record in that court; and thereby it appeared, that the Treaſurer had privilege of being ſued only in that court; and the patent being produced in court which conſtituted defendants, &c. and granted them the office of treaſurer of England, their privilege was allowed without putting them to bring a writ of privilege; the court grounding themſelves on the record before them. 2 Show. 299.

It hath been held, that the treaſurer of the navy is eo ipſo an accountant; and that an accountant's privilege will hold againſt a ſpecial privilege in another court, as officer of the court or otherwiſe, though it be not alleged, that ſuch an accountant is entred on his account; for that every acountant may be attached by the court to make up his account, and muſt attend for that purpoſe de die in diem. Hard. 316. See Moor 753. 2 Inſt. 23, 551. Bro. Privilege 16.

In debt in B. R. againſt J. S. he pleaded to the juriſdiction, That none of the privy chamber ought to be ſued in any other court, without the ſpecial licence of the lord chamberlain of the houſhold, and that he was one of the privy chamber; on demurrer to this plea, the court over-ruled it with great reſentment, and awarded a Reſpondeas ouſter. Raym. 34. 1 Keb. 137.

It was agreed, that the privilege of the court of C. B. which Serjeants claimed, extended only to inferior courts, not to the courts in Weſtminſter-Hall; and that a Serjeant may be ſued in any of theſe, becauſe he is not confined to that court alone, but may practiſe in any other court; but it is otherwiſe as to attornies or philazers, who cannot practiſe in their own name in any other court but ſuch as they reſpectively belong to; and that a Serjeant at law is to be ſued by original, not by bill of privilege. 2 Lev. 129. 3 Keb. 42. Moor. 296. S. C.

So in action by bill brought in C. B. againſt a ſerjeant at law, he pleaded that he ought to have been ſued by original, and not by bill; and on demurrer, the court held, that the caſe of a ſerjeant and prothonotary's clerk were on the ſame footing, neither of them being bound to perſonal attendance, as prothonotaries and attornies were; that therefore he ought to have been ſued by original, accordingly gave judgment for defendant. Trin. 7 G. 2. Serjeant Girdler's caſe.

J. S. being arreſted by a writ out of C. B. brought his writ of privilege as clerk of the crown office; but it appearing that he was only a clerk to a clerk of that office, and not an immediate clerk of the office, a ſuperſedeas to the writ of privilege was granted on motion; the court having agreed, That he had no more privilege than an attorney's clerk. 2 Show. 287.

A Serjeant at law, barriſter, attorney, or other privileged perſon, whoſe attendance is neceſſary in Weſtminſter-Hall, may lay his action in Middleſex, though the cauſe of action accrued in another county; and the court on the uſual affidavit will not change the venue. Stil. 460. Moor 64. 2 Show. 242.

But it hath been held, That if a privileged perſon be ſued, and the action brought againſt him in the right county, his privilege will not intitle him to have it tried in Middleſex. Carth. 126. 1 Show. 148.

And it was ſaid, that an attorney or officer of the court where he is defendant hath no privilege concerning the venue; but where he is plaintiff he hath the privilege to lay his action in Middleſex, and out of the proper county. Which doctrine has been ſince recogniſed and confirmed in 4 Bur. 2027, &c.

If an attorney lays his action in London, the court will change the venue on the uſual affidavit; for, by not laying it in Middleſex, he ſeems regardleſs of his privilege, and is to be conſidered as a perſon at large. 2 Vent. 47. Salk. 668.

On a motion to diſcharge a rule which had been obtained for changing the venue, it appeared, That the plaintiff was a barriſter and maſter in Chancery; and the court held that he had privilege, by reaſon of his attendance, to lay his action in Middleſex, therefore diſcharged the rule. 2 Raym. 1556.

All peers, without diſtinction are intitled to privilege; for they are equally obliged to attend the ſervice of the public, and are always ſuppoſed amenable, and to have ſufficient property to anſwer in ſuits brought againſt them, and on theſe grounds are not to be arreſted or moleſted in their perſons. This privilege extended formerly to abbots, as it does to biſhops, members of the convocation, and members of the houſe of commons at this day. 4 Inſt. 24. Stil. 222, 253. Dyer 314. 1 Mod. 66. *Bro. The privilege of parliament according to the law of parliament is of a very extenſive nature; but all that is here intended to be treated of is only the taking notice of and pointing out ſuch caſes, relative hereto, as are to be found in the books of law; not to determine concerning this privilege as ſettled by the rules and orders of each houſe, of which they themſelves are the ſole judges, though the King's courts incidently take notice thereof, and are bound to determine in matters of privilege when ſo directed by act of parliament. Lord Coke ſays of this law, ab omnibus quærenda eſt, a multis ignorata, a paucis cognita. 4 Inſt. 15. 13 Co. 63. 4 Inſt. 23, 50, 363. Prinne's Animad. on 4 Inſt. 12. Cro. Car. 181, 604. This privilege, with reſpect to peers, extends only to the peers of Great Britain; ſo that a nobleman of any other country, or a lord of Ireland, hath not any other privileges in this kingdom than a common perſon; alſo the ſon and heir apparent of a nobleman is not intitled to the privilege of being tried by his peers, which is confined to ſuch perſon as is a lord of parliament at the time; but it ſeems that an infant peer is privileged from arreſts, his perſon being held ſacred. Co. Lit. 156. 2 Inſt. 48. 3 Inſt. 30.

The peers of Scotland had no privilege in this kingdom before the union, but now, by the 23d article of the union, the ſixteen elected peers have all the privileges of the peers of parliament of Great Britain; alſo all the reſt of the peers of Scotland have all the privileges of the peerage of England, excepting only that of ſitting and voting in parliament. 9 Co. 117. 1 P. Wil. 583.

A peereſs by birth is intitled to privilege; ſo of a peereſs by marriage, and that as well during coverture as after; but as a peereſs by marriage, is ſaid to loſe her dignity by marrying a commoner, Q. If after ſuch marriage ſhe is intitled to any privilege. 2 Inſt. 50. Stil. 222, 234, 252. 2 *Cha. It was holden by Holt, that where a perſon is called by writ to the houſe of Peers, he is no peer until he ſits in parliament, the writ giving him no nobility or honour; but that it was the ſitting in the houſe of Lords, and aſſociating himſelf with them that ennobled his blood; that therefore, if the King or he dies before a parliament meets, the writ is determined, and the party remains a commoner; but he held it otherwiſe in a creation by letters patent, by which the party is immediately noble without any other act or ceremony; and though the parliament never meets, or the King dies, the nobility remains to him and his poſterity, according to the limitations in the patent. 4 New Abr. 229.

A member of parliament ſhall have privilege of parliament, not only for his ſervants, but for his horſes, &c. or other goods diſtrainable. 4 Inſt. 24.

J. S. brought debt againſt H. who pleaded that he was tenant and ſervant to Lord Moon, and prayed writ of privilege might be allowed him; plaintiff demurred; it was argued, that the matter of the plea was againſt the Common and ſtatute law; but per Roll Ch. J. you ought not to argue generally againſt the privilege of parliament; every court hath its privilege; I conceive a writ of privilege belongs to a parliament man, ſo far as to protect his lands and eſtate; and you have admitted his privilege by your demurrer. Stil. 139. See Latch 150. and the S. C. Stil. 167, 223. 1 Jon. 155.

The warden of the Fleet inſiſted on a writ of privilege, alledging that he was obliged to attend the houſe of Lords; but it appearing that he was ſued on an eſcape, and the court conſidering the great inconvenience that would enſue, and being of opinion that it was in their diſcretion whether they would grant ſuch writ or no, on a motion they ſaid he might plead if he would, but they would not award ſuch writ, or, if his privilege was infringed, he might complain to the houſe of Lords. 2 Vent. 154.

In debt, the defendant pleads he was a ſervant to a member of parliament, and ideo capi ſeu arreſtari non debet; the plaintiff prays judgment, and quia videtur quod tale privilegium quod magnates, &c. & eorum familiares capi ſeu arreſtari non debent; ſed nullum habetur privilegium quod non debent implacitari, ideo reſpondeat ouſter. 1 Mod. 146.

Defendant after a general imparlance pleaded, That he was ſervant to a peer, and by North Ch. J. it is not receivable, for it is the privilege of the maſter and not the ſervant; but the defendant ought to ſue his writ of privilege, for perhaps his maſter will not protect him; and if he will not, he is then left to anſwer; like to the caſe of a counſellor, where it is the privilege of the client that he ſhall not be compelled to diſcover the ſecrets of his client; but, if the client be willing, the court will compel the counſel to diſcover what he knows; North ſaid, as it was a matter of great conſequence, he would adviſe with the Chancellor and judges, what uſed to be done in ſuch caſes; afterwards it was moved again, and North ſaid it was moved in the houſe of Lords, and that they had left it to the judges; therefore the plea was rejected. Paſch. 30 Car. 2. in C. B. Lea v. Wheatley.

By an order of the 24th of January 1696, in the houſe of Lords, it was reſolved, That no common attorney or ſolicitor, though employed by a peer, ſhould have the privilege of that houſe.

By an order of the 24th of May 1724, this privilege was reſtrained to menial ſervants, and others neceſſarily employed about the eſtates of peers.

By an order of the 22d of January 1715, it was reſolved, That every peer ſhould upon his honour certify to the houſe, that the perſons protected were within the privilege of the houſe; and ſhould by letter acquaint the party, arreſting ſuch privileged perſon, with the ſame.

An attorney was taken in execution on a ca. ſa. but upon a letter under the hand and ſeal of the Lord Say and Seal, the ſheriff diſcharged him as Steward to his lordſhip; a rule was obtained at the ſide-bar for the return of the writ; and, on motion to diſcharge this rule, it was urged in behalf of the ſheriff, that this privilege belonged only to the peer, not to the party, and was not returnable to the proceſs; that therefore the court ought not to inſiſt upon a return, as the ſheriff could not juſtify the detention of defendant, but under peril of the houſe of peers; but on conſideration of the above-mentioned orders, and on conſidering the nature of this caſe, that the plaintiff was within the ordinary juſtice of the court intitled to a return of his writ; that without ſuch return he might be debarred from any further execution; but principally from the great inconveniency that might ariſe by allowing attornies, who are officers to the courts in which they reſpectively practiſe, and therefore amenable to thoſe courts, this kind of privilege; the court gave the plaintiff liberty to proceed againſt the ſheriff, but gave him time to make his return. 4 New Abr. 230.

In all civil cauſes this privilege is regularly to be allowed; ſo that a peer, or member of the houſe of Commons, is not to be arreſted or moleſted in his perſon or eſtate. Bro. Exigent.

But privilege of parliament doth not extend to high treaſon, felony, breach of the peace, or ſurety of the peace. 4 Inſt. 25.

Therefore in an indictment for treaſon or felony, treſpaſs vi & armis, aſſault or riot, proceſs of outlawry ſhall iſſue againſt a peer; for the ſuit is for the King, and the offence is a contempt againſt him; but in civil actions between party and party, regularly a capias or exigent lies not againſt a lord of parliament. 2 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 199. 2 Hawk. P. C. 424.

If a peer of parliament be convicted of a diſſeiſin with force, a capias pro fine and exigent ſhall iſſue; for the fine is given by ſtatute, in which no perſon is exempted. Cro. Eliz. 170. See Dyer 314.

So in debt on an obligation againſt the Earl of Lincoln, who pleaded non eſt factum, which being found againſt him, the judgment was ideo capiatur; which on a writ of error brought by him was objected to, in that a capias does not lie againſt a peer, ſed non allocatur: for by this plea found againſt him, a fine is due to the King, againſt whom none ſhall have any privilege. Cro. Eliz. 503.

An information was exhibited in B. R. againſt the Earl of Devonſhire, for ſtriking in the King's palace; which being in time of parliament, he inſiſted on his privilege, and refuſed to plead in chief, but put in his plea of privilege, to which there was a demurrer and the plea over-ruled, and he was fined 30,000 l. Comb. 49.

Peers are puniſhable by attachment for contempts in many inſtances; as for reſcuing a perſon arreſted by due courſe of law; for proceeding in a cauſe againſt the King's writ of prohibition; for diſcharging other writs, wherein the King's prerogative, or the liberty of the ſubject are nearly concerned; and for other contempts which are of an enormous nature. 2 Hawk. P. C. 152.

If a peer be returned on a jury, on his bringing a writ of privilege he may be diſcharged; alſo it ſeems the better opinion, that without ſuch writ he may either challenge himſelf, or be challenged by the party. Dyer 314. Moor 767. 9 Co. 49. Co. Lit. 157. 1 Jon. 153.

Alſo in the caſe of Sir Edward Bainton, who being returned on a jury, the court would not force him to be ſworn againſt his will, he being a parliament man, and the parliament then ſitting. Paſch. 27 Car. 2. in B. R.

A day of grace ſhall not be given againſt a lord of parliament; for he is preſumed to be attendant on the ſervice of the public. 9 Co. 49. a.

So if a peer be made ſteward of a baſe court, or ranger of a foreſt, he may from the dignity of his perſon, and the preſumption that he is engaged in the more weighty affairs of the Commonwealth, exerciſe theſe offices by deputy; tho' there are no words for this purpoſe in his creation. 9 Co. 49. a.

So if a licence be granted to a peer to hunt in a chaſe or foreſt, he may take ſuch a number of attendants with him as are ſuitable to his dignity. 9 Co. 49 b.

A peer or lord of parliament cannot be an approver; for it is againſt Magna Charta for him to pray a coroner, 3 Inſt. 129.

If a peer bring an appeal, defendant ſhall not be admitted to wage battle, by reaſon of the dignity of his perſon. 2 Hawk. P. C. 427.

In Jenkins the following privileges are laid down as belonging to peers: 1. They are intitled to a letter miſſive. 2. They have a knight to try an iſſue which concerns them. 3. They are not to be arreſted for any perſonal action. 4. They are exempted from ſerving on juries. 5. To have no day of grace againſt them. 6. Upon the trial of a peer for treaſon or felony, they try him on their honour only, not on oath. 7. When they paſs thro' any of the King's foreſts to attend the King, on blowing a horn they may have a buck or doe, as the ſeaſon of the year is. 8. They have power in their houſe to reverſe judgments given in the King's Bench. 9. They have the benefit of clergy, tho' they cannot read, 10. They are not liable to find carriages for the King when he removes from one place to another. Jenk. 107.

In the caſe of Colonel Pit, the parliament was prorogued the 16th of April 1734, diſſolved the 17th, and the new writs bore teſte the 18th following, and Pit, who was a member of that parliament, was arreſted on the 20th; one of the queſtions in this caſe was, Whether the arreſt was within the time of privilege? And it was determined that it was, altho' defendant had lived for two years before no farther diſtant from London than Hammerſmith; but the court did not think it neceſſary, in the determination of this cauſe, to aſcertain the exact time of privilege that members of the houſe of Commons were intitled to after a diſſolution of parliament. Trin. 8 Geo. 2. in *B. 3. Of the proceedings in courts by and againſt perſons intitled to privilege of parliament.

By 12 & 13 W. 3. cap. 13. ſect. 1. Any perſon may proſecute any ſuit againſt any perſon intitled to privilege of parliament, at any time immediately after the diſſolution or prorogation of parliament until a new parliament ſhall meet, or the ſame be re-aſſembled, and immediately after any adjournment of both houſes for above fourteen days until both houſes meet; and the courts may after ſuch diſſolution, prorogation or adjournment, proceed to give judgment, and to make final decrees and ſentences; any privilege of parliament notwithſtanding.

Sect. 2. Provided, That this act ſhall not ſubject the perſon of any perſon, intitled to privilege of parliament, to be arreſted during time of privilege; nevertheleſs if any perſon have cauſe of action againſt any peer, ſuch perſon after diſſolution, prorogation or adjournment, or before any ſeſſions of parliament, may have ſuch proceſs againſt ſuch peer, as he might have had out of time of privilege; and if any perſon have cauſe of action againſt any perſon intitled to privilege of parliament, after any diſſolution, prorogation or ſuch adjournment, &c. ſuch perſon may proſecute ſuch perſon intitled to privilege, by ſummons and diſtreſs infinite, or by original bill and ſummons, attachment and diſtreſs infinite, which the courts are impowered to iſſue, until they enter a common appearance, or file common bail; and any perſon having cauſe of ſuit may in the times aforeſaid exhibit any bill or complaint againſt any perſon intitled to privilege, in the Chancery, Exchequer or Dutchy court, and proceed thereon by letter or ſubpœna as uſual; and on leaving a copy of the bill with defendant, or at his laſt place of abode, may proceed thereon; and for want of an appearance or anſwer, or for non-performance of any order or decree, may ſequeſter the eſtate of the party, as is uſed where the defendant is a peer, but ſhall not arreſt the body of any privileged perſon, during the continuance of privilege of parliament.

Sect. 3. Where any plaintiff by reaſon of privilege of parliament be ſtayed from proſecuting any ſuit commenced, ſuch plaintiff ſhall not be barred by any ſtatute of limitation, or nonſuited, diſmiſſed, or his ſuit diſcontinued for want of proſecution, but ſhall on the riſing of the parliament be at liberty to proceed.

Sect. 4. No ſuit or proceeding againſt the King's original and immediate debtor, for the recovery of any debt originally and immediately due to his Majeſty, or againſt any perſon liable to render an account to his Majeſty for any part of his revenues, or other original or immediate duty, or the execution of any ſuch proceſs, ſhall be impeached or delayed by privilege of parliament; yet ſo that the perſon of ſuch debtor or accountant, being a peer, ſhall not be liable to be arreſted, or being a member of the houſe of Commons, ſhall not, during the continuance of privilege, be arreſted by any ſuch proceeding. See ſtat. 2 & 3 Ann. c. 18. 11 Geo. 2. c. 24.

Sect. 5. This act ſhall not give any juriſdiction to any court to hold plea of any real or mixed action in other manner than ſuch court might have done before.

A great improvement hath been made on this law, by the Stat. 10. Geo. 3. c. 50. whereby liberty is given to proceed againſt perſons intitled to privilege during the ſitting of parliament. See the ſtatute, and tit. Parliament, and Peers.

A peer is to put in his anſwer to a bill in equity on his honour only, not on oath; but when he is examined as a witneſs, he muſt be ſworn.

Alſo if a peer is by order of court to be examined on interrogatories, or to make an affidavit, the ſame muſt be on oath. Salk. 513. & vid. Preced. Chan. 92.

Lord Stourton brought a bill againſt Sir Thomas Meers, to compel him to a ſpecifick performance of articles for purchaſing Lord Stourton's eſtate. Sir Thomas in his defence inſiſted, that there were defects in Lord Stourton's title to the eſtate; and it being ordered that Lord Stourton ſhould be examined on interrogatories touching his title; it was objected, that Lord Stourton being a peer ought to anſwer on honour only; but it was ruled by Lord Harcourt, that tho' privilege did allow a peer to put in his anſwer on honour only, yet this was reſtrained to an anſwer; and as to all affidavits, or where a peer is examined as a witneſs, he muſt be on oath; and that this examination on interrogatories, being in a cauſe wherein his Lordſhip was plaintiff, to force the execution of an agreement, as his Lordſhip would have equity, ſo he ſhould do equity, and allow the other ſide the benefit of a diſcovery, and that in a legal manner; and accordingly ordered Lord Stourton to put in his examination on oath. 1 P. Will. 145.

It hath been held, that in an action founded on the 12 & 13 W. 3. c. 13. defendant ſhould have an imparlance, and that the practice is to file a bill in nature of a ſpecial capias againſt defendant, and then to ſummon him; and if he appears on ſuch ſummons, plaintiff may declare againſt him, as in cuſtodia mareſcalli. Hill. 10 Geo. 1. in B. R. Wadſworth v. Handiſide.

Peers are intitled to a letter miſſive, which method was introduced on a preſumption that peers would pay obedience to the Chancellor's letter; and is founded on that reſpect which is due to the peerage. Jenk. 107.

If the Lord doth not appear on the letter, a ſubpœna, on motion, is awarded againſt him; becauſe no ſubſequent proceſs can be awarded but on a contempt to the Great Seal, and the Chancellor's letter is only ex gratia.

If on the ſervice of the ſubpœna, the peer doth not appear, or if he appears, and does not put in his anſwer, no attachment can be awarded againſt him, becauſe his perſon cannot be impriſoned; but the proceedings muſt be by ſequeſtration, unleſs cauſe, &c. and this is regularly made out, on affidavit made of the ſervice of the letter and ſubpœna, tho' ſometimes it is moved for without, ſince the peer may ſhew want of ſervice at the day aſſigned to ſhew cauſe why the ſequeſtration ſhould not iſſue; and this order for a ſequeſtration is never made abſolute without an affidavit of the ſervice of the order to ſhew cauſe, and a certificate of no cauſe ſhewn. 2 Vent. 342.

A bill being filed againſt a peer or peereſs, the firſt application is for the Chancellor's letter returnable in term time; or it may be immediate, if the peer lives in town; but in this caſe there muſt be an affidavit, that the original letter is left with the peer at his houſe, with a copy of the petition as anſwered; and therewith alſo is left an office copy of the bill ſigned by the ſix clerk; for if the bill is not ſigned, the ſervice is irregular. 4 New Abr. 238.

This letter is only a compliment, and no proceſs to found proceedings on; ſo that the peer may appear or not, as he pleaſes; if he fails, a ſubpœna iſſues againſt him, and his time for appearing and anſwering being out, an attachment muſt be actually ſealed and entred againſt him, tho' never executed, to ground a ſequeſtration. It is a motion of courſe for a ſequeſtration on an attachment for want of an anſwer. 4 New Abr. 238.

The peer muſt be perſonally ſerved with this order, and he hath eight days to ſhew cauſe after perſonal ſervice of the order; if no cauſe the order is abſolute; but if the ſequeſtration is for want of an appearance, and he appears, the plaintiff muſt run the ſame race over again for want of an anſwer, and the peer muſt pray time to anſwer, as ſuitors do. 4 New Abr. 238.

The ſame proceeding is againſt a member of the houſe of Commons; there the party proceeds by way of ſequeſtration, only with this difference, that inſtead of a letter, there always a ſubpœna is ſued out. Ib.

A ſequeſtration was granted, unleſs cauſe, againſt Lord Clifford for want of an anſwer; he afterwards put in anſwer, which being reported inſufficient, it was moved for a ſequeſtration abſolutely, an inſufficient anſwer being as no anſwer; but the court thought it a hardſhip in the caſe of a peer or member of the Houſe of Commons, that a ſequeſtration, which in ſome reſpects is in nature of an execution, ſhould be the firſt proceſs againſt them; therefore allowed, that in caſe of an anſwer which is reported inſufficient, the plaintiff is to move again de novo, for a ſequeſtration niſi. 2 P. Will. 385.

It was moved for a ſequeſtration niſi, for want of an anſwer, againſt a menial ſervant of a peer, as the firſt proceſs for contempt, in the ſame manner as in the caſe of the peer himſelf; and tho' the motion was granted by the Maſter of the Rolls, yet the Regiſter refuſed to draw it up as thinking it againſt the courſe of the court; which being moved again before the Chancellor, his Lordſhip, on reading the Stat. 12 & 13 W. 3. c. 13. likewiſe granted the motion, it appearing to be both within the meaning and words of the ſtatute; and if it were not ſo, as it was plain no attachment would lie againſt their perſons, conſequently there would be no remedy againſt them, and they would have a greater privilege than their Lord, if the proceſs againſt ſuch menial ſervant were to be a ſubpœna. 1 P. Will. 535.

Privileged Places. Formerly one of the greateſt obſtructions to public juſtice, both of the civil and criminal kind, was the multitude of pretended privileged places where indigent perſons aſſembled together to ſhelter themſelves from juſtices, (eſpecially in London and Southwark) under the pretext of their having been antient palaces of the crown, or the like: All of which ſanctuaries for iniquity are now demoliſhed, and the oppoſing of any proceſs therein is made highly penal. Black. Com. 4 V. 129.

A perſon was arreſted in the Temple, and, on motion to ſet it aſide, it was inſiſted for him, that the Temple is privileged from arreſts by the King's grant; for which the authority of Stow's Chronicle and Dugdale were alledged: But by Holt, If the King hath made any ſuch grant to that ſociety, it is void in law, they having no court of juſtice within themſelves: It is true, the Temple is extraparochial, and not within any pariſh, nor in the city, ſo as to come within the cuſtoms of the city, but it is within the county of the city; and White Friars is within the juriſdiction of the city; Yet the court inclined not to countenance arreſts in the Temple, eſpecially in term time; tho' they would not ſet aſide this arreſt; ſo defendant was held to ſpecial bail.

By 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 26. for preventing the many ill practices uſed in privileged places to defraud perſons of their debts; the pretended privileges of White Friars, the Savoy, Salisbury Court, Ram-Alley, Mitre Court, Fuller's Rents, Baldwin's Gardens, Montague Cloſe, the Minories, Mint, Clink, or Deadman's Place, are taken away. And the ſheriffs of London or their officers are enabled to take the poſſe comitatus, and ſuch other power as ſhall be requiſite, and enter ſuch privileged places to make any arreſt on legal proceſs, and in caſe of refuſal to break open doors.

The Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 28. enacts, That if any perſon within Suffolk Place, or the Mint, or the pretended limits thereof, wilfully obſtruct perſons executing any writ, &c. or abuſe any perſon executing the ſame, whereby he receive damage or bodily hurt, the perſon offending ſhall be tranſported. And on complaint to three juſtices, &c. by any perſon who ſhall have a debt owing from any one who reſides in the Mint, having a legal proceſs taken out for recovery thereof, if the debt be above 50 l. on oath thereof the juſtices are impowered to iſſue their warrant to the ſheriff of Surrey, to raiſe the poſſe, and to enter the pretended privileged place, and arreſt the party, &c.

Privity, (Privitas) Private familiarity, friendſhip, inward relation: If there be lord and tenant, and the tenant holds of the lord by certain ſervices, there is a privity between them in reſpect of the tenure. Cowell.

There are three ſorts of privities, viz. Privity in eſtate, in blood and in law. (See Poſt Privy.)

Privies in blood are intended of privies in blood inheritable, and this is in three manners, viz. inheritable as general heir, or as ſpecial heir, or as general and ſpecial heir.

Privies in eſtate are as joint tenants, baron and feme, donor and donee, leſſor and leſſee, &c

Privies in law are, when the law without blood or privity of eſtate caſts the land on one, or makes his entry lawful, as lord by eſcheat, lord who enters for mortmain, lord of villain, &c. 8 Rep. 42. b. Jo. 32.

There are three other ſorts of privities, viz in reſpect of eſtate only, contract only, eſtate and contract together.

Privity of eſtate is, as if the leſſor grants over his reverſion, (or if the reverſion eſcheat.) Now between the grantee (or the lord by eſcheat) and the leſſee, there is privity in eſtate only. So between the leſſor and aſſignee of leſſee; for no contract was made between them.

Privity of contract only, is perſonal privity, and extends only to the perſon of the leſſor, and to the perſon of the leſſee; as in the principal caſe when the leſſee aſſigned over his intereſt, notwithſtanding his aſſignment the privity of the contract remained between them, tho' privity of the eſtate be removed by the act of the leſſee himſelf; and the reaſon of this is,

1ſt, Becauſe the leſſee himſelf ſhall not prevent by his own act ſuch remedy, which the leſſor had againſt him by his own contract, but when the leſſor granted over his reverſion, there, againſt his own grant he cannot have remedy, becauſe he has granted the reverſion to the other, to which the rent is incident.

2dly, The leſſee may grant the term to a poor man, who ſhall not be able to manure the land, and who will by indigence, or for malice, permit it to lie freſh, and then the leſſor ſhall be without remedy, either by diſtreſs, or by action of debt, which ſhall be inconvenient, and will concern in effect every man, (becauſe for the moſt part every man is a leſſor, or a leſſee; and for thoſe two reaſons all the caſes of entry by tort, eviction, ſuſpenſion and apportionment of the rent are anſwered; for in ſuch caſes it is either the act of the leſſor himſelf, or the act of a ſtranger, and in none of the caſes, the ſole act of the leſſee himſelf ſhall prevent the leſſor of his remedy, and will introduce ſuch inconvenience as has been ſaid.

Privity of contract and eſtate together, is between the leſſor and leſſee himſelf. 3 Rep. 23.

Privy, (derived from the French prive, familiaris) Signifies him who is partaker, or hath an intereſt in any action or thing; as privies of blood, (Old Nat. Brev. 117.) are thoſe who are linked in conſanguinity. every heir in tail is privy to recover the land intailed. Id. fol. 147.

If I deliver goods to a man, to be carried to ſuch a place, and he, after he hath brought them thither, ſteal them, it is felony; becauſe the privity of delivery is determined as ſoon as they are brought thither. Staundf. Pl. Cor. lib. 1. cap. 15. 25. Merchants privy are oppoſite to merchant ſtrangers. 2 Ed. 3. 9 & 14.

The author of the New Terms of the Law maketh many ſorts of privies, viz. privies in eſtate, privies in deed, privies in law, privies in right, and privies in blood. See Perkins 831, 832, 833. and Co. l. 3. fol. 23. and lib. 4. 123, 124. mentions four kinds of privies, viz. Privies in blood, as the heir to his father; privies in repreſentation, as executors, or adminiſtrators to the deceaſed; privies in eſtate, as he in the reverſion, and he in the remainder, when land is given to one for life, to another in fee, for that their eſtates are created both at one time: The fourth is privy in tenure, as the lord by eſcheat, that is, when the land eſcheateth to the lord for want of heirs. Cowell.

Privies inheritable, as heir general, ſhall take benefit of the infancy, as if infant tenant in fee-ſimple makes feoffment, and dies, his heir ſhall enter. The ſame law of him who is heir general and ſpecial, and alſo of him that is heir ſpecial, and not general. But privies in eſtate (unleſs in ſome ſpecial caſes) ſhall not take advantage of the infancy of the other. 8 Rep. 42. b. 43. See Privies and Privity.

A ſurrender by an ideot of an eſtate for life to deſtroy a contingent remainder is void ab initio, therefore any perſon may take advantage of it, as well privy in eſtate as heir at law. But a feoffment in livery made propriis manibus of the ideot, not being merely void, makes a difference. Carth. 436

Privy Council, (Conſilium Regis, Privatum Conſilium) Is a moſt honourable aſſembly of the King and Privy Counſellors in the King's court or palace, for matters of ſtate. 4 Inſt. 53.

The King ſits himſelf in council, and appoints Privy Counſellors without patent or grant, by putting them on the liſt, and on their removal ſtriking them out, which he may do as he pleaſes: They take an oath to the King, juſtly to adviſe him, to keep ſecrecy, &c. Their number at the firſt inſtitution was twelve; but at this time is without limitation, at the King's will.

Next to the Lord Preſident of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal ſits in Council, the Secretaries of State, and many other Lords and Gentlemen: And in all debates of the Council, the loweſt delivers his opinion firſt, and the King declares his judgment laſt; and thereby the matter of debate is determined. 4 Inſt. 55.

It is conſiſtent with ſafety for a Privy Counſellor to give the King counſel when demanded; and the beſt counſel is ever given to a Prince, when the queſtion is ſo evenly propounded, as the Counſellor cannot diſcern which way the King himſelf inclines; reſolution ſhould never precede deliberation, nor execution go before reſolution; and when, on debate and deliberation, any matter is well reſolved by the Council, a change of it on ſome private information is neither ſafe nor honourable. 4 Inſt.

The Court of Privy Council is of great antiquity: The government in England was originally by the King and Privy Council; tho' at preſent the King and Privy Council only intermeddle in matters of complaint on ſudden emergencies; their conſtant buſineſs being to conſult for the public good in affairs of ſtate. 4 Inſt. 53.

The Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament have often tranſmitted matters of high concern to the King and Privy Council: And acts of the privy Council, whether orders or proclamations, were of great authority: Hen. 8. procured an act of parliament to be made, that, with the advice of his Privy Council, he might ſet forth proclamations, which ſhould have the force of acts of parliament; but that ſtatute was repealed in the reign of Ed. 6. (A very fortunate circumſtance, or otherwiſe the King of England might have been the moſt deſpotic ſovereign in Europe, at leaſt till he had rouſed the SLEEPING LION!)

Acts of the Privy Council continued of great authority until the reigns of Charles the Firſt and Second: And by theſe were controverſies ſometimes determined touching lands and rights, as well as the ſuſpenſion of penal laws, &c. But this ſeemed to be contrary to the 25 Ed. 3. cap. 4.

And by 16 Car. 1. cap. 10. it is declared, that neither the King, nor the Privy Council, have authority by petition, &c. to determine or diſpoſe of lands, &c. of any ſubject.

The King, with advice of his Council, publiſhes proclamations binding to the ſubject; but they are to be conſonant to, and in execution of, the laws of the land.

It is in the power of the Privy Council to inquire into crimes againſt government; they may commit perſons for treaſon, and other offences againſt the ſtate, in order for their trial in other courts; and any of the Privy Council may lawfully do it.

But they take cognizance of no private matters that may be determined in other courts; yet the kingdom of Ireland and the Plantations are in many reſpects ſubject to the controul, and under the direction, of the Privy Council; and law controverſies among the ſubjects of Jerſey and Guernſey, &c. are determined by the Privy Council. 3 Inſt 182. 4 Inſt. 53. Wood's Inſt. 458.

By 33 Hen. 8. cap. 23. Perſons examined by the Privy Council, on treaſons, &c. done within or without the realm, may be tried before commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, appointed by the King in any county of England: This ſtatute, as far as it relates to treaſon committed within the kingdom, is repealed by 1 & 2 P. & M. cap. 10.

If a perſon be killed beyond ſea, out of the realm, the fact may be examined by the Privy Council, and the offender tried according to the aforeſaid ſtatute.

Privy Seal, (Privatum Sigillum) Is a ſeal which the King uſeth to ſuch grants or things, as paſs the Great Seal. 2 Inſt. 554.

Pro, Is a prepoſition, ſignifying for, or in reſpect of a thing; as pro conſilio, &c. And in law, pro in the grant of an annuity pro conſilio, ſhewing the cauſe of the grant, amounts to a condition: But in a feoffment, or leaſe for life, &c. it is the conſideration, and doth not amount to a condition; and the reaſon of the difference is, becauſe the ſtate of the land by the feoffment is executed, and the grant of the annuity is executory. Plowd. 412. Wood's Inſt. 231.

Probare, In the laws of Canutus, was uſed as ſignifying, to claim a thing as a man's own. Leg. Canut. c. 44.

Probate of Teſtaments, (Probatio Teſtamentorum) Is the exhibiting and proving wills and teſtaments before the eccleſiaſtical judge, delegated by the biſhop, who is ordinary of the place where the party dies: And if all the deceaſed's goods, chattels and debts owing to him, were in the ſame dioceſe, then the biſhop of the dioceſe, &c. hath the probate of the teſtament; but if the goods and chattels were diſperſed in divers dioceſes, ſo that there were any thing out of the dioceſe where the party lived, to make what is called bona notabilia, then the archbiſhop of Canterbury, or York, is the ordinary to make probate by his prerogative. Blount.

The probate of a will is uſually made in the ſpiritual court, and is done by granting letters teſtamentary to an executor under ſeal of the court, by which the executor is enabled to bring any action, &c. And if ſuch letters teſtamentary are granted to the party who exhibits the will, merely on his oath, by ſwearing that he believeth it to be the laſt will of the deceaſed; this is called proving it in common form, and ſuch a probate may be controverted at any time: But if the executor, beſides his own oath, produces witneſſes to prove it to be the laſt will of the deceaſed, and this in the preſence of the parties who claim any intereſt, or in their abſence, if ſummoned and do not appear; this is termed a probate per teſtes, which cannot be queſtioned after thirty years. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1301.

On an iſſue whether the deceaſed made an executor or no, the probate of the will was adjudged good proof. 2 Lill. Abr. 375. And where the probate of a will is produced in evidence at a trial, defendant cannot ſay that the will was forged, or that the teſtator was non compos mentis, becauſe it is directly againſt the ſeal of the ordinary, in a matter where he had a proper juriſdiction; but defendant may give in evidence that the ſeal itſelf was forged, or that the teſtator had bona notabilia, or he may be relieved on appeal. 1 Lev. 235. Raym. 405. 1 Strange 481. The probate is evidence only in queſtions relating to the perſonal eſtate.

As the judge of the Spiritual Court only can determine the validity of wills for things perſonal; therefore the probate of ſuch a will is undeniable evidence to a jury, and may not be controverted at Common law. 1 Ld. Raym. 262.

A probate, according to Holt, is evidence of a will only as to chattels: But if a will of lands be loſt, it ſhall be allowed for ſuch a will concerning lands. Ibid. 731, 735.

When probate is to be granted of a will, wherein a legacy is interlined in a different hand, and ſuppoſed to be forged, the executor has no remedy but in the Spiritual Court; where the will ought to be proved, with a ſpecial reſervation as to that clauſe. 1 Peer Will. 388.

Notwithſtanding appeal from a will, a perſon is complete executor by the probate; tho' the probate may be traverſed, if an executor plaintiff do not conclude with a profert hic in curia, or defendant may damand oyer of the will. 3 Bulſt. 72.

An executor being made by the act of the party deceaſed, the law intitles him to the probate of the will; and the probate cannot be revoked or altered, which would in effect make a new will; yet it may be ſuſpended by an appeal: But if adminiſtration be granted to one, this is by act of the court; and if he afterwards become bankrupt, &c. the adminiſtration may be repealed. 1 Rol. Rep. 226. Show. 293. 1 Salk. 36. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1302.

By 21 Hen. 8. c. 5. it is ordained, that on probate of wills, &c. 6 d. and no more ſhall be taken by the Regiſter, where the goods of the deceaſed do not exceed five pounds value; and when the goods are above the value of 5 l. and under 40 l. the fee to the Judge ſhall be 2 s. 6 d. and to the Regiſter 1 s. and if the goods exceed 40 l. in value, the Judge's fee is 2 s. 6 d. and to the Regiſter 2 s. 6 d. but this he may refuſe, and take a penny for every ten lines of the will, &c. And if the officer takes more than his due fees, he ſhall forfeit 10 l. to be divided between the King and the party grieved.

But it hath been held on this ſtatute, that a tranſcript of the will muſt be brought to the Regiſter ready ingroſſed, and with wax to be ſealed, ſo that the Regiſter, &c. may have nothing to do but to annex the probate to it; and then no fee ſhall be taken for ſuch tranſcript. 4 Inſt. 336. Co. Ent. 166.

The power of granting probates and adminiſtration of the goods of perſons dying, for wages or work done in the King's docks and yards, ſhall be in the ordinary of the dioceſe where the perſon dieth, or in him to whom power is given by ſuch ordinary, excluſive of the prerogative court, &c. Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. See Executor, &c. and Black. Com. 2 V. 508.

Probator, An accuſer, or approver, or one who undertakes to prove a crime charged upon another.

The word was ſtrictly meant of an accomplice in felony, who to ſave himſelf confeſſed the fact, and accuſed any other principal or acceſſary, againſt whom he was bound to make good the charge by duel, or trial by the country, and then was pardoned life and members, but yet to ſuffer tranſportation.——Cum probator perfecerit quod promiſit, tenetur ei conventio, ſcilicet ut vitam habeat & membra. Sed in regno remanere non debet, etiamſi velit plegios invenire. Bracton. Vide Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 52. ſect. 42, 44.

Procedendo, Is a writ which lieth where an action is removed from an inferior to a ſuperior court, as the Chancery, King's Bench, or Common Pleas, by habeas corpus, certiorari, or writ of privilege; to ſend down the cauſe to the court from whence removed, TO PROCEED on it, it not appearing to the higher court that the ſuggeſtion is ſufficiently proved. F. N. B. 153. 5 Rep. 63. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 23.

And if the party who ſues out a habeas corpus, or certiorari, doth not put in good bail in time, (where good bail is required) then there goes this writ to the inferior court TO PROCEED non obſtante the habeas corpus, &c. 2 Lil. Abr. 376.

If a certiorari or habeas corpus, to remove a cauſe, be returned before a judge, the judge will give a rule thereon to put in good bail, by ſuch a day, which if defendant, on ſerving his attorney with a copy of the rule, doth not do, then the judge will ſign a warrant for a procedendo, to remove the cauſe where the action was firſt laid: Alſo if bail be put in at the time, and do not prove good, the judge will grant a rule for better bail to be put in by ſuch a day, or elſe to juſtify the bail already put in; which if defendant doth not do, the judge will then likewiſe grant a warrant for a procedendo. 2 Lil. 377.

Where bail put in on removal of a cauſe into B. R. is diſallowed by the court, if defendant on a rule for that purpoſe, and notice given, refuſe to put in better bail, ſuch as the court ſhall approve of, a procedendo may be granted; for diſallowing the bail makes defendant in the ſame condition as if he had put in no bail, and until the bail is put in and filed, the court is not poſſeſſed of the cauſe ſo as to proceed in it. Mich. 24 Car. B. R.

After a record returned, and defendant hath filed bail in B. R. on a cauſe being removed, a procedendo ought not to be granted; becauſe by giving and filing bail in this court, the bail below is diſcharged. Sid. 313. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1304. And it hath been held, that by the Common law, if a certiorari be once filed, the proceedings below can never be revived by any procedendo. Hawk. P. C. 294.

When a cauſe by the cuſtom of London is actionable, and will not bear an action at the Common law, if on habeas corpus or certiorari, brought to remove ſuch cauſe into B. R. it doth ſo appear to the court; the court will grant a procedendo to authoriſe the court of London to proceed in the matter; otherwiſe the party who brought the action would be without remedy. 2 Lil. Abr. 376. As in caſe of an action againſt a feme covert, ſued as a ſole trader. A feme covert ſole trader in London may become bankrupt. 3 Bur. 1782, &c. where this ſubject is very fully and ably diſcuſſed. This writ of procedendo is called a procedendo in loquela. See Black. Com. 1 V. 353.

Procedendo on Aid Prayer. If a man pray in aid of the King, in a real action, and aid be granted; it ſhall be awarded that he ſue to the King in Chancery, and the juſtices in the Common Pleas ſhall ſtay until the writ of procedendo de loquela come to them: And if it appear to the judges by pleading, or ſhewing of the party, that the King hath intereſt in the land, or ſhall loſe rent, &c. there the court ought to ſtay until they have from the King a procedendo in loquela: And then they may proceed in the plea, until they come to give judgment; when the juſtices ought not to proceed to judgment, without a writ for that purpoſe. New Nat. B. R. 342. So in a perſonal action, if defendant pray in aid of the King, the judges are not to proceed till they receive a procedendo in loquela. And though they may then proceed and try the iſſue joined, they ſhall not give judgment until a writ comes to them to proceed to judgment. Ibid.

Procedendo ad Judicium, Lies where the judges of any court delay the party, plaintiff or defendant, and will not give judgment in the cauſe, when they ought to do it. Wood's Inſt. 570.

If verdict paſs for the plaintiff in aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin before the juſtices of aſſiſe, and before they give judgment, by a new commiſſion, new juſtices are made; the plaintiff in aſſiſe may ſue forth a certiorari, directed to the other juſtices to remove the record before the new juſtices; and another writ to the new juſtices to receive and inſpect the record, and then proceed to judgment, &c. New Nat. Brev. 342, 343.

Where the authority of commiſſioners of oyer and terminer, &c. is ſuſpended by writ of ſuperſedeas; their power may be reſtored by a writ of procedendo. Regiſt. 124. 12 Aſſ. 21. H. P. C. 162. See Black. Com. 3 V. 109.

Proceſs, (Proceſſus a procedendo ab initio uſque ad finem) Is ſo called, becauſe it proceeds or goes out, upon former matter, either original or judicial; and hath two ſignifications: Firſt, it is largely taken for all the proceedings in any action, real or perſonal, civil or criminal, from the beginning to the end: Secondly, We call that the proceſs by which a man is called into any temporal court, becauſe it is the beginning or principal part thereof, by which the reſt is directed; or, if taken ſtrictly, it is the proceeding, after the original, before judgment. Britton 138. Lamb. lib. 4. Crompt. 133. 8 Rep. 157.

Proceſs is general or ſpecial; and ſpecial proceſs is that which is ſpecially appointed for any offence, &c. by ſtatute: And there is great diverſity of proceſs. F. N. B.

Proceſs to call perſons into court, &c. muſt be in the name of the King; and if it iſſue from the court of King's Bench, it ought to be under the teſte of the Chief Juſtice, or of the ſenior Judge of the court, if there be no Chief Juſtice; and if it iſſueth from any other court, it is to be under the teſte of the firſt in commiſſion, &c. Dalt. ch. 132. Finch 436. Cro. Car. 393.

No proceſs ſhall regularly iſſue in the King's name and by his writ, to apprehend a felon or other malefactor, unleſs there be an indictment or matter of record in the court, upon which the writ iſſues. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 575.

All legal proceedings commence by original writ, indictment, or information; or in B. R. by bill of Middleſex, or latitat, which is the original proceſs of this court; and is in nature of an original to cauſe appearance. 2 Lil. Abr. 377.

There is no need of proceſs on an indictment, &c. where defendant is preſent in court; only where he is abſent. 2 Hawk. 281.

The proceſs of capias, &c. on indictment is appointed by the 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 14. and 8 Hen. 6. c. 10. In actions of the caſe, and writs of annuity and covenant, by Stat. 19 Hen. 7. c. 9. 23 Hen. 8. c. 14. And no writ, proceſs, &c. ſhall be diſcontinued by the King's death. 1 Ann. ſt. 1. c. 8. ſ. 4.

If proceſs is awarded out of a court, which hath not juriſdiction of the principal cauſe, it is coram non judice and void: And the ſheriff executing it will be a treſpaſſer. 2 Leon. 89.

Proceedings in the ſuperior and inferior courts muſt be regularly and formally entered, according to the legal courſe; or they may be reverſed for error.

Anciently all law proceedings, &c. were in French: Though by ſtatute, ſince made, it was enacted, that it ſhould be pleaded and anſwered in Engliſh, and entered and inrolled in Latin. 36 Ed. 3. c. 15. 22 Car. 2. c. 3. The old entries of the law proceedings in French was required by William the Conqueror, it being a language which he himſelf knew; and the uſe of Latin is ſaid to be introduced by the clergy, when the biſhop and other ſpiritual perſons were judges, and chief officers of our courts; and this they did, as knowing, whatever alterations there were in national languages, the Latin would be generally underſtood, Yet ſome give another reaſon for it, that it was done to keep the people in ignorance, and to have in their own power only the interpretation of the laws. Forteſcue 100.

By a late ſtatute, all proceedings in the courts of juſtice ſhall be in the Engliſh tongue, and be written in a common ingroſſing hand, not court hand, in words at length, &c. on pain of forfeiting the ſum of 50 l. And miſtranſlations, errors in form, and miſtakes of clerkſhip, may be amended before or after judgment: Alſo the ſtatutes of jeofails extend to all forms, and proceedings in Engliſh, except in criminal caſes. But this ſtatute extendeth not to the court of Admiralty, as to certify any proceedings beyond the ſeas, &c. which may be in Latin as formerly. Stat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 26. And in the court of Receipt of the Exchequer in England, officers and clerks may carry on their buſineſs in their uſual courſe; alſo writs, proceſs, pleadings, &c. may be written expreſſing numbers by figures, and with uſual abbreviations in Engliſh; and names of writs, &c. to be expreſſed in the ſame language as hath been commonly uſed, by 6 Geo. 2. c. 6. c. 14.

As to civil proceſs, ſee Black. Com. 3 V. 279. xiii.—And as to the criminal proceſs, ſee ib. 4 V. 313.

Obſtructing the execution of lawful proceſs, is an offence againſt public juſtice, of a very high and preſumptuous nature; but more particularly ſo, when it is an obſtruction of an arreſt upon criminal proceſs. And it hath been holden, that the party oppoſing ſuch arreſt becomes thereby particeps criminis; that is, an acceſſary in felony, and a principal in treaſon. Black. Com. 4 V. 129.

Proceſſion. In cathedral and conventual churches, the members had their ſtated proceſſions, wherein they walked in their moſt ornamental habits, with muſic, ſinging hymns, and other ſuitable ſolemnity: And in every pariſh, there was a cuſtomary annual proceſſion of the pariſh prieſt, the patron of the church, with the chief flag, or holy banner, and the other pariſhioners, to take a circuit round the limits of the pariſh or manor, and pray for a bleſſing on the fruits of the earth; to which we owe our preſent cuſtom of perambulation, which in moſt places is ſtill called proceſſioning and going in proceſſion, though we have loſt the order and devotion, as well as pomp and ſuperſtition of it.

Proceſſum Continuando, Is a writ for the continuance of proceſs, after the death of the Chief Juſtice, or other juſtices in the commiſſion of oyer and terminer. Reg. Orig. 128.

Prochein Amy, (Proximus Amicus) Is uſed in law for him who is the next friend, or next of kin to a child in his nonage, and in that reſpect is allowed to deal for the infant in the management of his affairs; as to be his guardian if he holds lands in ſocage, and in the redreſs of any wrong done him. Stat. Weſt. 1. c. 48. Weſt. 2. c. 15. 2 Inſt. 261.

Prochein amy is commonly taken for guardian in ſocage; but otherwiſe it is he who appears in court for an infant who ſues any action, and aids the infant in purſuit of his action: For to ſue, an infant may not make an attorney, but the court will admit the next friend of the infant plaintiff; and a guardian for an infant defendant.

If no guardian is appointed by the father, &c. of an infant, the courſe of B. R. hath been uſed to allow one of the officers of the court to be prochein amy to the infant to ſue. Terms de Ley. 2 Lil. Abr. 52.

The courſe is now to appoint ſome friend, that he may anſwer coſts, if the infant fails in his ſuit. And I conceive the court will not ſuffer an infant to proceed in a ſuit till a prochein amy is appointed.

It hath been held, that a guardian and prochein amy are diſtinct, though either of them may be admitted for the plaintiff being an infant.

Prochein amy was never before the ſtatute Weſtm. 1. and was appointed in caſe of neceſſity, where an infant was to ſue his guardian, or the guardian would not ſue for him: for which reaſon he may be admitted to ſue by prochein amy, when he is to demand or gain any thing. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 997.

The plaintiff infant may ſue per guardianum, or per proximum amicum ad proſequendum; and if the admiſſion is to ſue per guardianum, when it ſhould be per proximum amicum, it will be well enough, there being many precedents both ways: But if he is ſued, it muſt be per guardianum. Cro. Car. 86, 115. Hut. 92. If an infant be diſturbed by the chief lord, ſo that he cannot bring aſſiſe, his prochein amy ſhall be admitted. 3 Ed. 1. c. 48. So where the infant is eloined, &c. 13 Ed. 1. c. 15. An infant is to defend by guardian, and the court will require one to be appointed to anſwer coſts, and to avoid error, as he cannot defend by attorney. See Infant, and Black. Com. 1 V. 464.

Prochein Avoidance, Is nothing but a power to preſent a miniſter to a church when it ſhall become void: As where one hath preſented a clerk to a church, and then grants the next avoidance to another, &c. See Avoidance.

Proclamation, (Proclamatio) Is a notice publicly given of any thing, whereof the King thinks fit to advertiſe his ſubjects, and ſo it is uſed. 7 Ric. 2. cap. 6.

It is plain that the King by his prerogative may, in certain caſes and SPECIAL OCCASIONS iſſue out Proclamations for prevention of offences, to ratify and confirm an ancient law, or, as ſome books expreſs it, quoad terrorem populi, to admoniſh them that they keep the laws on pain of his diſpleaſure; and ſuch Proclamations being grounded on the laws of the realm are of great force. Forteſc. de Laud. cap. 9. 11 Co. 87. 12 Co. 74, 75. Dalſ. 20 pl. 10. 2 Rol. Abr. 209. 3 Inſt. 162.

It is likewiſe clear, that the ſubject is obliged on pain of fine and impriſonment to obey every Proclamation legally made; and that though the thing prohibited were an offence before, that yet the Proclamation is a circumſtance which highly aggravates it; and on which alone the party diſobeying may be puniſhed. 12 Co. 74. Hob. 251.

It is clearly agreed, that no private perſon can make any Proclamation of a public nature, except by cuſtom, as is uſual in ſome cities and boroughs; this being a prerogative act, with which alone the King is intruſted. Bro, Proclamat. pl. 1. 12 Co. 75. Crom. Jur. 41.

But the King cannot by his Proclamation change any part of the Common law, ſtatutes or cuſtoms of this realm; nor can he by his Proclamation create any offence which was not an offence before; for theſe things cannot be done without a legiſlative power, of which in our conſtitution the King is but a part. Dalſ. 20. pl. 10. 11 Co. 87. b. 12 Co. 75.

On this foundation it hath been held, that the King's Proclamation prohibiting the importation of wines from France on pain of forfeiture, was againſt law, and void; there being no war at that time ſubſiſting between the nations. 2 Inſt. 63.

So where an act was made by which foreigners were licenſed to merchandize within London; and H. 4. by Proclamation prohibited the execution of it, and ordered that it ſhould be in ſuſpenſe uſque ad proximum parliamentum; and this was held to be againſt law. 12 Co. 75.

On a conference between ſome Lords of the Privy Council and the two Chief Juſtices (of which Lord Coke was one) and Ch. B. and Baron Altham, the queſtion was,

2dly, If the King might prohibit the making ſtarch of wheat?

And the judges were of opinion, that the ſubject could not be reſtrained in theſe particulars by the King's Proclamation. 12 Co. 74.

The King by proclamation may call or diſſolve parliaments, and declare war or peace; for theſe are prerogative acts with which he is intruſted as the executive part of the law; but if there be an actual war, it is not neceſſary in pleading to ſhew that ſuch war was proclaimed. 3 Inſt.

Inſt. 162. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 163. Owen 45. Raſt. Ent. 605.

The King by proclamation may legitimate foreign coin, and make it current money of this kingdom, according to the value impoſed by ſuch proclamation; he may legitimate baſe coin, or mixed below the ſtandard of ſterling: he may enhance coin to a higher denomination or value; and may decry money that is current in uſe and payment; and in all theſe caſes a proclamation, with a proclamation writ under the Great ſeal, is neceſſary. Co. Lit. 207. b. 5 Co. 114. b. Dav. 21. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 192, 197.

The King by proclamation may appoint faſts and days of thankſgiving and humiliation; and iſſue proclamations for preventing and puniſhing immorality and profaneneſs; and injoin reading the ſame in churches and chapels. Comp. Incumb. 354.

A proclamation muſt be under the Great ſeal, and if denied is to be tried by the record thereof; but if a man pleads that he was prevented doing a thing by proclamation; it ſeems the better opinion, that he need not aver that ſuch proclamation was under the Great ſeal; for alleging, that ſuch proclamation was made, it ſhall be intended to have been duly made. Cro. Car. 180. See 1 Rol. Rep. 172. Vide Cro Car. 130.

By the ſtat. 31 Hen. 8. c. 8. The King's proclamation was to be of the ſame effect as an act of parliament; not to prejudice life, liberty, &c. and contemners of it to be adjudged traitors.

But, as very juſtly obſerved by Mr. Juſtice Blackſtone in his Com. 1 V. 271. this was "a ſtatute, calculated to "introduce the moſt deſpotic tyranny, and which muſt "have proved fatal to the liberties of this kingdom, had "it not been luckily repealed in the minority of his ſucceſſor, about five years after," viz. by ſtat. 1 Ed. 6. c. 12. See alſo Black. Com. 4 V. 424.

The King may make a proclamation to his ſubjects, quoad terrorem populi, and put them in fear of his diſpleaſure; but not on any other certain pain, as forfeiture of their lands or goods, or to undergo the penalty of a fine and impriſonment, &c. Daliſ. 20. 2 Lil. Abr. 381, 382. Yet the King by his proclamation may inhibit his ſubjects that they go not out of the realm, without licence; and if the ſubject act contrary, for this contempt he ſhall be fined to the King. 12 & 13 Eliz. Dyer 296. Vide King and Privy Council. And Black. Com. 1 V. 270. 4 V. 424.

Proclamation of Courts, Is uſed particularly in the beginning or calling of a court, and at the diſcharge or adjourning thereof; for the attendance of perſons, and diſpatch of buſineſs: And before a parliament is diſſolved, &c. Public proclamation is to be made, that if any perſon hath any petition, he ſhall come in and be heard. Lex Conſtitut. 156.

Proclamation is made in Courts Baron, for perſons to come in and claim vacant copyholds, of which the tenants died ſeiſed ſince the laſt courts; and the lord may ſeize a copyhold, if the heir come not in to be admitted on proclamation, &c. 1 Lev. 63.

Proclamation of Exigents. On awarding an exigent, in order to outlawry, a writ of proclamation iſſues to the ſheriff of the county where the party dwells, to make three proclamations for defendant to yield himſelf, or be outlawed. Stat. 6 Hen. 8. c. 4. 31 Eliz. c. 3. 4 & 5 Wil. & Mar. c. 22. ſ. 4. See Black. Com. 3 V. 284. xvi. 3 V. 314.

Proclamation of a Fine. When any fine of land is paſſed, proclamation is ſolemnly made thereof in the court of Common Pleas where levied, after ingroſſing it; and tranſcripts are alſo ſent to the juſtices of aſſiſe, and juſtices of the peace of the county in which the lands lie, to be openly proclaimed there. 1 R. 3. c. 7. See Black. Com. 2 V. 352. xvi.

Proclamation of Nuſances. By ſtatute, proclamation is to be made againſt nuſances, and for the removal of them, &c. 12 R. 2. c. 13.

Proclamation of Rebellion, Is a writ whereby a man not appearing upon a ſubpœna, or an attachment in the Chancery, is deputed and declared a rebel, if he render not himſelf by a day aſſigned. See Commiſſion of Rebellion, and Black. Com. 3 V. 444.

Proclamation of Recuſants. There is a proclamation of recuſants, by which they ſhall be convicted, on non-appearance at the aſſiſes. 29 Eliz. c. 6. 3 Jac. 1. c. 4 & 5.

Pro confeſſo, Is where a bill is exhibited in Chancery, to which defendant appears, and is afterwards in contempt for not anſwering; when the matter contained in the bill ſhall be taken as if it were confeſſed by defendant. Terms de Ley.

If a defendant is in cuſtody for contempt in not anſwering, on a habeas corpus, which is granted by order of court, to bring him to the bar, the court aſſigns him a day to anſwer; and the day being expired, and no anſwer put in, a ſecond habeas corpus is iſſued, and the party being brought into court a further day is aſſigned; by which day, if he anſwer not, the bill on the plaintiff's motion ſhall be taken pro confeſſo, unleſs cauſe be ſhewed by a day; and for want of ſuch cauſe ſhewed on motion, the ſubſtance of the bill ſhall be decreed to plaintiff. Hill. 1662. Alſo after a fourth inſufficient anſwer, the matter of the bill not ſufficiently anſwered unto by the defendant ſhall be taken pro confeſſo, and decreed accordingly.

Stat. 5 Geo. c. 25. enacts, That if in any ſuit in equity any defendant, againſt whom proceſs ſhall iſſue, ſhall not cauſe his appearance to be entered according to the rules of the court, in caſe ſuch proceſs had been ſerved, and affidavit ſhall be made, that ſuch defendant is beyond the ſeas; or that, on inquiry at his uſual place of abode, he could not be found, ſo as to be ſerved, and that there is juſt ground to believe that ſuch defendant is gone out of the realm, or abſconds to avoid being ſerved; the court may make an order, appointing defendant to appear at a day therein to be named, and a copy of ſuch order ſhall, within fourteen days, be inſerted in the London Gazette, and publiſhed on ſome Lord's day, after divine ſervice, in the pariſh church where defendant made his uſual abode within thirty days next before his abſenting; and a copy of ſuch order ſhall be poſted up, viz. a copy of ſuch order made in Chancery, Exchequer or Dutchy Chamber, ſhall be poſted up at the Royal Exchange; and a copy of every ſuch order made in any of the courts of equity of the counties Palatine, or of the great ſeſſions in Wales, ſhall be poſted up in ſome market town within the juriſdiction of the court, neareſt to the place where defendant made his uſual abode, ſuch place of abode being alſo within the juriſdiction of the court; and if defendant do not appear within ſuch time as the court appoint, then, on proof made of publication of ſuch order as aforeſaid, the court may order plaintiff's bill to be taken pro confeſſo, and make ſuch decree as ſhall be juſt; and the court may order plaintiff to be paid his demands out of the eſtate ſequeſtred according to the decree; ſuch plaintiff giving ſecurity, to abide ſuch order touching the reſtitution of ſuch eſtate, as the court ſhall make on defendant's appearance. But in caſe plaintiff refuſe to give ſecurity, then the court ſhall order the effects ſequeſtred to remain under the direction of the court, until the appearance of defendant to defend ſuch ſuit.—Provided, That this act ſhall not affect perſons beyond the ſeas, unleſs affidavit be made of their being in England within two years before the ſubpœna: Nor extend to courts having a limited juriſdiction, unleſs oath be made of perſonal reſidence in ſuch juriſdiction one year before the ſubpœna.

Barnardiſton (401 to 404.) tells us, That it is not ſufficient on this ſtatute to make affidavit, that the party making it was informed, and believes that defendants withdrew themſelves in order to avoid being ſerved with the proceſs of the court. But it muſt be likewiſe ſworn by whom the deponent received ſuch information.

Defendant appeared, and ſtood out to a ſequeſtration, and afterwards, on getting time, put in an anſwer, which was reported inſufficient in near twenty exceptions, and was ſerved with a ſubpœna to make a better anſwer. The defendant put in another anſwer, alike inſufficient. It was inſiſted for defendant, that the practice of taking bills pro confeſſo is not of long ſtanding, the ancient way being to put the plaintiff to make proof of the ſubſtance of the bill; and that, in this caſe, taking all the bill pro confeſſo, where part had been ſufficiently anſwered, ſeemed very ſtrange. But it was anſwered, that an inſufficient anſwer is as no anſwer, therefore the whole to be taken pro confeſſo; and the Maſter of the Rolls decreed for plaintiff, But Lord Chancellor King, on an appeal, ſaid, He would conſider how matters ſtood at the time of ſuch decree, and that it was ſufficient that there then was an anſwer, and which the plaintiff had admitted to be ſo by ſuing his proceſs for a better; and that ſo defendant confeſſed the whole bill true, when by the Maſter's report, (which was a record of the ſame court) he had anſwered the greateſt part; and when the plaintiff himſelf had taken the firſt anſwer to be an anſwer in part by ſerving the defendant with proceſs to put in a better, was againſt common ſenſe; and reverſed the former decree: 2 William's Rep. 556.

If, on demurrer to a bill in equity, defendant obſtinately inſiſts on his demurrer, and refuſes to anſwer, where the court is of opinion, that ſufficient matter is alleged in the bill to oblige him to anſwer, and for the court to proceed upon, the court will decree the matter of the plaintiff's bill; for by the demurrer are confeſſed all matters of fact that are alleged. Curſ. Canc. 209.

Proctor, (Procurator) Is he who undertakes to manage another man's cauſe, in any court of the Civil or Eccleſiaſtical law, for his fee: Qui aliena negotia gerenda ſuſcipit. A proctor not to practice, if a popiſh recuſant. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. Not to act as juſtice of peace. 5 Geo. 2. c. 18. See Black. Com. 3 V. 25.

Proctors of the Clergy, (Procuratores cleri) Are thoſe who are choſen and appointed to appear for cathedral or other collegiate churches; as alſo for the common clergy of every dioceſe, to ſit in the Convocation houſe in the time of parliament.

On every new parliament the King directeth his writ to the archbiſhop of each province, for the ſummoning of all biſhops, deans, archdeacons, &c. to the convocation, and generally of all the clergy of his province, aſſigning them the time and place in the writ; then the archbiſhop of Canterbury, on his writ received, according to cuſtom directs his letters to the biſhop of London, as his provincial dean, firſt citing him peremptorily, and then willing him to cite in like manner all the biſhops, &c. and generally all the clergy of his province, to the place, and againſt the day prefixed in the writ; but directeth withal, that one proctor be ſent for every cathedral or collegiate church, and two proctors for the body of the inferior clergy of each dioceſe; and by virtue of theſe letters authentically ſealed, the biſhop of London directs his like letters ſeverally to the biſhop of every dioceſe of the province, citing them in like ſort, and willing them not only to appear, but alſo to admoniſh the deans and archdeacons perſonally to appear; and the cathedral and collegiate churches, and the common clergy of the dioceſe, to ſend their proctors to the place at the day appointed; and alſo willeth them to certify to the archbiſhop the names of every perſon ſo warned by them, in a ſchedule annexed to their letter certificatory: Then the biſhops proceed accordingly, and the cathedral and collegiate churches, and the body of the clergy make choice of their proctors; which being done and certified to the biſhop, he returneth all at the day. Cowell.

Proconſules, Were thoſe who were called Juſtices in eyre, or Juſticiarii errantes, in England. Cowell.

Procurations, (Procurationes) Are certain ſums of money which pariſh prieſts pay yearly to the biſhop or archdeacon, ratione viſitationis; formerly the viſitor demanded a proportion of meat and drink for his refreſhment, when he came abroad to do his duty, and examine the ſtate of the church; afterwards theſe were turned into annual payments of a certain ſum, which is called a procuration, being ſo much given to the viſitor, ad procurandum cibum & potum. And complaints were often made of the exceſſive charges of the procurations, which were prohibited by ſeveral councils and bulls; and that of Clement the Fourth is very particular, wherein mention is made that the Archdeacon of Richmond, viſiting the dioceſe, travelled with one hundred and three horſes, twenty-one dogs, and three hawks, to the great oppreſſion of religious houſes, &c.

Theſe are alſo called Proxies; and it is ſaid there are three ſorts of procurations or proxies; ratione viſitationis, conſuetudinis, & pacti; and that the firſt is of eccleſiaſtical cogniſance, but the two laſt are triable at law. Hardr. 180.

A libel was brought in the Spiritual court for procurations by the archdeacon of York, ſetting forth, that for ten or twenty years, &c. there had been due and paid to him ſo much yearly by a parſon and his predeceſſors; who ſuggeſted for a prohibition, that a duty had been payable, but denied the preſcription, and that the Eccleſiaſtical court cannot try preſcriptions; but it was adjudged, that procurations are payable of common right, as tithes are, and no action will lie for the ſame at Common law; if he had denied the quantum, then a prohibition might go. Raym. 360. See ſtat. 34 Hen. 8. c. 19.

Procurator, Is one who hath a charge committed to him by any perſon; in which general ſignification it hath been applied to a vicar or lieutenant, who acts inſtead of another; and we read of procurator regni, and procurator reipublicæ, which is a public magiſtrate: Alſo proxies of lords in parliament are in our law books called Procuratores; the biſhops are ſometimes termed procuratores eccleſiarum; and the advocates of religious houſes, who were to ſolicit the intereſts, and plead the cauſes, of the ſocieties, were denominated procuratores monaſterii; and from this word comes the common word proctor. It is likewiſe uſed for him who gathers the fruits of a benefice for another man; and procuracy for the writing or inſtrument whereby he is authoriſed. 3 R. 2. c. 3.

Prodes homines, Is a title often given in our old books to the Barons of the realm, or other military tenants, who were ſummoned to the King's council, and were no more than diſereti & fideles homines, who, according to their prudence and knowledge, were to give their counſel and advice.

Profert in Curia, Is where the plaintiff in an action declares on a deed, or defendant pleads a deed, he muſt do it with a profert in curia, to the end that the other party may at his own charges have a copy of it, and until then he is not obliged to anſwer it. 2 Lil. Abr. 382. And if a man pleads by virtue of an indenture, which is loſt, on affidavit made thereof, the court will compel the plaintiff to ſhew the counterpart, that defendant may plead thereto; or will grant an imparlance. Cro. Jac. 429.

When he who is party or privy in eſtate or intereſt, or who juſtifies in the right of him who is party or privy, pleads a deed; notwithſtanding the party privy claims but part of the original eſtate, yet he muſt ſhew the original deed. 10 Rep. 92, 93. But where a man is a ſtranger to a deed, and claims nothing in it, &c. there he may plead the patent or deed, without a profert in curia. Ibid.

A man may claim under a deed of uſes, without ſhewing it; becauſe the deed doth not belong to him, (tho' he claims by it) but to the covenantees, and he hath no means to obtain it; and for that it is an eſtate executed by the ſtatute of uſes, ſo as the party is in by law, like to tenant in dower, or by ſtatute, &c. who may have a rent-charge extended, and need not ſhew the deed. Cro. Car. 442. And in things executed, or eſtates determined, there need not be any profert in curia. 3 Lev. 204. Alſo an aſſignee of commiſſioners of bankrupts need not ſhew the bond to the bankrupt, becauſe he comes in by act of law, &c. Cro. Car. 209. Sed qu. If declaration not demurrable, if aſſignee does not make a profert in curia, of the bond, and if a defendant is compellable to plead, before oyer granted, if duly demanded?

No advantage or exceptions ſhall be taken for want of a profert in curia; but the court ſhall give judgment according to the very right of the cauſe, without regarding any ſuch omiſſion and defect, except the ſame be ſpecially and particularly ſet down, and ſhewn for cauſe of demurrer. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16.

Where a deed is pleaded and ſhewn in court, the deed in judgment of law remains in court all the term in which it is ſhewn; and if it be not denied, then at the end of the term it is delivered to the party to whom it belongs: If it be denied, it ſhall ſtill remain in court, for if it be found Non eſt factum, it ſhall be annulled. 3 Rep. 47, 74, 75. Profeſſion, (Profeſſio) Was uſed particularly for the entring into any religious order, &c. As where a monk offered himſelf to God, by a vow of obedience, chaſtity, and poverty, which he promiſed conſtantly to obſerve; and this was called Sanctæ religionis profeſſio, and the monk a religious profeſſed. This entring into religion, whereby a man is ſhut up from all the common offices of life, is termed a Civil Death. See Black. Com. 1 V. 132, &c.

Profits. A deviſe of the profits of lands, is a deviſe of the land itſelf. Dyer 210.

A huſband deviſeth the profits of his lands to his wife, until his ſon came of age, this was held to be a deviſe of the lands until that time: Tho' if the lands were deviſed to the ſon, and that his mother ſhould take the profits, of it until he came of age, &c. this would give the mother only an authority, not an intereſt. 2 Leon. 221.

By deviſe of profits, the lands uſually paſs; unleſs there are other words to ſhew the intention of the teſtator to be otherwiſe. Moor 753, 758. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 1051.

Profits of Courts. The profits ariſing from the King's ordinary courts of juſtice, make a branch of his revenue. And theſe conſiſt not only in fines impoſed upon offenders, forfeitures of recognizances, and amercements levied on defaulters; but alſo in certain fees due to the crown in a variety of legal matters, as, for ſetting the Great Seal to charters, original writs, and other forenſic proceedings, and for permitting fines to be levied of lands in order to bar entails, or otherwiſe to inſure titles. As none of theſe can be done without the immediate intervention of the King by himſelf or his officers, the law allows him certain perquiſites and profits, AS A RECOMPENCE FOR THE TROUBLE HE UNDERTAKES FOR THE PUBLIC. Theſe, in proceſs of time, have been almoſt all granted out to private perſons, or elſe appropriated to certain particular uſes: So that, tho' our law proceedings are ſtill loaded with their payment, very little of them is now returned into the King's Exchequer; for a part of whoſe royal maintenance they were originally intended. All future grants of them, however, by the ſtatute 1 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 7. are to endure for no longer time than the life of the prince who grants them. Black. Com. 1 V. 289.

Prohibition, (Prohibitio) Is a writ to forbid any court, to proceed in any cauſe there depending, on ſuggeſtion that the cognizance thereof belongeth not to the court. F. N. B. 39. But it is now moſt uſually taken for that writ which lieth for one who is impleaded in the court chriſtian, for a cauſe belonging to the temporal juriſdiction, or the conuſance of the King's court, whereby as well the party and his counſel, as the judge himſelf, and the regiſter are forbidden to proceed any further in that cauſe. Cowell.

As all external juriſdiction, whether eccleſiaſtical or civil, is derived from the crown, and the adminiſtration of juſtice is committed to variety of courts; hence it hath been the care of the crown, that theſe courts keep within the limits and bounds of the ſeveral juriſdictions preſcribed them; for this purpoſe the writ of prohibition was framed; which iſſues out of the ſuperior court of Common law to reſtrain inferior courts, whether ſuch courts be temporal, eccleſiaſtical, maritime, military, &c. on a ſuggeſtion that the cognizance of the matter belongs not to ſuch courts; and in caſe they exceed their juriſdiction, the officer who executes the ſentence, and in ſome caſes the judge who gives it, are puniſhable in ſuch ſuperior courts, ſometimes at the ſuit of the King, ſometimes at the ſuit of the party, ſometimes at the ſuit of both, according to the variety of the caſe. 2 Inſt. 601. F. N. B. 40. 12 Co. 76. 1 And. 279. 2 Jon. 213. Skin. 628.

The reaſon of prohibitions in general is, that they preſerve the right of the King's crown, and courts, and the quiet of the ſubject; that it is the wiſdom and policy of the law, to ſuppoſe both beſt preſerved when every thing runs in its right channel, according to the original juriſdiction of every court; as by the ſame reaſon that one might be allowed to incroach, another might; which would produce nothing but confuſion in the adminiſtration of juſtice. Show. Par. Ca. 63.

So that prohibitions do not import that the eccleſiaſtical or other inferior temporal courts are alia than the King's courts, but ſignify that the cauſe is drawn ad aliud examen than it ought to be; therefore it is always ſaid in all prohibitions (be the court eccleſiaſtical or temporal to which it is awarded) that the cauſe is drawn ad aliud examen contra coronam & dignitatem Regiam. 2 Inſt. 602. 1 Roll. Rep. 252. 3 Bulſt. 120. Palm. 297.

1. What courts may grant a prohibition; and whether the granting it be diſcretionary, or ex debito juſtitiæ.
2. Who have a right to, and may demand, and join in a prohibition.
3. Of the ſuggeſtion for, and manner of obtaining a prohibition.
4. At what time a prohibition is to be, and in what caſes it may be granted, to inferior temporal courts.
5. In what caſes prohibitions are to be granted to the ſpiritual courts.

1. What courts may grant a prohibition, and whether the granting it be diſcretionary, or ex debito juſtitiæ.

The ſuperior courts of Weſtminſter, having a ſuperintendency over all inferior courts, may in all caſes of innovation, &c. award a prohibition; in this the power of the court of B. R. has never been doubted, being the ſuperior Common law court in the kingdom. F. N. B. 53. 4 Inſt. 71.

Alſo the court of Chancery may award a prohibition which may iſſue as well in vacation as in term time, but ſuch writ is returnable into B. R. or C. B. Bro. Prohibition, pl. 6. 4 Inſt. 81. 1 Peer. Will. 43.

If one be ſued in a inferior court for a matter out of the juriſdiction, defendant may either have a prohibition from one of the Common law courts of Weſtminſter-Hall; or in regard this may happen in vacation, when only the Chancery is open, he may move that court for a prohibition; but then it muſt appear by oath, that the fact did ariſe out of the juriſdiction, and that defendant tendered a foreign plea, which was refuſed; and if a prohibition has been granted out of Chancery improvidè, and without theſe circumſtances attending it, the court will grant a ſuperſedeas thereto. 1 Peer Will. 476.

As the juriſdiction of the court of C. B. is founded on original writs iſſuing out of Chancery, it hath been doubted, whether this court could, without writ or plea depending, award a prohibition; but this point has been determined, viz. that this court may on a ſuggeſtion grant prohibitions, to keep as well temporal as eccleſiaſtical courts within their juriſdictions, and that without any original writ or plea depending; the Common law being, in theſe caſes, a prohibition of itſelf, and ſtanding inſtead of an original. Bro. Prohibition, pl. 6. Noy 153. 12 Co. 58, 108. Bro. Conſultation, pl. 3. 4 Inſt. 99. 2 Brownl. 17.

Accordingly it hath been adjudged, That a prohibition ought to be granted by C. B. to the court of delegates, for ſuing there to avoid the inſtitution of a clerk to a church in Lancaſhire, after induction, tho' the quare impedit for the church could not be brought in C. B. but only in the county of Lancaſter; becauſe the title of the advowſon was not queſtioned by this prohibition, but the intruſion on the Common law, of which this court has ſpecial care. Moor 861. 2 Rol. Abr. 317. Hob. 15.

But as to the courts of B. R. and C. B. this difference hath been made, That in the firſt of thoſe courts a prohibition may be awarded on a bare ſurmiſe, without any ſuggeſtion ON RECORD; and ſuch writ is only in nature of a commiſſion prohibitory, which is diſcontinued by demiſe of the King; but that as to a prohibition iſſuing out of C. B. the ſuggeſtion muſt be on record, therefore is conſidered as the ſuit of the party, and in which he may be nonſuited, and is not diſcontinued by demiſe of the King. Noy 77. Palm. 422. Latch 114. Yet, if inſiſted on, a prohibition cannot be moved for in B. R. 'till the ſuggeſtion be entred on the roll. 1 Salk. 136. per Holt Ch. J. And indeed it is the conſtant practice, to enter the ſuggeſtion on the roll, and to leave a copy thereof with the clerk of the papers, previous to the motion.

If the King's farmer, or copyholder of the King's manor, be ſued in the eccleſiaſtical court for tithes, on a ſuggeſtion in the court of Exchequer that he preſcribes to pay a certain modus in lieu of tithes, he ſhall have a prohibition, and ſuch modus ſhall be tried there. Palm. 525. Lane 39. 1 Roll. Abr. 539.

The grand ſeſſions of North Wales may ſend a prohibition, and write to the ſpiritual courts there. 1 Sid. 92. but for this ſee Cro. Car. 341. 1 Jon. 330. Vaugh. 411.

It is laid down, that tho' a ſurmiſe be a matter of fact, and triable by a jury, yet it is in the diſcretion of the court to deny a prohibition when it appears to them that the ſurmiſe is not true. Hob. 67.

But it hath been held, that awarding a prohibition is a matter diſcretionary, that is, That from the circumſtances of the caſe, the ſuperior courts are at liberty to exerciſe a legal diſcretion therein, but not an arbitrary one in refuſing prohibition, where in ſuch like caſes they have been granted, or where by law they ought to be granted. Winch 78.

It hath been determined in the houſe of Lords, That no writ of error will lie on the refuſal of a prohibition; but when a conſultation is awarded, it is with an ideo conſideratum eſt, and then a writ of error will lie. 1 Lord Raym. 545.

If the maſter of a ſhip ſues in the Admiralty for his wages, and a prohibition is moved for, on a ſuggeſtion that the contract was made on land, and the court is of opinion that a prohibition ought to be granted; in this caſe they will not compel the party to find ſpecial bail to the action in the court above. Salk. 33. Carth. 518. Cum. 74. 1 Lord Raym. 576.

If there is judgment againſt a ſimoniſt, who by the aſſent of parties is to continue for a certain time on the benefice, and who the expiration of the time refuſes to remove, but commits waſte, a prohibition to ſtay waſte may be had by the patron, incumbent or any other perſon, becauſe that is the King's writ; and any one may pray a prohibition for the King, and it is grantable ex debito juſtitiæ, and not in the diſcretion of the court. Comp. Incumb. 43. 1 Sid. 65. Hob. 247. Yet vide contra ſupra.

2. Who have a right to, and may demand, and join in a prohibition.

The King may ſue for a prohibition, tho' the plea in the ſpiritual court be between two common perſons, becauſe the ſuit is in derogation of his crown and dignity. F. N. B. 40.

So if the eccleſiaſtical court hold plea of any matter which belongs not to their juriſdiction, on information thereof to the King's courts, a prohibition will iſſue. 2 Inſt. 607.

As if a man libels in the ſpiritual court for a matter which does not appertain to that court, but to the Common law, as a matter of frank-tenement; yet he himſelf, againſt his own ſuit, may pray a prohibition, and have it. 2 Roll. Abr. 312. 1 Leon. 130. Gouldſ. 149. 12 Co. 56.

So where plaintiff in the ſpiritual court brought a prohibition to ſtay his own ſuit there, for that he ſuing for tithes by virtue of a leaſe made by the vicar of A. for three years, defendant claimed to be diſcharged of tithes by a former leaſe and compoſition by deed; and in this caſe it was held, that the plaintiff himſelf may have a prohibition to ſtay the ſuit; for the eccleſiaſtical judges are not to meddle with the trial of leaſes or real contracts, tho' they have juriſdiction of the original cauſe (viz. the tithes); for the leaſe is in the realty, and is not merely accidental; and it makes no difference, that the plaintiff brings prohibition to ſtay his own ſuit; for if the temporal court has knowledge by any means, that the ſpiritual court meddles with temporal trials, a prohibition ought to be awarded. Cro. Jac. 351. 2 Bulſt. 283. Lit. Rep. 20.

If a vicar ſues a pariſhioner for tithes in the ſpiritual court, and the parſon appropriate appears there pro intereſſe ſuo, and prays a prohibition, it ſhall be granted. 2 Rol. Abr. 312. Cro. Eliz. 251. Kelw. 110.

If leſſee for years is ſued in the ſpiritual court for tithes he in reverſion may have a prohibition. Moor 915. Cro. Eliz. 55.

But no man is intitled to a prohibition unleſs he is in danger of being injured by ſome ſuit actually depending, therefore on a petition to the archbiſhop, or other eccleſiaſtical judge no prohibition lies. March 22, 45. A prohibition qua timet does not lie. Allen 56.

If ſeveral libels are exhibited againſt A. and B. in a matter in which the court hath not conuſance, A. and B. cannot join in a prohibition: ſo if the griefs be ſeveral, as ſome books ſay. Noy 131. 1 Leon. 286. Cro. Car. 129.

But where the vicar of A. libelled ſeveral perſons ſeverally for tithes, who joined in a prohibition, ſuggeſting a modus; and tho' the court held in this caſe, that the prohibition was not regularly brought, being in all their names, when there were ſeveral libels; yet inaſmuch as this was on a cuſtom, and matter triable at Common law in which the Eccleſiaſtical court was properly prohibited, tho' not in exact form, they refuſed to award a conſultation, but directed that the parties ſhould put in ſeveral declarations, as if there had been ſeveral prohibitions. Yelv. 128—9. Owen 13 L. P. adjudged.

So if A. libels againſt B. and C. for defamation, and they ſue a prohibition, they ſhall join in attachment on it; and it is no objection to ſay, that the defamation was ſeveral. 1 Ld. Raym. 127. and ſee 1 Vent 265. Raym. 425. Comb. 448.

Where two or more are allowed to join in a prohibition, and one dies, the writ ſhall not abate; becauſe nothing is to be recovered: they are only to be diſcharged. Owen 13.

3. Of the ſuggeſtion for, and manner of obtaining a prohibition.

Where the matter ſuggeſted for a prohibition appears on the face of the libel, an affidavit is never inſiſted on; but if it does not appear on the face of the libel, or if a prohibition is moved for, for more than appears on the face of the libel, to be out of their juriſdiction, there ought to be an affidavit of the truth of the ſuggeſtion. 2 Salk. 549. 1 Peer Will. 65, 477.

The ſuggeſtion in the temporal courts may be traverſed. 2 Inſt. 611. 2 Co. 44. Moor 525.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe, why a prohibition ſhould not be granted to ſtay a ſuit againſt plaintiff in the court of the archdeacon of Litchfield, for not going to church, nor receiving the ſacrament thrice a year, on ſuggeſtion of the ſtatute of Eliz. and toleration act, and then qualifying himſelf within the act, and alledging, that he pleaded it below, and they refuſed to receive his plea; cauſe was ſhewn, that this fact was falſe, and that the plaintiff was not a diſſenter, nor had qualified himſelf ut ſupra, therefore hoped the court would not ſuffer the rule to ſtand unleſs there was an affidavit of the fact; for by that means any perſon might come and ſuggeſt a falſe fact, and ouſt the ſpiritual court of their juriſdiction, which the court admitted; therefore for want of ſuch affidavit the rule was diſcharged. 1 Ld. Raym. 1211.

If a plea to an inferior juriſdiction be properly tendred, which they refuſe, tho' this be a good cauſe for a prohibition, yet an affidavit MUST be made of the refuſal. Skin. 20. Hard. 406. 3 Keb. 217.

A motion was made for a prohibition to the Eccleſiaſtical court of London, for calling a woman whore, on a ſuggeſtion that the words were actionable there by cuſtom of the place; but the court would not grant a prohibition without oath made, that if any ſuch words were ſpoken, it was in London, and not elſewhere. 4 Mod. 367.

On a libel for calling the plaintiff old thief and old whore; defendant ſuggeſted for a prohibition, that if any ſuch words were ſpoken, they were ſpoken at the ſame time; but this ſuggeſtion was held ill, becauſe the words ought to have been fully confeſſed. 1 Vent. 10.

By 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 13. it is enacted, "That if any party ſue for any prohibition, that then the ſame party, before any prohibition ſhall be granted, ſhall bring and deliver to the hands of ſome of the judges of the ſame court, where ſuch party demanded prohibition, the very true copy of the libel depending in the Eccleſiaſtical court concerning the matter where the party demandeth prohibition, ſubſcribed with the hand of the ſame party, and under the copy of the libel ſhall be written the ſuggeſtion, wherefore the party demandeth the prohibition; and in caſe the ſuggeſtion, by two witneſſes at the leaſt, be not proved true in the court where the prohibition ſhall be granted, then the party, that is hindered of his ſuit in the Eccleſiaſtical court by ſuch prohibition, ſhall on his requeſt without delay have a conſultation granted in the ſame caſe in the court where the prohibition was granted, and ſhall recover double coſts and damages againſt the party that ſo purſued the prohibition; the coſts and damages to be aſſeſſed by the court where the conſultation ſhall be granted; for which coſts and damages the party to whom they ſhall be awarded may have an action of debt by bill, plaint or information, in any court of record. See 27 H. 8. cap. 20. and 32 H. 8. c. 7. to which this act refers.

In the conſtruction of the above-mentioned ſtatute the following opinions have been holden.

That this ſtatute referring to the ſtatutes 27 H. 8. c. 20. & 32 H. 8. c. 7. which extend to tithes and offerings generally, all ſuch tithes and church duties as are mentioned in thoſe ſtatutes are as much within this act, as if particularly enumerated. 2 Inſt. 662. Comp. Incumb. 600. Dyer 170. b.

Therefore it extends to prohibitions to ſuits of ſmall tithes as well as great. Yelv. 102. 2 Ld. Raym. 1172.

So it hath been adjudged, that the ſuggeſtion of a modus decimandi ought to be proved within ſix months, being within the act. Noy 148. Yelv. 104. L. P.

So where one, who was ſued for tithe of hay in the ſpiritual court, ſuggeſted for a prohibition, that he was to pay ſo much on an arbitrament; and it was held, that this ſuggeſtion ought to be proved, as well as one made of a modus decimandi: ſo on a ſuggeſtion on the ſtatute 31 H. 8. c. 13. ſ. 21. that lands are tithe free, becauſe the clauſe requiring the proof of a ſuggeſtion, is general, and not limited to real compoſition. 1 Rol. Rep. 55.

So on a ſuggeſtion, that the ſuit in the ſpiritual court was for tithes of heath and barren ground improved within ſeven years after the improvement, contrary to the ſtatute; in this caſe proof of the ſuggeſtion within ſix months was held neceſſary. 1 Jon. 231. Cro. Car. 208.

But it hath been held, that there needs no proof of the ſuggeſtion where the ſuit is for tithes contrary to common right, or where the contract of the party is ſuggeſted. Cumb. 147.

It hath been held, that the ſuggeſtion need not be proved ſtrictly, nor with preciſe certainty as to all its circumſtances; but that if it be proved in ſubſtance, or in ſuch a manner as to ſhew that the Eccleſiaſtical court has not juriſdiction, it is ſufficient. Cro. Eliz. 736. Moor 911.

The ſuggeſtion muſt be proved by honeſt and ſufficient witneſſes, which is required by the expreſs words of the ſtatute; therefore the teſtimony of one attainted of felony, excommunicated or convicted of recuſancy, is, as in other caſes, to be rejected. 2 Bulſt. 154.

But it hath been held, that perſons, ſuch as pariſhioners, &c. who may not be ſufficient and able witneſſes at a trial at law, may notwithſtanding be ſufficient witneſſes to prove the ſuggeſtion; the chief intent of the ſtatute being to prevent vexatious ſuggeſtions; alſo it hath been held, that after the admitting and recording the proof of the ſuggeſtion, nothing is to be objected againſt the perſons of the evidence. Mich. 27 Car. 2. in C. B. Sharp v. Hobart.

If a ſuggeſtion conſiſts of two parts, it is ſaid to be ſufficient to produce one witneſs to one, and another to another. 1 Vent. 107.

It hath been held, that the ſix months for proof of the ſurmiſe ſhall be accounted according to the calendar; for that this being a computation which concerns the church, it is but reaſonable that it ſhould be done according to the computation uſed in the Eccleſiaſtical law. Hob. 197. Lit. Rep. 19. 2 Mod. 58.

It is ſaid, that the time of ſix months given by the ſtatute to prove the ſuggeſtion ought to be intended ſix months in term time, and that the vacation ſhould be no part of the time; but this hath been ſince adjudged otherwiſe, and that the time ſhall commence from the teſte of the writ of prohibition, and not from the time of the rule made for awarding it. Moor 573. Noy 30. 2 Ld. Raym. 1172. 2 Salk. 554.

If the ſurmiſe be proved before one of the judges within the ſix months, altho' it be not recorded till after the ſix months by the court, it is well enough. Noy 30. It muſt be entered in the office. 2 Show. 308.

It hath been held, that proof which is not ſufficient, may be ſupplied by better proof within the ſix months, but not after. Lit. Rep. 155.

The party on failure of proof of the ſuggeſtion, ſhall not only have double coſts and damages, but alſo his coſts and damages in the action he brings for recovery of them. Bendl. 143. See ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 11.

But if the prohibition be grounded partly on a modus, which needs no proof, and partly on the contract of the parties, which needs no proof, there ought not to be double coſts; for mixing the contract with the manner of tithing privileges the whole. Brownl. 99. Yelv. 119.

So where, for a variance between the libel and ſuggeſtion, a conſultation was awarded, and double coſts adjudged defendant; this was held to be error by the very letter of the ſtatute, which gives double coſts only for want of proving the ſuggeſtion, and for no other cauſe. Yelv. 79, 80.

So where a prohibition was obtained on a ſuggeſtion which was not proved within the ſix months, in which defendant took iſſue with the plaintiff, which was found for plaintiff; and in this caſe it was reſolved, that defendant ſhould not have double coſts for want of the ſuggeſtion's being proved; for the ſtatute is, that he ſhall have a conſultation and double coſts; but in this caſe he could not have a conſultation, the matter in iſſue being found againſt him; but ought to have prayed a conſultation on the ſuggeſtion not being proved, and then ſhould have had his double coſts. Latch 140.

The ſurmiſe or ſuggeſtion may be brought in by attorney, and need not be in proper perſon. 1 Leon. 286.

A prohibition is not to be granted the laſt day of term, but on motion a rule may be obtained to ſtay proceedings till the enſuing term. Latch. 7. 2 Rol. Rep. 456.

4. At what time a prohibition is to be, and in what caſes it may be granted, to inferior temporal courts.

In all caſes where it appears on the face of the libel, that the ſpiritual court, &c. have not a juriſdiction, a prohibition may be awarded, and is grantable as well after as before ſentence; for the King's ſuperior courts have a ſuperintendency over all inferior juriſdictions, and are to take care that they keep within their due bounds. 2 Inſt. 602. 2 Rol. Abr. 319. Noy 137. 1 Sid. 65. Cro. Eliz. 571. Moor 462, 907. Skin. 299. Carth. 463. March 153. 2 Rol. Rep. 24. Comb. 356.

But where the court has a natural juriſdiction of the thing, but is reſtrained by ſome ſtatute; as by 23 H. 8. c. 9. for not citing out of the dioceſe, there the party muſt come before ſentence; for after pleading and admitting the juriſdiction of the court below, it would be hard and inconvenient to grant a prohibition. See the authorities ſupra, and Cro. Car. 97. 2 Show. 145. Vent. 61. 6 Mod. 252. Fareſt. 137. Godb. 163, 243. 5 Mod. 341. Hetl. 19. 12 Co. 76. Salk. 543.

On a motion for prohibition the caſe was, defendant libelled in the ſpiritual court for tithes of faggots made of loppings of trees; and the ſuggeſtion for a prohibition was, that theſe loppings were cut from the ſtumps of timber trees above the growth of twenty years; and it was alledged, that ſentence was given in the ſpiritual court, therefore plaintiff comes here too late to have a prohibition: but per Holt, the ſentence will not hinder the having a prohibition in any caſe, but in caſe of prohibitions grounded on 23 H. 8. c. 9. for citing out of the dioceſe; but becauſe the plaintiff had not pleaded this matter in the ſpiritual court, they denied the prohibition, becauſe the ſpiritual court has a general juriſdiction of tithes; and if any ſpecial matter deprives them of their juriſdiction, it muſt be pleaded there; and if it had been pleaded there, and iſſue joined on it, and on the trial it had been found not to be ſilva cædua, it had been well; but if they had refuſed to admit the plea, a prohibition ſhould have been granted. 2 Ld. Raym. 835.

A prohibition doth lie as well to a temporal court as to the ſpiritual, court of admiralty or other court, whoſe proceedings are different from the Common law, if ſuch temporal court exceed the bounds of its juriſdiction, or take cognizance of matters not ariſing within its juriſdiction. F. N. B. 45. 2 Inſt. 229, 243, 601. 2 Rol. Rep. 379. 1 Rol. Rep. 252.

As if treſpaſs vi & armis be brought in the county, a prohibition lies to plaintiff. F. N. B. 47.

So if one ſueth another in a court baron or other court, which is not a court of record, for charters concerning inheritance or freehold, he ſhall have a prohibition. F. N. B. 47.

A perſon having obtained judgment in B. R. for his debt and damages, brought action for recovery of them againſt the bail in the court of the Tower of London, in which action the party was taken on a capias, and was reſcued, after which plaintiff brought his action on the caſe in the court for the reſcue; and all this appearing to the court of B. R. they granted a prohibition. 1 Rol. Rep. 54.

So where an action of debt was brought in the Marſhalſea, on a judgment in B. R. and a prohibition was granted. 2 Salk. 439.

A ſuit was ſurmiſed to be before the Lord preſident of the marches, for an office, between the grantee of the Lord preſident and, a ſtranger, wherein the only queſtion would be, whether the grant of that office belonged to the Lord preſident; and, becauſe in this caſe he would be as it were both judge and party, a prohibition was granted. 1 Keb. 648.

If there be one intire contract above 40*s*. and a man ſues for it in a court baron, ſevering it into ſmall ſums under 40*s*. a prohibition ſhall be granted, becauſe this is done to defraud the court of the King. 19 H. 6. 54. 2 Rol. Abr. 280. F. N. B. 46.

An action was brought in the hundred court for 40*s*. in which action plaintiff confeſſed that he was ſatisfied one ſhilling, which being done with an intent to give that court juriſdiction, and to defraud the ſuperior courts, a prohibition was granted. Palm. 564.

If there be ſeveral contracts between A. and B. at ſeveral times for divers ſums, each under 40*s*. but amounting in the whole to a ſum ſufficient to intitle the ſuperior court to a juriſdiction, they ſhall be ſued for in ſuch ſuperior, and not in an inferior court, which is not of record. 1 Vent. 65.

So in a prohibition to the court of the honour of Eye, where the caſe was:—one contracted with another for divers parcels of malt, the money to be paid for each parcel being under 40*s*. he levied divers plaints thereupon in the ſaid court; wherefore the court here granted a prohibition; becauſe tho' there be ſeveral contracts, yet as plaintiff might have joined them all in one action, he ought to have ſo done, and ſued here, and not put defendant to unneceſſary vexation, any more than he can ſplit an entire debt into divers, to give the inferior court juriſdiction in fraudem legis. 1 Vent 73. 2 Keb. 617. 1 Show. 11.

It is laid down by Coke, and admitted in a variety of caſes, that no inferior court can hold plea of any tranſitory action, if not made within the juriſdiction, and that the cauſe of action muſt be alledged to ariſe within ſuch juriſdiction. 2 Inſt. 231. 1 Sand. 74. 2 Jon. 230. 1 Show. 10. and ſee tit. Courts.

Therefore, in an action on a promiſe in an inferior court, not only the promiſe, but the conſideration muſt be alledged to ariſe WITHIN the inferior juriſdiction, and muſt be ſo proved on the trial. 1 Rol. Abr. 545

But if plaintiff had ſhewn that the money had been lent infra juriſdictionem curiæ, or if it had been for goods there ſold, the plaintiff would have had no need to ſay, that the defendant aſſumed to pay infra juriſdictionem curiæ; becauſe the law creates the promiſe on the creation of the debt, which debt being within the juriſdiction, the promiſe ſhall be intended there alſo. Lord Raym. 211.

In all caſes where inferior courts aſſume a juriſdiction, or hold plea of a matter not ariſing within their limits, the party hath his remedy, and may ſtay their proceedings by prohibition; but ſuch prohibition can only regularly be obtained by its appearing on oath made, that the fact did ariſe out of the juriſdiction, and that the defendant tendered a foreign plea, which was refuſed. 6 Mod. 146. Carth. 402. 1 Salk. 201. 1 Peer Will 476.

In the caſe of Mendyke v. Stint it was greatly inſiſted upon, that tho' the party neglected to plead to the juriſdiction, yet, the matter ariſing out of the inferior juriſdiction, the ſuperior courts ought to grant a prohibition; for otherwiſe the parties, their counſel and attornies, would give a juriſdiction to inferior courts which they were not intitled to by law; but it was otherwiſe adjudged in this caſe; and it ſeems to be now agreed, that after admitting the juriſdiction, or after imparlance, the party cannot apply for a prohibition. 2 Mod. 271.

But theſe things were agreed by the court.

1. If any matter appears in the declaration, which ſheweth that the cauſe of action did not ariſe infra juriſdictionem, there a prohibition may be granted at any time.

2. If the ſubject matter in the declaration be not proper for the judgment and determination of ſuch court, there alſo a prohibition may be granted at any time.

3. If defendant, who intended to plead to the juriſdiction, is prevented by any artifice, as by giving a ſhort day, or by the attorney's refuſing to plead it, &c. or if his plea be not accepted, or is over-ruled; in all theſe caſes a prohibition likewiſe will lie at any time. 2 Mod. 273.

A motion was made for a prohibition to be directed to the ſheriff's court in Briſtol, on ſuggeſtion that cauſes of action ariſing out of the juriſdiction of the ſheriff's court ought not to be ſued there; and this motion was made in behalf of defendant in the action, before he had appeared, to ſtay the proceedings of the court, who proceeded to attach his goods in the hands of a garniſhee; and Sir B. Shower oppoſed the motion; becauſe defendant could not pray a prohibition on ſuggeſtion of a matter which he could not plead; and as here he could not plead this before appearance, ſo he ought not to make ſuch a motion before appearance. And per Holt, a man ſhall not plead to the juriſdiction until he appear; but if the original cauſe of action aroſe out of the juriſdiction of the court, the garniſhee may plead it; and of that opinion was Hale Ch. J. but if it was debt on a ſimple contract, it is attachable where the perſon of the debtor is. 1 Ld. Raym. 346.

So in the caſe of Clerk v. Andrews, where Shower moved for a prohibition to the court of the ſheriffs of London to ſtay proceeding, where they attached the debt of the garniſhee, becauſe it aroſe out of the juriſdiction, but it was denied, becauſe the debt was on ſimple contract, which follows the perſon of the debtor. Ld. Raym. 347.

If one ſues another in the ſpiritual court for a chattel or debt, defendant ſhall have a prohibition. So if he ſues for a treſpaſs. F. N. B. 40.

If the ſpiritual courts take on them to try the boundaries of a pariſh, a prohibition lies. 2 Rol. Abr. 291. 7 Co. 44. 1 Rol. Rep. 332. Cro. Eliz. 228. 3 Leon. 829. 3 Keb. 286. S. P. becauſe the preſcription is the ground thereof.

If a ſuit be by a parſon for tithes, and defendant plead, that the place where, is in another pariſh, a prohibition lies; becauſe they meddle with that which is out of their juriſdiction, though the original thing be of their cognizance, and this comes in obliquely. 2 Rol. Abr. 282. 1 Show. 10. Noy 147. S. P.

So if the vicar of a pariſh libels againſt another to avoid his inſtitution to the church of D. which he ſuppoſes to be a chapel of eaſe, appertaining to his vicarage, and defendant ſuggeſts, that D. is a pariſh of itſelf, and not a chapel of eaſe; a prohibition will be granted, for they ſhall not try the bounds of the pariſh. 2 Rol. Abr. 291.

So if the queſtion be in the court chriſtian, whether a church be a parochial church, or a chapel of eaſe; a prohibition lies. Ibid.

But if the bounds of two vills lying in the ſame pariſh come in queſtion in the ſpiritual court, no prohibition lies; for ſuch bounds are triable in the eccleſiaſtical court, though thoſe of pariſhes are not. 1 Lev. 78.

The eccleſiaſtical courts have cognizance of a way to a church, and for not repairing ſuch way the parties may be proceeded againſt in the ſpiritual court. March. 45.

So if a parſon is prevented from carrying away his tithe by the ſtopping up the uſual way, he may have his remedy in the eccleſiaſtical court, grounded on the ſtatute 2 Ed. 6. Bulſt. 67. 1 Jon. 230.

But if the queſtion be, whether he is to have one way or another, or whether ſuch a way be a highway or not; this cannot be tried in the ſpiritual court. March. 15. 1 Bulſt. 67. 2 Rol. Abr. 287. S. P. adjudged.

So if the churchwardens of a church ſue for a way to the church, which they claim to appertain to all the pariſhioners by preſcription, a prohibition ſhall be granted; for this right being grounded on the preſcription, is to be tried in the temporal courts. 2 Rol. Rep. 41, 287.

If a man be admitted, inſtituted and inducted, and a ſuit is commenced in the eccleſiaſtical court to avoid the inſtitution, ſuppoſing it not valid; though the thing be of their cognizance, yet becauſe the induction, which is temporal, and gives a lay right, may depend on it, a prohibition lies. Hob. 15. Latch 205. 1 Bulſt. 179. Lit. Rep. 165. Poph. 133. 1 Rol. Abr. 282. 1 Show. Rep. 10.

If there be a ſuit for tithes in the eccleſiaſtical court, and the tenant pleads, that the party who ſues is not incumbent, but that J. S. is; and this plea, becauſe it goes to the right of the incumbency, is rejected, a prohibition lies, for by denying the tenant this liberty he might be twice charged for tithes. Cro. El. 228. 3 Leon. 265.

There are frequent inſtances of prohibitions being granted to the eccleſiaſtical courts, to ſtay ſuits for fees by chancellors, regiſters and proctors in thoſe courts, on this foundation, that demands pro opere & labore are properly determinable at Common law, and fees cannot be ſettled by the canon law; and that the ſpiritual court can only give coſts and expences of ſuit, but that no action of debt will lie for ſuch coſts at Common law; and that the profits of an office being temporal, the remedy for them ought to be by quantum meruit; or, in caſe it be an office of freehold, by aſſiſe; the denial of juſt fees being a diſſeiſin; therefore it ſeems to be now ſettled, that neither a proctor nor regiſter can ſue for fees in the ſpiritual court, but that the proper remedy is, in caſe of a fee certain, by an indebitatus aſſumpſit, or, in caſe of an uncertain fee, by quantum meruit; and in ſuch ſuits it is not neceſſary to prove a retainer, that being implied by law. 2 Rol Rep. 59. 3 Leon. 268. 1 Mod. 176. 2 Keb. 615. 3 Keb. 303, 441, 516. 1 Salk. 333. and 4 Mod. 254.

If a legatee takes a bond from the executor for payment of the legacy, and afterwards ſues him in the ſpiritual court for the legacy, a prohibition will be granted; for by taking the obligation the nature of the demand is changed, and becomes a debt or duty recoverable in the temporal court. Yelv. 38. 2 Vern. 31. but 2 Rol. Rep. 160. S. P. cont.

Matters of freehold, and the rights of inheritances, are only determinable in the temporal courts; ſo that if the eccleſiaſtical courts intermeddle with thoſe, a prohibition lies. F. N. B. 40. 2 Rol. Abr. 286. Lit. Rep. 164.

As in a feoffment of tithes and lands, where there is no livery, if they adjudge the tithes to paſs, notwithſtanding there is no livery, a prohibition will lie. Cro. Jac. 270. 1 Vent. 41. cited.

So if a man deviſes, that his lands ſhall be ſold for the payment of his debts, and that the overplus ſhall be paid to ſuch perſons in certain ſhares; the legatees in this caſe cannot ſue in the eccleſiaſtical court; for the proviſions intended them ariſe originally out of lands, and their proper remedy in this caſe is in a court of equity. Dyer 151, 264. Hob. 265. 2 Rol. Abr. 284—5. 2 Show. 50. Cro. Car. 16.

But if a rent be deviſed out of a farm for years, the eccleſiaſtical courts may hold plea thereof; for the term for years being only a chattel is teſtamentary, conſequently the rent deviſed thereout. 1 Sid. 279. 2 Keb. 5. 1 Lev. 179.

The rights of offices for life in the eccleſiaſtical courts, or courts of Admiralty, are determinable at Common law; as in the queſtion concerning the validity of two patents, by which the office of regiſter to a biſhop was granted; it was held, that this ſhould not be tried in the ſpiritual court, though the ſubject matter be ſpiritual; becauſe the office itſelf being matter of freehold is for that reaſon of temporal cognizance. 2 *Rol. If promiſes are executory on both ſides, performance need not be averred; becauſe it is the counter promiſe, and not the performance, which raiſes the conſideration. 4 Mod. 189.

Where a promiſe is made to do a thing, and there is no breach, the ſame may be diſcharged by parol; but, if it be once broken, it cannot be diſcharged without releaſe in writing, being then a debt. 1 Mod. Rep. 206. 2 Mod. 44.

If a promiſe be to pay a ſum of money, by ſeveral monthly payments, the promiſe being intire, a breach of payment of the firſt month, is a breach of the whole promiſe. 2 Rol. Rep. 47. See Mutual Promiſe, Aſſumpſit, and Action on the Caſe, and Black. Com. 3 V. 157.

Promiſſory Notes, or notes of hand, Are a plain and direct engagement in writing, to pay a ſum ſpecified at a time therein limited to a perſon therein named, or ſometimes to his order, or often to the bearer at large. They are by ſtat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. made aſſignable and indorſable in like manner as bills of exchange. Black. Com. 2 V. 467.

Promoters, (Promotores) Are thoſe who in popular and penal actions proſecute offenders, in their name and the King's, as informers do, having part of the fines or penalties for their reward: They belonged chiefly to the Exchequer and King's Bench; and Sir Edward Coke calls them turbidum hominum genus. 3 Inſt. 191.

Proof, Is ſhewing the truth of any matter alledged, or the trial or making out of any thing, by a jury, witneſſes, &c.

Proof, according to Lilly, is either in giving evidence to a jury on a trial, or elſe on interrogatories, or by copies of records, or exemplifications of them. 2 Lil. Abr. 393. Though, where a man ſpeaks generally of Proof, it ſhall be intended of Proof by a jury, which in the ſtrict ſignification is legal Proof. 3 Bulſt. 56.

Condition of a bond was to pay money as an apprentice ſhould miſpend, on Proof made by the confeſſion of the apprentice or otherwiſe; and it was held, that although generally Proof ſhall be intended to be made at a trial by jury, in this caſe it being referred to the confeſſion of the party, it is ſufficient if he confeſs it under his hand. Cro. Jac. 381. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 15.

It hath been inſiſted, that the law knows no other Proof but before a jury in a judicial way, and that which is on record; but if the proof is modified by the agreement of the parties, that it ſhall be in ſuch a manner, or before ſuch a perſon, that modification which allows another manner of Proof ſhall be obſerved and prevail againſt the legal conſtruction of the word Proof. Sid. 313. 2 Lutw. 436.

In articles the parties bound themſelves in the penalty of 100*l.* &c. to be paid on due Proof of a breach; Proof at a trial will maintain the action. Lutw. 441. Property, (Proprietas) Is the higheſt right a man can have to any thing; being uſed for that right which one hath to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which no way depend on another man's curteſy. Stud. Compan. 159.

Before men entered into ſociety there was not any property, but an univerſal right inſtead of it; every man might then take to his uſe what he pleaſed, and retain it, if he had ſufficient power: but when men entered into ſociety, and induſtry, arts and ſciences were introduced, Property was gained by various means; for the ſecuring whereof, proper laws were ordained.

According to our law, property in lands and tenements is acquired either by entry, deſcent by law, or conveyance; and in goods or chattels, it may be gained many ways, though uſually by deed of gift, or bargain and ſale. 2 Lil. Abr. 400.

For preſerving Property the law hath theſe rules,

1ſt, No man is to deprive another of his Property, or diſturb him in enjoying it.

2dly, Every perſon is bound to take due care of his own Property, ſo as the neglect thereof may not injure his neighbour.

3dly, All perſons muſt ſo uſe their right, that they do not, in the manner of doing it, damage their neighbour's Property.

There are alſo three ſorts of Properties, viz. Property abſolute; Property qualified; and Property poſſeſſory; And an abſolute Proprietor hath an abſolute power to diſpoſe of his eſtate as he pleaſes, ſubject to the laws of the land. The huſband hath a qualified property in his wife's land, real chattels and debts; but in her chattels perſonal he hath an abſolute property. Plowd. 5.

Every owner of goods, &c. hath a general property in them: Though a legatee of goods hath no property in the goods given him by will until actually delivered him by the executors, ſo that he hath the poſſeſſion. Mich. 23 Car. B. R.

And though, by a bare agreement, a bargain and ſale of goods may be ſo far perfected, without delivery or payment of money, that the parties may have an action of the caſe for non-performance, yet no property veſts until delivery; therefore it is ſaid if a ſecond buyer gets delivery, he has the better title. 3 Salk. 61, 62.

But if one covenant with me, that if I pay him ſo much money ſuch a day, I ſhall have his goods in ſuch a place, and I pay him the money: This is a good ſale, and by it I have the property of the goods. 27 H. 8. 16.

Property is of things in poſſeſſion or action.

In poſſeſſion, it is generally, when no other can have them from the owner, or with him, without his act or default; or ſpecially, when ſome other hath an intereſt with him, or where there is a property alſo in another, as well as in the owner; as by bailment, delivery of things to a carrier, or innkeeper, where goods are pawned or pledged, diſtrained or leaſed, &c. And property in action, is when one hath an intereſt to ſue at law for the things themſelves, or for damages for them; as for debts, wrongs, &c. and all theſe things, in poſſeſſion, or action, one may have in his own right, or in the right of another, as executor. Wood's Inſt. 314.

A perſon hath ſuch a ſpecial property in goods delivered him to keep, that he may maintain actions againſt ſtrangers who take them out of his poſſeſſion: So of things delivered to a carrier, and when goods are pawned, &c. Lil. Abr. 400, 401.

An executor or adminiſtrator hath the property of the goods of the deceaſed: But a ſervant hath neither a general or ſpecial property in his maſter's goods; therefore to take them from his maſter may be treſpaſs or felony, according to the value and other circumſtances. Goldſb. 72.

If a man hires a horſe, he hath a ſpecial property in the horſe during the time againſt all men, even againſt the right owner; againſt whom he may have an action if he diſturbs him in the poſſeſſion. Cro. Eliz. 236. But it hath been adjudged, that if a man deliver goods, &c. to another to keep for a certain time, and then to re-deliver them; if he to whom they were delivered ſell them in open market, before the day appointed for the re-delivery, the owner may ſeize them wherever he finds them, becauſe the general property was always in him, and not altered by the ſale. Godb. 160. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 18. And if one delivers a horſe or other cattle, or goods, to another to keep, and he kills the horſe, or ſpoils the goods, treſpaſs lies againſt him; for by the killing or ſpoiling, the property is deſtroyed. 5 Rep. 13.

If a ſwarm of bees light on a tree, they are not the owners of the tree, till covered with his hive; no more than hawks that have made their neſts there, &c. But their young ones will be his property, and for them he may have treſpaſs. Doct. & Stud. c. 5. Co. Litt. 145.

A man's geeſe, &c. fly away out of ſight, wherever they go, he hath ſtill a property in them. Staundf. lib. 1. c. 16. 3 Shep. Abr. 111.

Wild beaſts, deer, hares, conies, &c. though they belong to a man on account of his game and pleaſure, none can have an abſolute real property in; but if they are incloſed and made tame, there may be a qualified and poſſeſſory property in them.

One may have abſolute property in things of a baſe nature, as maſtiff dogs, hounds, ſpaniels, &c. but not in things feræ naturæ, unleſs when dead. Dalt. 371. Finch. 176. 11 Rep. 50. Raym. 16. But ſee ante.

Property in lands, goods and chattels, may be forfeited or loſt, by treaſon, felony, flight, outlawry; alſo of goods by their becoming deodand, waif, eſtray, &c. Bac. Elem. 77, 78.

Property in Highways, &c. He who hath the land which lies on both ſides the highway, hath the property of the ſoil of the highway in him, notwithſtanding the King hath the privilege for his people to paſs through it at their pleaſure; for the law preſumes that the way was at firſt taken out of the lands of the party who owns the lands lying on both ſides the way: And divers lords of manors claim the ſoil as part of their waſte. 2 Lil. Abr. 400.

If the ſea or a river, by violent incurſion, carries away the ſoil or ground in ſo great a quantity, that he who had the property in the ſoil, can know where his land is, he ſhall have his land; but if his ſoil or land be inſenſibly waſted by the ſea or river, he muſt loſe his property, becauſe he cannot prove which is his land. Paſch. 1650.

A tenant hath only a ſpecial property in the trees on the lands demiſed, ſo long as they remain part of the freehold; for, when they are ſevered, his property is gone. 11 Rep. 82.

Property altered. A man borrows or finds my goods, or takes them from me; neither of theſe acts will alter the property. Bro. Propert. 27.

If one having taken away corn, make it into malt; turn plate into money, or timber into a houſe, &c. the property of them is altered. Dodderidge Law 132, 133.

And where goods are generally ſold in a market overt, for a valuable conſideration, and without fraud, it alters the property thereof. 5 Rep. 83. Except in ſome particular caſes. See ante.

To alter or transfer property, is lawful; but to violate property is never lawful, property being a ſacred thing which ought not to be violated. And every man (if he hath not forfeited it) hath a property, and a right allowed him, to defend his life, liberty, and eſtate; and if either be violated, the law gives an action to redreſs the injury, and puniſh the wrong. 2 Lil. Abr. 400.

Prophecies, (Prophetiæ) Is foretelling of things to come, in hidden myſterious ſpeeches; whereby commotions have been often cauſed in the kingdom, and attempts made by thoſe to whom ſuch ſpeeches promiſed good ſucceſs, tho' the words were myſtically framed, and pointed only to the cognizance, arms, or ſome other quality of the parties: But theſe, for diſtinction ſake, are called falſe or phantaſtical prophecies. 3 Ed. 6. c. 15.

Falſe prophecies, (where perſons pretend extraordinary commiſſions from God) to raiſe jealouſies in the people, or terrify them with impending judgments, &c. are puniſhable at Common law, as impoſters: And by 5 Eliz. c. 15. None ſhall publiſh or ſet forth any falſe prophecy, with an intent to raiſe ſedition, on pain of 10 l. for the firſt offence, and a year's impriſonment; and for the ſecond offence to forfeit all his goods and chattels, and impriſonment during life: The proſecution to be within ſix months. 3 Inſt. 128, 129. and ſee *Black. Proprietary, (Proprietarius) Is he who hath a property in any thing, quæ nullus arbitrio eſt obnoxia; but was heretofore chiefly uſed for him who had the fruits of a benefice to himſelf, his heirs and ſucceſſors, as abbots and priors had to them and their ſucceſſors. See Appropriations.

Proprietate probanda, Is a writ to the ſheriff to inquire of the property of goods diſtrained, when defendant claimeth property on a replevin ſued; for the ſheriff cannot proceed till that matter is decided by writ; and if it is found for plaintiff, then the ſheriff is to make replevin; but if for defendant, he can proceed no further. *F. Protection, (Protectio) Is generally taken for that benefit and ſafety which every ſubject hath by the King's laws; every man who is a loyal ſubſect is in the King's protection; and in this ſenſe to be out of the King's protection, is to be excluded the benefit of the law. 25 Ed. 3. c. 22.

In a ſpecial ſignification, a protection of the King is an act of grace, by writ iſſued out of Chancery, which lies where a man will paſs over the ſea in the King's ſervice; and by this writ (when allowed in court) he ſhall be quit of all manner of ſuits between him and any other perſon, except aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, attaints, &c. until his return. 2 Lil. Abr. 398.

This term is thus further explained, viz. Protection is an immunity granted by the King to a certain perſon, to be free from ſuits at law for a certain time, and for ſome reaſonable cauſe; and it is a branch of the King's prerogative ſo to do: There are two ſorts of theſe protections; one is cum clauſula volumus; and of that protection there are three particulars; one is called quia profecturus, and is for him who is going beyond ſea in the King's ſervice; another is quia moraturus, which is for him who is already abroad in the King's ſervice, as an ambaſſador, &c. and another is for the King's debtor, that he be not ſued till the King's debt is ſatisfied: The other ſort of protection is cum clauſula nolumus, &c. which is granted to a ſpiritual corporation, that their goods or chattels be not taken by the officer of the King, for the King's ſervice; it may likewiſe be granted to a ſpiritual perſon ſingle, or to a temporal perſon. Reg. Orig. 23. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 20.

On a perſon's going over ſea, in the ſervice of the King, writ of protection ſhall iſſue, to be quit of ſuits till he return; and then a reſummons may be had againſt him: But one may proceed againſt defendant having ſuch protection, until he comes and ſhews his protection in court, and hath it allowed; when his plea or ſuit ſhall go ſine die; though if after it appears that the party who hath the protection, goes not about the buſineſs for which the protection was granted, the plaintiff may have a repeal, &c. Terms de Ley. 2 Lil. Abr. 398.

A protection is to be made for one year, and may be renewed from year to year; but if it be made for two or three years, the juſtices will not allow it: And if the King grant a protection to his debtor, that he be not ſued till his debt is paid; on theſe protections none ſhall be delayed; the party is to anſwer and go to judgment, and execution ſhall be ſtayed. Co. Lit. 130. 25 Ed. 3.

The King granted a protection to one of his debtors; and on demurrer it was alledged, that by 25 Ed. 3. c. 19. protections of this kind are expreſly, that none ſhall be delayed on them; but the party ſhall anſwer and proceed to judgment, and execution ſhall ſtay: And the court ordered, that when it came to execution they would adviſe; ſo a reſpondeas ouſter was awarded. Cro. Jac. 477.

In all protections there ought to be a cauſe ſhewn for granting them: If obtained pending the ſuit they are bad; and a perſon giving bail to an action on arreſt, it is ſaid may not plead his protection; one may not be diſcharged out of priſon to which he is committed in execution, by protection to ſerve the King, &c. Nor will a protection be allowed where a perſon is taken on a capias utlagatum, after judgment; for though the capias utlagatum is at the King's ſuit in the firſt place, it is in the ſecond degree for the ſubject. Latch 197. 1 Leon. 185. Dyer 162. Hob. 115. See poſt.

But in action on aſſumpſit a protection under the Great Seal was brought into court, for that defendant was in the wars in Flanders, &c. and it was allowed though after an exigent. 3 Lev. 332.

Plaintiff in an action cannot caſt a protection; for the protection is for defendant, and ſhall be always for him, if it be not in ſpecial caſes where plaintiff becomes defendant. New Nat. Br. 62. And no protection ſhall be allowed againſt the King. Co. Lit. 131.

A protection to ſave a default, is not good for any place within the kingdom of England: And regularly it lies only where the defendant or tenant is demandable; for the protection is to excuſe his default, which cannot be made when he is not demanded. Jenk. Cent. 66, 94.

There are many kinds of protections; but they are rarely uſed, being often ouſted by act of parliament. Wood's Inſt. 571. See Black. Com. 3 V. 389.

When the King grants a protection, the writ thereon in ſome caſes as been as follows:

A writ of Protection by the King.

B. and his ſervants, &c. aforeſaid, not doing to him or them, or any of them, or permitting to be done to them, any injury, damage or violence, on pain of grievous forfeiture, &c. Protection of Ambaſſadors. See Ambaſſadors and Privilege.

Protection of Children, Is a natural duty, rather permitted than enjoined by any municipal laws; nature, in this reſpect, working ſo ſtrongly as to need rather a check than a ſpur. A parent may, by our laws, maintain and uphold his children in their law-ſuits, without being guilty of the crime of maintaining quarrels. A parent may alſo juſtify an aſſault and battery in defence of the perſons of his children: Nay, where a man's ſon was beaten by another boy, and the father went near a mile to find him, and there revenged the ſon's quarrel by beating the other boy, of which beating he afterwards unfortunately died; it was not held to be murder, but manſlaughter merely. Cro. Jac. 296. 1 Hawk. P. C. 83.

Such indulgence does the law ſhew to the frailty of human nature, and the workings of parental affection! Black. Com. 1 V. 450.

Protection of Parliament. Peers, and members of parliament, &c. by their privilege, may protect their menial ſervants, and thoſe actually employed by them in ſervice; but by a late order, this extends not to others, on written protections.

One Cater, gentleman to the Earl of Suffolk, was by order of the Houſe of Lords committed to Newgate, on proof of his being guilty of procuring and ſelling written protections, from and in the name of that peer, to ſeveral perſons, to the great damage of their creditors, and in breach of the orders of that houſe; and being charged with other crimes, reflecting on the Houſe of Peers, he was ſentenced to pay a fine, and to ſtand in the pillory, &c. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 341. See Privilege.

Protection of the Courts at Weſtminſter. The protection of the court of B. R. is allowed for any perſon who attends his own buſineſs in this court, or by virtue of any ſubpœna; but this is more properly privilege.

Protectionibus, The ſtatute of allowing a challenge to be entred againſt a protection, &c. 33 Ed. 1. ſt. 1.

Proteſt, (Proteſtaria) Hath two applications; one by way of caution, to call witneſſes (as it were) or openly affirm that he doth either not at all, or but conditionally, yield his conſent to any act, or unto the proceeding of a judge in a court, wherein his juriſdiction is doubtful, or to anſwer on his oath further than by law he is bound. See Plowden 676. and Reg. Orig. 306.

The other is by way of complaint, as to proteſt a man's bill. For example, If I give money to a merchant in France, taking his bill of exchange to be repaid in England, by one whom he aſſigneth; if at my coming I find not myſelf ſatisfied, but either delayed or denied, then I go to the Exchange, or open concourſe of merchants, and proteſt, that I am not paid; and thereupon, if he hath any goods remaining in any man's hands within the realm, the law of merchants is, that I be paid out of them to my full ſatisfaction. Cowell. See Bills of Exchange, and Black. Com. 2 V. 468, 9. Proteſts on notes and bills of exchange, are made by Notaries public.

Each peer has a right, by leave of the houſe, when a vote paſſes contrary to his ſentiments, to enter his diſſent on the journals of the houſe, with the reaſons for ſuch diſſent; which is uſually ſtiled his proteſt. Ib. 1 V. 168.

Proteſtation, (Proteſtatio) is a defence or ſafeguard to the party who maketh it, from being concluded by the action he is about to do, that iſſue cannot be joined by it. Plowd. 276. whereof ſee Reg. Orig. 326.

It is a form of pleading when one does not directly affirm or deny any thing alledged by another, or which he himſelf alledgeth. Cowell. As proteſtando that he made no teſtament pro placito that he made not the plaintiff his executor; becauſe if he made no teſtament he could make no executor. Heath's Max. 26. cites Pl. C. 276.

Proteſtation is of two kinds, 1ſt, When a man pleads any thing which he dare not directly affirm, or cannot plead, for fear of making his plea double; as if in conveying to himſelf by his plea a title, he ought to plead diverſe deſcents by diverſe perſons, and he dare not affirm that they were all ſeiſed at the time of their death, or altho' he could do it, yet it will be double to plead two deſcents, of both which each one by itſelf may be a good bar, then defendant ought to plead and alledge the matter, introducing the word proteſtando; as to ſay (by proteſtation) that ſuch a one died ſeiſed, &c. and that the adverſe party cannot traverſe. 2dly, When one is to anſwer two matters, and yet by law he ought to plead but to one, then in the beginning of his plea he may ſay proteſtando & non cognoſcendo ſuch part of the matter to be true, (and then making his plea further) ſed pro placito in hac parte, &c. and ſo he may take iſſue on the other part of the matter; and then he is not concluded by any of the reſt of the matter which he hath by proteſtation ſo denied. Reg. Plac. 70, 71. See 18 Vin. Abr. tit. Proteſtation.

In other terms, the uſe of a proteſtation in pleading ſeems to be this, viz. When one party alledges or pleads ſeveral matters, and the other party can only offer, or take iſſue on one of them, he proteſts againſt the others: in ſuch caſe ſhould the iſſue, on trial, be found againſt the latter party, the record would not be evidence againſt him in another ſuit, as to thoſe matters or points, againſt which he proteſted; which it otherwiſe might be, had he admitted, or not proteſted againſt them.

Prothonotary, (Protonotarius, vel Primus Notarius) Is a chief officer or clerk of the Common Pleas and King's Bench; and for the firſt court there are three Prothonotaries, and the other hath but one: He of the King's Bench records all civil actions; as the Clerk of the Crown Office doth all criminal cauſes in that court: Thoſe of the Common Pleas, ſince the order 14 Jac. 1. on agreement entered into between the Prothonotaries and Filazers of that court, enter and inrol all manner of declarations, pleadings, aſſiſes, judgments, and actions: They make out all judicial writs, except writs of habeas corpus and diſtringas jurator', (for which there is a particular office erected, called the habeas corpora office:) Alſo writs of execution, and of ſeiſin, of privilege for removing cauſes from inferior courts, writs of procedendo, ſcire facias's, in all caſes, and writs to enquire of damages; and all proceſs upon prohibitions, on writs of audita querela, falſe judgment, &c. They likewiſe enter recognizances acknowledged in that court; and all common recoveries; and make exemplifications of records, &c. 5 H. 4. c. 14.

It was uſed among the Romans for a country, without the limits of Italy, gained to their ſubjection by the ſword; whereupon that part of France next the Alps was ſo called by them, and ſtill retains the name.

But with us a province is moſt uſually taken for the circuit of an archbiſhop's juriſdiction; as the province of Canterbury, and that of York: Yet it is mentioned in ſome of our ſtatutes, for ſeveral parts of the realm; and ſometimes for a county. 32 H. 8. c. 23.

Provincial, (Provincialis) Of or belonging to a province; alſo a chief governor of a religious order; as of friars, &c. Stat. 4 H. 4. c. 17.

The Americans are called provincials. The term provincial is alſo annexed to the different dialects of country people, living remote from the metropolis, they retaining many terms, derived from our Saxon and other anceſtors, not uſed by polite people, in the metropolis.

Proviſion, (proviſio) Is uſed with us as in the Canon law for providing a biſhop, or any other perſon, an eccleſiaſtical living, by the Pope, before the incumbent be dead: It is alſo called gratia expectativa, or mandatum de providendo: The great abuſe whereof may be read not only in Duarenus de ſacris Eccleſiæ Miniſteriis & Beneficiis, lib. 3. cap. 2. but alſo in many ſtatutes, viz. 35 E. 3. 22 ſtat. 4 & 5. commonly called the ſtatute De proviſionibus, & 27 E. 3. c. 1. & 38 E. 3. ſt. 2. c. 1, 2, 3, 4. & 2 Ric. 2. c. 7. 3 Ric. 2. c. 3. 7 Ric. 2. 12. 12 Ric. 2. ſt. 2. c. 2, 3, 4. & 3 H. 5. c. 4. See Præmunire, and Black. Com. 1 V. 60. 4 V. 107.

Proviſiones. The acts to reſtrain the exorbitant abuſe of arbitrary power made in the parliament at Oxford 1258, were called proviſiones by Riſhanger, who continued Mat. Paris, anno 1260. Rex autem quia juraverat cum Edwardo primogenito ſuo & Baronagio, proviſiones Oxon*ienſes ſe inviolabiliter ſervaturum, &c.* being to provide againſt the King's abſolute will and pleaſure. See Matt. Paris ſub annis 1244 & 1258. Proviſiones ſignified alſo providentiæ, or proviſions of victual. Cowell.

Proviſions, (ſelling unwholſome) Is an offence againſt public health. To prevent which the ſtatute 51 Hen. 3. ſt. 6. and the ordinance for bakers, c. 7. prohibit the ſale of corrupted wine, contagious or unwholſome fleſh, or fleſh that is bought of a Jew; under pain of amercement for the firſt offence, pillory for the ſecond, fine and impriſonment for the third, and abjuration of the town for the fourth. And by 12 Car. 2. c. 25. ſ. 11. Any brewing or adulteration of wine is puniſhed with the forfeiture of 100*l.* if done by the wholeſale merchant; and 40*l.* if done by the vintner or retale trader.

It would contribute much to the health of his majeſty's ſubjects, if theſe ſtatutes were enforced, with all the rigor of the law.

Proviſo, Is A CONDITION inſerted in any deed, on the performance whereof the validity of the deed depends; and ſometimes it is only a covenant, ſecundum ſubjectam materiam. 2 Rep. 70. 2 Lill. Abr. 399.

The word proviſo is generally taken for a condition; but it differs from it in ſeveral reſpects; for a condition is uſually created by the grantor or leſſor, but a proviſo by the grantee or leſſee; there is likewiſe a difference in placing the proviſo, as if, immediately after the habendum, the next covenant is that the leſſee ſhall repair, provided always that the leſſor ſhall find timber, this is no condition; nor is it a condition, if it comes among other covenants after the habendum, and is created by the words of the leſſee; as if the leſſee covenants to ſcour the ditches, proviſo that the leſſee carry away the ſoil, &c. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 21.

It hath been held, that the law hath not appointed any proper place in a deed to inſert a proviſo; but that when it doth not depend on any other ſentence, but ſtands originally by itſelf, and when it is created by the words of the grantor, &c. and is reſtrictive or compulſory, to inforce the grantee to do ſome act, in ſuch caſe the word proviſo makes A CONDITION, though it is intermixed with other covenants, and doth not immediately follow the habendum. 2 Rep. 70.

A proviſo always implies a condition, if there be no words ſubſequent which may change it into a covenant: Alſo it is a rule in proviſoes, that where the proviſo is, that the leſſee, &c. ſhall do, or not do a thing, and no penalty is added to it; this is a condition; or it is void; but if a penalty be annexed, it is otherwiſe. Cro. Eliz. 242. 1 Lev. 155. And where a proviſo is a condition, it ought to do the office of a condition, i. e. make the eſtate conditional, and ſhall have reference to the eſtate, and be annexed to it; but ſhall not make it void without entry, as a limitation will.

A leaſe was made for years, rendering rent at ſuch a day, proviſo, if the rent be arrear for one month after, the leaſe to be void; the queſtion was, Whether this was a condition or limitation; for if it was a condition, then the leaſe is not determined without entry; adjudged, that it was a limitation, though the words were conditional, becauſe it appeared by the leaſe itſelf, that it was the expreſs agreement of the parties that the leaſe ſhall be void on non-payment of the rent; and it ſhall be void without entry. Moor 291. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 22, 26.

If an ejectment is brought, the tenant cannot defend without entring into the common rule, whereby he is precluded from ſetting up in bar, the want of an entry.

If a proviſo be the mutual words of both parties to the deed, it amounts to a covenant: And a proviſo by way of agreement to pay, is a covenant, and an action well lies upon it. 2 Rep. 72.

Plaintiff conveyed an office to defendant, proviſo that out of the firſt profits he pay plaintiff 500 l. And it was reſolved, that an action of covenant lay on this proviſo; for it is not by way of condition or defeaſance, but in nature of a covenant to pay the money. 1 Lev. 155. But defendant in conſideration of 400 l. granted his lands to plaintiff for ninety-nine years, proviſo if he pay ſo much yearly during the life of S. T. &c. or 400 l. within two years after his death, then the grant to be void, and there was a bond for performance of covenants; in action of debt brought on this bond, it was adjudged, that there being no expreſs covenant to pay the money, there could be no breach aſſigned on this proviſo. 2 Mod. 36. Sed qu. and ſee ante.

In articles of agreement to make a leaſe, proviſo that the leſſee ſhould pay ſo much rent, &c. although there be no ſpecial words of reſervation of rent, the proviſo is a good reſervation. Cro. Eliz. 486. And proviſo with words of grant added to it, may make a grant and not a condition. Moor 174. See 1 And. 19.

When uſes are raiſed by covenant, in conſideration of paternal love to children, &c. and after, in the ſame indenture, there is a proviſo to make leaſes, without any particular conſideration, it is void; though ſuch a proviſo might be good, if the uſes were created by fine, recovery, &c. becauſe of the tranſmutation of the eſtate; and for that, in this caſe, uſes ariſe without conſideration. 1 Rep. 176. Moor 144. 1 Lev. 30. 2 Lil. Abr. 402.

In a deed, a proviſo, that if the ſon diſturb the other uſes, &c. that then a term granted to him, and the uſes to the heirs of his body, ſhall be void; this proviſo is ſufficient to ceaſe the other uſes, on diſturbance. 8 Rep. 90, 91. But a proviſo to make an eſtate, limited to one and the heirs male of his body, to ceaſe as if he was naturally dead, on his attempting any act by which the limitation of the land, or any the eſtate in tail, ſhould be undone, barred, &c. hath been adjudged not good; becauſe the eſtate-tail is not determined by the death of tenant in tail, but by his dying without iſſue male. Dyer 351. 1 Rep. 83.

A teſtator deviſed lands to one and the heirs male of his body, proviſo that if he attempt to alien, then his eſtate to ceaſe, and remain to another; the proviſo is void. 1 Vent. 521.

A proviſo that would take away the whole effect of a grant, as not to receive the profits of lands granted, &c. is void; and ſo is a proviſo which is repugnant to the expreſs words of the grant: In a will, teſtator made another his executor, provided he did not adminiſter his eſtate, adjudged this proviſo is void for repugnancy. Cro. Eliz. 107. Dyer 3.

And if a proviſo is good at firſt, and afterwards it happens that there is no other remedy but that which was reſtrained; the remedy ſhall be had notwithſtanding the reſtraint. Wood's Inſt. 231. Where a proviſo is parcel of, or abridgeth a covenant, it makes an exception; when it is annexed to an exception in a deed, it is an explanation; and where added at the end of any covenant, there it extends only to defeat that covenant. 4 Leon. 72, 73. Moor 105, 471. See Deed.

Proviſo, in the moſt common acceptation, is that clauſe in a mortgage, whereby the deed is declared to be void, on payment of principal and intereſt.

Proviſo, (concerning judicial matters) is where the plaintiff in an action deſiſts in proſecuting his ſuit, and doth not bring it to trial in convenient time; defendant in ſuch caſe may take out the venire facias to the ſheriff, which hath in it theſe words, proviſo, quod, &c. To the end, that if plaintiff take out any writ to that purpoſe, the ſheriff ſhall ſummon but one jury on them both; and this is called going to trial by proviſo. Old Nat. Br. 159.

By the ſtanding rules of the court of B. R. if plaintiff will not enter his iſſue, defendant may by rule compel him to enter it; and if it is entered, and he will not carry down the cauſe to trial, defendant may carry it down by proviſo. 3 Salk. 362. See 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 32.

Proceſs may be taken out by defendant in criminal caſes by proviſo in appeals, in the ſame manner as in other actions, on default of the appellant; but not in indictments, nor in actions where the King is ſole party; and it hath been queſtioned, whether there can be any ſuch proceſs in informations Qui tam. 2 Hawk. 40, 408.

When indictments are preferred and found, or removed into B. R. there to be tried, defendant ſhould make up the record and carry it in for trial: But, the proſecutor, if he ſuſpects defendant will not carry in the record, may make up and carry in the ſame, but the defendant ſhall be tried on that firſt carried in and entered for trial.

Proviſor, is he who ſues to the court of Rome, for a proviſion, which is called gratia expectativa according to Spelman. See alſo Old Nat. Brev. 243. they were prohibited by proclamation 42 Hen. 3. anno 1258. Hill. p. 259. It is ſometime alſo taken for him who hath the care of providing things neceſſary, a purveyor. Cowell. Provoſt Marſhal, Is an officer of the King's navy, who hath the charge of priſoners taken at ſea: And is ſometime uſed for like purpoſe at land. 13 Car. 2. c. 9.

Proxies, Are perſons appointed inſtead of others, to repreſent them.

Every peer of the realm called to parliament, hath the privilege of conſtituting a proxy to vote for him in his abſence on a lawful occanon; but ſuch proxies are to be entered in perſon, and ſometimes proxies have been denied by the King; particularly Anno 6, 27 & 39 Edw. 3. Sed qu. If the King can now deny the proxy of a peer? A member of the Houſe of Commons cannot conſtitute a proxy, becauſe he is himſelf deputed by his conſtituents.

Marriage contracts have been often made by proxy, &c. See Black. Com 1 V. 168.

Proxies, Alſo are annual payments made by parochial clergy to the biſhop, &c. on viſitations. See Procurations.

Pryk, Is a kind of ſervice or tenure; and, according to Blount, ſignifies an old-faſhioned ſpur, with one point only, which the tenant, holding land by this tenure, was to find for the King—Per ſervitium inveniendi unum equum unum ſaccum & unum pryk in Guerra Walliæ. 1 R. 2.

And in the time of Hen. 8. Light horſemen in war were called prickers; becauſe they uſed ſuch ſpurs or pryks, to make their horſes go with ſpeed.

Puberty, (Pubertas) The ripe age of fourteen in men and twelve in women, when they are fit for marriage: But as to crimes and puniſhment, it is the age of 14 years, in both the male and female ſex, and not before. 1 *Hale's Hiſt. Puniſhment, (Pœna) Is the penalty for tranſgreſſing the law: And as debts are diſcharged to private perſons by payment; ſo obligations to the public, for diſturbing ſociety, are diſcharged when the offender undergoes the puniſhment inflicted for his offence.

Kings, and ſuch as have equal power with them, have a right to require puniſhment for injuries committed againſt themſelves or their ſubjects, on the violation of national law; tho' the right of inflicting puniſhments, to provide for the ſafety of ſociety, was originally (before Commonwealths were erected and courts of juſtice ordained) in the hand of every man, being equal to and independent of others; but, ſince it has reſided in the hands of the higheſt powers, ſubjection to others hath taken away that primitive right: However, this power and natural right of puniſhing an equal, ſtill remains in thoſe places where the people are not ſubject to ſome form of government. Grot. de Jure Belli, lib. 2. c. 21.

The puniſhment of offences are many and various, adapted to the ſeveral degrees of crimes, and the countries wherein committed; and in England are beheading, hanging, impriſonment, fine, amercement, &c. See Beccaria on Crimes and Puniſhments, and particularly on the puniſhment by DEATH.

Purchaſe, (Acquiſitum, perquiſitum, purchaſum) Signifies the buying or acquiſition of lands, or tenements, with money, or by deed or agreement; and not obtaining it by deſcent or hereditary right, and conjunctum perquiſitum is where two or more perſons join in the purchaſe. Lit. 12. Reg. Orig. 143.

One cometh in by purchaſe when he comes to lands by legal conveyance, and he hath a lawful eſtate: And a purchaſe is always intended by title, either from ſome conſideration, or by gift; (for a gift is in law a purchaſe) whereas deſcent from an anceſtor cometh of courſe by act of law; alſo all contracts are comprehended under this word purchaſe. Co. Lit. 18. Doct. and Stud. c. 24.

Purchaſe in oppoſition to deſcent is taken largely; if an eſtate comes to a man from his anceſtors without writing, that is a deſcent: But where a perſon takes any thing from an anceſtor, or others, by deed, will or gift, and not as heir at law; that is a purchaſe. 2 Lill. Abr. 403.

When an eſtate doth originally veſt in the heir, and never was nor could be in the anceſtor; ſuch heir ſhall take by way of purchaſe: But when the thing might have veſted in his anceſtor, tho' it be firſt in the heir, and not in him at all; the heir ſhall have it in nature of deſcent. 1 Rep. 95, 106.

An heir takes an eſtate by will in another manner than the Common law would have given it; there he takes by purchaſe, and not by deſcent; but then he muſt be the right heir. 2 Lev. 79.

1. Who ſhall be deemed purchaſers.
2. Of purchaſers for a valuable conſideration.

1. Who ſhall be deemed purchaſers.

A. enters into partnerſhip in 5ths, with three others, for 21 years, for digging mines in A.'s lands, A. to have two 5ths, and alſo, in conſideration of his ownerſhip of the land, to have a tenth more out of the ſhare of the other partners. Purſuant to the articles, they ſearched for the mines, and after two years time, and the expence of about 120*l.* they diſcovered a valuable mine, and worked for about three months, and then A. dies, and his widow ſets up a voluntary ſettlement, made after marriage. The court inclined that the partners were as purchaſers, and that the voluntary ſettlement ſhould not ſtand againſt them. 2 Vern. 326.

The wiſe joins with the huſband in letting in an incumbrance on her jointure, and barring the eſtate-tail, and then limits the uſes to the huſband for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to their daughter. Per Lord Keeper Wright, The daughters are not purchaſers ſo as to ſhut out a judgment creditor of the huſband's, antecedent to barring the eſtate-tail; it might have been a good conſideration for both, but it was not expreſſed in the deed, to be any conſideration for ſettling the eſtate on the daughters, but was a voluntary gift of the wife to her huſband, therefore the daughter's eſtate muſt be taken to be voluntary; and ſo a judgment-creditor ought to have the aſſiſtance of this court before them. Canc. Prec. 114.

Every leſſee is a purchaſer. 9 Mod. 59. See 2 Vern. 327.

A. ſeiſed in fee, ſettled his eſtate in 1712. to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to B. in tail, but with power of revocation, by any writing ſigned, &c. and atteſted by three, &c. credible witneſſes. In 1715, A. by deed, atteſted by two witneſſes only, reciting that he was indebted, as in a ſchedule annexed, conveyed his eſtate to W. R. and W. S. and their heirs, in truſt to pay his ſaid debts by profits, mortgage or ſale; and after payment thereof, to pay the overplus, and reconvey ſuch part as ſhould be unſold, to A. or ſuch other perſon, &c. and for ſuch uſes, &c. as he, by any writing ſigned and ſealed, and atteſted, &c. ſhould direct. A. died without iſſue, but left the ſaid B. and C. the daughters of two ſiſters, his heirs at law. The deed of 1715 was kept private till after the death of W. S. the ſurviving truſtee in 1724, and was then laid before counſel, who directed, that the heir of W. S. ſhould aſſign the legal eſtate to the truſtees in the deed of 1712. which was done. Afterwards, in 1726, on a treaty of marriage between Lord Fauconbridge and B. a marriage ſettlement was prepared by the ſame counſel, as counſel for Lord Fauconbridge, who made a ſettlement on B. in conſideration of the great eſtate in land which he was to have with her. The ſurviving truſtee in the deed of 1712, joined in this marriage ſettlement. C. brought a bill claiming a moiety of the eſtate of A. as coheireſs with B. for that the deed in 1715, was a revocation of the deed in 1712. Lord F. pleaded that he was a purchaſer under the deed of 1712, without notice of that in 1715, and that the ſettlement made by him on B. was in contemplation of that ſettlement in 1712, and that the ſurviving truſtee in that ſettlement was party to the marriage ſettlement; and that tho' the purchaſe was not of the legal eſtate, but the truſt only, that it will make no difference, according to Wilker and Bodington's caſe, 2 Vern. 599. and that neither will it differ the caſe, tho' there was no actual conveyance; for as the truſtees in the deed of 1712, always acted under that deed for B. that truſt ſhall ſubſiſt as to himſelf, who is a fair purchaſer; and that he ſhall not be affected by conſtructive notice to his counſel, as having been adviſed with on theſe two deeds in 1724; for it muſt be intended, that at the time of the counſel's being concerned for him, which was in 1726, he had forgot that he had ever ſeen this deed of 1715, there being an interval of two years between his firſt ſeeing it, and his being counſel for defendant. And for theſe reaſons, the court held, that this could not be notice to his lordſhip. Ld. Ch. B. Reynolds, who aſſiſted the Lord Chancellor, held, that the Lord F. could be a purchaſer of no more than B. had, as no actual conveyance was made to him. The Maſter of the Rolls ſaid, that to be a purchaſer in the notion of equity, there MUST be an ACTUAL contract, and a conſideration PAID; therefore, if at the time of marriage the deed of 1712 ſtood revoked, the truſtees could be ſeiſed only of a moiety for the uſe of B. conſequently Lord F. can be a purchaſer of no more. Lord Chancellor decreed a moiety of the eſtate, and an account of the rents and profits to C. ſince the death of A. See Gibb. 207. and Lilly's Pract. Conv. 391 to 402.

2. Of purchaſers for a valuable conſideration.

A purchaſer who comes in without notice of a rent-charge ſhall not be chargeable therewith, altho' given to a charitable uſe. Toth. 258.

A bill was to be relieved on a truſt, and charged defendant with notice; defendant pleaded his being a purchaſer for a valuable conſideration; this was objected to as not good, becauſe he did not ſay what the valuable conſideration was; for 5*s*. is a valuable conſideration, but yet it is not an equitable one; but the court declared that in this caſe the plea was good enough.

Notice of an incumbrance before the conveyance is executed, ſhall charge the purchaſer. Chan. Caſes. 34.

Purchaſer ſhall not be affected by a judgment in equity, without expreſs notice of it before the purchaſe, otherwiſe it is at law. Chan. Caſes 37.

A purchaſer of lands from A. which B. makes title to, getting the deeds which make out B.'s title, is not bound to diſcover them. Chan. Caſes 69.

Plea of his being a purchaſer for a valuable conſideration was over-ruled, becauſe he did not plead the purchaſe made from one of the plaintiff's anceſtors; for a purchaſe from a ſtranger who might have no good title, was held no good plea. N. Ch. R. 135.

A. having a long leaſe of a houſe, in which his wife had ſome intereſt, by her conſent renews it for eighty-one years, and in conſideration of 400*l*. aſſigns it to B. who aſſigns it to C. his ſon, who married M. and died, leaving M. his executrix; M. on a ſecond marriage, conveys it to truſtees, &c. A. by bill ſets forth this aſſignment, and that it was a mortgage, and that B. agreed to execute a reconveyance thereof, &c. and prayed a redemption. The executrix pleads ſhe was a purchaſer without notice of ſuch agreement; and in conſideration of a marriage with J. S. and of his undertaking to pay her debts, ſhe aſſigned the original leaſe, &c. ſuch a day to truſtees, to the uſe of her intended huſband, not having any notice of the agreement prior to the executing the ſaid deed on marriage. It was decreed, that defendants were in nature of purchaſers; and the plea was allowed. Finch R. 9.

A. indebted by bond, deviſed a debt to be paid out of his perſonal eſtate; but if it was not ſufficient, then to ſell his real eſtate, and pay it: The eſtate was ſold, and by ſeveral meſne conveyances came to defendant, who was ſued for the debt as charged on the lands which he had bought. Defendant pleaded, that he had no notice of the demand, and was a purchaſer for a valuable conſideration, and that the perſonal eſtate was firſt liable, and that the purchaſe money which was paid to two other of the defendants was liable in the next place; and that there were other lands, which deſcended to one of them on the death of A. which ought to come in aid of him, and decreed accordingly. Fin. R. 137.

A purchaſer for a valuable conſideration without notice was decreed to pay arrears of an annuity charged on the lands purchaſed, tho' the ſame were due thirty years before, and no demand in all that time. Rep. temp. Finch. 252.

A voluntary conveyance decreed againſt a (jointreſs) purchaſer for a valuable conſideration; (but it ſeems, that the not having notice was the laches of the jointreſs &c.) See Chan. Caſes 291, 292.

A purchaſer from T. S. who has a decree againſt him in Chancery for land, ſhall be bound by the decree, tho' he had no notice of it. 2 Chan. Caſes 48.

Bill by a dowreſs to remove a truſt term, defendant pleads himſelf a purchaſer, but does not deny notice, and ſo was ordered to anſwer. Vern. 179.

Bill was brought to prove a will, and perpetuate the teſtimony of witneſſes; defendant pleaded himſelf a purchaſer without notice of ſuch will, and inſiſted there had been a verdict in affirmance of ſuch will, (nothing hindering the plaintiff, but that if he had a title he might recover at law) the plaintiff ought not to be admitted to examine his witneſſes, thereby to hang a cloud over the purchaſer's eſtate; and on debate the court allowed the plea. Vern. 354.

(A. mortgaged land to B. and afterwards by his will having ſons D. and E.) deviſed the equity of redemption to E.—B. and D. join in an aſſignment of the mortgage to F. though F. pleaded want of notice of the will, and that D. was the viſible heir; yet decreed, that E. ſhould have the equity of redemption on the foot of the firſt mortgage. N. Ch. R. 153.

A. purchaſes, having notice of a ſettlement whereby B. the vendor was but tenant for life, remainder to his firſt, &c. ſon in tail. Afterwards A. ſells to D. who had no notice; B. dies, leaving a ſon; it was decreed that the laſt purchaſer ſhould hold the land, but the firſt ſhould account for the conſideration money, for which he ſold the eſtate, with intereſt from the deceaſe of B. thereout diſcounting what was due on a mortgage prior to the ſettlement which he had bought in. 2 Vern. 384.

Cowper C. ſaid, He took it to be a rule in equity, that where a man is a purchaſer without notice, he ſhall not be annoyed in equity; not only where he has a prior legal eſtate, but where he has a better title or right to call for the legal eſtate than the other; therefore diſmiſſed the bill. The caſe was; A. purchaſes of B. who had committed an act of bankruptcy, but without notice of it; afterwards a commiſſion is taken out, and there being a term ſtanding out in truſtees, aſſignee brings a bill againſt them, and the purchaſer to have the term aſſigned to him. 2 Vern. 599.

A bill was to redeem lands mortgaged in 1694, to defendant's grandfather by plaintiff's father for 500 years, to be void on payment of 126 l. and intereſt. Defendant pleads, that he is a deviſee of thoſe lands, under his grandfather's will, who, in 1692, purchaſed them for a two hundred years term without condition of redemption, and had enjoyed fifteen years quiet poſſeſſion. But the court over-ruled the plea for defendant's not anſwering ſufficiently as to the mortgage, and the plea of the purchaſe may be true, for it may be only a term for years to attend the inheritance. G. Equ. R. 185.

An eſtate of fee-ſimple in lands, is uſually valued in the country at twenty years purchaſe. Lands near London yield about twenty-five years purchaſe; and in Wales, not above eighteen or nineteeen.

The fee of tithes of perpetual advowſons is worth about twenty-two years purchaſe: And fee-farm-rents iſſuing out of lands, and the fee of ground-rents, are rated at twenty-four or twenty-five years purchaſe.

The fee of houſes in London ſells for ſeventeen or eighteen years purchaſe, if in good repair, and the ground-rents are not high; otherwiſe for leſs: Houſes not in London, but well ſituated, without any lands to them, are ſold for fifteen or ſixteen years purchaſe: For a leaſe of a houſe for thirty years, about eight years purchaſe is given in London; and for one-and-twenty years about ſix years value.

A freehold leaſe for three lives abſolute, or a copyhold eſtate for the like term, where the quit-rents and heriots reſerved are not higher than uſual, is rated at fourteen years purchaſe; for the firſt life eight, for the ſecond four, and two for the third life; or ſeven, five and two. A chattel leaſe for three lives, thirteen years purchaſe.

The exchanging one life for another is generally one year's purchaſe; but if a ſickly life be exchanged for a healthy one, two or three years purchaſe. A widowhood in a copyhold, after death of the huſband a third life, is valued at one year's purchaſe. The fee in reverſion after lives, is worth nine, ſeven, and five years purchaſe, after one, two or three lives; and more where there is timber, or the eſtate improveable. Land. Purch. Comp. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.

This valuation is taken from a book publiſhed many years ago, but the value of lands in all parts of England and Wales is very much increaſed, ſince that publication, owing to the great increaſe of our ſpecie, therefore is not any rule to go by now, but the editor hath let it ſtand, to ſhew what was formerly computed to be the value.

Purgation, (Purgatio) Is the clearing a man's ſelf of a crime, whereof he is publicly ſuſpected, and accuſed before a judge: Of which there was formerly great uſe in England.

Purgation is either canonica, or vulgaris.

Canonical purgation is, that which is preſcribed by the Canon law, the form whereof uſed in the Spiritual court, is that the perſon ſuſpected take his oath, that he is clear of the fact objected againſt him, and bring his honeſt neighbours with him to make oath, that they believe he ſwears truly.

The vulgar purgation, according to the ancient manner, was by fire or water ordeal, or by combat, aboliſhed by canon. Staundf. P. C. lib. 2. cap. 48. Stat. Weſtm. 1. cap. 2.

Purgation is one of the puniſhments of the Eccleſiaſtical courts; but the ſtatute 13 Car. 2. c. 12. having taken away the oath ex officio, of perſons accuſing or purging themſelves, &c. ſome maintain that all the proceedings of purgation on common fame fall too; others ſay, there is ſtill a legal purgation left, but not canonical. Wood's Inſt. 506, 507. Purificatio Beatæ Mariæ Virginis. Mentioned in the ſtatute 32 Hen. 8. c. 21. See Candlemas.

The purification of the bleſſed virgin Mary, is one of the general returns of writs, ſtill in uſe, viz. the third in Hilary term.

Purlieu-Men, Are thoſe who have ground within the purlieu, and being able to diſpend forty ſhillings a year freehold; who, on theſe two points, are licenſed to hunt in their own purlieus, obſerving what is required. Manw. For. Laws 151, 157, 180, 186. See the next word.

Purlue, or Purlieu, (from the Fr. pur. i. e. purus, & lieu, locus) Is all that ground near a foreſt, which being added to the ancient foreſts by King Hen. 2. Rich. 1, and King John, was afterwards diſafforeſted and ſevered by the Charta de Foreſta, and the perambulations and grants thereon, by Hen. 3. ſo that it becomes purlue, viz. pure and free from the laws and ordinances of the foreſt. Manw. For. Laws, par. 2. c. 20.

Our anceſtors called this ground purlieu, purum, locum, becauſe it WAS exempted from that ſervitude which was formerly laid on it: As Manwood and Crompton call it pourallee, we may derive it from pur, purus, & allee, ambulatio, becauſe he who walketh or courſeth within that circuit, is not liable to the laws or penalties incurred by thoſe who hunt within the foreſt precincts; but pourallee is ſaid to be properly the perambulation whereby the purlieu is deafforeſted. Stat. 33 Ed. 1. 4 Inſt. 304.

Owners of grounds within the purlieu by diſafforeſtation, may fell timber, convert paſtures into arable, &c. incloſe them with any kind of incloſure; erect edifices, and diſpoſe of the ſame as if they had never been afforeſted; and a purlieu-man may as lawfully hunt to all intents within the purlieu, as any man may in his own grounds which were never afforeſted: He may keep his dogs within the purlieu unexpeditated; and the wild beaſts belong to the purlieu-man ratione ſoli, ſo long as they remain in his grounds, and he may kill them. 4 Inſt. 303.

If the purlieu-man chaſe the beaſt with grey-hounds, and they fly towards the foreſt for ſafety, he may purſue them to the bounds of the foreſt, and if he then do his endeavour to call back and take off his dogs from the purſuit, although the dogs follow the chaſe in the foreſt, and kill the King's deer there; this is no offence, ſo as he enter not into the foreſt, nor meddle with the deer ſo killed: And if the dogs faſten on the deer before he recover the foreſt, and the deer drag the dogs into the foreſt, in ſuch caſe the purlieu-man may follow his dogs and take the deer. 4 Inſt. 303, 304.

But in the caſe of Sir Richard Weſton, it was ſaid, that there was no purlieu in law to hunt; that it cannot be by preſcription, and there is nothing in ſtatutes as to hunting; therefore purlieu-men may only keep out the deer, but cannot kill them, though they be in their ground. 1 Jones Rep. 278. See Moor 706, 987.

And notwithſtanding purlieus are abſolutely diſafforeſted, it hath been permitted, that the ranger of the foreſt ſhall as often as the wild beaſts of the foreſt range into the purlieu, with his hounds rechaſe them back to the foreſt. 4 Inſt. See 33 Ed. 1. ſtat. 5.

Purparty, (Fr. pour part, i. e. pro parte) Is that part or ſhare of an eſtate, firſt held in common by parceners, which is by partition allotted to any of them: To make purparty is to divide and ſever the lands which fall to parceners, which till partition they held jointly, and pro indiviſo. Old Nat. Br. 11.

Purpreſture, (Pourpreſtura, from the Fr. pourpriſt, an incloſure) Is when any thing is done to the nuſance of the King's demeſnes, or the highways, &c. by incloſure, or buildings, endeavouring to make that private which ought to be public. Glanvil, lib. 9. c. 11. Co. Lit. 38, 272. And when a man takes to himſelf, or incroaches any thing which he ought not, it is a purpreſture. Kitch. 10. 2 Inſt. 38. See Pourpreſture.

Purſe, A certain quantity of money, containing 500 dollars, or 125 l. in Turkey. Merch. Dict.

Purſuivant, (from the Fr. purſuivre, i. e. agere, perſequi) Signifies the King's meſſenger attending on him to be ſent on any buſineſs or meſſage. See Pourſuivant.

Purveyance. See Pourveyance. As well before as after the conqueſt, the King, on his ancient demeſnes of the crown of England, had houſes of huſbandry, and ſtocks for the furniſhing neceſſary proviſions for his houſhold, and the tenants of thoſe manors did by their tenures manure, till, &c. and reap the corn on the King's demeſnes, mowed his meadows, &c. repaired the fences, and performed all neceſſary things belonging to huſbandry on the King's demeſnes: In reſpect of which ſervices, and to the end they might apply the ſame the better, they had many liberties and privileges, as that they ſhould not be ſued out of the court of that manor, nor impanelled of any jury or inqueſt, nor appear at any other court, but only at the court of the manor, nor be contributory to the expences of the knights of the ſhire which ſerved at parliament, nor pay any toll, &c. which liberties and immunities continue to this day, although the original cauſe is ceaſed. 2 Inſt. 542, 543 c. 2.

Hawkins (Pl. C. 114. c. 47. ſ. 1.) ſays, that this method being troubleſome and inconvenient, was by degrees diſuſed, and afterwards the King uſed to appoint certain officers to buy in proviſion for his houſhold, who were called purveyors, and claimed many privileges by the prerogative of the crown, and ſeem to have had the pre-emption of all ſuch victuals as were bought by any to ſell again.

Purveyance is taken away by the ſtat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. ſ. 12. But temporary acts have been paſſed, ſuſpending that ſtatute in favour of the King's royal progreſſes, viz. 13 Car. 2. ſt. 1. c. 8. and 1 Jac. 2. c. 10. and in favour of the navy and ordnance, as 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 20.

QUadrageſima, The fortieth part; alſo the time of Lent, from our Saviour's Forty days Faſt. Lit. Dict. And Quadrageſima Sunday, Is the firſt Sunday in Lent; ſo called, becauſe about the fortieth day before Eaſter. Blount.

Quadrageſimalia. In former days it was the cuſtom for people to viſit their mother church on Midlent-Sunday, and to make their offerings at the High Altar; as the like devotion was again obſerved in Witſun-Week: but as the proceſſion and oblations at Whitſuntide were ſometimes commuted into a rated payment of Penticoſtals; ſo the Lent or Eaſter offerings were changed into a cuſtomary rate called Quadrageſimalia, and Denarii Quadrageſimales, alſo Lætare Jeruſalem.

Quadrans, a fourth part of a penny: and before the reign of Ed. 1. the ſmalleſt coin was a ſterling or penny, marked with a croſs, by the guidance whereof a penny might be cut into halves for a half-penny, or into quarters or four parts for farthings; till, to avoid the fraud of unequal cutting, that King coined half-pence and farthings in round diſtinct pieces. Mat. Weſtm. Anno 1279.

Quadrantata Terræ, The fourth part of an acre. See Fardingdeal, or Quadrarium.

Quadrivium, The center of four ways, where four roads meet and croſs each other. By ſtatute, poſts with inſcriptions are to be ſet up at ſuch croſs ways, as a direction to travellers, &c. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 16. And directions are given by the modern highway and turnpike acts.

Quæ eſt eadem, In pleading is uſed to ſupply the want of a traverſe. 2 Lil. Abr. 405.

In a clauſum fregit ſuch a day, defendant pleads plaintiff's licence to him to enter on the ſame day, and that virtute inde he entered; he need not ſay Quæ eſt eadem transgreſſio: ſo in treſpaſs for taking goods; if defendant juſtifies the ſame day and place: And in treſpaſs and battery, if defendant juſtifies that the ſame day and place the plaintiff aſſaulted him, and that what damages happened to him was of his own wrong; this is good without Quæ eſt eadem tranſgreſſio, &c. though he doth not directly anſwer the aſſault laid by plaintiff; but where he juſtifies at another day, or at other place, then he ought to ſay, Quæ eſt eadem. 21 Hen. 7. pl. 2.

A fact laid Nov. 1. and a juſtification Nov. 2. Quæ eſt eadem, is well enough without a traverſe, the day not being material; but it had been naught, if the day had been material. 1 Lev. 241.

If a treſpaſs is alledged Nov. 10. and a juſtification Nov. 11. and there be an averment of Quæ eſt eadem, it is here held good without making any traverſe. Lutw. 1457.

Where defendant juſtifies dicto tempore in the plaintiff's declaration, he hath no occaſion to ſay Quæ eſt eadem tranſgreſſio; becauſe he agrees with plaintiff in the time and place mentioned in his declaration, and gives an anſwer to it. Mich. 5 W. & M. B. R. But in all theſe caſes, pleading thus, which is the ſaid breaking and entring, &c. whereof plaintiff hath complained againſt defendant, is the ſafeſt way.

Quæ plura, Was a writ which lay where an inquiſition had been taken by an eſcheator of lands, &c. that a man died ſeiſed of, and all the land was ſuppoſed not to be found by the office or inquiſition; this writ was therefore to enquire of what other lands or tenements the party died ſeiſed: But it is now uſeleſs, ſince the taking away the court of wards and offices poſt mortem. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. Quakers, (From Tremulus) Are ſuch who pretend to tremble or quake, in the exerciſe of their religion. The 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 27 enacts, That Quakers making and ſubſcribing the declaration of fidelity mentioned in 1 W. & M. and owning King William to be rightful and lawful King, ſhall not be liable to the penalties againſt others refuſing to take the oaths; and not ſubſcribing the declaration of fidelity, &c. they are diſabled to vote at election of members of parliament.

Quakers, where an oath is required, are permitted to make a ſolemn affirmation or declaration, declaring in the preſence of God the witneſs of the truth, &c. But they are not capable of being witneſſes in a criminal cauſe. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 34. Unleſs they are ſworn like other Proteſtants.

On the affirmation of a Quaker, the court will not grant an attachment for non-performance of an award. 1 Strange 441. Nor ſecurity for the peace. Ibid. 527. Nor a rule for an information. 2 Strange 856, 872, 946. But a rule to ſhew cauſe why an appointment of overſeers ſhould not be quaſhed being ſerved by a Quaker, was made abſolute on his affirmation; this not being looked on as a criminal proſecution, though on the crown ſide, and the rule in the King's name. 2 Strange 1219.

The Quakers affirmation is ordained to be in force for ever, and the form of it appointed by 1 Geo. 1. cap. 6. But the 8 Geo. 1. cap. 6. authoriſes the affirmation of Quakers with the words, I do promiſe ſincerely and truly declare and affirm, &c. without ſaying in the preſence of Almighty God; but falſe and corrupt affirming, incurs the penalties of wilful perjury.

And by 22 Geo. 2. c. 46. ſ. 36. an affirmation ſhall be allowed in all caſes (except criminal) where by any act of parliament an oath is required, though no proviſion therein for admitting a Quaker to make his affirmation. Quakers refuſing to pay tithes, or church rates, juſtices ot peace are to determine them, and order coſts, &c. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 34. ſ. 4. 1 Geo. 1. c. 6. And Quakers may be committed to priſon for non-payment of tithes, on 27 H. 8. c. 20. whichis not repealed by 7 & 8 W. 3. which gives another remedy. Ld. Raym. 323.

Quale jus, A judicial writ which was brought where a man of religion had judgment to recover land, before execution was made of the judgment; it went forth to the eſcheator between judgment and execution, to inquire whether the religious perſon had right to recover, or the judgment were obtained by colluſion between the parties, to the intent that the lord might not be defrauded. Reg. Judic. 8, 16, 46. Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 32.

Qualified, Signifies enabled to hold two benefices. See Plurality.

Qualified (or baſe) Fee, Is ſuch a one as hath a qualification ſubjoined thereto, and which muſt be determined whenever the qualification annexed to it is at an end. As, in the caſe of a grant to A. and his heirs, TENANTS OF THE MANOR OF DALE; in this inſtance, whenever the heirs of A. ceaſe to be tenants of that manor, the grant is entirely defeated. So when Hen. 6. granted to John Talbot, lord of the manor of Kingſtone-Liſle in Berks, that he and his heirs, LORDS OF THE SAID MANOR, ſhould be peers of the realm, by the title of Barons of Liſle: here John Talbot had a baſe or qualified fee in that dignity; and the inſtant he or his heirs quitted the ſeigniory of this manor, the dignity was at an end. Co. Lit. 27.

This eſtate is a fee, becauſe by poſſibility it may endure for ever in a man and his heirs; yet as that duration depends on the concurrence of collateral circumſtances, which QUALIFY and DEBASE the purity of the donation, it is therefore a qualified or baſe fee. Black. Com. 2 V. 109.

Qualified Property. See Poſſeſſion, Property, and Black. Com. 2 V. 391.

Quamdiu ſe bene geſſerit, Is a clauſe often inſerted in letters patent of the grant of offices, as in thoſe to the Barons of the Exchequer, &c. which muſt be intended in matters concerning their office; and is nothing but what the law would have implied, if the office had been granted for life. 4 Inſt. 117. It is now in the patents of all the judges of the ſuperior courts at Weſtminſter, or at leaſt terms equivalent in Engliſh.

Quantum meruit, i. e. How much he has deſerved, is an action on the caſe, ſo called, grounded on a promiſe to pay plaintiff for doing any thing ſo much as he ſhould deſerve or merit.

If a man retains any perſon to do work or other thing for him; as a taylor to make a garment, a carrier to carry goods, &c. without any CERTAIN agreement; in ſuch caſe, the law implies that he ſhall pay for the ſame, as much as they are worth, and ſhall be reaſonably demanded; for which quantum meruit may be brought: And if one ſue another on a promiſe to ſatisfy him for work done, &c. he muſt ſhew and aver in his declaration how much he deſerved for his work. See Black. Com. 3 V. 161.

Quantum valebat, Is where goods and wares ſold are delivered by a tradeſman at no certain price, or to be paid for them as much as they are worth in general; then quantum valebat lies, and plaintiff is to aver them to be worth ſo much: ſo where the law obliges one to furniſh another with goods or proviſions; as an innkeeper his gueſts, &c. Practiſ. Attorn. Edit. 1. p. 72.

It is not very material whether a plaintiff declares on a quantum valebant, or a quantum meruit, but if either is preferable, it may be the latter, as plaintiff may deſerve more for goods ſold on account of ſcarſity, diſtance of delivery or other circumſtances, than the goods are really worth.

Quare clauſum fregit. Before the ſtatute 19 Hen. 7. c. 9. giving the proceſs of capias in all actions on the caſe, a practice had been introduced of commencing the ſuit by bringing an original writ of treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, for breaking the plaintiff's cloſe, vi et armis; which, by the old Common law, ſubjected the defendant's perſon to be arreſted by writ of capias: and then afterwards, by connivance of the court, the plaintiff might proceed to proſecute for any other leſs forcible injury. This practice (through cuſtom rather than neceſſity, and for ſaving ſome trouble and expence, in ſuing out a ſpecial original adapted to the particular injury) ſtill continues in almoſt all caſes, except in actions of debt. Black. Com. 3 V. 281.

Quare ejecit infra Terminum, Is a writ which lies for leſſee, where he is caſt out of his farm before his term is expired, againſt a feoffee of the lands, or the leſſor who ejects him; and the effect of it is to recover his term again, and damages. Reg. Orig. 227. F. N. B. 197. New Nat. Br. 439.

This writ was deviſed for the following cauſe:

If a man make a leaſe of land for years, and after ouſts his leſſee, and then makes a feoffment of the land to a ſtranger in fee; now the leſſee cannot have a writ of ejectione firmæ againſt the feoffee, becauſe he did not put him out, and in that caſe the leſſee hath no other remedy but to enter again into the land; and if the feoffee then put him out, the leſſee may bring ejectione firmæ vi & armis; but before entry made by leſſee, he had no remedy againſt the feoffee: therefore, by the equity of the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 24. which enacts, "That where it
"ſhall happen in one caſe, a writ is found, and in the like
"caſe falling under the ſame law, and wanting the ſame
"remedy, &c. it is not ſo, the clerks of the Chancery are

“ to agree upon a proper writ,” &c. By reaſon of that ſtatute, this writ was deviſed. New Nat. Br. 439.

And if a perſon leaſe lands for years, and the leſſor ſuffer a recovery to be had againſt him on a feigned title, and the recoverer entereth; the leſſee ſhall have his writ of quare ejecit infra terminum, &c. And the words of the writ are Occaſione cujus venditionis; and yet the ſame is not properly a ſale, but thoſe word are only of form. Ibid.

It is in the election of leſſee, or, if he grants over his term, the ſecond leſſee, to ſue a writ of ejectione firmæ, or a quare ejecit infra terminum againſt the leſſor, or his heir, or againſt the lord by eſcheat, &c if they put the termor out of his term. 19 Hen. 6. See Black. Com. 3 V. 206.

An ejectment will lie, let who will be in poſſeſſion, ſervice on the tenant in poſſeſſion intitling leſſor of plaintiff to judgment by default, if the tenant or the perſon under whom he claims does not appear. If there is an appearance, and the leſſor of the plaintiff makes out a title, unleſs the defendant can make out a better, plaintiff muſt recover.

Quare impedit, Is a writ lying for him who hath purchaſed an advowſon, againſt a perſon who diſturbs him in his right of advowſon by preſenting a clerk thereto, when the church is void. F. N. B. 32. Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 5.

It differs from aſſiſe of darrein preſentment (or ultimæ præſentationis) becauſe that lies where a man or his anceſtors, under whom he claims, have formerly preſented to the church; and this for him who is purchaſer himſelf; but in both plaintiff recovers the preſentation and damages; though in the writ of darrein preſentment, &c. he recovers only the preſentation, not the title to the advowſon, as he doth in a quare impedit; for which reaſon that aſſiſe is ſeldom brought, and for that the proceedings in it are very tedious: where a man may have aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, he may have quare impedit. 2 Inſt. 356. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 31.

The writ quare impedit is to be brought in ſix months AFTER the avoidance; and by it a patron may be relieved, not only on his preſentation to a church, but to a chapel, prebend, vicarage, &c. And this writ lies of a donative, and the ſpecial matter is to be ſet forth in the declaration: It alſo lieth for a deanery by the King, although it be elective; and for an archdeaconry, but not for a mere office of the church. Co. Lit. 344. 1 Leon. 205. And the chapter may have a quare impedit againſt the dean, of their ſeveral poſſeſſions. 40 Ed. 3. 48.

If the quare impedit be for a donative; the writ ſhall be quare impedit to preſent to the donative; if of a parſonage, then quare impedit præſentare ad eccleſiam; if to a vicarage, ad vicariam; if to a prebend, ad præbendum, &c. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 35.

If a biſhop be diſturbed to collate, where he ought to make collation, he may have a writ quare impedit, and the writ ſhall be quod permittat ipſum præſentare, &c. and he ſhall count on the collation: and if the King be diſturbed in his collation by letters patent, he ſhall have quare impedit, &c. New Nat. Br. 73.

Grantee of a next avoidance may bring this writ againſt the patron who granted the avoidance. 39 Hen. 6.

It may be brought by executors, for a diſturbance in vita teſtatoris; and executors, being diſturbed in their preſentation, may bring quare impedit as well as their teſtator might. Owen 99. Lutw. 1.

Huſband and wife jointly, or the huſband alone without his wife, may have the writ quare impedit; and if a man who hath an advowſon in right of his wife be diſturbed in his preſentation, and dies, the wife ſhall bring it on that diſturbance. 14 Hen. 4. 5 Rep. 97.

The heir ſhall not have quare impedit, for a diſturbance tempore patris; nor can he have execution on a recovery by the anceſtor. Br. Q. Imp. pl. 7, 9. But by 13 Ed. 1. c. 5. Uſurpation of churches during wardſhip, particular eſtates of vacancy, &c. ſhall not bar an heir at full age reverſioner in poſſeſſion, or a ſpiritual perſon in ſucceſſion, from having a writ poſſeſſory of quare impedit, &c. as the anceſtor or predeceſſor might have had, if ſuch uſurpation had been in their time: And the ſame form of pleading ſhall be had in darrein preſentment, and quare impedit.

Where partition is made on record, to preſent by turns, the coparcener who is diſturbed ſhall not be put to a quare impedit; but may have remedy on the roll, by ſcire facias: it is otherwiſe on an agreement to preſent. Stat. ibid. 22 Ed. 4. 8.

If tenant in tail ſuffer an uſurpation, and die, and ſix months paſs, the iſſue in tail cannot bring quare impedit; but at the next avoidance he may have it within the ſix months. 46 Aſſiſe 4.

This writ is all in the poſſeſſion; and the preſentment of grantee of the next avoidance is a good title for the grantor and patron in fee to bring it; and likewiſe for his heir, and other grantees. 9 Hen. 7. 23. 5 Rep. 97.

Preſentment alledged in leſſee for life, or years, or it is ſaid, in tenant at will, is ſufficient in quare impedit: ſo of tenant in dower, or by the curteſy; alſo of tenants by ſtatute merchant, ſtaple, or elegit, &c. 21 Ed. 4. 2, 5. Rep. 97. Mallory's Q. Imped. 155.

It ſuppoſes both a poſſeſſion and a right; and plaintiff muſt alledge a preſentation in himſelf, or in thoſe under whom he claims; unleſs it be in caſe of lapſe, &c.

In the declaration of plaintiff, it is not ſufficient for him to alledge, that he, or ſuch a perſon for whom he claims, were ſeiſed of the advowſon of the church, but he muſt alledge a preſentation MADE by one of them; for, if he doth not, defendant may demur to the declaration: and the reaſon is, that defendant, by joining the laſt preſentation to his own title, is to make appear, that he hath a right to preſent now as well as then. Cro. Eliz. 518. 5 Rep. 97. Vaugh 57. The writ muſt be brought in that county where the church is; the patron and incumbent are to be named in it, the one as he may be diſpoſſeſſed of his patronage, the other of his preſentation; and it is uſual to make the biſhop a defendant, to prevent a lapſe, where the church is void, pendente lite.

Quare impedit will not lie againſt the ordinary and incumbent, without naming the patron; becauſe at Common law the incumbent could not plead any thing which concerned the right of patronage, therefore it is unreaſonable that he alone ſhould be named in the writ who could not defend the patronage; but 25 Ed. 5. c. 7. enables him to plead againſt the King, and to defend his incumbency, although he claims nothing in the patronage; and by that ſtatute he ſhall plead againſt any common perſon; though with this difference, that when the inheritance of the patron is to be diveſted by judgment in a quare impedit, there he muſt be named in the writ; but where the next preſentation only is to be recovered, he need not be named: yet where the King preſents without a title, and his clerk is inducted, the quare impedit is to be againſt the ordinary and incumbent; for it will not lie againſt the King; but, if he is plaintiff, the writ may be brought againſt the patron alone, without naming the incumbent. 7 Rep. 25. Cro. Jac. 650. Palm. 306.

If the church be full of a preſentation, ſo that there is no danger of lapſe, the biſhop need not be named in a quare impedit; but it is otherwiſe where it ſtands on diſturbance only: And though this writ will lie againſt a patron alone; yet in a common caſe, where any clerk is preſented and inducted, the incumbent ſhall not be removed, without naming him alſo. Hob. 320. Gliſs & Gulſt. 235. Jenk Cent. 200. See poſt.

The only plea the biſhop hath by the Common law on a quare impedit is, that he claimeth nothing BUT AS ORDINARY; he could not counterplead the patron's title, or any thing to the right of patronage, nor could the incumbent counterplead ſuch title, till the 25 Ed. 3. c. 7. by which both biſhop and incumbent may counterplead the title of the patron; the one, when he collates by lapſe, or makes title himſelf to the patronage; the other, being perſona imperſonata, may plead his patron's title, and counterplead the title of plaintiff: And it has been adjudged, that incumbent cannot plead to the title of the parſonage, without ſhewing that he is perſona imperſonata of the preſentation of the patron. W. Jones 4. March. 159. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 38.

In a quare impedit, though it was found that the church was full of another, who was a ſtranger to the writ, and it did not appear whether he came in by a better title than that which was found for plaintiff; it was held, that plaintiff might have a general writ to the biſhop, which he is bound by law to execute, or ſhall be amerced, &c. and he cannot return that the church is full of another; for no iſſue can be joined between the biſhop and plaintiff, becauſe he has no day in court. 6 Rep. 51. 3 Leon 136. See ante and poſt.

But where plaintiff recovered an advowſon in ejectment, and thereupon had a writ to the biſhop, there being another incumbent in the church, who was not a party to the action; adjudged, that this writ would not lie without a ſcire facias to the incumbent. Sid. 93.

If it appears in quare impedit, either in pleading, or by confeſſion of the parties, that neither of them have a title, but that it is in the King; the court may award a writ to the biſhop for the King, to remove the incumbent, and admit idoneam perſonam ad præſentationem regis; but this muſt be when his title is very plain. Hob. 126, 163. 1 Leon. 323.

In quare impedit, plaintiff and defendant are both actors, ſo that defendant may have a writ to the biſhop, as well as plaintiff; but not without a title appearing to the court; wherefore if defendant never appears, plaintiff muſt make out a title for form ſake, and ſo muſt defendant if plaintiff be non-ſuited. Hob. 163.

If plaintiff, after appearance, in a quare impedit be nonſuited, it is peremptory; becauſe defendant on title made, whereby he becomes actor, ſhall have a writ to the biſhop: and it is the ſame in caſe of a diſcontinuance. 7 Rep. 27.

It is the nature of a quare impedit to be final, either on a diſcontinuance or nonſuit; and a man cannot have two ſuits for the ſame thing in this caſe againſt one perſon, tho' he may have ſeveral quare impedits againſt ſeveral perſons. 7 Rep 27. Hob. 137.

The parſon, patron, and ordinary are ſued; the ordinary diſclaims, and the parſon loſeth by default; plaintiff ſhall have judgment to recover his preſentation, and a writ iſſue to the biſhop, &c. with a ceſſat executio, until the plea is determined between the plaintiff and patron. Vaughan 6.

Several were plaintiffs in a quare impedit, defendant pleaded the releaſe of one of them pending the writ; and it was reſolved, that this releaſe ſhall only bar him who made it, and that the writ ſhall ſtand good for the reſt. 5 Rep. 97.

In a quare impedit againſt the archbiſhop, the biſhop, and three defendants; the archbiſhop pleaded that he claimed nothing but as metropolitan; and the biſhop pleaded that he claimed nothing but as ordinary; and the defendants made title; but there was a verdict againſt them: It was a queſtion, Whether the writ of execution ſhould be awarded to the archbiſhop, or the biſhop; and it was held, that where neither of them are parties in intereſt, it may be directed to either; but if the biſhop is party in intereſt, it muſt be directed to the archbiſhop. 6 Rep. 48. 3 Bulſt. 174. And if the archbiſhop of Canterbury be plaintiff in a quare impedit, the writ muſt be directed to the archbiſhop of York, &c. Show. 329.

If defendant pleads ne diſturba, which is in effect the general iſſue in a quare impedit, this will be only a defence of the wrong with which he ſtands charged, and is ſo far from controverting the plaintiff's title, that the plea, as it were, confeſſes it; and plaintiff may preſently pray a writ to the biſhop, or maintain the diſturbance in order to recover damages. Hob. 163.

There muſt be a diſturbance to maintain this action: In a quare impedit, the patron declared on a diſturbance of him to preſent 1 November; the incumbent pleaded, that 1 May next after, the preſentation devolved on the Queen by lapſe, and ſhe preſented him to the church, &c. And on demurrer the plea was held ill; becauſe defendant had not confeſſed and avoided, nor traverſed the diſturbance, ſet forth in the declaration: And tho' by the demurrer the Queen's title was confeſſed, it appearing that it was already executed, and defendant having loſt his incumbency by ill pleading, the writ ſhall not be awarded to the biſhop for the Queen to preſent again, but for the patron. 1 Leon. 194.

In all quare impedits, defendant may traverſe the preſentation alledged by plaintiff, if the matter of fact will bear it; but defendant muſt not deny the preſentation alledged, where there was a preſentation. Vaugh. 16, 17. And if a preſentment is alledged in the grantor and grantee, the preſentment in the grantor is only traverſable; for that is the principal. Cro. Eliz. 518.

The courts at Weſtminſter are very cautious not to abate the writ of quare impedit, for any want of form, &c. yet if the biſhop againſt whom the writ is brought, or any of the defendants are miſnamed, it is good cauſe of abatement: If the patron be not named in the writ, it may be pleaded in abatement; tho' death of the patron pending the writ doth not abate it, if the quare impedit is brought againſt the biſhop, patron, and incumbent: And if the incumbent dies, pending the writ, and a diſturber preſent again, and die, quare impedit would lie on the firſt diſturbance by journies accounts; but the firſt writ is abated by plaintiff's death; alſo if plaintiff bring a new writ within fifteen days after the abatement, that ſhall be a continuance of the firſt writ, and prevent defendant taking any advantage; but if the writ abate for any fault in the declaration, defendant ſhall have a writ to the biſhop to admit his clerk; ſo if judgment is given on demurrer, &c. Cro. Eliz. 324. Cro. Car. 651. 7 Rep. 57. Dyer 240.

In a plea of quare impedit, days are given from 15 to 16. or from three weeks to three weeks, according to the diſtance of place: And if the diſturber come not in on the great diſtreſs, a writ is to be ſent to the biſhop, that he claim not to the prejudice of plaintiff for that time; and, on recovery, judgment is to be given to the party to recover the preſentation and advowſon. Stat. 52 H. 3. c. 12. 2 Rol. Abr. 377. And damages are given by Weſtm. 2. c. 5. tho' damages ſhall not be had againſt the biſhop, where he claims nothing but as ordinary, and is no diſturber. 3 Lev. 59.

Before this ſtatute no damages were allowed on a quare impedit; and the King hath none at this day, for altho' he declares ad damnum, &c. he is not within that ſtatute; becauſe by his prerogative he cannot loſe his preſentation. 6 Rep. 52. If plaintiff hath a verdict, and the church is found vacant, the patron may have the fruits of his preſentation, and ſo not be intitled to damages; in which caſe, a remittitur de damnis is entered. 3 Lev. 59.

There are two judgments in a quare impedit, viz.

That plaintiff ſhall have a writ to the biſhop; and this is the final judgment, that goes to the right between the parties, and is the judgment at Common law: And

Judgment for damages, ſince the ſtat. of Weſtm. 2. after the points of the writ are inquired into; which judgment is not to be given but at the inſtance of the party. 1 Mod. 254, 255.

The points to be inquired of, where the jury find for plaintiff, &c. are, of whom, and on whoſe preſentment, the church is full; how long ſince it was void; the yearly value of the church, &c. which being found, damages are to be given accordingly. 6 Rep. 51.

No coſts are recoverable in quare impedit, becauſe of the great damages given by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. c. 5. which ordains, that when ſix months paſs PENDING a quare impedit, &c. ſo that the biſhop preſents by lapſe, the patron ſhall recover damages to TWO YEARS VALUE of the church; otherwiſe to have only half a year's value. See 10 Rep. 36.

Where judgment is given to have a writ to the biſhop in quare impedit; it ſhall not be reverſed on writ of error brought on the whole judgment, tho' the judgment by the ſtatute for damages be erroneous and reverſed. 5 Rep. 58, 59.

Quare impedit was brought againſt two, one of them caſt an eſſoin, and idem dies datus eſt to the other, &c. Then an attachment iſſued againſt them for not appearing at the day, and proceſs continued to the Grand Cape; which being returned, and the parties not appearing, it was ruled that final judgment ſhould be entered according to the ſtat 52 H. 3. c. 12. But on motion to diſcharge this rule, becauſe defendants were not ſummoned either on the attachment or grand diſtreſs, the ſummoners being only the feigned names of John Doe and Richard Roe, the judgment was ſet aſide; for the deſign of the ſtatute was to have proceſs duly executed, and that muſt be with notice, &c. And where the right is for ever concluded, this being ſo fatal, the proceſs muſt never be ſuffered to be a thing of courſe. 1 Mod. 248.

Where two defendants in a quare impedit plead ſeveral bars, and one of them is found againſt plaintiff, and the other with him; he ſhall not have his writ to the biſhop.

If there are many defendants, pleading ſeveral pleas; plaintiff ſhall not have judgment before all the pleas are tried; for tho' ſome be for plaintiff, others may be found againſt him, and he cannot have judgment without good title. F. N. B. 30. Hob. 70.

When one recovers in a quare impedit againſt an incumbent, the incumbent is ſo removed by judgment, that the recoverer may preſent without any thing farther; but the incumbent continues incumbent de facto; till ſuch preſentation is made: And if plaintiff in this ſuit be inſtituted on a writ to the biſhop, defendant cannot appeal; if he doth, a prohibition lies: becauſe in this caſe, the biſhop acts as the King's miniſter, not as a judge. 2 Roll. Abr. 365. 1 Roll. Rep. 62.

If one brings a quare impedit againſt the patron and incumbent of a church within ſix months, and recovers after the ſix months, he ſhall remove the incumbent, if named in the writ. 2 Rol. Abr. 373. And the King cannot remove an incumbent, preſented, inſtituted and inducted, altho' on a uſurpation, but by quare impedit in a judicial way. Cro. Jac. 385.

If a man, by the King's licence, creates a church which ſhall be preſentable, if he be diſturbed to preſent to it, he may have a quare impedit without alledging a preſentation in any perſon: but anciently it was held he might not, becauſe he could not alledge a preſentment. 20 Ed. 4, 14. Mallory's Q. Imped. 153.

It is generally neceſſary to alledge a preſentation in a quare impedit, but the want thereof may be cured by verdict. 2 Strange 1006. He who claims by a recovery, ſhall maintain a quare impedit. 7 H. 8. c. 4.

A quare impedit may be maintained notwithſtanding an uſurpation. 7 Ann. c. 18. See Preſentation, &c. and Black. Com. 3 V. 246.

Quare incumbravit, A writ which lieth againſt the biſhop, who within ſix months after the vacation of a benefice, confers it on his clerk, whilſt two other are contending at law, for the right of preſentation. Reg. Orig. 32.

Or it is a writ brought after a recovery in quare impedit, or aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, againſt the biſhop who thus admits a clerk, notwithſtanding the writ Ne admittas ſerved on him: for if the biſhop incumber the church before a ne admittas iſſued, then the party ſhall have a quare impedit; as the ordinary can have no notice till the ne admittas. F. N. B. 32, 33. Wood's Inſt. 571.

And if a man hath a right of advowſon depending between him and another, and the church is void pendant the writ, the plaintiff ſhall not have a quare incumb. or ne admittas, altho' the biſhop incumber the church; becauſe plaintiff ſhall not recover the preſentment on this writ, but the advowſon: And where he hath title to preſent he may do it; and have quare impedit, if he be diſturbed. New Nat. Br. 108, 109.

If the biſhop delay the true patron in his preſentation, and the patron ſue a quare impedit, he may thereupon have a ne admittas; and if the biſhop, after receipt of ſuch writ, admit the clerk of any other perſon without a verdict in a jure patronatus, the true patron ſhall have quare incumbravit againſt the biſhop, and thereby recover the preſentment with damages.

Alſo a writ is to be directed to the biſhop to diſincumber the church. F. N. B. 37.

This writ may be brought after the ſix months; and if plaintiff be nonſuit in a quare incumbravit, he may have another writ, and vary from his firſt declaration, &c. Ibid. 48.

After a ne admittas delivered, if the ſix months paſt, the biſhop may preſent his clerk for lapſe, and ſhall not be charged by the writ of quare incumbravit for the preſentation; but he cannot admit the clerk of the other man, for that would be againſt the writ ne admittas delivered to him. F. N. B. 48.

If the biſhop incumber the church, where there is no diſpute about it, yet this writ quare incumbravit lies; but according to the beſt opinions there ought to be a ſuit depending, tho' there is no actual recovery. 18 E. 3. 17. Fitz. Q. Imped. 3. See Black. Com. 3 V. 248.

The writ is to ſummon the biſhop, to be before the juſtices, &c. to ſhew cauſe why he hath incumbered the church, to the great damage and injury of plaintiff, contrary to the laws and cuſtoms of the kingdom, &c.

Quare non admiſit, Is a writ which lies againſt a biſhop where a man hath recovered his advowſon, or preſentation in a writ of right of advowſon, or in quare impedit, or other action, and the biſhop refuſes to admit his clerk, on pretence of lapſe, &c. it is requiſite in the writ to mention the recovery; and it is to be brought in the county where the refuſal was. F. N. B. 47. 7 Rep. Dyer 40.

In a quare non admiſit the plaintiff ſhall recover damages: And if plaintiff have judgment in a quare impedit, and a writ is awarded to the biſhop; if on this writ the biſhop makes a falſe return, plaintiff may have quare non admiſit againſt him, and have his damages. Dyer 260.

King Edw. 1. preſented his clerk to a benefice in Yorkſhire, and the archbiſhop of that province refuſed to admit him; on which the King brought a quare non admiſit, and the Archbiſhop pleaded that the Pope had a long time before provided for that church, as one having ſupreme authority in that caſe, therefore he could not admit the King's clerk. It was adjudged, that for his contempt to execute the King's writ, the Archbiſhoprick ſhould be ſeiſed, &c. 5 Rep. 12.

If the biſhop refuſe the King's preſentee, and afterwards admit him, yet the King ſhall have quare non admiſit for the refuſal; and ſo it is preſumed may a common perſon. New Nat. Br. 106. See Black. Com. 3 V. 250.

Quarrelling in church or church-yard. All affrays in a church or church-yard, are eſteemed very heinous offences, as being indignities to Him to whoſe ſervice thoſe places are conſecrated, therefore mere quarrelſome words, which are neither an affray nor an offence in any other place, are penal here. For it is enacted by 5 & 6 Edw. 6 c. 4. Quarter-Seſſions, Is a general court held by the juſtices of peace in every county, once every quarter of a year; originally erected only for matters touching the breach of the peace, but now its power is greatly increaſed, and extends much farther by many ſtatutes.

The holding theſe ſeſſions quarterly was firſt ordained by the 25 Ed. 3. Stat. 1. cap. 8. and the particular times are appointed by 36 Ed. 3. c. 12. See Juſtices of Peace.

By ſtat. 2 Hen. 5. c. 4. they are appointed to be in the firſt week after Michaelmas day; the firſt week after the Epiphany; the firſt week after the cloſe of Eaſter; and in the week after the tranſlation of Saint Thomas a Becket, or the ſeventh of July. See Black. Com. 4 V. 268.

And Co. Litt. 156. An array returned by one who hath no franchiſe ſhall be quaſhed.

The court of B. R. hath power to quaſh orders of ſeſſions, preſentments, indictments, &c. Tho' this quaſhing is by favour of the court, and the court may leave the party to take advantage of the inſufficiency by pleading; as they generally do where an indictment is for an offence very prejudicial to the Commonwealth, as for perjury, &c. 2 Lill Abr. 410. 2 Hawk. P. C. 258.

The court will not quaſh an information; but there muſt be a demurrer to it, if it be inſufficient. 2 Lill. 411. Vide Stat. 7 W. 3. c. 3. See Indictment, Plea, and Black. Com. 3 V. 303. 4 V. 315.

Queen, (Lat. Regina. Sax. Cwen, i. e. Uxor, a wife, ſed propter excellentiam, the wife of the King) In our law is, either ſhe who holds the crown of this realm by right of blood, or who is married to the King; the firſt of which is called Queen Regnant, the laſt Queen Conſort: She who holdeth by blood is, in conſtruction of law, the ſame with the King, and has the like regal power in all reſpects; but the Queen Conſort is inferior to the King, and his ſubject. Staundf. Prærog. 10. 3 Inſt. 7. 1 Marl. Parl. 2. cap. 1.

To compaſs the death of or violate the Queen's perſon, &c. is treaſon; and if ſhe conſents to the adulterer, it ſhall be treaſon in her. 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. 3 Inſt. 9.

The Queen, as the King's wife, partakes of ſeveral prerogatives above other women, viz.

She is a public perſon, exempt from the King; and is capable of lands or tenements of the gift of the King, which no other feme covert is; ſhe is of ability, without the King, to purchaſe, grant, and make leaſes; and may ſue and be ſued alone, in her own name only, by præcipe, not by petition: She may have in herſelf the poſſeſſion of perſonal things during her life, etc. But both real and perſonal eſtate goes to the King after her death: if ſhe doth not in her life-time diſpoſe of them, or deviſe them by will. Co. Lit. 3, 31, 133. Finch 86. 1 Roll. Abr. 912.

Acts of parliament relating to her, need not be pleaded; for the court muſt take notice of them, becauſe ſhe is a public perſon. 8 Rep. 28.

If a tenant of the Queen aliens a part of his tenancy to one, and another part to another; the Queen may diſtrain in any one part for the whole, as the King may do. Wood's Inſt. 22. And in a quare impedit brought by the Queen, ſome ſay that plenarty is no plea; but ſee 2 Inſt. 361. The Queen ſhall pay no toll, &c. Co. Lit. 133.

By ſtatute, the late King might grant to his Queen out of the crown revenues, an annuity of 100,000*l. per annum*, to commence after his death, and continue during the Queen's natural life, for ſupporting her royal dignity, &c. Stat. 1 Geo 2. cap. 3.

And his Majeſty conſtituted the Queen Regent of the kingdom, during his abſence abroad; to be capable of the office, without taking the oaths, or doing any act required by law to qualify any other. 2 Geo. 2. c. 27.

Queen Dowager, No man may marry the Queen Dowager without licence from the King, on pain to forfeit his lands and goods: But if ſhe marry any of the nobility, or under that degree, ſhe loſeth not her dignity; but by the name of Queen may maintain an action. Co. Lit. 18, 50.

The ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. making it treaſon to violate the Queen, extends not to a Queen Dowager, but the King's wife and companion: And a Queen Conſort and Queen Dowager ſhall be tried, in caſe of treaſon, by the peers. 2 Inſt. 50.

Queen-Gold, (Aurum Reginæ) Is a Royal duty or revenue belonging to every Queen of England, during her marriage to the King, payable by perſons in this kingdom and Ireland, on divers grants of the King, by way of fine or oblation, &c. being one full tenth part above the entire fines, on pardons, contracts, or agreements, which becomes a real debt to the Queen, by the name of Aurum Reginæ, upon the party's bare agreement with the King for his fine, and recording the ſame. Lib. Nig. Scac. pag. 43. 12 Co. Rep. 21, 22.

Que eſtate. Signifies which eſtate; and is a plea, where a man intitling another to land, &c. ſaith that the ſame eſtate ſuch other had, he has from him: As for example, in a quare impedit, plaintiff alledges that two perſons were ſeiſed of lands, whereunto the advowſon in queſtion was appendant in fee, and did preſent to the church, and afterwards the church was void: Which eſtate of the two perſons he hath now, by virtue whereof he preſented, &c. Broke 175. Co. Lit. 121.

A man cannot plead a quæ eſtate in an eſtate-tail, nor can it be pleaded in eſtates for life, or for years; a quæ eſtate of a term may not be pleaded, by reaſon a term cannot be gained by diſſeiſin, as a fee may; but one may plead a que eſtate in a term in another perſon, under whom he doth not claim, and be good; for he is not privy to the eſtate of the ſtranger, to know his title. 1 Rep. 46. 1 Lev. 190. 3 Lev. 19. Lutw. 81.

A thing which lies in grant, cannot be claimed by a que eſtate, directly by itſelf; yet it may be claimed as appurtenant to a manor, by que eſtate in the manor. 1 Mod. 232.

A man may not preſcribe by a que eſtate of a rent, advowſon or toll; but he may of a manor, &c. to which theſe are appendant. 2 Mod. 144 3 Mod. 52.

A perſon cannot plead a que eſtate, without ſhewing the deed how he came by it. Cro. Jac. 673. This is in caſe of a rent in groſs or lands which cannot paſs from one man to another without deed.

It is well known by the Exchequer roll, what every town throughout England is to pay for a fifteenth. See Fifteenth.

Sometimes this word Quinſime or Quinzime, is uſed for the fifteenth day after any feaſt, as the Quinzime of St. John Baptiſt. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. in the preamble.

It is a miſtake that this was a tax of the fifteenth part of all lands, for it was of the goods only, and it was firſt granted by the parliament 18 Ed. 1. viz. Compotus quintæ decimæ Regi, anno 18. per archiepiſcopos, epiſcopos, abbates, priores, comites, barones, & omnes alios de Regno, de omnibus bonis ſuis mobilibus conceſſæ: The city of London paid this year for the fifteenth, 2860 l. 13 s. 8 d. and the abbot of St. Edmunds 666 l. 13 s. 4 d. which was by compoſitions, and thereupon had all his temporal goods, and the goods of his convent diſcharged of the fifteenth.

The way of collecting it was, by two aſſeſſors appointed in every county by the King; and they appointed twelve in every hundred, who made a true valuation of every man's perſonal eſtate, and then cauſed the fifteenth part to be levied. Cowell. and ſee Black. Com. 1 V. 308.

Paris, anno* 1253.

Abr. 44. The writ was given by the Stat. Weſt. 2.

And at the Common law an aſſiſe of nuſance did not lie againſt the alienee of a wrong doer, for the purchaſer was to take the land in the ſame condition it was conveyed to him; but by the Statute of Weſt. 2. c. 24. Damages may be renovered againſt the perſon who ſold the land, if the nuſance be not abated on requeſt made to him, or againſt the perſon to whom he ſold it; though this doth not extend to the alienee of the alienee. 3 Nelſ. 45. Lutw. 1588. For he ſuppoſeth by the vendee's detaining any due from him, he is made leſs liable to pay the King's rent.

Formerly it was allowed only to ſuch perſons, as were tenants or debtors to the King; at this day the practice is become general for the plaintiff to ſurmiſe that for the wrong which defendant doth him, he is leſs able to ſatisfy his debt to his Majeſty; which ſurmiſe gives juriſdiction to the court of Exchequer, to hear and determine the cauſe. *Pract. The ſtatute of Quo Warranto is the 18 Ed. 1. ſt. 2. which is commented on 2 Inſt. 494, 495, &c.

The Attorney General may exhibit a Quo Warranto in the Crown-Office againſt any particular perſon, body politic or corporate, who claim or uſe any franchiſes, privileges or liberties, not having a legal grant or preſcription for the ſame; and compel them by proceſs to appear in the Crown-Office; and ſhew cauſe or ſet forth by way of pleading what title they have to the privileges claimed, and the iſſue ſhall be joined and tried thereon by niſi prius, or the plea be determined by the judges on demurrer, as in other caſes: But though on demurrer, &c. the queſtion be determined for defendant, yet he has no coſts allowed; if againſt him, he muſt be fined for the uſurpation, and pay large coſts to the proſecutor. Inſtit. Legal. 147, 148, 157.

But this is altered by ſtatute 9 Ann. c. 20. It has been adjudged, that the ſtatute 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. by which informations in the Crown-Office are not to be filed without expreſs orders in open court, &c. being a remedial law, extends to informations in the nature of a Quo Warranto, which always ſuppoſe the uſurpation of ſome franchiſe; and it is the general practice not to make ſuch an order for an information, without firſt making a rule on the perſon complained of to ſhew cauſe to the contrary; and this rule is grounded on an affidavit of the offence, &c. and if the perſon on whom the rule is made and perſonally ſerved, do not at the day given ſatisfy the court by affidavit, that there is no reaſonable cauſe for the proſecution, the court generally grants the information; and on ſpecial circumſtances, will grant it againſt thoſe who cannot be perſonally ſerved with ſuch rule; as if they purpoſely abſent themſelves, &c. but if the party on whom ſuch a rule is made, ſhew to the court a reaſonable cauſe againſt ſuch proſecution; as againſt a Quo Warranto information, that his right in the franchiſe in queſtion hath been already determined on a mandamus; or been acquieſced in many years; or that it depends on the right of others which hath not been tried; or that the franchiſe no way concerns the public, but is wholly of private nature, &c. the court will not generally grant the information. 2 Hawk. P. C. 262, 263.

A Quo Warranto was brought for vexation, on forty-eight points; and the court, on motion, ordered the proſecutor ſhould wave that Quo Warranto, and bring a new one, and therein inſiſt only on three points; but that he might proceed to trial on his new Quo Warranto, in ſuch time as he might have done upon the old. 2 Lil. Abr. 414.

A Quo Warranto requires to know of defendant by what authority he claims the liberties, and charges him with the wrongful uſurpation of them: In a Quo Warranto to ſhew by what authority a perſon claimed to have a Court Leet, and alledging farther quod uſurpavit libertatem ſine aliqua conceſſione, &c. defendant pleaded Non uſurpavit; and it was objected that this was no good plea, for the anſwer to Quo Warranto is either to claim or diſclaim; but the better opinion was, that by this plea defendant had anſwered the uſurpation, though it did not ſhew by what title he claimed. Godb. 91.

In Quo Warranto for uſing a fair and market, and taking toll, iſſue was taken, whether they had toll by preſcription, or not; and it was found they had; it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that here was a diſcontinuance, becauſe there was no iſſue as to the other liberties claimed: but it was held, they were too ſoon to make this objection, and that there can be no diſcontinuance againſt the King before judgment; for, by virtue of his prerogative, the Attorney General may proceed to take iſſue on the reſt, or may enter a nolle proſequi; but if he will not proceed, the court may make a rule on him ad replicandum, and then there may be a ſpecial entry made of it. Hardres 504. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 43.

A motion was made for an information in nature of a Quo Warranto, againſt a mayor and aldermen, to ſhew by what authority they admitted perſons to be freemen of the corporation, who did not inhabit in the borough: The motion was ſaid to be in behalf of the freemen, who by this means were encroached on; and an information was granted, there being no other way to try it, nor to redreſs the parties concerned. 1 Salk. 374.

Quo Warranto Information may be brought againſt a perſon voting in the election of a mayor, or other chief magiſtrate of a corporation, who hath no right to do it, on affidavit made that defendant voted in ſuch an election, and that the deponent (the proſecutor) believes he had no right to do it, &c.

And by ſtatute 9 Ann. c. 20. If any perſon uſurp, intrude into, or unlawfully hold or execute the office of a mayor, bailiff, or other office, the proper officer of the court of King's Bench, &c. may exhibit informations in the nature of a Quo Warranto, at the relation of any perſon deſiring to proſecute, who ſhall be mentioned therein to be the relator againſt ſuch uſurper, and proceed as uſual; and if the right of divers perſons may properly be determined in one information, one information ſhall ſerve, and defendants ſhall appear and plead as of the ſame term, the information is filed, unleſs the court give further time; and the proſecutor ſhall proceed with all convenient ſpeed: And if defendants be found guilty of an uſurpation, &c. the courts may as well give judgment of ouſter, as fine defendants; and alſo give judgment that the relator recover coſts; If judgment be given againſt relator, defendants ſhall have coſts to be levied by Ca. Sa. Fi. fa. &c.

In a Quo Warranto, judgment is final, becauſe that is a writ of right; but judgment on information, in nature of a Quo Warranto, is not concluſive; the proceedings in one are ſummons, and judgment that the liberties be ſeized, if defendant doth not appear; but in the other the proceſs is a venire facias and diſtringas. Sid. 86. Kel. 139, &c. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 43.

Upon Quo Warranto, when liberties are ſeized quouſque, &c. and they do not replevy them, the courſe is, that judgment final be given, niſi they plead within ſuch a time. Comberbach 18, 19.

Wherever judgment is given for the King on a Quo Warranto, for liberties uſurped, the judgment is Quod extinguatur, and that the uſurpers libertates, &c. nullatenus intromittant; and in ſuch caſe the writ muſt be brought againſt particular perſons: But where the Quo Warranto is for a liberty claimed by a corporation, there it is to be brought againſt the body politic; and the liberties may be ſeized, but the corporation ſtill ſubſiſts, and is not diſſolved without cauſe of forfeiture. 4 Mod. 52, 58.

A judgment of ſeizure cannot be proper where a thing is diſſolved: And the judgment in the Quo Warranto againſt the city of London, ſeems contradictory, for the firſt part of it is, quod libertates & franchiſiæ capiuntur & ſeiſanter in manus Regis; and the latter part of it is, quod capiantur ad ſatisfaciend' Domino Regi de fine ſuo pro uſurpatione libertat', &c. And the corporation was not thereby diſſolved; for it implied that they were not extinguiſhed. Ibid.

It has been obſerved, that frequent and violent proſecutions on Quo Warranto's, in behalf of the crown, have been fatal to both King and people.

An information in the nature of a Quo Warranto, lies for acting as a truſtee, under an act of parliament, without due appointment. 1 Strange 299. Againſt one for uſurping the office of Steward of a court-leet. Ibid. 621. For erecting a new office. 2 Strange 836. For the office of conſtable. Ibid. 1213. For a ferry. Ibid. 1161. But not for erecting a warren. 1 Strange 637. Nor for the office of churchwarden. Ibid. 1196.

Rageman, Is a ſtatute of juſtices aſſigned by Ed. 1. and his counſel, to hear and determine all complaints of injuries done throughout the realm, within the five years next before Michaelmas, in the fourth year of his reign.

Ragloria, A word mentioned in the charter of Edw. III. whereby he made his eldeſt ſon Edward Prince of Wales, in parliament at Weſtminſter the ſeventeenth year of his reign, recited by Selden in his Titles of Honour, 597.——Cum foreſtis, parcis, chaſeis, boſcis, waremis, hundredis, comotis, ragloriis, ringeldiis, wodewardis, conſtabulariis, ballivis, &c. Davis in his Dictionary ſays, that rhaglaw among the Welſh ſignifies ſeneſchallus, ſurrogatus, præpoſitus.

Raglorius, A ſteward. Selden, tit. of Honour, 597. Cum hundredis commotis, ragloriis, rengeldis, &c.

Ragman's Roll, Rectius Ragimund's Roll, ſo called from one Ragimund a legate in Scotland, who, calling before him all the beneficed clergymen in that kingdom, cauſed them on oath to give in the true value of their benefices; according to which they were afterwards taxed by the court of Rome: And this roll, among other records, being taken from the Scots by Ed. 1. was redelivered to them in the beginning of the reign of Ed. 3.

Sir Richard Baker ſaith, That Ed. 3. ſurrendered, by charter, all his right of ſovereignty to the Kingdom of Scotland, and reſtored divers inſtruments of their former homages and fealties, with the famous evidence called Ragman's Roll. Bak. Chron. 127.

Ran, (a Saxon word) Signifies aperta rapina, open or public theft. Lamb. Archai. 125. defines it thus, Ran dicitur aperta rapina, quæ negari non poteſt.

In the Saxon laws of Canute, cap. 58. Si in profectione militari ran commiſerit, pro facti ratione emendato, Hoveden in the latter part of Henry II. ſpeaking of ſome things, which William the Conqueror amended in the laws of England, ſaith, Decretum eſt etiam ibi, ut ſi Francigena appellaverit Anglicum de perjurio aut murdro, furto, homicidio, ran quod dicunt apertam rapinam quæ negari non poteſt, Anglicus ſe defendet, per quod melius voluerit, aut judicio ferri aut duello. We ſtill ſay, when a man takes away the goods of another by violence, he hath taken all he could rap and ran. Rap from rapio, to ſnatch. Cowell.

Range, From the French ranger, to order, diſpoſe of of. It is uſed in the Foreſt Laws, both as a verb, as to range, and a ſubſtantive as to make range. Charta de Foreſta, cap. 6. To range alſo, ſignifies to wander and ſtray about.

Ranger, Is a ſworn officer of the foreſt, of which there are twelve. Id. c. 7. whoſe authority is in part deſcribed by his oath ſet down by Manwood, part. 1. 50. but more particularly part. 2. cap. 20. num. 15, 16, 17. His office chiefly conſiſts in three points, To walk daily through his charge, to ſee, hear and inquire, of treſpaſſes in his bailiwick; To drive the beaſts of the foreſt both of venary and chaſe out of the deafforeſted into the foreſted lands: And to preſent all treſpaſſes of the foreſt at the next court holden for the foreſt.

This ranger is made by the King's letters patent, and hath a fee of twenty or thirty pounds paid yearly out of the Exchequer, and certain fee-deer. Rangeator Foreſtæ de whittlewood. Pat. 14 R. 2. m. 3.

Ranſome, (Fr. Rancon, i. e. Redemptio) Is properly the ſum paid for redeeming a captive or priſoner of war; and ſometimes taken in our law for a ſum of money paid for pardoning ſome great offence, and ſetting the offender at liberty who was under impriſonment. Stat. 1 H. 4. c. 7. 11 H. 6. c. 11.

Fine and Ranſom go together, and ſome writers tell us, that they are the ſame; but others ſay, that the offender ought to be firſt impriſoned, and then delivered or ranſomed in conſideration of a fine. Co. Lit. 127. Dalt. 203.

Ranſom differs from Amerciament, being a redemption of a corporal puniſhment due to any crime. Lamb. Eiren. 556.

A ſhip was taken by the French; the maſter (having a ſhare in her) ranſomed her for 1800*l.* and was taken to France as an hoſtage for this money. The ranſom money muſt be raiſed out of the profits, notwithſtanding any former mortgage of the ſhip; for if there was a precedent mortgage, what would become of that ſecurity, if the ſhip had not been redeemed? After the ſhip was redeemed, ſhe performed her intended voyage, and the freight money received after redemption was the firſt profits ariſing, and out of them the ranſom money is to be ſatisfied; the inſurers always pay a part of the ranſom money. 2 Eq. Abr. 690.

Rape, (Rapus vel Rapa) Is part of a county, ſignifying as much as a hundred, and oftentimes contains in it more hundreds than one.

Suſſex is divided into ſix Rapes only, viz. The Rape of Chicheſter, Arundel, Bramber, Lewis, Pavenſey, and Haſtings; every of which, beſides hundreds, hath a caſtle, river, and foreſt belonging to it. Camb. Britann. 225, 229. Theſe Rapes are incident to the county of Suſſex; as Lathes are to Kent; and Wapentakes to Yorkſhire, &c. See Rape of Women, poſt.

Rape of the Foreſt, (Raptus Foreſtæ) Treſpaſs committed in the foreſt by violence; and is reckoned among thoſe crimes, whoſe cogniſance belonged only to the King.——Inter delicta numeratur, quorum cognitio ad unicum regem ſpectat. Leg. Hen. 1. c. 10.

Rape of Women, Is an unlawful and carnal knowledge of a woman, by force, and AGAINST HER WILL: A raviſhment of the body, and violent deflouring her; which is felony by the Common and Statute law. Co. Lit. 190. The word Rapuit is ſo appropriated by law to this offence, that it cannot be expreſſed by any other; even the words Carnaliter Cognovit, &c. without it, will not be ſufficient. Co. Lit. 124. 2 Inſt. 180.

There muſt be penctration and emiſſion, to make this crime; and it is ſaid emiſſion may be evidence prima facie of penetration, though not full evidence: If there be no penetration and emiſſion, an attempt to raviſh a woman, though it be never ſo outrageous, will be an aſſault only. 1 Hawk. P. C. 108.

It was a queſtion before 18 Eliz. c. 7. whether a rape could be committed on the body of a child of the age of ſix or ſeven years; and a perſon being indicted for the rape of a girl of ſeven years old, although he was found guilty, the court doubted, whether a child of that age could be raviſhed; if ſhe had been nine years old ſhe might, for at that age ſhe may be endowed. Dyer 304.

By the ſtatute 18 Eliz. c. 7. ſ. 4. whoever ſhall carnally know and abuſe any woman child under the age of ten years, he ſhall ſuffer as a felon, without benefit of clergy: And on an indictment for this offence, it is no way way material whether ſuch child conſented or were forced; but it muſt be proved that the offender entered her body, &c. Cro. Car. 332. Dalt. 393.

It is no excuſe or mitigation of the crime, that the woman at laſt yielded to the violence, and conſented either after the fact or before, if ſuch conſent was forced by fear of death or dureſs; or that ſhe was a common ſtrumpet, for ſhe is ſtill under the protection of the law, and may be forced: But it was anciently held to be no rape to force a man's own concubine; and it is ſaid by ſome to be evidence of a woman's conſent, that ſhe was a common whore. 1 Hawk. 108. Co. Lit. 123.

Alſo formerly it was adjudged not to be a rape to force a woman, who conceived at the time; becauſe if ſhe had not conſented, ſhe could not have conceived: Though this opinion hath been ſince queſtioned, by reaſon the previous violence is no way extenuated by ſuch a ſubſequent conſent; and if it were neceſſary to ſhew the woman did not conceive, to make the crime, the offender could not be tried till ſuch time as it might appear whether ſhe did or not 2 Inſt. 190.

The ſooner complaint is made of a rape, the better: In Scotland it ought to be complained of the ſame day or night it is committed; and our law mentions forty days: It is a ſtrong preſumption againſt a woman, that ſhe made no complaint in a reaſonable time after the fact. Co. Lit. 123. 7 Inſt. 59. H. P. C. 117.

On a bill of conſpiracy, &c. where defendant did not indict plaintiff for a rape, in a ſhort time after the injury ſuppoſed to be done, but concealed it for half a year, and then would have preferred an indictment againſt him; this was reſolved to be malicious, and that there not being Recens proſecutio argued a conſent. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 45.

A woman raviſhed may proſecute and be a witneſs in her own cauſe. 3 Rep. 37. Yet a woman's poſitive oath of a rape, without concurring circumſtances, is ſeldom credited: If a man can prove himſelf to be in another place, or in other company, at the time ſhe charges him with the fact, this will overthrow her oath; ſo if ſhe is wrong in the deſcription of the place, or ſwears the fact to be committed in a place whereto it was impoſſible the man could have acceſs at that time; as if the room was locked up, and the key in the cuſtody of another perſon, &c.

Aiders and abettors in committing a rape, may be indicted as principal felons, whether men or women; and Lord Audley was indicted and executed as a principal, for aſſiſting his ſervant to raviſh his own wife, who was admitted a witneſs againſt him. Dalt. 107. State Trials, Vol. 1 p. 265.

By Hale Ch. J. A party raviſhed may give evidence on oath; but the credibility of her teſtimony, and how far ſhe is to be believed, muſt be left to the jury, being more or leſs credible according to the circumſtances of fact, and ſigns of the injury, which are many; and though a rape is a moſt deteſtable crime, it is an accuſation eaſily made, and hard to be proved, but harder to be defended by the man accuſed, although ever ſo innocent: And there are ſeveral inſtances of rapes fully proved, but have after been diſcovered to be malicious contrivances. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 635, 636.

Of old time, rape was felony, and puniſhed with death; eſpecially if the party raviſhed were a virgin, unleſs ſuch virgin would accept of the offender for her huſband, in which caſe ſhe might ſave his life; by marrying him; for if ſhe demanded him for her huſband before judgment paſſed, he eſcaped puniſhment; but by the ſtat. Weſtm. 2. her election is taken away: Afterwards it was looked on as a great miſdemeanor only, and not felony, but puniſhed, by loſs of eyes and privy members; and by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 13. it was reduced to treſpaſs, ſubjecting the offender to two years impriſonment, and a fine at the King's will: But the ſtatute Weſtm. 2. c. 34. made it felony again; and it is excluded from the benefit of the clergy, by 18 Eliz. c. 7. Rape was excepted out of the general pardon. 2 W. & M. c. 10, &c. See Appeal of Rape. And Black. Com. 4 V. 210. And ſee 1 Hale's P. C. 633, 635, 636.

All who are preſent, and actually aſſiſt a man to commit a rape, may be indicted as principal offenders, whether men or women. 1 Hawk. 108.

Rapine, (Rapina) To take a thing in private againſt the owner's will, is properly theft; but to take it openly, or by violence, is rapine. 14 Car. 2. c. 22. and 18 Car. 2. c. 3. See Black. Com. 4 V. 241.

Raptu heredis, Is a writ for taking away an heir holding in ſocage; of which there are two ſorts, one when the heir is married, the other when he is not; ſee Reg. Orig. 163.

Raſe, (Raſeria) Seems to have been a meaſure of corn now diſuſed. Toll ſhall be taken by the raſe, and not by the heap or cantel. Ordinance for bakers, brewers, &c. c. 4.

Raſure of a deed, ſo as to alter it in a material part, without conſent of the parte bound by it, &c. will make the ſame void, and if it be raiſed in the date, after delivery, it is ſaid it goes through the whole. 5 Rep. 23. 119.

Raſure, &c. is moſt ſuſpicious, when it is in a deed poll, that there is but one part of the deed, and it makes to the advantage of him to whom made. And where a deed by raſure, addition, or alteration becomes no deed, the defendant may plead non eſt factum. Ibid. See Black. Com. 2 V. 308.

Rate, A valuation of every man's eſtate; or the appointing and ſetting down how much every one ſhall pay, or be charged with to any tax. Stat. 43 Ed. 2.

Rate-Tithe, Is when any ſheep or other cattle are kept in a pariſh for leſs time than a year, the owner muſt pay tithe for them pro Rata, according to the cuſtom of the place. F. N. B. 51.

Ratification, (Ratificatio) A ratifying or confirming: It is particularly uſed for the confirmation of a clerk in a prebend, &c. formerly conferred on him by the biſhop, where the right of patronage is doubted or ſuppoſed to be in the King. Reg. Orig. 304.

Ratihabitio, Confirmation, agreement, conſent. See 18 Vin. Abr. 156.

Ratio, Properly ſignifies reaſon; but we take it moſtly for an account, as reddere rationem, to give an account, and ſo it is frequently uſed. According to ſome it is a cauſe, or give judgment therein; and ponere ad rationem, is to cite one to appear in judgment. Walſing. 88.

Rationabilibus diviſis, Is a writ which lies where two lords, in divers towns, have ſeigniories joining together, for him who findeth his waſte by little and little to have been encroached on, againſt the other who hath encroached, thereby to rectify their bounds; in which reſpect Fitzherbert calls it in its own nature a writ of right. The Old Nat. Brev. ſays, That this is a kind of Juſticies, and may be removed by a pone out of the county to the Common Bench. See the form and uſe in F. N. B. 128. and Reg Orig. 157. The Civilians call this Judicium finium regendorum.

Rationabile Eſtoverium, Was alimony heretofore ſo called. Rot. 7 H. 3.

Rationabili parte, A writ of right for lands, &c. See Recto de Rationabili parte. And Black. Com. 3 V. 194.

Rationabili parte Bonorum, Is a writ which lies for a wife, after the death of her huſband, againſt the executors of the huſband denying her the third part of his goods after debts and funeral charges paid. F. N. B. 222.

It appears by Glanvile, that by the Common law of England, the goods of the deceaſed (his debts firſt paid) ſhall be divided into three parts; one for the wife, another for his children, and the third to the executors: And this writ may be brought by the children, as well as the wife. Reg. Orig. 142.

But it ſeems to be uſed only where the cuſtom of the country ſerves for it; and the writs in the regiſter rehearſe the cuſtoms of the counties, &c. New Nat. Br. 270, 271.

As to children bringing this writ, their marriage is no advancement, if the father's goods be not given in his life-time; but where a child is advanced by the father, this writ will not lie. Ibid. See 18 Vin. Abr. 158. and Black. Com. 2 V. 492.

Rationale, Was the ſame with pallium: It was worn by the high prieſt of the old law, as a ſign of the greateſt perfection, and by the pope and biſhops as a token of the higheſt virtue, quæ gratia & ratione perficitur, hence it is called rationale.

Raviſhment, (Fr. Raviſſement, i. e. Direptio, raptio) Signifies an unlawful taking away either a woman, or an heir in ward; ſometimes it is uſed in the ſame ſenſe with rape.

Raviſhment de gard, A writ which lay for the guardian by knight's ſervice, or in ſocage, againſt a perſon who took from him the body of his ward. F. N. B. 140.

By 12 Car. 2. c. 24. this writ is taken away, as to lands, held by knights-ſervice, &c. but not where there is guardian in ſocage, or appointed by will.

The Mayor and Aldermen and Chamberlain of London, who have the cuſtody of orphans, if they commit any orphan to another, he ſhall have a writ of raviſhment of ward againſt him who taketh the ward out of his poſſeſſion. New Nat. Br. 317.

Ray, A word appropriated to cloth never coloured or dyed. Stat 17 R. 2. cap. 3. 11 H. 4. cap. 6. and 1 R. 3. cap. 8.

Reafforeſted, Is where a foreſt which had been diſafforeſted is again made foreſt; as the foreſt of Dean is by Stat. 20 Car. 2. c. 3.

Realty, Is an abſtract of real, as diſtinguiſhed from perſonalty.

Reaſon, Is the very life of law; and what is contrary to it is unlawful.

When the reaſon of the law once ceaſes, the law itſelf generally ceaſes; becauſe reaſon is the foundation of all our laws. Co. Lit. 97, 183.

If maxims of law admit of any difference, thoſe are to be preferred which carry with them the more perfect and excellent reaſon. Ibid. See Black. Com. 1 V. 70.

Reaſonable aid, Was a duty claimed by the lord of the fee of his tenants holding by knights ſervice, to marry his daughter, &c. Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 24. See the Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24.

Reaſonable part. See Black. Com. 2 V. 492, 516. 4 V. 401, 417.

Reattachment, (Reattachiamentum) Is a ſecond attachment of him who was formerly attached and diſmiſſed the court without day, by the not coming of the juſtices, or ſome ſuch caſualty. Broke Reg. Orig. 35.

A cauſe diſcontinued, or put without day, cannot be revived without reattachment or reſummons; which, if they are ſpecial, may revive the whole proceedings; but if general, the original record only. 2 Hawk. 300. And on a reattachment, the defendant is to plead de novo, &c. See Day.

Rebate, Is an abating what the intereſt of money comes to, in conſideration of prompt payment. Merch. Dict.

Rebellion, (Rebellio) Among the Romans, was where thoſe who had been formerly overcome in battle, and yielded to their ſubjection, made a ſecond reſiſtance: But with us it is generally uſed for the taking up of arms traiterouſly againſt the King, whether by natural ſubjects, or others when once ſubdued; and the word rebel is ſometimes applied to him who wilfully breaks a law; ſo to a villein diſobeying his lord. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 6. 1 R. 2. c. 6.

There is a difference between enemies and rebels; enemies are thoſe who are out of the King's allegiance; therefore ſubjects of the King, either in open war, or rebellion, are not the King's enemies, but traitors. And David Prince of Wales, who levied war againſt Ed. 1. becauſe he was within the allegiance of the King, had ſentence pronounced againſt him as a traitor and rebel. Fleta, lib. 1. c. 16. Private perſons may arm themſelves to ſuppreſs rebels, enemies, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 136.

Rebellious aſſembly, Is a gathering together of twelve perſons, or more, intending or going about to practiſe or put in uſe unlawfully, of their own authority, any thing to change the laws or ſtatutes of the realm; or to deſtroy the incloſures of any ground, or banks of any fiſh-pound, pool or conduit, to the intent the ſame ſhall lie waſte and void; or to deſtroy the deer in any park, or any warren of conies, dove-houſes, or fiſh in ponds; or any houſe, barns, mills or bays; or to burn ſtacks of corn; or abate rents, or prices of victuals, &c. Stat. 1 Mar. cap. 12. 1 Ed. 6. Rebutter, (from the Fr. bouter, i. e. repellere, to put back or bar) Is the anſwer of defendant to plaintiff's ſurrejoinder: And plaintiff's anſwer to the rebutter is called a ſurrebutter; but it is very rare the parties go ſo far in pleading. Pract. Attorn, edit. 1. 86.

Rebutter is alſo where a man by deed or fine grants to warranty any land or hereditament to another; and the perſon making the warranty or his heir, ſues him to whom the warranty is made, or his heir or aſſignee, for the ſame thing; if he who is ſo ſued, plead the deed or fine with warranty, and pray judgment if the plaintiff ſhall be received to demand the thing which he ought to warrant to the party, againſt the warranty in the deed, &c. this is called a rebutter. Terms de Ley. And if I grant to a tenant to hold without impeachment of waſte, and afterwards implead him for waſte done, he may debar me of this action by ſhewing my grant; which is rebutter. Co. Entr. 284. Co. Litt. 365. See Black. Com. 3 V. 310.

Recaption, (Recaptio) Signifies the taking a ſecond diſtreſs of one formerly diſtrained, during the plea grounded on the former diſtreſs; and it is a writ to recover damages for him whoſe goods being diſtrained for rent, or ſervice, &c. are diſtrained again for the ſame cauſe, pending the plea in the country-court, or before the juſtices. F. N. B. 71, 72. Stat. 47 Ed. 3. c. 7.

And a recaption lies where the lord diſtrains other cattle of the tenant than he firſt diſtrained, as well as if he had diſtrained the ſame cattle again, if it be for one and the ſame cauſe; but 19 Ed. 3. iſſue was taken whether the cattle were other cattle of the plaintiff, &c. New Nat. Br. 161.

If the lord diſtrain the cattle of a ſtranger for the ſame rent, and not his cattle who was firſt diſtrained; neither the ſtranger, nor the party firſt diſtrained, ſhall have the writ of recaption: And if the lord diſtrain for rent or ſervice, and afterwards the lord's bailiff takes a diſtreſs on the ſame tenant for the ſame rent or ſervice, pending the plea; the tenant ſhall not have a recaption againſt the lord, or againſt the bailiff, altho' the bailiff maketh cogniſance in right of the lord, &c. for it may be the lord had no notice of that diſtreſs, or the bailiff had no notice of the diſtreſs taken by the lord; tho' in ſuch caſe action of treſpaſs lies; and if the lord agree to the diſtreſs taken by his ſervant or bailiff, the tenant may have this writ againſt the lord. Ibid. 159.

A man is diſtrained within a liberty, and ſues a replevin there by plaint or writ, and pendant that plaint in the liberty he is diſtrained again for the ſame cauſe by the perſon who diſtrained before; he ſhall not on that diſtreſs bring a writ of recaption, becauſe the plaint is not pendant in the county-court before the ſheriff, nor in C. B. before the juſtices: But if the plaint be removed by pone or recordare out of the liberty before the juſtices, then the party diſtrained may have a recaption, &c. And if a perſon be convicted before the ſheriff in a writ of recaption, he ſhall not only render damages to the party, but be amerced for the contempt; and be fined. 39 Ed. 3.

For damage feaſant beaſts may be diſtrained as often as they be found on the land; becauſe every time is for a new treſpaſs and a new wrong, and no recaption lies.

Recaption is alſo a ſpecies of remedy by the mere act of the party injured. This happens, when any one hath deprived another of his property in goods or chattels perſonal, or wrongfully detains one's wife, child, or ſervant; in which caſe the owner of the goods, and the huſband, parent, or maſter, may lawfully claim and retake them, wherever he happens to find them; ſo it be not in a riotous manner, or attended with a breach of the peace. 3 Inſt. 134. Hal. Annal. ſ. 46.

The reaſon for this is obvious; ſince it may frequently happen that the owner may have this only opportunity of doing himſelf juſtice: His goods may be afterwards conveyed away or deſtroyed; and his wife, children, or ſervants, concealed or carried out of his reach; if he had no ſpeedier remedy than the ordinary proceſs of law. If therefore he can ſo contrive it as to gain poſſeſſion of his property again, without force or terror, the law favours and will juſtify his proceeding. But, as the public peace is a ſuperior conſideration to any one man's private property; and as, if individuals were once allowed to uſe private force as a remedy for private injuries, all ſocial juſtice muſt ceaſe, the ſtrong would give law to the weak, and every man would revert to a ſtate of nature; for theſe reaſons it is provided, that this natural right of recaption ſhall never be exerted, where ſuch exertion muſt occaſion ſtriſe and bodily contention, or endanger the peace of ſociety. If, for inſtance, my horſe is taken away, and I find him in a common, a fair, or a public inn, I may lawfully ſeize him to my own uſe: But I cannot juſtify breaking open a private ſtable, or entering on the grounds of a third perſon, to take him, except he be feloniouſly ſtolen; but muſt have recourſe to an action at law. 2 *Roll. Receipt, or Receit. See Reſceit.

Receiver, (Receptor) Is by us, as with the Civilians, commonly uſed in the evil part, for ſuch as receive ſtolen goods, &c. And receiving a felon, and concealing him and his offence, makes a perſon acceſſary to the felony. 2 Inſt. 183. But the receiver of a felon, &c. muſt have notice of the felony either expreſs or implied, which is to be expreſly charged in the indictment; and the felony muſt be compleat at the time of the receipt, and not become ſo afterwards by matter ſubſequent: If a perſon knowing one to have been guilty of felony, barely receive him and permit him to eſcape, without giving him any advice, aſſiſtance or encouragement, it is a high miſdemeanor, but no capital offence; and a wife, in regard to the duty and love ſhe owes her huſband, may receive him when he hath committed felony; but no other relation will exempt the receiver of a felon from puniſhment. *S. By ſtatute, if any perſon receive or buy knowingly any ſtolen goods, or conceal felons knowing of the felony, he ſhall be acceſſary to the felony, and ſuffer death as a felon. Stat. 5 Ann. c. 31. Recital, (Recitatio) Is the rehearſal or making mention in a deed or writing of ſomething which has been done before. 2 Lill. Abr. 416.

A recital is not concluſive, becauſe it is no direct affirmation; and by feigned recitals in a true deed, men might make what titles they pleaſed, ſince falſe recitals are not puniſhable. Co. Litt. 352. 2 Lev. 108. Wood's Inſt. 225.

If a perſon by deed of aſſignment recite that he is poſſeſſed of an intereſt in certain lands, and aſſign it over by the deed, and become bound by bond to perform all the agreements in the deed; if he is not poſſeſſed of ſuch intereſt, the condition is broken; and tho' a recital of itſelf is nothing, yet being joined and conſidered with the reſt of the deed, it is material. 1 Leon. 112. And where it is but a recital, that before the indenture the parties were agreed to do ſuch a thing, it is a covenant; and the deed itſelf confirms it. 3 Keb. 466,

The recital of one leaſe in another, is not a ſufficient proof that there was ſuch a leaſe as is recited. Vaugh. 74. But the recital of a leaſe in a deed of releaſe, is good evidence of a leaſe againſt the releſſor and thoſe who claim under him. Mod. Ca. 44.

A new reverſionary leaſe ſhall commence from the delivery, where an old leaſe is recited, and there is none, &c. Dyer 93. 6 Rep. 36.

A. recites that he hath nothing in ſuch lands, and in truth he hath an eſtate there, and makes a leaſe to B. for years: The recital is void, and the leaſe good. Jenk. Cent. 255. In this caſe, if the recital were true, the leaſe would not bind. Ibid. See Black. Com. 2 V. 298. iv.

Recognition, (Recognitio) Signifies an acknowledgment, and it is the title of the firſt chapter of the Stat. 1 Jac. 1. whereby the parliament acknowledged the crown of England, on the death of Queen Elizabeth, RIGHTFULLY to have deſcended to King James.

Recognitione adnullanda per Vim & Duritiem facta, Is a writ to the juſtices of C. B. for ſending a record touching a recognizance, which the recognizor ſuggeſts was acknowledged by force and dureſs; that, if it ſo appear, the recognizance may be diſannulled. Reg. Orig. 183.

Recognitors, (Recognitores) Are the jury impanelled on an aſſiſe, ſo called, becauſe they acknowledge a diſſeiſin by their verdict. Bract. lib. 5.

Recognizance, (Fr. Recognoiſſance, i. e. Recognitio Obligatio) Is a bond or obligation of record, acknowledged to the King, &c. And ſome are for debt, ſome for bail; others to appear at the ſeſſions or aſſiſes to proſecute felons, and to be of good behaviour, &c.

For debt, or bail, they are taken or acknowledged before the Judges, a Maſter in Chancery, &c. And to appear at the aſſiſes, or ſeſſions, they may be taken by juſtices of peace; which recognizances are to be returned by the juſtices to the ſeſſions, or an information lies againſt them. 2 Lil. Abr. 417.

When a recognizance of the peace is made, the condition is to be read to the parties bound, calling them by their names thus: You A. B. do acknowledge to owe unto our ſovereign Lord King George the Third, &c. And then it is to be ingroſſed on parchment, and the juſtice is to ſubſcribe it. Dalt. 479, 480. In theſe recognizances, the principal is bound in double the ſum of the ſureties; and the uſual numbers of ſureties are two, and the uſual penalty 40 l. at leaſt; tho' if the party be a very dangerous perſon, a juſtice may inſiſt on a recogniſance of 1000 l. penalty. Style 322.

Recognizances in general are of ſeveral ſorts; one is founded on 23 H. 8. c. 6. By which ſtatute, the Chief Juſtices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas in term-time, or, in their abſence out of term, the Mayor of the Staple at Weſtminſter, and the Recorder of London jointly, have power to take recognizances for the payment of debts, in this form, Noverint univerſi per præſentes nos A. B. & C. D. teneri & firmiter obligari E. F. in centum libris, &c. They are to be ſealed with the ſeal of the cognizor, and of the King appointed for that purpoſe, and the ſeal of one of the Chief Juſtices, &c. And the recognizees, their executors and adminiſtrators, have the like proceſs and execution againſt the recognizors, as on obligations of ſtatute ſtaple. 2 Inſt. 678.

The execution on a recogniſance or ſtatute purſuant to 23 H. 8. c. 6. is called an extent; and the body of the cogniſor, (if a layman) and all his lands, &c. into whoſe hands ſoever they come, are liable to the extent; goods (not of other perſons in his poſſeſſion) and chattels, as leaſes for years, cattle, &c. which are in his own hands, and not ſold bona fide and for valuable conſideration, are alſo ſubject to the extent. 3 Rep. 13.

But the land is not the debtor, but the body; and land is liable only in reſpect that it was in the hands of the cogniſor at the time of the acknowledgment of the recogni- zance, or after; and the perſon is charged, but the lands chargeable only. Plowd. 72.

Lands held in tail are chargeable only during life, and do not affect the iſſue in tail; unleſs a recovery be paſſed, when it is as fee-ſimple land: Copyhold lands are ſubject to the extent, only during the life of the cogniſor: The lands a man hath in right of his wife, ſhall be chargeable but during the lives of huſband and wife together; and lands which the cogniſor hath in jointenancy with another, are liable to execution during the life of cogniſor and no longer; for after his death, if no execution was ſued in his life, the ſurviving jointenant ſhall have all; but if the cogniſor ſurvive, all is liable. 2 Inſt. 673.

If two or more join in the recogniſance, &c. the lands of all ought equally to be charged: And where a cogniſor, after he hath entered into a recognizance or ſtatute, conveys his lands to divers perſons, and the cogniſee ſues execution on the lands of ſome of them, and not all: In this caſe he or they whoſe lands are taken in execution, may by audita querela or ſcire facias have contribution from the reſt, and have all the lands equally and proportionably extended. 3 Rep. 14. Plowd. 72. But the cogniſor, or his heirs, when he ſells part of his lands, and keeps the remainder, ſhall not have any contribution from a purchaſer, if his land only is put in execution. Ibid.

If there be a recogniſance, and after a ſtatute entered into by one man to two others; his lands may be extended pro rata, and ſo taken in execution. Yelv. 12.

This kind of recogniſance may be uſed for payment of debts; or to ſtrengthen other aſſurance. Wood. 288. If a recognizance is to pay 100 l. at five ſeveral days, viz. 20 l. on each day, immediately after the firſt failure of payment, the cogniſee may have execution by elegit on the recogniſance for the 20 l. and ſhall not ſtay till the laſt day of payment is paſt, for this is in nature of ſeveral judgments. Co. Litt. 292. 2 Inſt. 395, 471. When no time is limited in a ſtatute or recognizance for payment of the money, it is due preſently; as in caſe of a bond. Law Secur. 61.

A recognizance for money lent, tho' it is not a perfect record till entered on the roll; yet, when entered, it is a recogniſance from the firſt acknowledgment, and binds perſons and lands from that time. Hob. 196. But by 29 Car. 2. c. 3. No recognizance ſhall bind lands in the hands of purchaſers for valuable conſideration, but from the time of inrolment which is to be ſet down in the margin of the roll: and recognizances, &c. in the counties of York and Middleſex, ſhall not bind lands unleſs regiſtered, purſuant to the ſtatutes paſſed in 2, 5, 6 & 7 years of Queen Ann. Alſo the clerk of the recognizances is to keep three ſeveral rolls of the entering recognizances taken by the Chief Juſtices, &c. and the perſons before whom the recognizances are taken, and the parties acknowledging are to ſign their names to the roll, as well as to the recognizance. 8 Geo. 1. cap. 25.

To make a good recognizance or obligation of record, the form preſcribed muſt be purſued; therefore they may not be acknowledged before any others, beſides the perſons appointed by the ſtatutes; and the ſubſtantial forms of the ſtatute are to be obſerved herein. But a recognizance may be taken by the judges in any part of England. Dyer 221. Hob. 195.

Recognizances and ſtatutes are like judgments; and the cogniſee ſhall have the ſame things in execution, as after judgment. The body of the cogniſor himſelf, but not of his heir, or executor, &c. may be taken, tho' there be lands, goods, and chattels to ſatisfy the debt: And if a cogniſor is taken by the ſheriff, and he let him go; yet his lands and goods are liable. 12 Rep. 1, 2. Plowd. 62. 1 And 273.

By recognizances of debt, and bail, the body and lands are bound; tho' ſome opinions are, that the lands of bail are bound from the time of the recognizance entered into; and ſome, that they are not bound but from the recovery of the judgment againſt the principal. 2 Leon. 84. Cro. Jac. 272, 449. Qu. If the lands of bail are bound, 'till judgment recovered and entered up, againſt them?

In B. R. all recognizances are entered as taken in court; but in C. B. they enter them ſpecially where taken, and their recognizances bind from the caption, but thoſe in B. R. from the time of entry; In C. B. a ſcire facias may be brought on their recognizances either in London or Middleſex; on thoſe in B. R. in the county of Middleſex only. 2 Salk. 659. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 46.

A recogniſance of bail in C. B. is entered ſpecially; the bail are bound to pay a certain ſum of money, if the party condemned doth not pay the condemnation, or render his body to priſon; and in B. R. recognizances are entered generally; that if the party be condemned in the ſuit or action, he ſhall render his body to priſon, or pay the condemnation money, or the bail ſhall do it for him. 2 Lill. Abr. 417.

It was formerly a queſtion whether a ca. ſa. would lie on a recognizance taken in Chancery; but adjudged, that immediately after the recognizance is acknowledged, it is a judgment on record; and then by 25 Ed. 3. cap. 17. a ca. ſa. will lie, it being a debt on record. 2 Bulſt. 62.

If a recognizance be made before a Maſter in Chancery, for a debt; or to perform an order or decree of the court; if the condition be not performed, an extent ſhall iſſue; or a ſcire facias is the proper proceſs, for the recogniſor to ſhew what he can ſay why execution ſhould not be had againſt him; upon which and a ſcire fac. or two nihils returned, and judgment thereupon, the proper execution is an elegit, &c. Cro. Jac. 3.

Where a man is bound by recognizance in Chancery, and the cogniſor hath certain indentures of defeaſance; if the recogniſee will ſue execution on the recognizance, the recogniſor may come into Chancery, and ſhew the indentures of defeaſance, and that he is ready to perform them, and thereon he ſhall have a ſcire facias againſt the recogniſee, returnable at a certain day; and in the ſame writ, he ſhall have a ſuperſedeas to the ſheriff not to make execution in the mean time. New Nat. Br. 589.

If a perſon is bound in a recognizance in Chancery, or other court of record, and afterwards the recogniſee dieth; his executors may ſue forth an elegit, to have execution of the lands of the recogniſor; and if the ſheriff return that the recogniſor is dead, then a ſpecial ſcire facias ſhall go againſt the heir of the recogniſor, and thoſe who are tenants of the lands which he had at the day of the recognizance entered into. Ibid. 590.

One of the beſt ſecurities we have for a debt is the recognizance in Chancery, acknowledged before a Maſter of that court; which is to be ſigned by ſuch Maſter, and afterwards inrolled: And the King may, by his commiſſion, give authority to one to receive a recognizance of another man, and to return the ſame into Chancery; and on ſuch a recognizance, if the recogniſor do not pay the debt at the day, the recogniſee ſhall have an elegit on the cognizance ſo taken, as if it were taken in the Chancery. *Pract. Recogniſor, He who enters into the recognizance.

Record, (Recordum, from the Lat. Recordari, to remember) Signifies a memorial or remembrance, or an authenic teſtimony in writing, contained in rolls of parchtment, and preſerved in a court of Record. Britton. c. 27. It is a writing in parchment, wherein are inrolled pleas of land, or common pleas, and criminal proceedings in courts of record; and records are reſtrained to ſuch courts only, and do not extend to the rolls of inferior courts, the regiſtries of proceedings whereof are not properly called records. Co. Litt. 260. 2 Lill. Abr. 418.

There are three kinds of records, viz. A judicial record, as an attainder, &c. a miniſterial record on oath, being an office or inquiſition found; and a record made by conveyance and conſent, as a fine, or a deed inrolled. 4 Rep. 54. But it has been held, that a deed inrolled, or a decree in Chancery inrolled, are not records, but a deed and a decree recorded; and there is a difference between a record and a thing recorded. 2 Lill. 421.

Records, being the rolls or memorials of the judges, import in themſelves ſuch incontroulable verity, that they admit of no proof or averment to the contrary, inſomuch that THEY ARE TO BE TRIED ONLY BY THEMSELVES; for otherwiſe there would be no end of controverſies; but during the term wherein any judicial act is done, the roll is alterable in that term, as the judges ſhall direct; when the term is paſt, then the record admitteth of no alteration, or proof that it is falſe in any inſtance. C. Lit. 260. 4 Rep. 52.

Matter of record is to be proved by the record itſelf, and not by evidence, becauſe no iſſue can be joined on it to be tried by a jury like matters of fact; and the credit of a record is greater than the teſtimony of witneſſes. 21 Car. B. R. Tho' where matter of record is mixed with matter of fact, it ſhall be tried by jury. Hob. 124.

A man cannot regularly aver againſt a Record; yet a jury ſhall not be eſtopped by a Record to find the truth of the fact: And it was adjudged that on evidence, it is at the diſcretion of the court to permit any matter to be ſhewn to prove a Record. 1 Vent. 362. Allen 18. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 48, 49.

A Record may be contradictory in appearance, and yet be good: And tho' it hath apparent falſhood in it, it is not to be denied; but a Record may in ſome caſes be avoided by matter in fact. Style's Reg. 281. Co. Lit. · Cro. Car. 329. Hutt. 20.

The judges cannot judge of a Record given in evidence, if the Record be not exemplified under ſeal: But a jury may find a record altho' it be not ſo, if they have a copy proved to them, or other matter given in evidence ſufficient to induce them to believe that there was ſuch a record. 2 Lill. Abr. 421.

By ſtatute, judges may reform defects in any record, or proceſs, or variance between Records, &c. And a Record exemplified or inrolled may be amended for variation from the exemplification. Stat. 8 H. 6. c. 12, 15.

A Record of an iſſue made up ready for trial of a cauſe, on motion and leave of court, may be amended ſo as not to deface the Record; and notwithſtanding it be entered for trial, it ſhall be done on paying coſts to defendant. 2 Lil. 420. B. R. will amend a Record removed thither out of C. B. and alſo Records removed out of inferior courts, as to faults and miſpriſions of clerks, which are adjudged amendable by the ſtatutes of jeofails; tho' formerly B. R. would not amend Records out of inferior courts, but the law in this caſe is now altered by the Stat. 4 An. c. 16. 2 Lil. Abr. 421, 422.

If the tranſcript of a Record be falſe, the court of B. R. will, on motion, order a certiorari to an inferior court, to certify how the Record is below; and if it be on a writ of error on a judgment of the Common Pleas, they will grant a rule to bring the record out of C. B. into this court, and then order the tranſcript to be amended in court, according to the roll in C. B. And a Record cannot be amended without a rule of the court, grounded on motion. Ibid.

Where a Record is ſo drawn, that the words may receive a double conſtruction, one to make the record good, and another to make it erroneous, the court will interpret the words that way which will make the record good, as being moſt for the advancement of juſtice: So if a letter of a word in a Record be doubtful, that it may be taken for one letter or another, the court will conſtrue it to be that letter which is for upholding the Record. See Cro. Eliz. 161. Cro. Jac. 119, 153, 244, &c.

A Record that is raſed, if legible, remains a good Record notwithanding the raſure; but he who raſed it is not to go unpuniſhed for his offence. Mich. 1649. And in caſe of a raſure in a judgment, done by practice to hinder execution, the Record hath been ordered to be amended, and a ſpecial entry thereof to be made; but tho' the Record by this means be made perfect, the offender may be indicted for felony; for not only ſuch an alteration whereby a judgment is actually reverſed, but alſo ſuch whereby it is reverſable, whether it be or be not afterwards amended by the court, is within the act 8 H. 6. c. 12. making it felony to take away, or avoid any Record, &c. 2 *Rol. The court will not ſupply a blank left in a Record, to make it perfect, when before it was defective; as this would be to make a Record, which is not the office of the court to do, but to judge of them. 2 *Lil. Recorder, (Recordator) Is a perſon whom the mayor and other magiſtrates of any city or town corporate, having juriſdiction, and a court of record within their precincts by the King's grant, aſſociate unto them for their better direction in matters of juſtice, and proceedings according to law: therefore he is generally a counſellor or other perſon experienced in the law.

The Recorder of London, is one of the juſtices of oyer and terminer; and a juſtice of peace of the quorum, for putting the laws in execution for preſervation of the peace and government of the city: And being the mouth of the city, he learnedly delivers the ſentences and judgments of the courts therein; and alſo certifies and records the city-cuſtoms, &c. Chart. K. Charles 2. *Co. Recovery, (Recuperatio, from the Fr. recouvrer, recuperare) Signifies (in a legal acceptation) obtaining any thing by judgment or trial of law, as evictio doth among the Civilians.

There is a true recovery, and a feigned one.

A true recovery is an actual or real recovery, of any thing, or the value thereof, by judgment; as if a man ſue for any land, or other thing moveable or immoveable, and have a verdict or judgment for him.

A feigned recovery is (as the Civilians call it) Quædam fictio juris, a certain form or courſe ſet down by law to be obſerved, FOR THE BETTER ASSURING LANDS OR TENEMENTS: And the effect thereof is (according to Weſt. Sym. par. 2. tit. Recoveries, ſ. 1.) to diſcontinue and deſtroy eſtates-tail, remainders and reverſions, and to bar the intails thereof.

In this formality three perſons are required, viz. the demandant, tenant, and vouchee. The demandant is he who brings the writ of entry, and may be termed the recoveror. The tenant is he againſt whom the writ is brought, and may be termed the recoveree. The vouchee is he whom the tenant voucheth, and calls to warranty for the land in demand.

A recovery with double voucher is, where the tenant voucheth one, who voucheth another, or the common vouchee. And a recovery with treble voucher is, where three are vouched.

But for the further explanation of this point: A man who is deſirous to cut off an eſtate-tail, to the end to ſell, give, or deviſe it, cauſeth a feigned writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin en le poſt, to be brought for the lands the intail of which he intends to cut off, and in a feigned count or declaration thereon made, pretends he was diſſeiſed by him, who by a feigned fine or deed of bargain and ſale is named and ſuppoſed to be tenant of the land. This feigned tenant, if it be a ſingle recovery, is made to appear and vouch the bagbearer of writs for the cuſtos brevium, or the cryer in the Common Pleas (for there only can ſuch recoveries be ſuffered) who makes default. Whereupon the land is recovered by him who brought the writ, and judgment is by ſuch fiction of law entered, that demandant ſhall recover, and have a writ of ſeiſin for the poſſeſſion of the lands demanded, and that the tenant ſhall recover the value of the lands againſt the lands of the vouchee. This feigned recovery is alſo called a common recovery, becauſe it is a beaten and common path to the end for which it is appointed, viz. to cut off the eſtates above ſpecified. But a true recovery is as well of the value as of the thing: For example, If I buy land of another with warranty, which land a third perſon afterwards by ſuit of law recovereth againſt me, I have my remedy againſt him who ſold it me, to recover in value, that is, to recover ſo much in money as the land is worth, or other lands of equal value by way of exchange. F. N. B. 134. Cowell.

A recovery in a large ſenſe is a reſtitution to a former right by ſolemn judgment; and judgments, whether obtained after a real defence made by the tenant to the writ, or whether pronounced on his default or feint plea, had the ſame efficacy to bind the right of the land in queſtion; this was the notion of the Common law, and from hence men took an opportunity of making uſe of the deciſions of the court to their own advantage, and to the prejudice of others, who, though in ſome caſes ſtrangers to the action, yet were intereſted in the land for which it was brought. 2 Inſt. 75, 429.

For whilſt theſe recoveries were governed by the ſtrict rules of the Common law, particular tenants, as tenant in dower, courteſy, in tail after poſſibility of iſſue extinct; and for life only; all thoſe who had made leaſes for years, and thoſe whoſe wives were intitled to dower, often took advantage of them, and by ſelling the lands, and ſuffering their purchaſers to recover them, thereby defeated the right of thoſe in remainder or reverſion, &c. which were inconveniences ſo great, that it was thought neceſſary to provide againſt them by poſitive laws; as ſtatute Weſtm. 2. c. 3. which makes proviſion for him in reverſion, againſt the recoveries ſuffered either by the tenant in dower, by the courteſy, or in tail after poſſibility of iſſue extinct, or for life; and by the 4th chapter of this ſtatute, the wife is ſecured as to her dower; and the ſtatute of Glouceſter, 6 Ed. 1. c. 11. ſt. 7. Hen. 8. c. 4. And 21 Hen. 8. c. 15. have eſtabliſhed the right of termors, and enabled them to falſify ſuch recoveries. See Co. Lit. 104. Kel. 109. F. N. B. 468. Plowd. 57. Dr. & Stud. 45.

But there is no expreſs proviſion made by any ſtatute to preſerve the intereſt of the iſſue in tail, or of him in reverſion, againſt a recovery ſuffered by the donee, yet it ſeems to have been for two hundred years after the making the ſtatute de donis, that they were protected by that ſtatute; therefore we find no expreſs reſolution, where ſuch recovery was allowed to bar the iſſue in tail, or thoſe in remainder or reverſion, till the reigns of Ed. 4. and H. 7. though in ſome caſes the donee in tail was allowed to charge the intail, and even to bar it. See 1 Rol. Abr. 342. Co. Lit. 343. 10 Co. 37. Plowd. 436. 2 Inſt. 335. Co. Lit. 374. 4 Leon. 132, 133. See Eſtate-tail.

When theſe recoveries were eſtabliſhed as a common conveyance, and the beſt way of barring the iſſue in tail, and thoſe in reverſion or remainder, the tenant for life began to apply them once more to the prejudice of thoſe who had the inheritance; and though the former ſtatutes gave thoſe who had the inheritance a remedy, yet the proviſion made by them being tedious and expenſive, it was thought proper to make the 32 H. 8. c. 31. which declares all ſuch covinous recoveries againſt the particular tenants to be void in reſpect to him in reverſion or remainder; and though the judges very reaſonably determined recoveries againſt that act to be not only void, but a forfeiture of the particular eſtate, becauſe it was a manner of conveyance as much known at that time as a fine or feoffment, therefore by parity of reaſon ought to have the ſame operation; yet that ſtatute did not fully anſwer the end for which it was made. Co. Lit. 356. a. 1 Co. 15. Vaugh. 51.

For if A. had been tenant for life, and made a leaſe for years to B. and B. had made a feoffment in fee, if the feoffee had ſuffered a recovery, and vouched the tenant for life, this was no void recovery within the ſtatute; becauſe A. the tenant for life was not ſeiſed at the time of the recovery, for the feoffment of the termor was a diſſeiſin to A. and him in reverſion; and the ſtatute makes recoveries of tenants for life in poſſeſſion only void againſt them to whom the reverſion THEN belongs. 10 Co. 45. a. Co. Lit. 362.

Yet where tenant for life bargained and ſold his land in fee by indenture inrolled, and the bargainee ſuffered a recovery, and vouched the bargainor, this was a void recovery, and a forfeiture within the 32 H. 8. c. 31. for though the bargain and ſale was of the inheritance, yet it paſt only an eſtate for life of the bargainor, which was the greateſt eſtate he could lawfully paſs, conſequently the reverſioner was not deveſted; therefore the bargainee being a legal tenant for life in poſſeſſion, the recovery againſt him, though with a voucher of the bargainor, was void within that act againſt him in reverſion, whoſe reverſion was not turned to a right as in the former caſe of a diſſeiſin. 1 Co. 15. 1 Leon. 123.

But the former defect was cured by 14 Eliz. c. 8. which declares all recoveries (had by agreement of the parties, or by covin) againſt tenant for life, of any lands whereof he is ſo ſeiſed, or againſt any other with voucher over him, to be void, as againſt the reverſioners and their heirs.

Theſe ſtatutes made no proviſion for reverſions or remainders expectant on eſtates-tail; therefore if there be tenant for life, remainder in tail, remainder in fee, and tenant for life ſuffers a recovery, and vouches the remainder-man in tail, who vouches the common vouchee; this is ſo far from being a void recovery within thoſe ſtatutes, that the reverſion in fee is actually barred by it; for the intended recompence, which the remainder-man in tail is to have againſt the common vouchee, is to go in ſucceſſion, as the eſtate-tail would have done; and it cannot be a covinous recovery within the act, becauſe the remainder in tail joined in it, who may at any time ſuffer ſuch a recovery to deſtroy the remainder in fee. 10 Co. 39. b. 45. Co. Lit. 362. a. 3 Co. 60. b. Cro. Eliz. 562. Moor. 690. Cro. Eliz. 570.

Theſe common recoveries were no ſooner allowed by the judges to bar eſtates-tail, but men began to improve them into a common way of conveyance, and to declare uſes on them, as on fines and feoffments. Hence it is, that the ſtatutes, which provide againſt any alienations or diſcontinuances of particular tenants, provide at the ſame time againſt their recoveries; thus 11 H. 7. c. 20. declares all recoveries, as well as other diſcontinuances by fine or feoffment of women tenants in tail, of the gift of their huſbands, or their anceſtors, to be void; ſo a recovery againſt huſband and wife of the inheritance of the wife, without any voucher, is declared to be void within 32 H. 8. c. 28. though the ſtatute ſays, "ſuffered or "done by the huſband;" for this, like a feoffment by baron and feme in ſubſtance, is the act of the baron only; and ſo within the ſtatute, but a common recovery ſuffered by a feme covert, where her huſband joins with her, is good to bar her and her heirs. Dr. and Stud. 54. Co. Lit. 326. a. 8 Co. 72. 10 Co. 43. 2 Inſt. 342. 2 Rol. Abr. 205.

3. Of erroneous and void recoveries, who may avoid them, and by what method.

1. Who may ſuffer a recovery; of what things a recovery may be ſuffered, and by what names.

When recoveries were improved into a common way of conveyance, it was thought reaſonable that thoſe, whom the law had judged incapable to act for their own intereſt, ſhould not be bound by the judgment given in recoveries, though it was the ſolemn act of the court; for, where defendant gives way to the judgment, it is as much his voluntary act and conveyance, as if he had transferred the land by livery, or any other act in pais; therefore if an infant ſuffers a recovery, he may reverſe it, as he may a fine by writ of error, during his minority; and this was formerly taken for law, as well where the infant appeared by guardian, as by attorney, or in perſon; but now the diſtinction turns on this point, that if an infant ſuffers a recovery in perſon, it is erroneous, and he may reverſe it by writ of error; but even in this caſe the writ of error muſt be brought during his minority, that his infancy may be tried by the inſpection of the court, for at his full age it becomes obligatory and unavoidable; yet in caſes of neceſſity, the court has admitted the infant to appear by guardian, and to ſuffer a recovery, or come in as vouchee; but this too is ſeldom allowed by the court; and on emergencies, when it tends to the improvement of the infant's affairs, or when lands of equal value have been ſettled on him, and theſe recoveries have been allowed and ſupported by the judges, the infant could not ſet them aſide or ſhake them; beſides, if ſuch recoveries be to the prejudice of the infant, he has remedy for it againſt his guardian, and may reimburſe himſelf out of his pocket, to whom the law hath committed the care of him. 1 Bulſ. 235. 2 *Rol. If an infant ſuffers a recovery, and appears by attorney, it ſeems he may reverſe it AFTER his full age; becauſe here it may be diſcovered, whether he was within age when the recovery was ſuffered, becauſe it may tried per pais, whether the warrant of attorney was made by him when an infant. Sid. 321. 1 Lev. 142. Q.

A recovery, as well as a fine by a feme covert, is good to bar her; becauſe the præcipe in the recovery anſwers the writ of covenant in the fine to bring her into court, where the examination of the judges deſtroys the preſumption of law, that this is done by the coercion of her huſband, for then it is preſumed they would have refuſed her. 10 Co. 43. a. 2 Rol. Abr. 395.

Recoveries, being now ſettled as COMMON ASSURANCES to eſtabliſh men in their purchaſes, are very much favoured by the judges, and not compared to judgments in other real actions or adverſary ſuits. 2 Inſt. 353. Poph. 22, 23. 2 Vent. 32.

If a man be ſeiſed of a reputed manor, which really is no manor, and he ſuffers a common recovery of this by the name of a manor, this is a good recovery of the lands which conſtituted the reputed manor; though ſtrictly ſpeaking there is no manor recovered becauſe the law ſupports this, as all other conveyances, according to the intention of the parties; for it would be ſevere to vacate this conveyance, when the purchaſer recovered them by the aſſent of the vendor under ſuch a denomination. 2 Rol. Abr. 396. 6 Co. 64. 2 Rol Rep. 67. 2 Vent. 32. S.P. See Cro. Eliz. 524, 707. and 1 Keb. 591, 691. cont.

So if a recovery be ſuffered of a manor with its appurtenances, lands which have been reputed parcel of the manor ſhall paſs; for it is but equitable, quod voluntas Domini volentis rem ſuam in alium transferre rata habeatur; and though the recovery does not mention the lands reputed parcel of the manor, but only the manor itſelf, yet this was ſupplied by the indenture which was of the manor, and all lands reputed parcel thereof, and though occupied together but two years. 1 Sid. 190. 1 Lev. 27. 1 Keb. 591, 691. 2 Mod. 235. S. C. between Thynn and Thynn; and note, that in all the books which report this caſe, it is ſaid, that as to Sir Moyle Finch's caſe, (which ſee 6 Co. 33) all the judges of England, gave their opinions under their hands, that the lands in reputation, belonging to that manor, ſhould not paſs; but that Coke, after he was made Chief Juſtice, got it adjudged otherwiſe, and ſo it hath been held ever ſince; and well it was that it was ſo adjudged, becauſe many ſettlements depended thereon.

If a man having a third part of a manor ſuffers a recovery of a moiety, this is good to paſs his intereſt in the third part; for where the words of a conveyance (which a recovery is agreed to be) contain more than the grantor can convey, it would be an unreaſonable interpretation to make this void and entirely uſeleſs, when they are ſufficient to convey ſo much as he might lawfully paſs; ſo if the recovery had been in this caſe, of the third part of the manor, by the name of the moiety, part and purparty of the manor, this had been good for the whole third part, and not only for a moiety of the third part. Cro. Car. 109, 110.

In ejectment a ſpecial verdict found, that there was a pariſh of Ribton, and the vill of Ribton, but the latter not of equal extent with the former; and that J. S. was ſeiſed of land in tail in the pariſh, but not in the vill; and bargained, and ſold the land in the pariſh of Ribton, with covenant to levy a fine, and ſuffer a recovery to the uſes in the deed; but the fine and recovery were only of the lands in Ribton; the queſtion was, Whether this recovery would ſerve for the land in the pariſh of Ribton; the court, in favour of common recoveries, extended this recovery to the lands in the pariſh of Ribton; becauſe the verdict found, that he who ſuffered the recovery had no lands in the vill, conſequently that the recovery muſt be void, if not extended to the pariſh; and though pariſhes are not ſo ancient as vills, and therefore till lately were never inſerted in writs, yet now they are, and the law takes notice of them. 2 Vent. 31, 32. 1 Mod. 250. and 2 Mod. 233. 2. What eſtates and intereſts may be barred by a common recovery; and of ſingle and double voucher.

In reſpect to eſtates-tail, and barring them by recovery, what is principally to be regarded is, that there muſt be a legal tenant to the præcipe at the time of the writ purchaſed, or at the return; for ſince eſtates-tail are only barred on account of the intended recompence which is to follow the deſcent of the tail, where there happens to be no tenant to the præcipe, the demandant can really recover nothing; conſequently the ſuppoſed tenant can have no recompence in value againſt the vouchee, for that is only given againſt the vouchee in conſideration of what the tenant loſt. Hob. 262.

As if there be tenant for life, remainder in tail, remainder in fee, and tenant for life with the remainder in tail ſuffer a recovery, with voucher over, this ſhall not bar the remainder in tail, nor the remainder in fee, becauſe the remainder-man in tail was not tenant to the præcipe, conſequently could not have the intended recompence, becauſe that was given in lieu of the eſtate recovered, which was no greater than the eſtate for life, he only being legal tenant to the præcipe. 1 Rol. Abr. 395. Dyer 352. Cro. Eliz. 670. Moor 255, 256.

In a writ of error to reverſe a common recovery, the tenant to the præcipe was made by a fine, the recovery was ſuffered, and the fine reverſed; yet it was held a good recovery, for there was a good tenant to the præcipe at the time. 2 Salk. 568.

If a manor be given to a man and a woman, and the heirs of the body of the man begotten on the woman, and they intermarry, and then the huſband ſuffers a recovery of the whole manor; this is good for a moiety, becauſe, the gift being made before marriage, they had each an undivided moiety, which they may transfer, but the recovery can operate but for a moiety, becauſe the huſband only was tenant to the præcipe, conſequently the demandant only could recover his intereſt in the manor, which was but a moiety. Moor 95.

If lands are given to a man and his wife, and the heirs of the body of the huſband, and a recovery is had againſt him only, this recovery will neither bar the reverſion, nor the tail; for the recompence being to go in ſucceſſion, as the eſtate which the tenant loſt would have done, the huſband could not loſe all the land, becauſe he was not a legal tenant to the whole, his wife being jointenant with him who was no party to the writ; nor could the recovery be good for a moiety, becauſe there are no moieties between baron and feme, but both are conſidered as one perſon in law; but if the huſband had levied a fine, and the conuſee ſuffered a recovery, and vouched the huſband, who vouched the common vouchee; this had been a good bar of the intail, for there the huſband came in to defend the eſtate-tail, which the wife was a ſtranger to, and the aſſets which he recovered over is a recompence for the eſtate-tail, which he only had a right to without the feme, and which the law gives him a power to diſpoſe of. Moor 210. 3 Co. 5. 2 *Rol. In ejectment, on ſpecial verdict the caſe was, A. ſeiſed in fee of the lands in queſtion hath iſſue B. his eldeſt ſon, C. his ſecond, and D. his third ſon; on a marriage intended between D. his youngeſt ſon, and one E. he A. before the marriage covenants to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to D. and E. and the heirs male of their two bodies, remainder to D. and the heirs male of his body, remainder to C. and the heirs male of his body, remainder to B. and the heirs male of his body, the remainder to his own right heirs; A. dies, a præcipe is brought againſt one Upton as tenant of the freehold, and after, before the return of the writ, D. by bargain and ſale conveys the land to Upton and his heirs, and the deed was inrolled after the return of the writ, and within ſix months; Upton vouches D. only without his wife, and a common recovery was ſuffered to the uſe of D. and his heirs; then E. dies, and after D. dies without iſſue male, having iſſue four daughters, and between them and C. in remainder was the queſtion, what was barred by this recovery. 1ſt, It was agreed on both ſides, that here was a good tenant to the præcipe, the bargain and ſale being made to Upton before the return, yet it being inrolled in due time, the freehold was in Upton ab initio. 2dly, That this ſettlement being made before marriage, when the huſband and wife took by moieties and not by intierties, the huſband had abſolute power over his own moiety, therefore for that the recovery was an abſolute bar, wherein this differs from the caſe of Owen and Morgan, 3 Co. 5. where they took by intierties. 3dly, That this recovery was no bar to the other moiety of E. becauſe ſhe was not party, but her eſtate-tail in that continued untouched, though it was urged alſo to be a bar for her moiety, ſhe dying firſt, and ſo her huſband in as ſole tenant of the whole ab initio, and that during the coverture the huſband had power to make a good tenant of the whole; but the court held otherwiſe. 4thly, It was held, that the eſtate-tail to D. and E. being determined, the remainder to D. in tail male general, and all the other remainders depending thereon were barred abſolutely by this recovery; for D. coming in as vouchee, comes in privity and repreſentation of all the eſtates he hath or had, conſequently he comes in repreſentation of the remainder to himſelf in tail male general; and then the recompence in value goes to that, and alſo to all the other remainders depending thereupon, and by conſequence all are barred by the recovery. 3 Lev. 107.

Tenant in tail, in conſideration of his ſon's marriage, covenats to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf and his heirs till the marriage, and then to the uſe of himſelf for life, andafter to the uſe of his ſonand to the heirs of his body, and ſuffers a common recovery with ſingle voucher to this purpoſe, and then dies without iſſue; this recovery did not bar the remainder expectant on the eſtate-tail, for the covenant had changed the eſtate-tail into a fee, conſequently the recompence could not be in lieu of the intail, ſince the tenant to the præcipe was not ſeiſed of the eſtate-tail at the time of the recovery ſuffered. Yelv. 51. ſee 2 Salk. 619. which ſeems contrary.

A. tenant for life, remainder to B. in tail, the remainder to C. in fee, A. and B. join in a fine come ceo, &c. to a ſtranger, who renders it to A. for life, remainder to B. and his heirs; afterwards A. and B. ſuffer a recovery with ſingle voucher to the uſe of B. and his heirs; this recovery did not bar the remainder in fee, becauſe by the render they were ſeiſed of a new eſtate, and B. was not either tenant in poſſeſſion, or ſeiſed in right of the intail; conſequently the recompence being given in lieu of the eſtate recovered, the tail could not be docked, nor the remainder man barred by this recovery, becauſe the tenants to the præcipe were not ſeiſed of it at the time of the recovery ſuffered. Cro. Eliz. 807. Moor 634.

As to the uſe of the ſingle and double voucher, it is to be obſerved, that the tenant who loſes the land has, on his vouching over, a recompence in value adjudged againſt his vouchee, which is to go in the ſame ſucceſſion as the land recovered would have done: Now a recovery with ſingle voucher is ſufficient to bar an eſtate-tail where the tenant in tail is tenant to the præcipe, and ſeiſed of the lands in tail at the time of the præcipe brought againſt him, for the recompence in value muſt follow the deſcent of the land which he loſes, and when that proves to be the eſtate-tail, then the iſſue is ſuppoſed to have an equivalent for it, conſequently not prejudiced by the recovery; but becauſe a ſingle voucher can bar only the eſtate which the tenant is ſeiſed of at the time of the præcipe brought, and not any right which he hath, it was found neceſſary to admit the uſe of a double voucher; for if ſuch tenant in tail diſcontinue the tail, and take back an eſtate or diſſeiſe the diſcontinuee, a recovery againſt him with a voucher over could not bar the eſtate-tail; for the recompence comes in lieu of the land recovered, which was the defeaſible eſtate, conſequently the iſſue has nothing in value for the eſtate-tail, without which he cannot be barred. Bro. tit. Recovery. Yelv. 51. 3 Co. 5. Moor 256.

But if in this caſe tenant in tail after diſſeiſin had either by fine, or releaſe, made a tenant to the præcipe, and came in himſelf as vouchee, and then vouched over the common vouchee; this double voucher had been ſufficient to bar the tenant in tail and his heirs of every eſtate which he was at any time ſeiſed; for when the tenant in tail comes in as vouchee, it is preſumed he will, and he has an opportunity to ſet up every title he had, to defeat the demandant; and ſince what he offered was not ſufficient to bar demandant, the court takes it for granted, he had no other title than what he ſet up, therefore will give him but one recompence for all. 3 Co. 6. b. Plow. 8. Cro. Eliz. 562. Poph. 100. Moor 365. Hob. 263.

Thus if A. be tenant for life, remainder to B. in tail, and a ſtranger diſſeiſes A. and enfeoffs B. if a præcipe be brought againſt B. and a recovery ſuffered as uſual; this ſhall not affect the eſtate-tail, becauſe B. had only a right to that, and was not ſeiſed of it, and the recompence was not given in lieu of the tail, becauſe the eſtate-tail was not in queſtion on the recovery, for B. could not loſe the eſtate he had not; but if in this caſe B. had made another tenant to the præcipe, and came in himſelf as vouchee, this had barred the intail. 3 Co. 58. b. 2 Rol. Abr. 395.

If A. be tenant for life, remainder to B. in tail, and B. diſſeiſes A. and ſuffers a common recovery, himſelf being tenant to the præcipe; this recovery with a ſingle voucher is ſufficient to bar the eſtate-tail in B. becauſe he was actually ſeiſed of that, at the time of the præcipe brought againſt him; for his diſſeiſin did not deveſt his own eſtate, but only gave him a defeaſible eſtate for life, which was immediately merged in his remainder, becauſe the eſtate for life, and his inheritance, could not ſubſiſt together at the ſame time in him. 2 Rol. Abr. 395.

Thus we ſee how eſtates-tail are barred by recoveries, and the uſes of the ſingle and double voucher; and in this reſpect the operation of a recovery is correſpondent to that of a fine, for they are but different ways of transferring eſtates-tail for ſecurity of purchaſers; but the operation of a fine differs from a recovery in reſpect to ſtrangers who have reverſions or remainders expectant on eſtates-tail; for a fine does not bar them, unleſs they omit to make their claim within five years after their reverſion or remainder is toexecute; but a recovery reaches them immediately, and at the ſame time bars the eſtate-tail and all reverſions and remainders on account of this ſuppoſed and imaginary recompence. Co. Lit. 372. a. 2 Rol. Abr. 396. Moor 156. Bro. tit. Recovery 28, 55.

And as a common recovery ſuffered by tenant in tail bars all reverſions and remainders expectant, ſo it avoids all charges, leaſes and incumbrances made by thoſe in reverſion or remainder, and the recoveror ſhall enjoy the land free from any charge, for ever; as where he in remainder on an eſtate-tail, granted a rent-charge, and the tenant in tail ſuffered a recovery; it was adjudged, that the grantee could not diſtrain the recoveror; for ſince the rent was only at the firſt good, becauſe of the poſſibility of the grantor's remainder coming in poſſeſſion, when that poſſibility ceaſes by the recovery of tenant in tail, ſuch grant muſt then become void. Moor 158. Cro. Eliz. 718. 1 Co. 62. 2 Rol. Abr. 396. Moor 154. 4 Leon. 150, &c. Poph. 5, 6.

3. Of erroneous and void recoveries, who may avoid them, and by what method.

It is already obſerved, that a recovery ſuffered by an infant in perſon ſhall not bind him; but though he may avoid it, yet it cannot be done by any entry in pais, but by writ of error, and this too during his minority; for the judgment of the court being on record muſt be ſet aſide by an act of equal notoriety; but an infant may avoid a recovery by writ of error, as well where he comes in as vouchee, as where he is tenant to the præcipe; for though ſtrictly ſpeaking the recovery is not againſt him where he is not tenant to the præcipe, yet for the greater ſecurity of the purchaſer, and to ſtrengthen the recovery by the uſe of the double voucher, the perſon, who really has the right to the land in demand, comes in as vouchee, and then, by vouching over the common vouchee, has one recompence for all his titles; conſequently if he be the perſon who really loſes the land, he ought in reaſon to reverſe the recovery, as well where he comes in as vouchee, as where he is ſeiſed of the land and tenant to the præcipe. 1 Rol. Abr. 742. 1 Lev. 142.

If tenant in tail within age comes in as vouchee by attorney in a common recovery, he in remainder may aſſign this for error, for he is party in intereſt to the recovery; and where a man's intereſt is bound by another's act, it is but reaſonable he ſhould be allowed to free himſelf from the miſchief by taking advantage of any error in it. 1 Rol. Abr. 755, 796.

If A. be tenant in tail, remainder to B. and A. ſuffers an erroneous recovery, and the common vouchee releaſes to the recoveror; yet if A. dies without iſſue, B. may, notwithſtanding the releaſe, reverſe it by writ of error, for the common vouchee is only called in for form; and as he has really no intereſt in or title to the land; ſo really neither does he make any recompence to the perſon who loſes the land; therefore it were unreaſonable to carry the notion of the imaginary recompence ſo far as to ſuppoſe him a real ſufferer, and thereby give him the privilege of ſetting aſide the conveyance, by which he is no way affected. Cro. Eliz. 2, 3.

In a writ of error to reverſe a recovery ſuffered by an infant who appeared by guardian, the error aſſigned was in the entry of his admiſſion by guardian, viz. Conceſſ. eſt per curiam hic quod A. B. ſequatur pro J. S. Armig. qui infra ætat' exiſtit ut guardianus prædict. J. S. whereas it was objected, that ſince the infant was tenant to the writ, it ought to have been entered, that the guardian was admitted to defend for the infant; but this exception was diſallowed, becauſe the words ad ſequend. for the infant ſignify the ſame with ad defendend. for the infant; for ad ſequend. is to follow and attend the buſineſs and ſuit of the infant; and the guardian being aſſigned to do that muſt likewiſe have been aſſigned to take care of, or take upon him the defence of the infant's ſuit. 2 Saund. 94, 95. 1 Mod. 48.

In a common recovery the writ of error bears date 1 Martii 7 Eliz. ret. die Lunæ in quarta ſeptimana quadrageſim' proxim' futur', the firſt day of March being that year the firſt day in Lent, the recovery paſt in the uſual form that Lent; and in a writ of error to reverſe it, the error aſſigned was, that the words proxim' futur' ſhould be referred to Quadrageſim', and then the writ of entry was not returned till Monday in the fourth week of Lent, 8 Eliz. which was the time the tenant was to appear; conſequently this recovery muſt be void, becauſe here was judgment on a voucher, and a recovery in value, before the writ was returned, before which the court has no power to proceed. But it was anſwered and reſolved, that ſince proxim' futur' were not written at large, they may be indifferently applied either to die Lunæ, by ſuppoſing them to ſtand for proximo futuro, or to quartâ ſeptimanâ, by ſuppoſing them to ſtand for proximâ futurâ; and where words abbreviated may be indifferently referred, it is but reaſonable to give them ſuch a relation, as will beſt ſupport the recovery, which is but a voluntary conveyance, ut res magis valeat quam pereat; but if the words had been at large proximæ futuræ, then they muſt neceſſarily be referred to quadrageſimæ, and then the objection had been good, and the recovery for that reaſon muſt have been void.

In error to reverſe a recovery, the errors aſſigned were, 1. That the writ of entry was brought of an advowſon of a rectory, and of a rent iſſuing out of the rectory, which was a bis petitum, therefore the writ vicious; but this was diſallowed, becauſe the advowſon and rectory are different things; for he who has the advowſon has only the right of preſentation, but he who has the rectory has the profits of the church, out of which the rent iſſues; conſequently there can be no bis petitum in this caſe, becauſe by the demand of the advowſon of the rectory, and of the rent iſſuing out of the rectory, the demandant recovers more than by a demand of the rectory only: another error aſſigned was in the demand of a rent or penſion of four marks iſſuing out of the rectory, which is ſo uncertain a demand, a penſion being a different thing from a rent, and recoverable in the Spiritual court; but this was diſallowed; becauſe it is plain there is but one ſum of four marks demanded, and the penſion or rent muſt be ſynonymous here, becauſe they are demanded as iſſuing out of the rectory; therefore the penſion cannot be in nature of an annuity, which charges the perſon only, becauſe it is expreſsly to iſſue out of the rectory. Poph. 23. 5 Co. 41. a.

In a writ of error to reverſe a common recovery, the error inſiſted on was, that the warrant of attorney of the vouchee bore date before the Summoneas ad warrantizand. iſſued, yet the judgment was affirmed, becauſe the vouchee may come in, if he will, before the Summoneas ad warrantizand. and make his attorney; therefore, to ſupport the common recovery, it ſhall be preſumed the vouchee was preſent in court and appointed his attorney; and ſo the dedimus for the warrant and the Summoneas ad warrantizand. void. 1 Sid. 213. 1 Lev. 130. Raym. 70.

Recoupe, (from the Fr. recouper) Signifies the keeping back or ſtopping ſomething which is due, and in our law, we uſe it for, to defalk or diſcount; as if a perſon hath a rent of ten pounds out of certain lands, and he diſſeiſes the tenant of the land; in an aſſiſe brought by the diſſeiſſee, if he recover the land and damages, the diſſeiſor ſhall recoupe the rent due in the damages: So if a rent-charge iſſuing out of land, paid by the tenant to another, &c. he may recoupe the ſame. Terms de Ley. Dyer 2. Recto, Is uſed for a writ of right, which is of ſo high a nature, that as other writs in real actions are only to recover the poſſeſſion of the land, &c. in queſtion; this aims to recover the ſeiſin, and the property, and thereby both the rights of poſſeſſion and property are tried together. *Co. It hath two ſpecies; writ of right patent, and writ of right cloſe: The firſt is ſo called, becauſe it is ſent OPEN, and is the higheſt writ of all others, lying for him who hath a fee-ſimple in the lands or tenements ſued for, againſt tenant of the freehold at leaſt, and in no other caſe. F. N. B. 1, 2, &c. But this writ of right patent ſeems to be extended farther than originally intended; for a writ of right of dower, which lies for tenant in dower is patent, as appears by F. N. B. 7. And the like may be ſaid in ſome other caſes. Table Reg. Orig. Alſo there is a ſpecial writ of right patent in London, otherwiſe termed a writ of right according to the cuſtom, which lieth of lands or tenements within the city, &c. And the writ of right patent is likewiſe called breve magnum de recto. A writ of right cloſe is brought where one holds lands and tenements by charter in ancient demeſne, in fee-ſimple, fee tail, or for term of life, or in dower, and is diſſeiſed; and is directed to the bailiff of the King's manors, or to the lord of ancient demeſne, if the manor is in the hands of a ſubject, commanding him to do right in his court: This writ is alſo called breve parvum de recto. F. N. B. 11. Reg. Orig. 9. Britton, c. 120. In a writ of right patent, the demandant is to count of his own ſeiſin, or of the ſeiſin of his anceſtor; if one bring the writ as heir to an anceſtor, he may lay the ſeiſin and eſplees as in pernancy of the profits of the lands in his anceſtors; and where it is brought by a biſhop or body politic, ſeiſin of the eſplees is to be laid in themſelves, or in their predeceſſors. *New Nat. Writ of right may be had after an aſſiſe, writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin, &c. or other real action, where demandant is barred by action tried; ſo if he loſe by default in a writ of right, before the miſe is joined, &c. But if a perſon once loſeth his cauſe on a writ of right by trial and judgment, &c he is without remedy, and ſhall be finally concluded. *New Nat. And when a perſon outlawed hath reverſed the outlawry, ſo that he can participate of the benefit of the law, he is ſaid to be rectus in curia.

Recuſants, Are ſuch as adhere to the Pope as ſupreme head of the church, and who refuſe or deny ſupremacy to the King.

At the reformation, thoſe were deemed recuſants who diſputed the authority of the crown in cauſes eccleſiaſtical, and denied the King's ſupremacy; but the acts of parliament made againſt recuſants, particularly the 35 Eliz. c. 2. deſcribe a recuſant to be one who does not repair to ſome church or chapel or uſual place of common prayer, to hear divine ſervice: Afterwards, receiving the ſacrament of the church was made a farther teſt of conformity: And by the 25 Car. 2. c. 2. & 30 Car. 2. ſt. 2. a declaration againſt tranſubſtantition was required, to diſtinguiſh papiſts and popiſh recuſants from proteſtants.

All perſons are judged popiſh recuſants convict, who refuſe the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy, or abjuration; and are liable to ſuffer and forfeit accordingly, viz. they incur a præmunire, whereupon they forfeit all their goods and chattels, with their lands, &c. Read. Stat. 4 Vol. p. 315.

Recuſants convict, above the age of ſixteen years, are to go to their place of abode or ſettlement, and not travel above five miles from thence, without licence from the King, three of the privy council, or four juſtices of the peace, with the aſſent of the biſhop of the dioceſe or the lieutenant, or deputy lieutenant of the county, on pain of forfeiting their goods, &c. And not having lands worth twenty marks per ann. or goods to the value of 40*l.* if they do not make the ſubmiſſion of conformity mentioned in 35 Eliz c. 2. being required by a juſtice of peace, they may be compelled to abjure the realm; which abjuration muſt be certified to the next aſſizes; and it is felony if they do not depart within the time limited by the juſtices, or departing and returning again without the King's licence: But if any perſon offending, before conviction, come to ſome pariſh church on a Sunday, and make a public declaration of his conformity, he ſhall be diſcharged from all penalties, &c. though if ſuch offender afterwards relapſe, and become a recuſant again, he ſhall loſe the benefit he might otherwiſe have had on his ſubmiſſion: And recuſants required by proceſs to make their appearance, ſhall not incur any forfeiture for travelling on ſuch occaſion. 35 Eliz. c. 2. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5.

As to licenſing a recuſant to travel, the biſhop, lieutenant, or deputy lieutenant, who gives his aſſent to it, muſt be a diſtinct perſon from the juſtice of peace who gave the licence; therefore if one and the ſame perſon be a juſtice of peace, and deputy lieutenant, he cannot act in both capacities, but if he ſign and ſeal the licence as a juſtice of peace, the aſſent of ſome other deputy lieutenant, &c. muſt be had: And it is a good exception to a licence by four juſtices, that no particular cauſe of the recuſant's travelling is expreſſed in it. Cro. Jac. 352. Cawley 210.

A perſon was indicted for recuſancy, but conformed before conviction: And ſo again the ſecond time, and was indicted a third time for a relapſe; and on motion, that it might be certified into the Exchequer, becauſe by the ſtat. 35 Eliz. c. 2. he is to loſe all the benefit which he was to have by his former conformity, the relapſe was certified accordingly. 1 Bulſt. 133.

Juſtices in their ſeſſions are to cauſe proclamation to be made, that popiſh recuſants ſhall render themſelves to the ſheriff or bailiff of the liberty where they are, before the next aſſiſes or ſeſſions, &c. And if they do not, the default being recorded, ſhall be taken as a ſufficient conviction. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. And conſtables and churchwardens of every pariſh, or one of them, or, if none ſuch, the conſtables of the hundred there, are to preſent once a year at the quarter-ſeſſions ſuch recuſants as ſhall abſent from the church for a month together; the forfeiture of which is 20*l. per* month, &c. Stat. ibid. If a recuſant conform, and do not receive the ſacrament once a year at leaſt, he ſhall forfeit for the firſt year 20*l.* for the ſecond 40*l.* and for every default after 60*l.* And if after he hath once received it, he make default therein by the ſpace of one year, he ſhall forfeit 60*l. to be recovered at the quarter-ſeſſions by indictment,* and divided between the King and proſecutor: But the huſband is not chargeable with the offence of the wife; nor the wife for the huſband after his death. Ibid.

It hath been adjudged, that a writ of error will not lie on a conviction of a recuſant, for not rendering himſelf to the ſheriff, &c. becauſe the conviction is no judgment, but the ſtatute gives proceſs on it for the forfeiture: So that if there be any faults in it, the ſame is to be quaſhed in the Exchequer, the party firſt conforming. Raym. 433.

An information tam quam was brought againſt defendant, ſetting forth, that before and on ſuch a day he was a recuſant convict, and that afterwards he conformed, &c.

and for three years after had not received the ſacrament, and ſo demanded 60 l. for every year: On Not guilty pleaded, plaintiff had verdict; and thereupon it was moved that the information was incertain, becauſe neither the time was alledged, nor how, or in what court, nor before whom the conviction was; and the informer demands the penalty for three years, when by ſtatute no informer can demand a penalty upon the penal law, but by an information exhibited within a year after the offence: But it was reſolved, that the firſt exception had been good on demurrer; but defendant having pleaded Not guilty, all the circumſtances of his conviction were admitted, and nothing remained to be tried but the fact: And as for the ſecond exception, it was good againſt the informer for his part, but ſhould not prejudice the King. Cro. Jac. 365. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 52.

The Stat. 23 Eliz. c. 1. gives ſeveral remedies againſt Recuſants; one for the King alone, and there the proſecution muſt be by indictment in B. R. The other for a common perſon, and that is to be by action of debt, bill plaint or information. And the 28 Eliz. c. 6. was made for the benefit of the crown on indictments, and doth not extend to informations; therefore ſuch informations may be brought in any court of record. Hob. 204.

Where the defendant is indicted on the ſtatute of Recuſancy, CONFORMITY is a good plea; but not if an action of debt be brought. 1 Mod. 213. But vide 2 Show. 332.

A Recuſant certified into the court of King's Bench, according to the 23 Eliz. c. 1. ſhall give ſecurity for his good behaviour, &c. 2 Bulſt. 155. The judgment in Recuſancy is quod convictus eſt. 2 Strange 1048.

Fraudulent conveyances to avoid the penalties of Recuſancy, made void 29 Eliz. c. 6. The crown may ſeize the goods, and two thirds of the lands of Recuſants, for non payment of the 20 l. a month. 29 Eliz. c. 6. ſ. 4. It is great pity theſe laws are not enforced, as many perſons, who pretend to be proteſtants, from motives of parſimony, ſend their children abroad to popiſh ſeminaries, to be boarded and educated. They might board and educate their children in England, at a diſtance from the metropolis, as well, and for as little expence, every thing duly conſidered. The children are ſubjected to certain diſabilities, if ſent without licence, by 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſ. 13. The penalty of retaining Recuſants, 3 Jac. 1. c. 4. ſ. 32.

Recuſants reſtrained from coming into the preſence of the King or the Prince. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. 30 Car. 2. ſt. 2. But by ſect. 12. they may come into the King's preſence, by licence of ſix privy counſellors.

Recuſants are diſabled from practiſing law, or phyſic, or bearing office, by 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſ. 8. They are ſubjected to the diſabilities of excommunication by 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. ſ. 11.

Red, (Sax. ræd) Is an old word ſignifying advice; and redbana is one who adviſed the death of another. See Dedbana.

Red Book of the Exchequer, (Liber Rubeus Scaccarii) Is an ancient record, wherein are regiſtred the names of thoſe who held lands per Barroniam in the time of Hen. 2. Ryley 667. It is a manuſcript volume of ſeveral miſcellany treatiſes in the keeping of the King's remembrancer in his office in the Exchequer; and hath ſome things (as the number of the hides of lands in many of our counties, &c.) relating to the times before the Conqueſt. There is likewiſe an exact collection of the eſcuages under King Hen. 1. Rich. 2. and King John; and the ceremonies uſed at the coronation of Queen Eleanor, wife to King Henry the Third, &c. See Privilege.

Reddendum, Is uſed ſubſtantively for the clauſe in a leaſe, whereby the rent is reſerved to the leſſor; and anciently corn, fleſh, fiſh, and other victuals, were for the moſt part reſerved on leaſes. 2 Rep. 72. Wood's Inſt. 226.

In debt for rent, plaintiff declared on a leaſe made 25 Auguſt 11 W. 3. of a meſſuage, &c. for ſeven years, to commence from the 24th day of June before; reddendum quarterly at Michaelmas, St. Thomas's day, Lady day, and Midſummer, three pounds ten ſhilliugs, the firſt payment to be made at Michaelmas then next; and aſſigned for breach that fourteen pounds of the rent was in arrear for one year, ending 24 December anno 13 Will. And on demurrer to this declaration, it was objected that on this leaſe there was no year could be ended on the the 24th of December, but on St. Thomas's day, according to the reddendum; which was held to be true, becauſe where ſpecial days are limited in the reddendum, the rent muſt be computed from thoſe days, not according to the habendum; and that the rent is never computed from the habendum, but when the reddendum is general, i. e. paying quarterly ſo much; ſo plaintiff had leave to diſcontinue, &c. 1 Salk. 141. See Deed, Leaſe and Reſervation, and Black. Com. 2 V. 299. i, iii.

Reddidit ſe, Is where a man procures bail for himſelf to an action in any court at law; if the party bailed at any time before the return of the ſecond ſcire facias againſt the bail, renders himſelf in diſcharge of his bail, they are thereby diſcharged. 2 Lill. Abr. 430.

A ca. ſa. was returned non eſt inventus againſt the principal, and one ſcire fac' and a nihil; and on the ſecond ſcire fac. he rendered himſelf, and was received: But if there had been a ſcire feci and judgment thereon, he had come too late. Cro. Jac. 109.

If defendant renders himſelf to the Marſhal of B. R. on any action in that court, in diſcharge of his bail, the defendant's attorney is forthwith to give notice of ſuch render to plaintiff's attorney, and ſhall make oath of the notice, &c. And a reddidit ſe will not diſcharge the bail unleſs the attorney who is concerned for defendant or his bail, enters it in the Marſhal's book; and having given notice thereof to the attorney for plaintiff, brings the bail-piece to the Secondary, who on producing a note from the Marſhal or his clerk, that defendant is in cuſtody, will diſcharge it; and, until this is done, plaintiff may notwithſtanding proceed to judgment and execution againſt the bail; for until the bail-piece is diſcharged, there is a record ſtill remaining in court againſt them. 2 Lill. 431.

A reddidit ſe of the principal, in diſcharge of the bail in error, is no plea; for the recogniſance is not to render the body, but to pay the debt. Vide Bail.

Redditarius, A renter; and redditarium hath been uſed for a rental of a manor, or other eſtate. Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. MS. 92.

Reddition, (Redditio) A ſurrendering or reſtoring; being alſo a judicial acknowledgment that the thing in demand belongs to the demandant, and not to the perſon ſo ſurrendering. Stat. 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 24.

Redditus Aſſiſus, Is ſet or ſtanding rent. Vide Aſſiſus.

Re-delivery, Is a yielding and delivery back of a thing: If a perſon has committed a robbery, and ſtolen the goods of another, he cannot afterwards purge the offence by any re-delivery, &c. Co. Lit. 69. H. P. C. 72.

Redemption, (Redemptio) A ranſom or commutation; and by the old Saxon laws, a man convicted of a crime paid ſuch a fine, according to the eſtimation of his head, pro redemptione ſua.

Rediſſeiſin, (Rediſſeiſina) Is a diſſeiſin made by him, who once before was found and adjudged to have diſſeiſed the ſame man of his lands or tenements, for which there lies a ſpecial writ called a writ of rediſſeiſin. Old Nat. Br. 106. F. N. B. 188.

The writ of rediſſeiſin lieth where a perſon recovers by aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin any lands, &c. and is put in poſſeſſion by verdict and judgment, and afterwards is diſſeiſed of the ſame by him by whom he was diſſeiſed before. Statute of Merton, c. 3. New Nat. Br. 417. Alſo this writ lies againſt him who committed the rediſſeiſin, and another who was not diſſeiſor, if he be tenant of the land; and if a man recover by rediſſeiſin, and after he is diſſeiſed again by the perſon who made the firſt rediſſeiſin, he ſhall have a new writ of rediſſeiſin; and ſo one rediſſeiſin after another, every time he is rediſſeiſed. Ibid. 418, 420.

The rediſſeiſin being found on the ſheriff's inquiſition, the party who did it is to be committed to priſon, and the land re-ſeiſed; and he who recovereth in rediſſeiſin, ſhall have double damages, &c. Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 26. The puniſhment for rediſſeiſin ſee in the ſtatute 52 H. 3. c. 8.

If plaintiff be rediſſeiſed of parcel of the tenement formerly recovered, he ſhall have a rediſſeiſin: And when coparceners are diſſeiſed, and recover in an aſſiſe, if after they make partition and are ſeverally diſſeiſed, they may bring ſeveral writs of rediſſeiſin, &c. Co. Lit. 154.

A recovery in aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin is againſt two diſſeiſors, and one of them diſſeiſes the plaintiff again, he may have a rediſſeiſin againſt him: But where the recovery is againſt a woman in aſſiſe, and ſhe taketh huſband, and both of them diſſeiſe the plaintiff, he ſhall not have this writ; becauſe the huſband is alius, and not the ſame firſt diſſeiſor. Ibid. And if in a writ of right, &c. the demandant makes his proteſtation to ſue in the nature of aſſiſe, and after is rediſſeiſed; he ſhall not have a writ of rediſſeiſin, the firſt recovery not being by writ of aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin. See 2 Inſt. Com. on Weſt. 2. c. 26. See Poſt-Diſſeiſin, and Black. Com. 3 V. 188.

Redreſs of Injuries. The more effectually to accompliſh the redreſs of injuries, courts of juſtice are inſtituted in every civilized ſociety, in order to protect the weak from the inſults of the ſtronger, by expounding and enforcing thoſe laws, by which rights are defined, and wrongs prohibited: This remedy is therefore principally to be ſought by application to theſe courts of juſtice; that is by civil ſuit or action. Black. Com. 3 V. 2.

Redubbers, Are thoſe that buy ſtolen cloth, and turn it into ſome other colour or faſhion, that it may not be known again. Britton, c. 29. 3 Inſt. 134.

Re-entry, (from the Fr. rentrer i. e. rurſus intrare) Is the reſuming or retaking a poſſeſſion lately had, as if a man makes a leaſe of lands, &c. to another, he thereby quits the poſſeſſion; and if he covenants with the leſſee, that, for non-payment of rent at the day, it ſhall be lawful for him to re-enter; this is as much as if he conditioned to take again the land into his own hands, and to recover the poſſeſſion by his own act, without aſſiſtance of the law. But words in a deed give no re-entry, if A CLAUSE of re-entry be not added. Wood's Inſt. 140.

One may reſerve a rent on condition in a feoffment, leaſe, &c. That if the rent is behind he ſhall re-enter, and hold the lands till he is ſatisfied, or paid the rent in arrear; and in this caſe if the rent is behind, he may re-enter; tho' when the feoffee, &c. pays or tenders on the land all the arrears, he may enter again. Lit. 327. Co. Lit. 203. And the feoffor, &c. by his re-entry gaineth no eſtate of freehold, but an intereſt by the agreement of the parties, to take the profits in the nature of a diſtreſs: Here the profits ſhall not go in part of ſatisfaction of the rent; but it is otherwiſe if the feoffor was to hold the land till he was paid by the profits thereof. Ibid.

All perſons who would re-enter on their tenants for non-payment of rent, are to make a demand of the rent; and, to prevent the re-entry, tenants are to tender their rent, &c. 1 Inſt. 201. If there is a leaſe for years, rendring rent with condition, that, if the leſſee aſſigns his term, the leſſor may re-enter; and the leſſee aſſigneth, and the leſſor receiveth the rent of the aſſignee, not knowing or hearing of the aſſignment, he may re enter notwithſtanding the acceptance of the rent. 3 Rep. 65. Cro. Eliz. 553.

A feoffment may be made upon condition, That if the feoffor pay to the feoffee, &c. a certain ſum of money at a day to come, then the feoffor to re-enter, &c. Litt. 322.

Re-exchange, Is the like ſum of money payable by the drawer of a bill of exchange which is returned proteſted, for the exchange of the ſum mentioned in the bill back again to the place whence it was drawn. Lex Mercat. 98.

Re-extent, Is a ſecond extent on lands or tenements, on complaint that the former was partially made, &c. Broke 313.

Refare, (from the Sax. reaf, or ræfan) To bereave, take away, or rob. Leg. H. 1. c. 83.

Reference, In acceptation of law is, where a matter is referred by the court of Chancery to a Maſter, and by the courts at law to a Prothonotary or Secondary, to examine and report to the court. 2 Lill. Abr. 432. Or by the court or parties, to ſome indifferent perſon.

In Chancery, by order of court, irregularities, exceptions, matters of account, &c. are referred to the examination of a Maſter of that court. In the court of B. R. matters concerning the proceedings in a cauſe, by either of the parties, are proper matters of reference under the Secondary, and for him in ſome ordinary caſes to compoſe the differences betwixt them; and in others to make his report how the matters ſtand, that the court may ſettle the differences according to their rules and orders. Paſch. 1650.

If a matter in difference between plaintiff and defendant be referred to the Secondary, and one of the parties will not attend at the time appointed, after notice thereof given, to hear the buſineſs referred; the other party may proceed in the reference alone, and get the Secondary to make his report without hearing of the party not attending. 2 Lill. 342. See Report. and Black. Com. 3 V. 453.

Reference to Words. The King granted to A. and D. and their heirs all thoſe meſſuages, &c. late in the tenure of J. S. ſituate, &c. in the city of W. and in the ſuburbs thereof, and out of the city within the juriſdiction and liberties thereof belonging to the late priory of, &c. which meſſuage, &c. in the city and ſuburbs belonging to the late priory, were of the clear yearly value of 40*l.* Reſolved, that the words (all THOSE meſſuages, &c.) make a neceſſary reference by reaſon of the word (thoſe) as well to the vill as to the tenure of J. S. ſo if the one or the other fails, the general grant is void; for (thoſe) is not ſatisfied till the ſentence be ended. Doddington's caſe. See 18 Vin. Abr. 272.

Referendary, (Referendarius) An officer abroad, of the ſame nature as Maſters of Requeſt were to the King among us: The Referendaries being thoſe who exhibit the petitions of the people to the King, and acquaint the judges with his commands. And there was ſuch an officer in the time of the Engliſh Saxons here,——Ego Augemundus Referendarius approbavi, &c. And we read of a Referendarius Angliæ. Spelm.

Reformation of Religion, See Black. Com. 4 V. 423.

Refunding. A. an attorney being ill, takes B. for his clerk, and receives 120*l.* and by articles agrees with the father of B. to return 60*l.* of the money if he died within a year. A. died within three weeks. The executor of A. was decreed to pay back 100 guineas. Ver. 466.

A. was indebted to B. by mortgage in 400*l.* principal monies and died. B. died leaving J. S. executor. On a bill in Chancery, for payment of debts of A. out of lands charged with the ſame, the maſter reported 700*l.* due on the mortgage, and the executor received the whole 700*l.* but afterwards it appeared that 353*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.* had been paid to B. the teſtator by A. in his life-time; whereupon the truſtees and ceſtui que truſt, an infant, brought a bill to be relieved againſt this over-payment; the executor (defendant) pleaded all the former proceedings, and alſo that he, before any notice of the over-payment, as executor of B. had paid away the 700*l.* in the debts of B. The Maſter of the Rolls decreed the executor to repay the ſurplus, and he to be at liberty to ſue ſuch creditors, as through miſtake he had paid, TO REFUND; and this decree was affirmed by Lord Chancellor Cowper, who compared it to the caſe of a judgment obtained by executor, and after reverſed in error, and to that of a decree which is afterwards reverſed by appeal; though he ſaid that in the laſt caſe of an appeal if defendant had delayed the appeal, and willingly ſtood by whilſt the executor paid away the money to the teſtator's creditors, it would be otherwiſe; for this would be drawing the executor into a ſnare. 1 Wm's Rep. 355.

A. for 600*l.* purchaſes B.'s intereſt and poſſibility in ſuch an eſtate to him and his heirs; the land is evicted. A. is not intitled to have his 600*l.* back, but his bill was diſmiſſed. Fin. Rep. 288.

Croſs bill was brought for creditors to take their proportionable ſhares, but the debts having been paid to and releaſes given by them, it was diſmiſſed. 2 Chan. R. 173.

Refuſal, Is where one hath by law a right and power of having or doing ſomething of advantage to him, and he refuſeth it. An executor may refuſe an executorſhip; but the refuſal ought to be before the ordinary: if an executor be ſummoned to accept or refuſe the executorſhip, and he doth not appear on the ſummons and prove the will, the court may grant adminiſtration, &c. which ſhall be good in law till ſuch executor hath proved the will; but no man can be compelled to take on him the executorſhip, unleſs he hath intermeddled with the eſtate. 1 Leon. 154. Cro. Eliz. 858. Where there are ſeveral executors, and they all refuſe, none of them ſhall adminiſter afterwards; but if there is a refuſal by one, and the other proves the will, the refuſing executor may adminiſter when he will, during the life of his co-executor. 1 Rep. 28. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 63. There is a difference where there is but one executor, and where there are more executors than one, as to refuſal of an executorſhip; for if there is but one, and in ſuch caſe he adminiſter, he cannot refuſe afterwards; and if once he refuſe, he cannot adminiſter afterwards: As for inſtance; the teſtator being poſſeſſed of lands, &c. for a term of years, deviſed the ſame to the Chief Juſtice Catline, and made him executor, and died; afterwards the executor wrote a letter to the judge of the prerogative court, intimating that he could not attend the executorſhip, and deſiring him to grant adminiſtration to the next of kin to the deceaſed, which was done accordingly; and after this the executor entered on the lands, and granted the term to another; but it was adjudged void, becauſe the letter which he wrote was a ſufficient refuſal; and he may not once refuſe, and afterwards take upon him the executorſhip. Moor 272.

An executor, after a caveat entered againſt the will, took the uſual oath of an executor, and afterwards refuſed to prove the will; and it was held, that having taken the oath of executor, the court could not admit him to refuſe afterwards, but ought to grant probate to him notwithſtanding the caveat, on another's conteſting for the adminiſtration, &c. 1 Vent. 335.

There is a refuſal of a clerk preſented to a church, for illiterature, &c. And if a biſhop once refuſes a clerk for inſufficiency, he cannot accept of him afterwards, if a new clerk is preſented. 5 Rep. 58. Cro. Eliz. 27.

In trover, a demand of the goods and refuſal to deliver them, MUST BE PROVED, &c. 10 Rep. 56. 1 Danv. Abr. 20.

Regale Epiſcoporum, The temporal rights and privileges of a biſhop. Mandatum eſt Roberto de B. quod faciat habere Epiſcopo Norwicenſi totum Regale quod ad Epiſcopatum ſuum pertinet. Brady's Append. to the Hiſtory of England, p. 108.

Regales, The King's ſervants or officers of Walſingham, anno 1291.

Regal Fiſhes, (mentioned in 1 Eliz. cap. 5.) Are whales and ſturgeons, ſome add porpuſſes.

The King by his prerogative ought to have every whale caſt on ſhore, or wrecked, in all places within this realm, (unleſs granted to ſubjects by ſpecial words) as a royal fiſh. The King himſelf ſhall have the head and body to make oil and other things, and the Queen, the tail, to make whalebones for her royal veſtments. Pat. Ed. 1. m. 25. Dorſo. See Tract de auro Reginæ, p. 127.

Regalia, (dicuntur jura omnia ad fiſcum ſpectantia, ſaith Spelman) The royal rights of a King, which the Civilians reckon to be ſix.

1. Power of judicature.
2. Power of life and death.
3. Power of war and peace.
4. Maſterleſs goods, as waifs, eſtrays, &c.
5. Aſſeſſments. And
6. Minting of money. See Royalties.

Alſo the crown, ſcepter with the croſs, ſcepter with the dove, St. Edward's ſtaff, four ſeveral ſwords, the globe, the orb with the croſs, and other ſuch like things uſed at the coronation of our Kings, are called regalia. See the relation of the coronation of King Charles the Second in Baker's Chronicle.

Regalia is ſometimes taken for the dignity and prerogative of the King. Regalia is alſo taken for thoſe rights and privileges which the church enjoys by the grants and other conceſſions of King's, and ſometimes for the patrimony of the church; as regalia Sancti Petri, &c. It ſignifies alſo thoſe lands and hereditaments which have been given by Kings to the church, viz. Cepimus in manum noſtram baroniam & regalia quæ archiepiſcopus Eborum de nobis tenet. Pryn. lib. Angl. 2 tom. p. 231. Theſe, whilſt in the poſſeſſion of the church, were ſubject to the ſame ſervices as all other temporal inheritances; and after the death of the biſhop they of right returned to the King, until he inveſted another with them; which in the reign of William the Conqueror, and ſome of his immediate ſucceſſors, was often neglected or delayed; and as often the biſhops complained thereof. This appears in Ordericus Vitalis, lib. 10. and other writers in thoſe days. Neubrigenſis, lib. 3. cap. 26. tells us they complained againſt Hen. 2. for that Epiſcopatus vacantes & proventientia perciperet commoda, diu vacare voluit, & eccleſiaſticis potius uſibus applicanda in fiſcum redegit. So in Malmſb. lib. 1. de Geſt. Pontificum, p. 285. See Black. Com. 1 V. 241.

Regalia facere, Is to do homage or fealty when he is inveſted with the regalia, viz. Regalia pro more iſtius temporis faciens principi 7 Calend. Octobris Cantuariæ aſſedit. Malmſbury, de geſtis Pontificum, p. 219. de Anſelmo.

Regard, (regardum and rewardum, Fr. regard, i. e. aſpectus, reſpectus) Signifies generally any care or diligent reſpect, yet it hath alſo a ſpecial acceptation, wherein it is only uſed in matters of the foreſt; and there are two ways, one for the office of regarder, the other for the compaſs of the ground belonging to that office. Crom. Jur. 175, 199. Touching the former, ſee Manwood, part. 1. 194, & 198. And touching the ſecond ſignification, the compaſs of the regarder's charge is the whole foreſt, that is, all the ground which is parcel of the foreſt; for there may be woods within the limits of the foreſt, that are no parcel thereof, and thoſe are without the regard. Manwood, part. 2. c. 7. num. 4. anno 20 Car. 2. c. 3. As to the court of regard, ſee tit. Foreſt, and Black. Com. 3 V. 72.

Regardant, (Fr. ſeeing, marking, vigilant) As a villain regardant was called regardant to the manor, becauſe he had the charge to do all baſe ſervices within the ſame, and to ſee the ſame freed of all things that might annoy it. Co. Lit. 120. This word is only applied to a villain or nief, yet in old books it was ſometimes attributed to ſervices. Ibid. See Black. Com. 2 V. 93.

Regarder, regardator, (Fr. regardeur, ſpectator) Is the officer of the King's foreſt, who is ſworn to make the regard of it, and has been uſed in ancient time; and to view and enquire of all offences of the foreſt as well of vert as of veniſon; and of concealment of any offences or defaults of the foreſters, and all other officers of the King's foreſt, relating to the execution of their offices, &c. Cromp. Juriſd. 153. Manwood.

This officer was ordained in the beginning of the reign of Hen. 2. And the regarders of the foreſt muſt make their regard, before any general ſeſſions of the foreſt, or juſtice ſeat, can be holden; when the regarder is to go through the foreſt, and every bailiwick, to ſee and inquire of the treſpaſſes therein; ad videndum, ad inquirendum, ad imbreviandum, ad certificandum, &c. Manw. part. 1. p. 194. A regarder may be made either by the King's letters patent; or by any of the juſtices of the foreſt, at the general eyre, or ſuch times as the regard is to be made, &c. Manw. See Foreſt.

Rege inconſulto, Is a writ iſſued from the King to the judges not to proceed in a cauſe which may prejudice the King, until he is adviſed.

James I. granted the office of ſuperſedeas in C. B. to one Mitchel, and thereupon Brownlow, chief prothonotary, brought an aſſiſe againſt him; and defendant Mitchel obtained the King's writ to the judges, reciting the grant of this office, commanding them not to proceed rege inconſulto: And it was argued againſt the writ, that the court might proceed, becauſe the writ doth not mention that the King had a title to the thing in demand, nor any prejudice which might happen to the King if they ſhould proceed: The cauſe was compromiſed. Moor 844.

A rege inconſulto may be awarded, not only for the party to the plea, but on ſuggeſtion of a ſtranger, on cauſe ſhewn that the King may be prejudiced by the proceeding, &c. Jenk. Cent. 97. This was the ancient doctrine. Sed qu. How far the courts of law would now be bound to pay attention to ſuch a writ?

Regio aſſenſu, A writ whereby the King gives his royal aſſent to the election of a biſhop. Reg. Orig. 294.

Regiſter, (regiſtrarius) An officer who writes and keeps a regiſtry.

Regiſter is the name of a book, wherein are entered moſt of the forms of writs original and judicial, uſed at Common law, called the Regiſter of writs: Sir Edward Coke affirms, that this Regiſter is one of the moſt ancient books of the Common law. Co. Lit. 159.

The learned Blackſtone ſays, it is "the moſt ancient "and highly venerable collection of legal forms, upon "which Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium is a comment, and "in which every man who is injured will be ſure to find "a method of relief, exactly adapted to his own caſe, de"ſcribed in the compaſs of a few lines, and yet without "the omiſſion of any material circumſtance." Com. 3 V. 183.

Regiſter of the Pariſh Church, (regiſtrum eccleſiæ parochialis) Is that wherein baptiſms, marriages, and burials are regiſtred in each pariſh every year; which was inſtituted by Lord Cromwell, anno 13 Hen. 8. while he was vicar general to that King.

Theſe pariſh regiſters are to be ſubſcribed by the miniſter and churchwardens; and the names of the perſons ſhall be tranſmitted yearly to the biſhop, &c.

Regiſtry, (regiſtrum, from the old Fr. giſter, i. e. in lecto reponere, Is properly the ſame with repoſitory, and the office books, and rolls wherein the proceedings of the Chancery, or any ſpiritual court, are recorded, &c. are called by this name.

Regiſtry of Deeds. The regiſtring of deeds and incumbrances is a great ſecurity of titles to purchaſers of lands and to mortgagees; and ſome laws have been made requiring the ſame. By the 2 Ann. c. 4. A regiſtry is to be kept of all deeds and conveyances affecting lands executed in the Weſt Riding of Yorkſhire; and a public office erected for that purpoſe; and the regiſter is to be choſen by freeholders having 100*l. per annum, &c.* The 6 Ann. c. 35. ordains, that a memorial and regiſtry of all deeds, conveyances, wills, &c. which affect any lands or tenements, ſhall be made in the Eaſt Riding of the county of York; and the regiſter is to be ſworn by the juſtices in quarter-ſeſſions, and every leaf of his book ſigned by two juſtices. By 7 Ann. c. 20. A memorial and regiſtry is to be made of all deeds and conveyances, and of all wills whereby lands are affected, &c. in the county of Middleſex, in the like manner as in the Weſt and Eaſt Ridings of Yorkſhire. And by theſe ſtatutes, deeds, conveyances and wills, ſhall be void againſt ſubſequent purchaſers or mortgagees, unleſs regiſtred before the conveyances under which they claim: Alſo no judgment, ſtatute, or recognizance, ſhall bind any lands in thoſe counties, but from the time a memorial thereof ſhall be entered at the regiſter's office; but the acts do not extend to copyhold eſtates, leaſes at a rack-rent, or to any leaſes, not exceeding twenty-one years, where the poſſeſſion goes with the leaſe; nor to any chambers in the inns of court. By the 8 Geo. 2. c. 6. A regiſtry ſhall be of all deeds made in the North Riding of the county of York: The deeds and conveyances regiſtred to be in parchment, under the hand and ſeal of ſome of the grantors, or grantees, &c. atteſted by two witneſſes, who ſhall on oath prove the ſigning and ſealing of the memorial and execution of the deeds. Memorials of wills muſt be regiſtred within ſix months after the death of the teſtator; the Regiſter neglecting his duty, or guilty of fraudulent practices, ſhall forfeit his office, and pay treble damages; and perſons counterfeiting any memorial, &c. be liable to the common penalties of forgery.

An annuity was granted out of lands lying in Middleſex; A. B. who had notice of the grant, purchaſes the lands; the grantee ſhall have the annuity againſt A. B. though the grant of the annuity was not regiſtered, for the ſtatute was intended to give notice of incumbrances to purchaſers, that they might not be defrauded; but if a man knows of an incumbrance, and will notwithſtanding purchaſe, he is bound, though the incumbrance was not regiſtered. 1 Strange 664.

A mortgage of a leaſe was regiſtered, but not the leaſe itſelf; this will not bar a ſubſequent purchaſer. 2 Strange 1064. Deputy of the chief clerk of the King's Bench, appointed a Regiſter for Middleſex, inſtead of the chief clerk. 25 Geo. 2. c. 4.

Regiſtry of Papiſts Eſtates. Papiſts are to regiſter their eſtates, or on default forfeit them. 1 Geo. 1. c. 55. And all perſons refuſing to take the oaths, are obliged to regiſter their eſtates as papiſts, &c. 9 Geo. 1. c. 24. See Papiſts.

Regius Profeſſor, A reader of lectures in the univerſities, founded by the King: King Hen. 8. was the founder of five lectures in each univerſity of Oxford and Cambridge, viz. of Divinity, Greek, Hebrew, Law and Phyſic, the readers of which are called in the univerſity ſtatutes regii profeſſores.

Regni Populi, A name given to the people of Surry and Suſſex, and on the ſea coaſts of Hampſhire. Blount.

Regnum Eccleſiaſticum. In ſome countries formerly, the clergy held there was a double ſupreme power, or two kingdoms in every kingdom; the one a regnum eccleſiaſticum, abſolute and independent of any but the Pope, over eccleſiaſtical men and cauſes, exempt from the ſecular magiſtrate; the other a regnum ſeculare, of the King or civil magiſtrate, which had ſubordination and ſubjection to the eccleſiaſtical kingdom: But theſe uſurpations and abſurdities were exterminated here by H. 8. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 324.

Regrator, (Regratarius, Fr. Regrateur) Signifies him who buys and ſells any wares or victuals in the ſame market or fair: And regrators are particularly deſcribed to be thoſe who buy or get into their hands, in fairs or markets, any grain, fiſh, butter, cheeſe, ſheep, lambs, calves, ſwine, pigs, geeſe, capons, hens chickens, pigeons, conies, or other dead victuals whatſoever, brought to a fair or market to be ſold there, and do ſell the ſame again in the ſame fair, market, or place, or in ſome other within four miles thereof. Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 14. 13 Eliz. cap. 25.

Regrating is a kind of huckſtry, by which victuals are made dearer; for every ſeller will gain ſomething, which muſt of conſequence enhance the price. 3 Inſt. 195. And in ancient time, both the ingroſſer and regrator were comprehended under the word foreſtaller. Ibid. Regrators are puniſhable by loſs and forfeiture of goods, and impriſonment, in proportion to the firſt, ſecond, or third offence, &c. Vide Foreſtaller, and Black. Com. 4 V. 158.

Regulars, (regulares) Are ſuch as profeſs to live under ſome certain rule; ſuch as monks or canon regulars, who ought always to be under ſome rule of obedience.

Regulus, Subregulus, Are words often mentioned in the councils of the Engliſh Saxons: The firſt ſignifies comes, the other vicecomes. But in many places they ſignify the ſame dignitary; as in the old book in the archives of Worceſter cathedral. Cowell. See Subregulus.

Rehabere facias ſeiſinam, (Quando vicecomes liberavit ſeiſinam de majore parte, quam deberet) Is a writ judicial; of which there is another of the ſame name and nature. Reg. Judic. 13, 51, 54.

Rehabilitation, (rehabilitatio) A reſtoring to former ability; and is one of thoſe exactions claimed by the Pope heretofore in England, by his bull or brief, for re-enabling a ſpiritual perſon to exerciſe his function who had been diſabled. Stat. 25 Hen. 8. c. 21.

Reif, (Sax. reſian, i. e. ſpoliare) In our old law ſignifies robbery. Cowell.

Rejoinder, (rejunctio) Is where defendant in any action makes anſwer to plaintiff's replication: It is an exception or anſwer thereto, and it ought to be a ſufficient anſwer to the replication, and follow and inforce the matter of the bar pleaded. 2 Lil. Abr. 433.

Defendant is not to rejoin on ſuch words as are not contained in the declaration, or replication: and if defendant do in his rejoinder depart from his plea pleaded in bar, the rejoinder is not good, becauſe this is uncertain, and to ſay and unſay, which the law doth not allow. Mich. 22 Car. B. R.

It is obſerved, that in many caſes, if plaintiff in his replication alledges any new matter, defendant may there make a new anſwer in the rejoinder; though if defendant pleads a general plea, he ſhall not commonly make that good afterwards, by a particular thing in his rejoinder. 5 Hen. 7. 19. Raym. 22.

Where a replication is pleaded, which is iſſuable, the clerk of the papers, when he makes up the paper-book, doth of courſe make up the rejoinder, and joins the iſſue in it; and if the Rejoinder be iſſuable, he hath the making up of the Surrejoinder to it, and the iſſue thereupon. 2 Lil. 433. See Departure, and Black. Com. 3 V. 310.

Relation, (relatio) Is where, in conſideration of law, two different times or other things are accounted as one; and by ſome act done, the thing ſubſequent is ſaid to take effect by relation from the time preceeding: As if one deliver a writing to another, to be delivered to a third perſon, as the deed of him who made it, when ſuch third perſon hath paid a ſum of money; now when the money is paid, and the writing delivered, this ſhall be taken as the deed of him who made and delivered it, at the time of its firſt delivery, to which it has relation; and ſo things relating to a time long before, ſhall be as if they were done at that time. Terms de Ley. Shep. Epit. 837.

This device is moſt commonly to help acts in law, and make a thing take effect: and ſhall relate to the ſame thing, the ſame intent, and between the ſame parties only; and it ſhall never do a wrong, or lay a charge upon a perſon that is no party. Co. Lit. 190. 1 Rep. 99. Plowd. 188.

And when the execution of a thing is done, it hath relation to the thing executory, and makes all but one act or record, although performed at ſeveral times. 1 Rep. 199. A judgment had in full term ſhall have relation to the firſt day of the term, which is the Eſſoin day; but this muſt be underſtood of a judgment given after appearance; and if it be on default, then the quarta dies poſt is the day. Cro. Car. 102. 1 Bulſt. 35. Judgment ſhall have relation to the firſt day of the term, as if given on that very day, unleſs there is a memorandum to the contrary; as where there is a continuance till another day in the ſame term. 3 Salk. 212. A verdict was given in a cauſe for plaintiff, and there was a motion in arreſt of judgment within four days; the court took time to adviſe, and in four days afterwards plaintiff died; it was adjudged, that the favour of the court ſhall not prejudice the party, for the judgment ought to have been given after the firſt four days; and though it is given after the death of the party, it ſhall have relation to the time when it ought to have been given. 1 Leon. 187.

Rule was had for judgment, and two days after plaintiff died; yet the judgment was entered, becauſe it ſhall have relation to the day, when the rule was given, which was when the plaintiff was alive. Poph. 132. Judgment againſt an heir of the obligation of his anceſtor, ſhall have relation to the time of the writ firſt purhaſed; and from that time it will avoid all alienations made by the heir. Cro. Car. 102. If one be bail for defendant, and before judgment he leaſes his lands; they ſhall be liable to the bail, and judgment by relation. Poph. 132.

It was formerly holden, (1 Leon. 304) that where the defendant in a ſuit after the teſte of the fieri facias, but before the ſheriff had executed it, ſold the goods, and delivered them to the buyer; the ſheriff might take them in execution in the hands of the buyer; for when ſuch execution is made, it ſhall have relation to the teſte of the Fi. Fa. But by ſtatute 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. ſect. 16. Writs of execution ſhall bind the property of the goods, but from the time of their delivery to the officer.

Sale of goods of a bankrupt, by commiſſioners, ſhall have relation to the firſt act of bankruptcy; and be good, notwithſtanding the bankrupt ſells them afterwards. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. Wood's Inſt. 311. And if a man buys cattle in a market which are ſtolen, and ſelleth them out of the market, though the cattle are afterwards brought into the market, and the ſecond bargain confirmed, and money paid, &c. this bargain will not be good; for it ſhall have relation to the beginning, which was unlawful. Dyer 99.

Fines, being but common aſſurances, ſhall be guided by the indentures precedent; and the execution thereof have relation to the original act. Cro. Jac. 110. A bargain and ſale was made to A. B. and before it was inrolled, the ſame bargainor levied a fine to the bargainee, and afterwards, and within the ſix months the deed was inrolled, adjudged that the bargainee was in by the fine, and not by the deed inrolled, becauſe though the inrollment ſhall have relation to the delivery of the deed, that is only to protect the lands from all incumbrances to be made by the bargainor to others after the deed, and before the inrollment, but not to deveſt any lawful eſtate made by him before. 4 Rep. 70. After an indenture of bargain and ſale is inrolled, according to the ſtatute, it relates to the delivery; nothing paſſes till inrollment, but then it relates. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 68.

If an infant or feme covert diſagree to a feoffment to them made, when they are of age, or diſcovert; it ſhall relate as to this purpoſe, to diſcharge them of damages from the time. 3 Rep. 29. Co. Lit. 310. But generally in caſes at Common law, there is no relation; as between the feoffment of lands and livery and ſeiſin; or between the grant of a reverſion and the attornment, which is only the aſſent of the particular tenant, and ſhall not relate to the grant. Ibid. Though if one diſtrains for rent as a bailiff, when in truth he is not; if he in whoſe name he took the diſtreſs will afterwards aſſent to it, he ſhall not be a treſpaſſer, for the aſſent ſhall have relation to the time of the diſtreſs taken. 2 Leon. 196.

Letters of adminiſtration relate to the death of the inteſtate, and not to the time when they were granted. Style 341. And when the wife is endowed of lands by the heir, ſhe ſhall be in immediately from the huſband by relation. 36 H. 6. 7.

It is a rule in pleadings, grants, &c. Ad proximum antecedens fiat relatio; but that rule has an exception, (viz.) niſi impediat ſententia: And it hath been held, that this rule hath many reſtrictions, i. e. Fiat relatio, ſo as there is no abſurdity or incongruity; therefore it is always ſecundum ſubjectam materiam. Hard. 77. 3 Salk. 199.

A perſon granted totam illam portionem decimarum in B. with all other his tithes in B. then or late in occupatione of J. C. here the words in occupatione of J. C. have relation to the whole ſentence, and not only to the precedent words, with all other his tithes, becauſe the pronoun illam relates as well to the tenure of the tithes, as to the place where they ariſe. 4 Rep. 34.

In debt upon bond conditioned that if J. M. died before Midſummer day, without iſſue male of her body then living, that in ſuch caſe the bond ſhould be void: Defendant pleaded that, before Midſummer day, ſhe did die without iſſue male THEN living; and the queſtion was, whether the adverb then ſhould relate to Midſummer day, or to the death of J. M. And it was agreed, that it might relate to either; but becauſe it happened in fact that ſhe had a ſon living at her death, which ſon died before Midſummer day, therefore the words then living ſhall relate to that day, and not her death; becauſe it is moſt beneficial to the obligor, that it ſhould be ſo. Dyer 17. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 65.

It is a general rule, that relation ſhall not do wrong to ſtrangers. Per Ventris, J. 2 Vent. 200. Trin. 2 W. & M. C. B. in the caſe of Thompſon v. Leach. See 18 Vin. Abr. 285—294.

Releaſe, (Relaxatio) Is an inſtrument whereby eſtates, or other things, are extinguiſhed, transferred, abridged, or enlarged. Weſt. Symbol. part. 1. lib. 2. ſect. 509.

1. Of releaſes, generally.
2. Of the words and ceremony required in a releaſe; and how far a covenant, agreement, or a diſpoſition by will, may operate as a releaſe.
3. What ſhall be releaſed, by a releaſe of ALL CLAIMS and DEMANDS.
4. What ſhall be releaſed, by a releaſe of ALL ACTIONS and SUITS.
5. How far a poſſibility, or contingent intereſt, may be releaſed.

1. Of releaſes, generally.

There is a releaſe in fact, and a releaſe in law. Perkin's Grants 71. A releaſe in fact, is that which the very words expreſsly declare. A releaſe in law, is that which doth acquit by way of conſequence or intendment of law; an example whereof you have in Perkins, ubi ſupra. How theſe are available and how not, ſee Littleton at large, lib. 3. c. 8. Cowell.

A releaſe is the giving or diſcharging of a right of action which a man hath or may claim againſt another, or that which is his, or it is the conveyance of a man's intereſt or right which he hath to a thing, to another who hath poſſeſſion thereof, or ſome eſtate therein. 4 New Abr. 263.

According to Coke, releaſes are diſtinguiſhed into expreſs releaſes in deed, and thoſe ariſing by operation of law; and are made of lands and tenements, goods and chattels, or of actions real, perſonal and mixt. Co. Lit. 264. a.

Theſe are to be adapted to the nature of the caſe, and the purpoſes for which the releaſe is intended; ſo that if a man be diſſeiſed of lands, or diſpoſſeſſed of goods, and releaſe all actions, he may notwithſtanding enter into his lands, or retake his goods, the right and property being ſtill in him, though he has deveſted himſelf of his remedy. Hob. 163. 4 Co. 63.

So where a man has divers means to come to his right, he may releaſe one, and yet take advantage of the other; but if a man has not any means to come to his right but by way of action, there, by a releaſe of all actions, his right by judgment of law is gone, becauſe by his own act he has barred himſelf of all means to come at it. 8 Co. 152. Co. Lit. 286.

Heretofore releaſes were conſtrued with much nicety and great ſtrictneſs, and being conſidered as the deed or grant of the party, were, according to the rule of law, taken ſtrongeſt againſt the releaſor; they now receive ſuch interpretation as theſe grants and agreements do, and are favoured by the judges as tending to repoſe and quietneſs. Dyer 56. Plowd. 289. Hetl. 15. 8 Co. 148.

Hence it hath been eſtabliſhed as a general rule in the conſtruction of releaſes, that where there are general words only in a releaſe, they ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the releaſor; but where there is a particular recital in a deed, and then general words follow, the general words ſhall be qualified by the ſpecial words. 1 Mod. 99. 1 Ld. Raym. 235.

2. Of the words and ceremony required in a releaſe; and how far a covenant, agreement, or a diſpoſition by will may operate as a releaſe.

Littleton tells us, that the proper words of a releaſe are remiſiſſe, relaxaſſe & quietum clamaſſe, which have all the ſame ſignification. Lord Coke adds, Renunciare, acquietare; and ſays, that there are other words which will amount to a releaſe; as if the leſſor grants to the leſſee for life, that he ſhall be diſcharged of the rent; this is a good releaſe. Lit. ſect. 445. Co. Lit. 264. Plowd. 140.

So a pardon by act of parliament of all debts and judgments amount to a releaſe of the debt, the word pardon including a releaſe. 1 Sid. 261.

An expreſs releaſe muſt regularly be in writing and by deed, according to the common rule, eodem modo oritur, eodem modo diſſolvitur; ſo that a duty ariſing by record muſt be diſcharged by matter of as high a nature; ſo of a bond or other deed. Co. Lit. 264. b. 1 Rol. Rep. 43. 2 Leon. 76, 213. 2 Rol. Abr. 408. 2 Sand. 48. Moor 573. pl. 787.

A releaſe of a right in chattels cannot be without deed. 1 Leon 283.

A covenant perpetual, as that the covenantor will not ſue without limitation of time, is a defeaſance or abſolute releaſe; and this conſtruction has been made to avoid circuity of action; for if in ſuch caſe the party ſhould contrary to his covenant ſue, the other part would recover preciſely the ſame damages which he ſuſtained by the other's ſuing; but if the covenant be, that he will not ſue till ſuch a time, this does not amount to a releaſe, nor is it pleadable in bar as ſuch, but the party hath remedy only on his covenant. Moor 23. pl. 80, 811. 1 *Rol. If two are jointly and ſeverally bound in an obligation, and the obligee by deed covenants and agrees not to ſue one of them; this is no releaſe, and he may notwithſtanding ſue the other. Cro. Car. 551. March 95. 2 Salk. 575.

But if two are jointly and ſeverally bound, a releaſe to one diſcharges the other. 1 Ld. Raym. 420. See 2 Vent. 217. 1 Ld. Raym. 691. 1 Lev. 152.

It ſeems agreed, that a will, though ſealed and delivered, cannot amount to a releaſe, becauſe it is ambulatory and revokable during the teſtator's life; and by reaſon of the executor's conſent requiſite to every diſpoſition of a perſonal thing by will, and the injury that might accrue to the teſtator's creditors, were a will allowed to operate as a releaſe. Stil. 286. 1 Vent. 39.

Therefore where in debt on an obligation, by the repreſentative of a teſtator, defendant pleaded that the teſtator by his laſt will in writing releaſed to defendant; this was adjudged ill, and that no advantage could be taken by plea. 1 Sid. 421.

But it hath been held in equity, that though a will cannot enure as a releaſe, yet, provided it were expreſſed to be the intention of the teſtator that the debt ſhould be diſcharged, the will would operate accordingly; and that in ſuch caſe it would be plainly an abſolute diſcharge of the debt though the teſtator had ſurvived the legatee. 1 Peer Will. 85. 2 Vern. 521.

So in another caſe it was held, that a releaſe by will can only operate as a legacy, and muſt be aſſets to pay the

teſtators's debts; and if a debt ſo releaſed by will be afterwards received by the teſtator himſelf in his life-time, the legacy is extinct, and ſuch releaſe by will intimates no more than that the executors ſhould not after the teſtator's death trouble or moleſt the debtor. 2 Peer Will. 332.

If a debt is mentioned to be deviſed to the debtor without words of releaſe or diſcharge of the debt, and the debtor die before the teſtator; this will be a lapſed legacy, and the debt will ſubſiſt. 2 Vern. 522. admitted.

3. What ſhall be releaſed, by a releaſe of ALL CLAIMS and DEMANDS.

Littleton ſays, that a releaſe of all demands is the beſt releaſe to him to whom it is made; and Coke ſays, that the word demand is the largeſt word in law except claim; and that a releaſe of demands, diſcharges all ſorts of actions, rights and titles, conditions before or after breach, executions, appeals, rents of all kinds, covenants, annuities, contracts, recognizances, ſtatutes, commons, &c. Litt. ſect. 508. Co. Litt. 291.

But notwithſtanding the large import of the word demands, yet there are ſeveral inſtances (which vide infra) where the generality of the word hath been reſtrained to the particular occaſion for which the releaſe was made.

By a releaſe of all demands, all actions real, perſonal, and mixed, and all actions of appeal, are extinct. Litt. ſect. 509. 8 Co. 154.

So a releaſe of all demands extends to inheritances, and takes away rights of entry, ſeizures, &c. Co. Lit. 291. But if the King releaſeth all demands, yet as to him the inheritance ſhall not be included. Bro. Prerogative, pl. 62. Bridg. 124.

By a releaſe of all demands made to the tenant of the land, a common of paſture ſhall be extinct. Co. Lit. 291.

A releaſe of all demands will bar a demand of a relief, becauſe the relief is by reaſon of the ſeigniory to which it belongs. Cro. Jac. 170.

If A. being poſſeſſed of goods loſes them, and they come to the hands of B. who being in poſſeſſion, A. by deed releaſes to B. all actions and demands perſonal which at any time before habuit vel habere potuit againſt B. for any cauſe, matter or thing whatſoever; this ſhall bar A. of the property of the goods, ſo that B. has the abſolute right in him by this releaſe. 2 Roll. Abr. 407.

By a releaſe of all demands, all manner of executions are gone, for the Recoveror cannot ſue out a fieri facias, capias or elegit, without a demand. Lit. ſect. 508. 2 Rol. Abr. 407.

By a releaſe of all demands to the conuſor of a ſtatute merchant before the day of payment, the conuſee ſhall be barred of his action, becauſe the duty is always in demand; yet if he releaſes all his right in the land, it is no bar. Co. Lit. 291. Bridgm. 124.

So a bond conditioned to pay money at a day to come, is a debt and duty preſently, and may be diſcharged by a releaſe of all actions and demands before the day of payment. Cro. Jac. 300.

But in an action of debt for non-performance of an award made for payment of money at a day to come; there is no preſent debt, nor any duty before the day of payment is come, therefore it cannot be diſcharged before the day, by a releaſe of all actions and demands. Yelv. 214. Cro Jac. 300.

So if a man deviſes a legacy of 20*l.* to J. S. at the age of 23, tho' the legatee, after he attains the age of 21, and before the day of payment, may releaſe it, yet by the ward demands it is not releaſed, but there muſt be ſpecial words for the purpoſe. 10 Co. 51.

A releaſe of all demands does not diſcharge a covenant not broken at the time; but a releaſe of all covenants will releaſe the covenant. Cro. Jac. 173. 2 Roll. Abr. 407. Noy. 123. For the difference when broken or not, ſee Dyer 217. Lit. Rep. 86. 3 Leon. 69. 5 Co. 71. Hoe's caſe. 10 Co. 51. Co. Lit. 292. 8 Co. 153. 1 And. 8, 64.

If a leſſee for life grants over his eſtate by indenture reſerving rent during the continuance of the eſtate, and afterwards releaſes to the aſſignee all demands; this ſhall diſcharge the rent, for he had the freehold of the rent in him at the time. 2 Rol. Abr. 408. Cro. Jac. 486. Bridgm. 123. 2 Roll. Rep. 20. Poph. 136.

So if leſſee for years grants over by indenture all his eſtate, reſerving a rent during the term, and afterwards releaſes to the aſſignee all demands; this ſhall releaſe the rent, for tho' he cannot have an action to demand all the eſtate, yet this is an eſtate in him of the rent, and aſſignable over; and in an action of debt for any arrears after, he ſhall claim it as a duty accrued from the eſtate; and it ſhall not be ſaid that the duty ariſes annually on taking the profits, but this had its commencement and creation by the reſervation of the contract, which was before. 2 Roll. Abr. 408.

If there be leſſee for years rendering rent, and the leſſor grants over the reverſion, and the leſſee attorns, and after leſſee aſſigns over his eſtate, and after the aſſignee of the reverſion releaſes all demands to the firſt leſſee, yet this ſhall not releaſe the rent, for there is neither privity of the eſtate or contract between them after the aſſignment; but if the releaſe had been made to the aſſignee, it had extinguiſhed the rent. 2 Roll. Abr. 408. Moor 544. Cro. Eliz. 606.

If he who has a rent-charge in fee releaſes to the tenant of the land all demands from the beginning of the world till the making of the deed of releaſe; this ſhall diſcharge all the rent, as well that to come as what is paſt. 20 Aſſ. pl. 5. 2 Rol. Abr. 408.

It is ſaid by Littleton and Coke, that by a releaſe of all demands a rent-ſervice ſhall be releaſed; but this it is ſaid is to be intended of a rent-ſervice in groſs, as a ſeigniory. Lit. ſect. 510. Co. Lit. 291. Therefore in the caſe of Hen v. Hanſon, where in covenant brought on a covenant in a leaſe for years to pay the rent reſerved, defendant pleaded releaſe by the plaintiff of all demands at a day before the rent in queſtion became due; plaintiff replied that the releaſe was in performance of an award of all matters in controverſy between the plaintiff and defendant; and on demurrer it was adjudged, that the rent was not diſcharged by this releaſe, as it became due by the perception of the profits, and was not like to a rent-charge, or a rent parcel of a ſeigniory; and that this rent being incident to the reverſion, and part thereof, was no more releaſed than the reverſion itſelf; and this conſtruction ſhould the rather prevail, as it was not the intention of the party to releaſe this rent: But Twiſden ſaid, that in releaſes and deeds when words are heaped up, the party who is to take advantage may take the ſtrongeſt word and the ſtrongeſt ſenſe, and that is the reaſon they are put in; and as to the intent, that muſt be gathered from the words: and men muſt take care what words they uſe, oportet politiam obedire legibus, non leges politiæ; and he ſaid, he could ſee no difference between this rent and a rent in fee, both are rent-ſervices, and neither demandable before they become due, otherwiſe than as in 40 Ed. 3. 47. it is ſaid, there is a continual demand betwixt lord and tenant; and in this caſe there is a tenure between the leſſee and him in reverſion; and the reaſon why the reverſion is not touched by this releaſe is, becauſe it can work only by way of extinguiſhment, and not by way of paſſing an intereſt; but it was adjudged ut ſupra. 1 Lev. 99, 100. 1 Sid. 141. 1 Keb. 499, 510. See 2 Salk. 578.

4. What ſhall be releaſed, by a leaſe of ALL ACTIONS and SUITS.

A releaſe of all actions diſcharges a bond to pay money on a day to come; for it is Debitum in præſenti, quamvis ſit ſolvendum in futuro; and it is a thing merely in action, and the right of action in him who releaſes, tho' no action will lie when the releaſe is made. Co. Lit. 292.

But a releaſe of actions does not diſcharge a rent before the day of payment, for it is neither debitum nor ſolven- dum at the time of the releaſe; nor is it merely a thing in action, for it is grantable over. Co. Lit. 292.

So if a man has an annuity for a term of years, for life or in fee, and he, before it be in arrear, releaſes all actions; this ſhall not releaſe the annuity, for it is not merely in action, becauſe it may be granted over. Co. Lit. 292. 1 Bulſt. 178. Cro Eliz. 897. Moor 113. But ſuch releaſe ſhall releaſe the arrears incurred before. 39 H. 6. 43. 2 Roll. Abr. 404.

If one releaſe omnes querelas aut loquelas, this is as large as a releaſe of all actions, and releaſes all cauſes of action, tho' no action be then depending. Co. Lit. 292.

By a releaſe of all manner of actions, all actions as well criminal as real, perſonal, and mixed, are releaſed. Co. Lit. 287.

A releaſe of actions real is a good bar in actions mixed; as aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, waſte, quare impedit, annuity; and ſo is a releaſe of actions perſonal. Co. Lit. 284. But not after the grantee has made his election. 1 Jones 215.

In an appeal of robbery or felony, a releaſe of all actions perſonal will not bar, becauſe an appeal, in which the appellee is to have judgment of death, is higher than a perſonal action; but a releaſe of all manner of actions, or of all actions criminal, or of all actions mortal, or of all actions concerning the pleas of the crown, or of all appeals, or of all demands, will be a good bar of any ſuch appeal. Co. Litt. 287. 2 Hawk. P. C. 196.

And in an appeal of maihem a releaſe of all actions perſonal may be pleaded, becauſe damages, only, are recovered. Co. Litt. 288.

A releaſe of all actions is regularly no bar to an execution, for execution is no action, but begins when the action ends. Co. Lit. 289. 8 Co. 153.

Alſo a releaſe of all actions does not regularly releaſe a writ of error, for it is no action, but a commiſſion to the juſtices to examine the record; but if therein the plaintiff may recover, or be reſtored to any thing, it may be releaſed by the name of action. 2 Inſt. 40. Yelv. 209. Co. Litt. 288.

But a releaſe of all actions is a good bar to a ſcire facias, tho' it be a judicial writ, for defendant may plead to it, and it is in nature of a new original given by the ſtatute. Co. Litt. 290. Comb. 455.

So in replevin a releaſe of all actions is a good bar, for the avowant is defendant, tho' in ſome reſpects he is plaintiff. 2 Rol. Rep. 75.

By a releaſe of all ſuits a man is barred of a writ of error. Latch. 110.

So by a releaſe of all ſuits a man is barred of execution, becauſe it cannot be had without application to the court, and prayer of the party, which is his ſuit. Co. Litt. 291. 8 Co. 153.

If a diſſeiſee releaſes to the diſſeiſor all actions; this is no releaſe of his right of entry, for when a man has ſeveral means to come at his right, he may releaſe one and yet take benefit of the other. Co. Litt. 28. b. 8 Co. 141.

So if a man by wrong takes away my goods; if I releaſe to him all actions perſonal, yet by law I may take the goods out of his poſſeſſion. Co. Litt. 286. Skin. 57.

If a man releaſes all actions, by this he ſhall releaſe as well actions which he hath as executor, as thoſe in his own right. 39 Ed. 3. 26. 2 Roll. Abr. 404. 2 Ld. Raym. 1307. S. C. cited by Powel, and ſaid by him to be clearly ſo, unleſs there was an action of his own for the releaſe to work upon.

If a man releaſes all quarrels; a man's deed being taken moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf, it is as beneficial as all actions, for by it all actions real, perſonal, and mixed, are releaſed. Co. Lit. 292.

5. How far a poſſibility or contingent intereſt may be releaſed.

It is a general rule in our books that a mere poſſibility cannot be releaſed, and the reaſon hereof is, that a releaſe ſuppoſeth a right in being, and it was thought to countenance maintenance to transfer choſes in action, poſſibilities and contingent intereſts. Co. Lit. 48. a. Cro. Eliz. 552.

Hence it is held, that an heir at law cannot releaſe to his father's diſſeiſor in the life-time of the father, for the heirſhip of the heir is a contingent thing, for he may die in the life-time of the father, or the father may alien the lands. Litt. ſect. 446. Co. Lit. 265. a. 10 Co. 51. Bridgm. 76. S. P.

So if the conuſee of a ſtatute releaſes to the conuſor all his right to the land, yet he may afterwards ſue execution, for he has no right to the land, but only a poſſibility. 1 And. 133. Co. Litt. 265. 2 Roll. Abr. 405. Cro Eliz. 552.

So if a creditor releaſes to his debtor all the right and title which he hath to his lands, and afterwards gets judgment againſt him, he may extend a moiety of the ſame land, for he had no right to the land at the time of the releaſe, and the land is not bound but in reſpect to the perſon. 2 Mod. 281. 2 Lev. 215.

So if plaintiff releaſes all demands to the bail in the King's Bench, and afterwards judgment be given againſt the principal, execution may be ſued againſt the bail, for that at the time of the releaſe there was only a poſſibility of the bail becoming chargeable. 5 Co. 70. *Co. So if A. recovers in treſpaſs againſt B. in B. R. and B. brings a writ of error, pending which A. releaſes to B. all executions, and after the judgment is affirmed, and new damages given to A. for the delay, on the ſtatute of 3 H. 7. c. 10. this releaſe ſhall not bar A. to have execution of thoſe damages, becauſe he had not any right to have execution, nor to any duty when the releaſe was made. 2 Rol. Abr. 404. Cro. Jac. 337, 1 Roll. Rep. 11.

A leaſe to the huſband and wife for life, remainder to the ſurvivor of them for twenty-one years; the huſband grants it over, and tho' he ſurvived, yet the grant was held void becauſe it was contingent. Poph. 5. 10 Co. 51. Hut. 17. Raym. 146.

If the next preſentation to a church be granted to A. and B. and living the incumbent, A. releaſes all his eſtate, title and intereſt to B. this releaſe is void, it being of a choſe in action; ſecus had the releaſe been made after the avoidance, at which time the intereſt would have been veſted in A. Cro. Eliz. 173, 600. Owen 85. 1 Leon. 167. 3 Leon. 256. and Dyer 244. 10 Co. 48. like point. See Poſt, other caſes, in ſome reſpect ſimilar.

From the reaſons herein it was held, that if at Common law a woman before marriage had accepted of a jointure in bar and ſatisfaction of dower, that this would not have bound her, becauſe at the time ſhe had no right to dower. 4 Co. 1.

A city orphan cannot at law releaſe her orphanage part to her father, for ſhe hath no right in her during the life of her father; but it hath been held in equity, that ſuch releaſe being for a valuable conſideration, as on the marriage of a daughter, and a portion given her by the father, ſuch releaſe may operate as an agreement to waive the orphanage, and hath accordingly been ſo decreed in equity. 1 Peer Will. 638. 2 Peer Will. 527. Preced. Chan. 545.

If there be a deviſe of a term for years to A. for life, remainder to B.——B. may releaſe his right to A. and ſuch releaſe ſhall extinguiſh his intereſt, tho' it was objected, that B. had only a poſſibility at the time of the releaſe made. 10 Co. 47.

But it was held, that B. could not aſſign over his intereſt to a ſtranger in the life-time of A. the ſame being only a choſe in action, and a mere poſſibility, inaſmuch as an eſtate for life is in ſuppoſition of law a larger eſtate than for any number of years. 10 Co. 47. 4 Co. 66. 1 Sid. 188. Raym. 146.

But later reſolutions, eſpecially thoſe which have been in courts of equity, have made a great alteration in this doctrine. 2 Vern. 563.

As where one poſſeſſed of a term deviſed it to A. for life, remainder to B. and made A. executor; B. deviſed this remainder to C. and died in the life-time of A. and in order to defeat C. of his intereſt, A. aſſigned his term to a third perſon: And it was decreed by Lord Chancellor Elleſmere, that A. the executor and deviſee for life was a truſtee for B. and ſhould not be at liberty to deſtroy this remainder, but that the executor ſhould preſerve the leaſe, ſo as it might go according the the will, with the performance whereof the executor was intruſted. Moor 806.

So where the truſt of a term was deviſed to A. for life, remainder to B. It was agreed by all, that B. might aſſign over this truſt, which ſhews that a truſt of a term in remainder may be transferred over by deed. 1 Chan. Ca. 4.

One poſſeſſed of a term for years deviſed it to A. for life, remainder to B.——B. in the life-time of A. deviſed his remainder to J. S. who deviſed it over; and the queſtion was, Whether A. (the deviſee for life) being dead, the deviſee of J. S. ſhould have the term, or whether it ſhould go to the adminiſtrator de bonis non; and it was decreed for the deviſee of J. S. and the adminiſtrator de bonis non of B. was directed to aſſign over the term to him. 1 Peer Will. 572.

And in the caſe of Theobald v. Duffay in the houſe of Lords, March 1729-30; it was (inter alia) determined that a poſſibility of a term is aſſignable for a good conſideration.

A duty uncertain at firſt, which on a condition precedent is to he made certain afterwards, is but a poſſibility, which cannot be releaſed. 5 Co. 702. 2 Mod. 281.

As a nominæ pœnæ waiting on a rent which cannot be releaſed till the rent is behind, as the non-payment of the rent makes the nominæ pœnæ a duty. Yelv. 215. Brownl. 116.

So if a man covenants to pay 10 l. on the birth of a child, the covenantor cannot be releaſed of the 10 l. it reſting merely in contingency whether ſuch child will ever be born or not. Yelv. 192.

So if an award be, that on plaintiff's delivering defendant, by a certain day, a load of háy, defendant ſhall pay him 10 l. in this caſe the 10 l. cannot be releaſed before the day, for it reſts merely in poſſibility and contingency, whether the money ſhall ever be paid, for it becomes a duty on delivery of the hay only, and not before. Yelv. 215.

In debt on bond againſt defendant as adminiſtrator, &c. defendant pleaded a releaſe, whereby the plaintiff, reciting there were ſeveral controverſies between defendant and him about a legacy and the right of adminiſtration, releaſes to defendant all his right, title, intereſt and demand of, in, and to the perſonal eſtate of the inteſtate; and on demurrer this was held to be no plea; and a difference was taken by Holt, between a releaſe of all demands to the perſon of the obligor or adminiſtrator, and a releaſe of all demands to the perſonal eſtate of the obligor or adminiſtrator; that the laſt will not diſcharge the bond as the other may, becauſe the bond does not give any right or demand upon the perſonal eſtate, &c. until judgment and execution ſued. Salk. 575. 2 Ld. Raym. 786.

If A. promiſes B. in conſideration that he will ſell to his ſon, certain merchandize at ſuch a price, that if his ſon does not pay it at the feaſt of St. Michael next enſuing, he himſelf will pay it; and before Michaelmas A. releaſes all actions and demands to him who made the promiſe; this ſhall not releaſe the aſſumpſit, for till Michaelmas it cannot be known whether his ſon will have paid it or not, and, 'till default by him, the other is not bound to pay it, ſo it is a mere contingency till Michaelmas, which cannot be releaſed. 2 *Rol. Relegation, (Relegatio) A baniſhing, or ſending away; as abjuration is forſwearing the realm for ever, ſo relagation is baniſhment for a time only. Co. Lit. 133.

Relief, (Relevamen, but in Domeſday, Relevatio, relevium) Signifies a certain ſum of money which the tenant, holding by knight's ſervice, grant ſerjeanty, or other tenure, (for which homage or legal ſervice is due) and being at full age at the death of his anceſtor paid unto his lord at his entrance. Mag. Chart. cap. 2. and 31 Eliz. 1. ſtat. 1.

Bracton, lib. 2. c. 36. affirms, That it is called a relief, Quia hæreditas quæ jacens fuit per anteceſſoris deceſſum relevatur in manus hæredum, & propter factum relevationem, facienda erit ab hærede quædam præſtatio quæ dicitur relevium; and Britton, c. 69. Of this alſo ſpeaks the Grand Cuſtumary of Normandy, c. 34.

Skene de verbor. ſignif. verb. Relevium, ſaith, Relief, is a French word, from the Latin relevare, which is to relieve or take up that which is fallen; for it is given by the tenant or vaſſal who is of perfect age, after the expiring of the wardſhip to his ſuperior lord, of whom he held his lands by knight-ſervice, that is, by ward and relief: For, by payment thereof, he relieves, and, as it were, raiſeth up again his lands after they were fallen down into his ſuperior's hands, by reaſon of wardſhip, &c. See ſtat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24.

Relief is otherwiſe thus explained. viz. A feudatory or beneficiary eſtate in lands was at firſt granted only for life; and after death of the vaſſal it returned to the chief lord, for which reaſon it was called feudum caducum, viz. fallen to the lord by the death of the tenant; afterwards theſe feudatory eſtates being turned into an inheritance by the connivance and aſſent of the chief lord, when the poſſeſſor of ſuch an eſtate died, it was called hæreditas caduca, i. e. it was fallen to the chief lord, to whom the heir having paid a certain ſum of money, he did then relevare hæreditatem caducam out of his hands; and the money thus paid was called a relief.

This muſt be underſtood after the conqueſt; for, in the time of the Saxons, there were no reliefs, but heriots paid to the lord at the death of his tenant, which in thoſe days were horſes, arms, &c. and ſuch tributes could not be exacted of the Engliſh immediately after the conqueſt, for they were deprived of both by the Normans; and inſtead thereof, in many places, the payment of certain ſums of money was ſubſtituted, which they called a relief, and which continues to this day.

Relief reaſonable, or as it is ſometimes called lawful and ancient relief, is injoined by ſome law, or becomes due by cuſtom, and doth not depend on the will of the Lord, viz. In a charter of King John, mentioned by Matt. Paris, 178. Si quis comitum vel baronum noſtrorum, ſive aliorum tenentium de nobis in capite, per ſervitium militare, mortuus fuerit, & cum deceſſerit hæres ſuus plenæ ætatis fuerit, & relevium debeat, habeat hæreditatem ſuam per antiquum relevium: What that was we may read in the laws of William the Conqueror, c. 22. and of Henry I. c. 14. and before that time in the laws of Canutus, c. 97. viz. The relief of an earl was eight war-horſes with their bridles and ſaddles, four loricas, four helmets, four ſhields, four pikes, four ſwords, four hunting-horſes and a palfrey, with their bridles and ſaddles: The relief of a baron or thane was four horſes, two with furniture, and two without, two ſwords, four lances, four ſhields and an helmet, cum lorica, and fifty marks in gold. The relief of a vavaſor was his father's horſe, his helmet, ſhield, lance and ſword which he had at his death. The relief of a villain or countryman was his beſt beaſt, *&c. Religion, (Religio) Is virtue, as founded on reverence of God, and expectation of future rewards and puniſhments; a ſyſtem of Divine faith and worſhip as oppoſite to others. Johnſ. That habit of reverence towards the Divine Nature, whereby we are enabled and inclined to ſerve and worſhip Him after ſuch a manner as we conceive moſt acceptable to Him, is call *religion. All blaſphemies againſt God, as denying his being or providence, all profane ſcoffing at the Holy Scripture, or expoſing any part to contempt or ridicule, all impoſtures in religion, as falſly pretending to extraordinary commiſſions from God, and terrifying or abuſing the people with falſe denunciations of judgments, &c. All open lewdneſs groſsly ſcandalous, ſuch as was that of thoſe perſons who expoſed themſelves naked to the people in a balcony in Covent-garden, with moſt abominable circumſtances;—offences of this nature, becauſe they tend to ſubvert all religion or morality, which are the foundation of government, are puniſhable by the temporal judges with fine and impriſonment, and alſo ſuch corporal infamous puniſhment as to the court in diſcretion ſhall ſeem meet according to the heinouſneſs of the crime. 1 *Hawk. Religious Houſes, (Religioſæ domus) Are houſes ſet a-part for pious uſes, ſuch as monaſteries, churches, hoſpitals, and all other places where charity is extended to the relief of the poor and orphans, or for the uſe or exerciſe of religion.

Relinquiſhment, Is forſaking, abandoning, or giving over. It hath been adjudged, that a perſon may relinquiſh an ill demand in a declaration, &c. and have judgment for that which is well demanded. Style 175. In aſſiſe the count was of a meſſuage, and four acres of land in B. and the jury having a view only of the land, the demandant relinquiſhed his plaint to the houſe. Dyer 66. But on aſſiſe where the plaint was for fifty-three ſhillings and four-pence rent, no part of that rent could be relinquiſhed, becauſe a rent is an intire thing. Ibid. 61. In a writ of annuity, where the jury found the arrears, but did not aſſeſs damages or coſts, which could never be ſupplied by a writ of enquiry; plaintiff was admitted to relinquiſh and releaſe the damages, and had judgment for the arrears. 11 Rep. 59.

Reliques, (Reliquiæ) Are ſome remainders, ſuch as the bones, &c. of ſaints who are dead, preſerved by perſons living, with great veneration, as ſacred memorials of them: They are forbidden to be uſed or brought into England, by ſeveral ſtatutes; and juſtices of peace are empowered to ſearch houſes for popiſh books and reliques, which when found are to be defaced and burnt, &c. 3 Jac. 1. c. 26.

Remainder, (Remanentia) Is an eſtate limited in lands, tenements or rents, to be enjoyed after the expiration of another particular eſtate. For example, A man may let to one for term of his life, and remainder to another for term of his life. Lit. cap. Atturnment. And a remainder may be either for a certain term, or in fee-ſimple, or fee-tail, as appears by Broke, tit. Donee and Remainder, 245. and Glanvile, lib. 7. cap. 1. The difference between a remainder and reverſion, according to Spelman, is this, That by a reverſion after the appointed term, the eſtate returns to the donor, or his heirs, as the proper fountain; whereas by remainder it goes to ſome third perſon, or a ſtranger. Cowell.

Remainder is deſcribed to be a remnant of an eſtate in lands or tenements, expectant on a particular eſtate created together with the ſame, and at the ſame time, and is ſo expectant on the particular eſtate, that unleſs it can take effect when the particular eſtate determines, it is void. Co. Lit. 49, 143. 2 Co. 51. Moor 344. Vaugh. 269.

1. Of the ſeveral kinds of remainders, as diſtinguiſhed into remainders veſted, or in contingency and abeyance.
2. Of croſs remainders, or thoſe ariſing by implication and conſtruction of law.
3. Of what things a remainder may be made, or limited.
4. What words are ſufficient to create a remainder.
5. Of the continuance of the particular eſtate, and when the remainder is to commence.

1. Of the ſeveral kinds of remainders, as diſtinguiſhed into remainders veſted, or in contingency and abeyance.

If an eſtate be limited, either at Common law, or by way of uſe, to one for life, or in tail, remainder to the right heirs of J. S. who is then dead, this is a good remainder, and veſts preſently in the perſon who is heir at law to J. S. by purchaſe; and tho' a daughter be then heir at law, and after a ſon is born, yet ſhall the daughter retain the land againſt him; for ſhe being heir, and coming within the deſcription at the time when the remainder was limited, it then veſted and ſettled in her immediately as a remainder by purchaſe, and ſhall not by any accident after be defeated. 2 Rol. Abr. 415. 1 Co. 95, 103. Plow 56.

A contingent remainder, is, a remainder limited ſo as to depend on an event or condition, which may never happen or be performed; or which may not happen or be performed, till after the determination of the preceding eſtate; for if the preceding eſtate determine before ſuch event or condition happens, the remainder will never take effect. Under this definition, we may properly diſtinguiſh four ſorts of contingent remainders. Firſt, where the determination of the preceding eſtate is itſelf dubious and contingent. Secondly, where the contingency on which the remainder is to take effect is independent of the determination of the preceding eſtate. Thirdly, where the condition upon which the remainder is limited, is certain in event, but the determination of the particular eſtate may happen before it. Fourthly, where the perſon to whom the remainder is limited, is not yet aſcertained or not yet in being. Fearne 3 Edn. fo. 3, 4.

But if J. S. in the caſe firſt mentioned, be living at the time of the remainder limited to his right heirs, this puts ſuch remainder in abeyance or contingency, that is, it is in no perſon but in nubibus till the contingency happens, for it is not in the feoffor or donor, becauſe he has limited it out of him, and all remainders muſt paſs out of him at the time of the limitation, tho' they do not preſently veſt in the perſon intended; and in the right heirs of J. S. it cannot be, becauſe he cannot have heirs during life; ſo there is no perſon in rerum natura within the deſcription, to take it; therefore it is in the mean time in abeyance or expectancy, to veſt or not veſt, as the caſe happens; for if J. S. dies during the particular eſtate, then the remainder preſently takes place in his heirs; but if the particular eſtate determines by death or otherwiſe in the life of J. S. then ſuch remainder is become totally void, and can never veſt, but the eſtate ſettles again in the feoffor or donor, as if no ſuch limitation in remainder had been; and he becomes tenant to the præcipe, and is obliged to do the ſervices; and tho' J. S. die ſoon after, yet his heir can have no benefit by it, not being capable of taking the remainder when it fell. 1 Co. 135. Co. Lit. 378. a. 2 Co. 51. 2 Rol. Abr. 415. Plow. 28, 556. Poph. 74. Moor 720. 3 Co. 20. 10 Co. 50. Raym. 145. Pollex. 56.

But if there be no ſuch J. S. at the time of the limitation, tho' he be after born, and dies, during the particular eſtate; yet his heirs ſhall never have the remainder. So if a remainder be limited to A. ſon of B. in tail, &c. or to E. wife of D. where in truth there is no ſuch A. or E. though B. has a ſon called A. or D. marries one E. yet they can never take the remainder; becauſe, if there be ſuch perſons as the words of the gift import, there the remainder ought to veſt in them preſently, and they will never after be made capable of taking it; but if there be no ſuch perſon then in eſſe, none who come within that deſcription after can lay claim to it, becauſe the limitation was preſent to ſuch perſons; but a remainder limited primogenito filio, or proximo hæredi maſculo of A. or propinquioribus hæredibus de ſanguine puerorum, or ſeniori puero of A. or to the right heirs of A. there being then ſuch A. in eſſe, or to the wife A. ſhall marry; theſe are good remainders, and veſt when ſuch perſons come in eſſe as are within the deſcription; becauſe here appears no preſent regard for any perſon in particular, therefore if they anſwer the deſcription at any time before the particular eſtate determines, it is time enough; and ſo there is a diverſity between a remainder limited to one by name in particular, and ſuch remainder limited by deſcription or circumlocution, or between a general name and a ſpecial name. Co. Lit. 3. 1 Co. 66. 2 Co. 51. Hob. 33. Moor 104. Dyer 337. 2 Leon. 210. 1 Rol. Rep. 254.

A. makes a leaſe to B. for life of B. and after the death of A. to remain to B. and his heirs; this remainder is contingent, and cannot veſt preſently, for if A. ſurvives B. it is void; and becauſe otherwiſe the operation of livery would be interrupted during the life of A. for he cannot give himſelf any eſtate, his livery operating to paſs eſtates from him, not to give any to him who had the whole before; therefore during his life the operation of the livery muſt ceaſe, and by conſequence no remainder can take effect in virtue of that livery, which pro tempore being at an end, all that depended thereon ceaſes too, and can never after be revived; for the livery muſt carry out all the eſtates at once from the feoffor, and if he comes again into the poſſeſſion before they can all take effect, this breaks the force of the livery, and brings back again to him all that ſuch livery had taken out from him, and then they can never take effect but by a new livery; this is the reaſon of the common caſe, that one cannot give lands to another to begin after his death, becauſe, being to make livery preſently, if that cannot operate preſently, it can never operate at all, for it is a contradiction to give lands to one by a ſolemn livery, which is an act executed and works preſently, and yet by words to reſtrain that operation to a future time; but in the principal caſe, where A. dies firſt, there no interruption is of the livery, for B. had an eſtate for life by virtue thereof, and before that determines, the ſame livery, which carried the remainder in abeyance, for the uncertainty of its taking effect, does on A.'s death direct and ſettle, or bring down the remainder to B. and his heirs. 10 Co. 85.

If a leaſe be made to A. B. and C. for their lives, and if B. ſurvives C. then to remain to B. and his heirs, this remainder is in abeyance, becauſe though the perſon be certain, yet ſince it depends on C.'s dying before him, till that be known the remainder cannot veſt. So if a leaſe be made to A. for life, and after the death of B. who is a ſtranger, to remain to C. in fee, or to A. in fee, theſe remainders are in abeyance or contingency, and depend on B.'s dying before C. or A. for if he ſurvives them, the remainder cannot take effect. 3 Co. 20. 10 Co. 85. Co. Lit. 378.

If a leaſe be made to A. for life, remainder to the abbot of D. and his ſucceſſors, though the abbot be then dead, ſo as there is then no abbot at all, yet the remainder ſhall be good if an abbot be made before the death of A. So of a remainder to a mayor and commonalty, dean and chapter, prior and convent, &c. though there be then no mayor, dean or prior. So of a remainder to the biſhop of D. parſon of D. or other ſole corporation and his ſucceſſors; theſe remainders not being limited to them by name ſpecially, but to them generally, and ſo whoever comes within the deſcription before the determination of the particular eſtate, is capable of taking by virtue thereof, are good remainders in abeyance, &c. But if there be no ſuch corporations at the time of the limitation, then the remainders are totally void; and none created after, though by the ſame name, can take theſe remainders, not even if a patent be then paſſed to make ſuch corporation. Co. Lit. 264. Hob. 33. 2 Co. 51. 10 Co. 30. Moor 104. 1 Rol. Rep. 254. 2 Bulſt. 275.

2. Of croſs remainders, or thoſe ariſing by implication and conſtruction of law.

A. having iſſue five ſons, his wife being enſient, deviſed two thirds of his lands to his four younger ſons, and the child in ventre ſa mere if he were a ſon, and their heirs, and if they all die without iſſue male of their bodies or any of them, that the lands revert to the right heirs of the deviſor; by this deviſe the younger ſons were tenants in tail in poſſeſſion, with croſs remainders in tail to each other, and no part ſhall revert to the heir of the deviſor till all the younger ſons be dead without iſſue male of their bodies. Dyer 303.

But where one having iſſue three ſons, A. B. and D. deviſes one houſe to A. and his heirs, another to B. and his heirs, and a third to D. and his heirs, provided that if all his ſaid children die without iſſue, that then the meſſuages remain and be to his wife and her heirs; it was held by three judges, that on the death of one of the ſons without iſſue the wife might enter, and that here there were no croſs remainders from one ſon to another, becauſe being deviſed to them ſeverally by expreſs limitation, there ſhall be no greater eſtate to them by implication; but Lee Ch. J. doubted; and Doderidge ſaid, that though perhaps croſs remainders may be by implication where there is a deviſe to two ſeveral perſons, yet not ſo if to more; for when one dies there cannot be ſeveral eſtates by moieties to ſeveral perſons, and when another dies, remainder again to another, becauſe of the uncertainty and inconvenience; and that it was never ſeen in any book, where an eſtate is limited to divers, that there could be croſs remainders. Cro. Jac 655. 2 Rol. Rep. 281. 1 Vent. 224. Raym. 455. Fitzg. 97. 2 Jon. 82. Cart. 173. cited, and admitted to be law. As in 4 Leon. 14. Sed Qu. If later determinations have not been contrary to this doctrine?

One ſeiſed of lands in fee, by will deviſes Black Acre to A. his daughter, and her heirs, and White Acre to his daughter B. and her heirs; and if ſhe die before the age of ſixteen years living A. then A. to have White Acre to her and her heirs; and if A. die, having no iſſue, living B. then B. to have the part of A. to her and her heirs; and if both die, having no iſſue, then to J. S. and his heirs, and dies; B. attains her age of ſixteen years; and then dies without iſſue in the life of A. and firſt it was held by three juſtices againſt Dyer, that the daughters had an eſtate tail on the whole will, and not a fee determinable on a contingency ſubſequent; ſecondly, that by the words "if both die without iſſue," no croſs remainders in tail were created by implication, but that on B.'s death without iſſue, after ſixteen, J. S. ſhould have her part preſently without ſtaying till the death of A. without iſſue. Dyer 330. 1 Benl. 212. 1 Rol. Abr. 839. Vaugh. 267.

A. ſeiſed of lands in fee, by will deviſes all his lands in the county of, &c. to his two daughters B. and D. and their heirs, equally to be divided betwixt them; and in caſe they happen to die without iſſue, then to his nephew J. S. and the heirs male of his body, and dies; and it was adjudged, that on the death of B. one of the daughters of the other ſiſter took her moiety as a croſs remainder. Raym. 452. It is clearly agreed, that croſs remainders can only ariſe in laſt wills, and are not to be allowed of in any deed or conveyance. Co. Lit. 25. 1 Rol. Abr. 837. 2 Show. 136.

Richard Holden ſeiſed in fee, and having iſſue a ſon and three grandchildren, by his will deviſed part of his eſtate to his wife for her life, and the reverſion of ſuch part expectant on her death, and all other his freehold tenements, &c. he gave to his ſon Richard Holden for life, and after his death to his firſt and other ſons ſucceſſively in tail male, and for default of ſuch iſſue, and after the determination of the ſaid eſtates, he gave the premiſſes to his grandſon Richard Holden, and his granddaughter Elizabeth Holden, to be equally divided between them, and to the heirs of their reſpective bodies iſſuing; and for default of ſuch iſſue he gave the premiſſes to his granddaughter Anne in fee: the teſtator died ſeiſed, Richard the ſon died without iſſue male, whereupon Elizabeth and the grandſon entered, and Elizabeth died without iſſue generally; Anne Holden married John Jarvis; and the queſtion was, whether there were croſs remainders between Elizabeth and Richard the grandſon, or whether the moiety of Elizabeth ſhould go to Anne or to Richard? And it was reſolved, that there were no croſs remainders between them, becauſe here are no expreſs words, nor is there a neceſſary implication, without either of which croſs remainders cannot be raiſed; that the words, and for default of ſuch iſſue, being relative to what goes before, mean only, and for default of heirs of their reſpective bodies, and there it is no more than as if it had been a deviſe of one moiety to Richard and the heirs of his body, and of the other moiety to Elizabeth and the heirs of her body, and for default of heirs of their reſpective bodies remainder over; in which caſe there could be no doubt; and it was held that this caſe differed from the caſe ſupra, the word reſpective being in that caſe, and the firſt deviſees were the teſtator's daughters, and the remainder-man only a nephew; whereas, in the preſent caſe, Anne was as near to the teſtator as Richard. Comber v. Hill. Paſch. 7 Geo. 2. in B. R. and Mich. 8 Geo. 2. a like caſe in B. R. between Browne v. Williams.

3. Of what things a remainder may be made, or limited.

As to eſtates of inheritance, there can be no doubt but that the grantor, having a perpetual and durable intereſt in the eſtate, may ſhare and divide it, or grant as many remainders over as he thinks proper. 4 New Abr. 492.

But as to perſonal goods and chattels, it was formerly held, that they in their own nature were incapable of any limitation over, being things tranſitory, and by many accidents ſubject to be loſt, deſtroyed, or otherwiſe impaired, and the exigencies of trade requiring a frequent circulation thereof, in which they differ from lands and tenements which are permanent, therefore what is called an eſtate in lands, is termed property in perſonal chattels; wherefore it was held, that a grantor's deviſe of a perſonal thing to one, though but for an hour or minute, was a gift for ever; and an abſolute diſpoſition of the intire property. Bro. Deviſe 13. Plowd. 521. Dyer 74. 8 Co. 94.

Hence it was a long time before the courts of juſtice could be prevailed upon to have any regard for a deviſe over even of a chattel real, or a term for years after an eſtate for life limited thereon, becauſe the eſtate for life being in the eye of the law of greater regard and conſideration than an eſtate for years, they thought he, who had it deviſed to him for life, had therein included all that the deviſor had a power to diſpoſe of; but now ſuch remainders over are allowed under the name of executory deviſes, and are eſtabliſhed both in courts of law and equity, provided they tend not to a perpetuity, ſo as to make eſtates unalienable. 4 New Abr. 294.

Alſo a diſtinction was formerly taken between a deviſe of a perſonal chattel to one for life, with a remainder over, and of the uſe only; that in the firſt caſe the deviſee for life had the abſolute property, but not ſo in the ſecond, for that the firſt deviſee had not the property of the goods, but only a ſpecial intereſt in them, ſo that there ſtill remained a property which might be limited over; but this diſtinction is now exploded in conformity to the Civil law, and the deviſee in remainder is allowed in equity the like remedy in both caſes. Plowd. 521. Cro. Car. 346. 1 Rol. Abr. 610. March 106. Owen 33. 1 Ch. Ca. 129. 2 Vern. 245. 1 P. Wil. 1. 502, 651. And Black. Com. 2 V. 398.

But a deviſe of a term for years or perſonal chattel to one for a day or an hour, is a deviſe of the whole term or intereſt, if the limitation over is void, and it appears at the ſame time that the whole was intended to be diſpoſed of from the executors. 1 P. Wil. 666.

A. being poſſeſſed of a term for ninty-nine years, deviſed it to B. for life, and after to ſix others ſucceſſively, for their lives, if the term ſo long continue; and all the ſeven perſons being dead, and the term continuing, it was adjudged, that it ſhould revert to the executors of the teſtator, and that it did not veſt in the ſurvivor of the deviſees ſo as to tranſmit it to its repreſentatives. 1 Salk. 231. 1 Ld. Raym. 325.

A farmer deviſed his ſtock (which conſiſted of corn, hay, cattle, &c.) to his wife for life, and after her death to plaintiff. It was objected, that no remainder can be limited over of ſuch chattels as theſe, becauſe the uſe of them is to ſpend and conſume them; but the Maſter of the rolls ſaid the deviſe over was good, but added, if any of the cattle were worn out in uſing, defendant was not to be anſwerable for them; and if any were ſold as uſeleſs, defendant was only to anſwer the value of them at the time of the ſale; and an account was decreed to be taken accordingly. Abr. Equ. 361.

A. gives his ſiſter, by will, 10*l.* and directs that ſuch part of his perſonal eſtate, as his wife ſhould leave of her ſubſtance, ſhould go to the ſiſter; whatever the wife has not employed in that way, ſhall go over and be accounted for. 1 P. Will. 651.

But if a chattel real, money, goods, or other perſonal things, are deviſed to one, and the heirs of his body, or to one, and, if he dies without heirs of his body, remainder over; this remainder is totally void, and the courts of equity will not allow of a bill by the remainder-man to compel ſecurity, &c. or to have the money, &c. after the death of the firſt deviſee, but it ſhall go to his executors or adminiſtrators; for the firſt deviſee gives the abſolute property of a perſonal eſtate, as the like deviſe of a real eſtate before the ſtatute de donis gave the abſolute fee, upon which no limitation could be made further, and as the heirs are the repreſentatives to take the real eſtate, ſo are the executors to take the perſonal eſtate; and this is not within the ſtatute de donis, but remains as at Common law. 2 Vent. 349. 2 Vern. 600. 1 Salk. 156. Abr. Eq. tit. Deviſe.

If A. deviſe that his goods and furniture ſhall remain in his houſe to be enjoyed according to the limitations of his will, by thoſe intitled to the houſe, the firſt who would be tenant in tail of the houſe becomes abſolute owner of the goods. Saunders v. Saunders admitted.

Not only lands and tenements, but alſo rents, commons, eſtovers, or any other intereſt or profits in eſſe, wherein the grantor hath the abſolute property to him and his heirs, may be granted with remainder over. Plowd. 379. 9 Co. 48, 97.

So if one hath the office of park-keeper, foreſter, gaoler, ſheriff, &c. to him and his heirs, he may grant thoſe offices to one for life, remainder to another for life, &c. for omne majus continet in ſe minus, and as they are grantable over in fee, ſo may they be granted in ſucceſſion to one for life, with remainders over, &c. 9 Co. 48. 1 And. pl. 201.

It was formerly doubted whether there could be a remainder of a rent de novo, that is, whether a man ſeiſed of lands in fee, could thereout grant a rent-charge to one for life or years, remainder to another in fee, or in tail; and this doubt aroſe from the rent not having any exiſtence before it was created, conſequently no reverſion could be left to the grantor, out of which the remainder was to ariſe; but it hath been adjudged, and is now ſettled, that ſuch grant in remainder is good, the grantor having the abſolute intereſt in the eſtate out of which it is to ariſe, and his intention gives it being for the whole, out of which the leſſer eſtates are carved. But if he grant ſuch rent for life or years, to one without going further, he cannot after grant the reverſion thereof to another, becauſe he has no reverſion in him. 2 Rol. Abr. 415. 2 Co. 70, 76. 2 Vent. 240. 1 Lev. 144. 1 Sid. 285. 2 Salk. 577. 2 Lutw. 1225. Moor, pl. 100.

The King may grant an eſtate in an office to commence in futuro, or on a contingency, for he hath no inheritance in the office, as to the execution of it, but in point of intereſt only to grant. And there is a diverſity between offices in fee exiſting, and ſuch as are granted only for life, which being as a new thing created, may, as a rent de novo, be granted to commence in futuro. 4 Mod. 275. 1 Ld. Raym. 52. Carth. 350. Salk. 465. Comb. 334.

If one be created Baron, Viſcount, Earl, &c. by patent, and after, in the ſame patent, the ſame honour is granted to another in remainder, yet this operates as a new grant, and not as a remainder, for the King had no reverſion of that honour in him, though he had ſtill the ſame power of appointing one in ſucceſſion to take it, as he had of granting it to the firſt. Show. Par. Ca. 5, 11.

4. What words are ſufficient to create a remainder.

The word remainder is no term of art, nor is it neceſſary to create a remainder. So that any words, ſufficient to ſhew the intent of the party, will create a remainder; becauſe ſuch eſtates take their denomination of remainders more from the nature and manner of their exiſtence, after they are limited, than from any previous quality inherent in the word REMAINDER. To make them ſuch therefore, if a man gives land to A. for life, and that after his death the land ſhall revert, or deſcend to B. for life, &c. this is a good remainder, and may be pleaded as ſuch. 1 Rol. Abr. 416. Plowd. 29. 1 Rol. Rep. 319. Dyer 125.

So if lands are given to one and the heirs male of his body, and to him and the heirs female of his body, this limitation to the heirs female is a remainder; becauſe it is not to take place till the eſtate to the heirs male is ſpent. Co. Lit. 377. a.

So if lands are given to a widow, and to the heirs of the body of her late huſband, on her begotten. This is a remainder to the heirs of the body of the huſband; becauſe it cannot take effect till after the widow's death, who has an eſtate for life. Co. Lit. 26, 200. 2 Mod. 210.

So an eſtate limited to A. for life, or in tail, & poſt deceſſum ejus, or pro defectu talis exitus, to B. and the heirs of his body, is good, though there be not the word remainder. So if a leaſe be made to A. for life, and that after his death B. ſhall have the profit, this is a good remainder to B. Plowd. 159. Moor, pl. 54. Dyer 125. 1 Rol. Rep. 319. Cro. Eliz. 10, 742.

So a leaſe to A. for life, and that after his death his children ſhall have it, is a good remainder. 6 Co. 17. b. Raym. 83.

Nay, though an eſtate be limited expreſly as a remainder, yet if it be not ſo in conſtruction of law, the word remainder will have no force to make it ſuch. As if A. ſeiſed of lands in fee, he and B. levy a fine to D. in fee, who grants and renders to B. in tail, rendring rent to A. and if B. died without iſſue, tenementa præd' integre remanebunt to A. and his heirs; B. ſuffers a common recovery; A. diſtrains for his rent; and this was adjudged a reverſion, and as ſuch the rent paſſed with it to A. and was chargeable on the land in whoſe hands ſoever it came, by virtue of the contract which cannot be deſtroyed by the recovery, though the reverſion is thereby barred. Cro. Eliz. 727, 768, 792. Moor, pl. 795. Co. Lit. 299. Raym. 142.

But here it may be proper to take notice of a ſet of words ſometimes uſed in leaſes for years, which are ſo far a part of the limitation and deſcription of the firſt intereſt, that they cannot again be made uſe of to paſs any further intereſt in the ſame land. As if one make a leaſe to A. for eighty years, if he ſo long live, and if he happen to die within the term, then the lands for the reſidue of the term, or for ſo many years as ſhall be then remaining of the term, to go over to another, this limitation over is void; becauſe the time, or term, of eighty years was not abſolute to A. but was determinable after his death, and by his death the whole term is at an end; as if a leaſe had been made to him barely for his life, and then to limit the reſidue of a term, when nothing thereof remains, is repugnant and void; but ſome opinions incline, that a deviſe in ſuch a manner would be good, by reaſon of the intent of the party, and the equivocal ſignification of the word terminus, which may, though not ſtrictly, ſignify alſo the time or ſpace of eighty years, as well as the eſtate or intereſt for eighty years determinable as aforeſaid. But now if a leaſe be made to A. for eighty years, if he ſo long live, and if he die within the term, then the land to go over to another for the reſidue of the eighty years, this is a good remainder, becauſe though the term or intereſt be determined, yet the land, and part of the years, ſtill remain; theſe years may be made the meaſure of the ſucceeding intereſt, as any other number of years may be. Cro. El. 216. 1 Leon. 218. 1 Co. 153. 3 Leon. 195. 2 Rol. Abr. 415. Plowd. 198. Moor 247, 520. pl. 441. 1 And. 259.

J. S. ſeiſed of lands in fee by indenture demiſes them to A. for life, habendum to A. B. D. and E. his three ſons for their lives, and the life of the ſurvivor of them ſucceſſively; after the death of the latter it was adjudged in this caſe, Firſt, That if the ſons could take, it muſt be by way of remainder, they not being parties to the deed, and then it muſt be as joint-tenants, which could not be by reaſon of the word "ſucceſſive." Secondly, That they could not take in ſucceſſion, for the uncertainty whoſe eſtate or intereſt was to commence firſt. Hob. 313. Hut. 87.

A. by indenture makes a leaſe to B. for forty years, if A. ſo long live, and after his death to D. (who was no party to the deed) for one thouſand years, and then A. levies a fine and dies, and five years paſs after his death, and then plaintiff claiming under D. enters, &c. this is no remainder at all to D. for firſt, preſently it cannot veſt by reaſon of the leſſor's life interpoſing, therefore no remainder is veſted. Secondly, As a contingent remainder it cannot be good; becauſe then it ought to have a particular eſtate to ſupport it, and ought to be in abeyance, or contingency, to veſt or not veſt when that determines; but here the firſt leaſe is no ſuch particular eſtate; becauſe that reaches not to the commencement of the remainder, nor is the remainder limited with any regard to the particular eſtate; becauſe it is not to commence on the determination of that, but at a future time, viz. on death of the leſſor, and there is no contingency in the caſe, for it is to take effect at all events, on the death of the leſſor, be it before or after the end of the term, therefore it can be no other than a future intereſſe termini to begin after the death of the party who grants it, which being but for years it may well do; becauſe it enures by way of contract, and though the grantee there was no party to the deed, and therefore, as objected, could take nothing, yet it appears, that judgment was given for plaintiff; which proves, Firſt, That the grantee had an intereſt; Secondly, That this intereſt was not barred by the fine, and five years non-claim after the death of the grantor, not being touched, deveſted or turned to a right; Thirdly, That though the grantee was no party to the indenture, yet he might well take by virtue thereof, if he gets the indenture to make out his title, for the grantor cannot derogate from his own grant, or avoid his own acts Raym. 140.

5. Of the continuance of the particular eſtate, and when the remainder is to commence.

If a man makes a leaſe to A. for life, and that after the death of A. and one day after, the land ſhall remain to B. for life, &c. this is a void remainder, becauſe not to take effect immediately on the determination of the firſt eſtate, and ſo during that time there would be an interruption of the livery, and no tenant of the freehold, either to do the ſervices, or anſwer to the præcipes of ſtrangers. Plowd. 25. Raym. 144. that the law is nice to an inſtant. 1 Ld. Raym. 316.

A. ſeiſed in fee, deviſes his lands to B. eldeſt ſon of his brother D. for life, remainder to the firſt ſon of B. in tail, and ſo to all his other ſons in the ſame manner ſucceſſively, remainder to E. ſecond ſon of D for life, remainder to his firſt and other ſons in tail ſucceſſively, and dies; B. enters and dies, leaving his wife enſient with a ſon, then E. enters as in his remainder, and ſix months after the ſon is born; and all this matter being found ſpecially, it was adjudged in D. B. for E. againſt the ſon; Firſt, becauſe this being a contingent remainder to the ſon, and he not being born at the time when the particular eſtate determined, became void; Secondly, E. being the next in remainder, and having entred before the birth of the ſon, WAS IN BY PURCHASE, therefore ſhall not loſe his eſtate by a ſon born after; and this judgment was affirmed in B. R. for they held it plainly to be a contingent remainder, and not an executory deviſe, or a ſpringing remainder, for that would introduce a perpetuity not to be barred by a common recovery, becauſe it would be the ſame to all the other ſons; but here it being a contingent remainder, and not happening in time, it is gone for ever; they relied on Archer's caſe, but on a writ of error brought in parliament, the judgment was reverſed, becauſe, being in a will, they thought that by the meaning and equity thereof they ought not to diſinherit the heir for ſuch a nicety, and a will was otherwiſe to be expounded than a deed; therefore they conſtrued it an executory deviſe, or ſpringing remainder to the firſt and other ſons, and that the freehold ſhould veſt in E. till the ſon was born; but all the judges were much diſſatisfied with it, and did not change their opinions, but blamed the judge who permitted it to be found ſpecially where the law was ſo certain and clear. 4 Mod. 259. 3 Lev. 408. 1 Salk. 227. Carth. 309.

Now by the 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 16. Proviſion is made that after-born ſons and daughters, to whom remainders are limited in contingency, ſhall take in the ſame manner AS IF THEY HAD BEEN BORN IN THE FATHER'S LIFE TIME, though no eſtate be limited to truſtees to preſerve and ſupport ſuch contingent remainders, which act was made by reaſon of this caſe, and of the ſtrictneſs of the law herein.

Remanentes, (remanſi) Are words uſed to ſignify belonging to———As de hominibus ſive tenentibus qui huic manerio remanſi ſunt. Domeſday.

Remanet in Cuſtodia. Entry of an action in the Marſhal's book, by reman. cuſtod. where a man is actually in cuſtody, is a good commencement of an action in B. R. 3 Salk. 150.

Remedy, (Remedium) Is the action or means given by law for recovery of a right; and WHENEVER THE LAW GIVETH ANY THING, IT GIVES A REMEDY FOR THE SAME. There is a maxim, Lex ſemper dabit remedium. Stud. Compan. 177, 179.

Remedies are favourably extended, and ſometimes to be had without action or applying to the courts of juſtice, viz. by accord and agreement of the parties; by arbitrament; retaking goods wrongfully taken away; taking diſtreſſes for rent; entry on lands, to regain poſſeſſion, &c. Wood's Inſt. 528, 529, 530.

Remembrancers, (Rememoratores) Formerly called Clerks of the Remembrance, are officers of the Exchequer; of which there are three, diſtinguiſhed by the names of the King's Remembrancer, the Lord Treaſurer's Remembrancer, and the Remembrancer of Firſt Fruits: Upon whoſe charge it lies, to put the Lord Treaſurer and the Juſtices of that court in remembrance of ſuch things as are to be called on and dealt in for the King's benefit.

The King's Remembrancer enters in his office all recognizances taken before the Barons for any of the King's debts, for appearances, &c. and he takes all bonds for ſuch debts, and makes out proceſs for breach of them; alſo he writes proceſs againſt the Collectors of Cuſtoms, Subſidies, Exciſe, and other public payments for their accounts: All informations on penal ſtatutes are entered and ſued in his office; and he makes the bills of compoſition on penal laws, and takes the ſtallment of debts: And all matters of Engliſh bills in the Exchequer-Chamber remain in the office of this Remembrancer. He has delivered into his office the indentures, fines, and other evidences, which concern the paſſing any lands to or from the King. In Craſtino animarum yearly he reads in the court the oath of all the officers of the court, when they are admitted Writs of prerogative or privilege, for officers and miniſters of the court are made out by him, and commiſſions of Niſi prius, by the King's warrant, on trial of any matters within his office at the aſſiſes in the country he hath the entring of judgments, of pleas, &c. And all differences touching irregularities in proceedings ſhall be determined by the King's Remembrancer; who is to ſettle the ſame if he can, and give coſts where he finds the fault; but if not, the court is to determine it, &c.

By order of court, his Majeſty's Remembrancer, or his deputy, are diligently to attend in court, and to give an account touching any proceedings as they ſhall be required; and they enter the rules and orders of the court.

The Treaſurer's Remembrancer iſſues out proceſs of fieri facias and extents, for debts to the King; and againſt ſheriffs, eſcheators, &c. not accounting, he takes the accounts of all ſheriffs, and makes the record, whereby it appears whether ſheriffs and other accountants pay their profers due at Eaſter and Michaelmas; and he makes another record, whether ſheriffs and other accountants keep their days prefixed: There are are alſo brought into his office all the accounts of cuſtomers, controllers, and accountants, to make entry thereof on record. All eſtreats of fines, iſſues and amerciaments, ſet in any of the courts at Weſtminſter, or at the aſſiſes or ſeſſions, are certified into his office; and by him delivered to the clerk of the eſtreats to make out proceſs on them; and he may iſſue proceſs for diſcovery of tenures; and all ſuch revenue as is due to the crown by reaſon thereof, &c.

The Remembrancer of the Firſt Fruit's office is to take all compoſitions, and bonds for payments of firſt fruits and tenths; he makes proceſs againſt all ſuch perſons as do not pay the ſame. Stat. 35 Eliz. cap. 5. 5 R. 2. c. 14. 37 Ed. 3. c. 4.

Remitter, (from the Lat. remittere, to reſtore or ſend back) Is where a man hath two rights or titles to land, and he comes to land by the laſt title, but that proving defective, he is reſtored to and judged in by force of his elder or ſurer title, by operation of law. Lit. 659. Co. Lit. 347.

The reaſon of this invention of the law, is IN FAVOUR OF RIGHT; and that title which is firſt and moſt ancient, is always preferred. Dyer 68. Finch's Law 119.

In Remitters to reſtore rights, the firſt intereſt which works ſuch Remitter, muſt be a right, and not a title of entry; and there can be no Remitter before an entry. Co. Lit. 348. 2 Bulſt. 29.

It is a rule, that Remitter ſhall not be, where there is not both an action and a right, with a deſcent of the poſſeſſion of the eſtate to the ſame party that is to be remitted: Nor may it be, when the party comes to his laſt title by his own wrong, or any folly of his own; or on a void eſtate. Co. Lit. 347, 353.

If land deſcend to him who has right to it before, he ſhall be remitted to his better and more ancient title, if he will: And a remitter muſt be to a precedent right; for regularly to every remitter there are two incidents, viz. AN ANCIENT RIGHT, AND A DEFEASIBLE ESTATE OF FREEHOLD COMING TOGETHER. Doct. & Stud. c. 9. Wood's Inſt. 528.

Tenant in tail makes a feoffment in fee on condition, and dieth, and his iſſue being within age enters for the condition broken by virtue of the feoffment; he ſhall be firſt in as tenant in fee-ſimple, and be remitted as heir to his father: But if the heir be of age, he ſhall not be remitted; but is to bring his writ of formedon againſt the feoffee. Co. Lit. 202, 349. And if tenant in tail infeoff his ſon or heir apparent, who is within age and after dies, that is a remitter to the heir: Though, if he were at full age at the time of ſuch feoffment, it is no remitter, becauſe it was his folly, that bneig of full age would take ſuch a feoffment. Lit. 655.

If a huſband alien lands which he hath in right of his wife, and after take an eſtate again to him and his wife for their lives, this is a remitter to the wife, for the alienation is the act of the huſband, and and not of the woman; yet if the alienation be by fine in a court of record, ſuch a taking again afterwards to the huſband and wife ſhall not make the wife to be in her remitter, ſhe being excluded by the fine for ever. Terms de Ley.

Lands are given to a man and his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies; and after the huſband aliens the land in fee, and then takes back an eſtate to him, and his wife for their lives; here they will be both remitted: But if he take an eſtate again to himſelf for life, remitter will not be allowed againſt his own alienation. Co. Lit. 354.

When the entry of a perſon is lawful, and he takes an eſtate in the land for life; or in fee, &c. (except it be by matter of record, or otherwiſe to conclude or eſtop him) he ſhall be remitted. Co. Lit. 363. And a remitter to one in poſſeſſion, may be a remitter to another in remainder; if the remainder be not bound, which eſtops it. Cro. Car. 145.

If there be tenant in tail, remainder in fee to A. B. and the tenant in tail diſcontinueth, and takes back an eſtate in fee; and then deviſes the lands to his wife for life, with remainder to W. R. for years, remainder to the ſame A. B. in fee, and dies, and his wife enters and dies: It has been held, that he in remainder in fee may enter and avoid the term for years to W. R. becauſe he is remitted to his firſt remainder in fee; and a remitter avoids a leaſe for years, without entry. Noy 48.

A father was tenant for life, remainder to his ſon for life, remainder to the right heirs of the body of the father; he and his ſon conveyed the lands to the uncle in fee, who died without iſſue, ſo that the ſon, who was heir in tail to the father, was now heir at law to the uncle, and the fee deſcended on him; the wife of the uncle brought dower, but the ſon being remitted to his former eſtate, no dower accrued to the wife, for the eſtate of which ſhe claims dower is gone. 1 Leon. 37. 9 Rep. 136.

Lands were purchaſed by a man, and ſettled on himſelf and his wife in tail, and they had iſſue two ſons; then he made a feoffment to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder in fee to his ſecond ſon: The wife after his death entered, and made a feoffment to the iſſue of the ſecond ſon; and then the eldeſt ſon entered for a forfeiture, on the Stat. 11 H. 7. cap. 20. and it was adjudged a forfeiture, by reaſon the wife having two titles, one as tenant in tail, the other as tenant for life, by her entry ſhe is remitted to her eſtate for life, ſo that the feoffment made by her is a forfeiture of her eſtate. Sid. 63. 3 Nelſ Abr 100.

If land be given to a woman in tail, the remainder to another and a third in tail, remainder to a fourth in fee; the feme takes huſband, and he diſcontinues the lands in fee, and after an eſtate is made to the huſband and wife for their lives, or other eſtate: This is a remitter to all in remainder, and if ſhe die without iſſue, they may enter; and ſo it is of them who have the reverſion after ſuch entails. Lit. Sect. 673.

Where a perſon lets land for term of life to another, who granteth it away in fee; if the alienee make an eſtate to the leſſor, it will be a remitter to him, becauſe his entry is lawful. Ibid. 694.

If one be diſſeiſed, and the diſſeiſor makes a feoffment to the diſſeiſee; in this caſe the diſſeiſee may be remitted to his elder title, or he may chooſe to take by the feoffment; and if it be with warranty, he may if he will make uſe of the warranty. 1 H. 7. 20. 3 Shep. Abr. 237.

Tenant in tail hath two ſons, and leaſes the land intailed to his elder ſon for life, remainder to his youngeſt ſon; it is no remitter to the eldeſt: But if he die without iſſue of his body, the youngeſt ſon ſhall be remitted. Lit. 682.

If tenant in tail make a feoffment to the uſe of himſelf and his heirs, he ſhall not be remitted; but his iſſue ſhall. 3 Nelſ. 100. On remitter of iſſue in tail, leaſes and other charges on the lands are avoided. Litt. 659. 660.

Renant, Or rather reniant, i. e. negans, from the Fr. renier negare, to deny or refuſe. 32 H. 8. cap. 2.

Render, (Fr. rendre viz. reddere) Signifies to yield, give again, or return.

This word is uſed in levying a fine, which is either ſingle, where nothing is rendered back by the cogniſee; or double, when it contains a grant and render back again of the land, &c. to the cogniſor. Weſt's Symb.

Renovant, (from renovo) To renew or make again: A parſon ſued one for tithes, to be paid of things renovant, &c. Cro. Jac. 430.

Rent, (redditus in Latin, from redeundo, becauſe, as Fleta tells us, Retroit & quotannis redit. Lib. 3. c. 14.) Signifies with us a ſum of money, or other conſideration ISSUING YEARLY out of lands or tenements. Plowden 132, 138, 141.

2. Statutes concerning rent.
3. Of recovering and demanding rent, and in what caſes a demand is neceſſary.
4. Of the time of demanding rent, and the place where the demand is to be made.

1. Of the ſeveral ſorts of rent.

There are three ſeveral ſorts, viz. rent-ſervice, rent-charge and rent-ſeck.

Rent-ſervice is, where a man holds his lands of his lord by fealty and certain rent, or by fealty-ſervice, and certain rent. Litt. lib. 2. cap. 12. Or that which a man making a leaſe to another for term of years, reſerveth yearly to be paid him for them. In the terms of the law, this reaſon is given for it, becauſe it is at his pleaſure either to diſtrain, or bring an action of debt.

Rent-charge is, where man makes over his eſtate to another, by deed indented, either in fee, or fee-tail, or for term of life, yet reſerves to himſelf, by the ſame indenture, a ſum of money yearly to be paid to him, with clauſe of diſtreſs for non-payment. See Littleton ubi ſupra.

Rent-ſeck, otherwiſe a dry rent, is that, which a man, making over his eſtate by deed indented, reſerveth yearly to be paid him, without clauſe of diſtreſs mentioned in the indenture. Lit. ibid. See the difference between a rent and an annuity in Doctor and Student, and Cowell.

Littleton deſcribes a rent-ſervice to be where the tenant holdeth land of his lord by fealty and certain rent, or by other ſervices and certain rent. Litt. Sect. 213.

The ſervices are of two ſorts, either expreſſed in the leaſe or contract, or raiſed by implication of law. When the ſervices are expreſſed in the contract, the quantum muſt be either certainly mentioned, or be ſuch as by reference to ſomething elſe may be reduced to a certainty; for if the leſſor's demands be uncertain, it is impoſſible to give him an adequate ſatisfaction or compenſation for them, as the jury cannot determine what injury he has ſuſtained. Co. Lit. 96. a. Stil. 397. 2 Ld. Raym. 1160.

The ſervices implied are ſuch as the law obliges the tenant to perform when there are none contracted for in the grant; and theſe are more or leſs according to the duration of the gift; as at Common law, before the ſtatute Quia emptores terrarum, if the tenant made a feoffment in fee without any reſervation of ſervices, the feoffee held by the ſame ſervices by which the feoffor held over; becauſe the ſervices being an incumbrance on the land, which the tenant could not diſcharge without his lord's conſent, muſt follow the land into whoſe hands ſoever it comes. Co. Lit. 22, 23.

Where a man ſeiſed of lands grants by deed poll or indenture a yearly rent, to be iſſuing out the ſame land, to another in fee, in tail, for life or years, with a clauſe of diſtreſs; this is a rent-charge, becauſe the lands are CHARGED WITH A DISTRESS by the EXPRESS grant or proviſion of the parties, which otherwiſe it would not be. See Annuity.

So if a man make a feoffment in fee, reſerving rent, and if the rent be behind, that it ſhall be lawful for him to diſtrain, this is a rent-charge, the word reſerving amounting to a grant from the feoffee. Lit. ſect. 217. Co. Lit. 170. a. Plow. 134.

A rent granted for equality of partition by coparceners to another is a rent-charge, and diſtrainable of common right without clauſe of diſtreſs; and altho' there be no tenure of the ſiſter who grants it; for as the law for the conveniency of coparceners allows of ſuch grants, it muſt conſequently give a remedy to the grantee for recovery of it. Lit. ſect. 252.

A rent-ſeck is ſo called, becauſe it is unprofitable to the grantee, as, before ſeiſin had, he can have no remedy for recovery of it; as where a man ſeiſed in fee grants a rent in fee for life or years, or where a man makes a feoffment in fee or for life, remainder in fee, reſerving rent without any clauſe of diſtreſs, theſe are rents-ſeck; for which, by the policy of the ancient law, there was no remedy, as there was no tenure between the grantor and grantee, or feoffor and feoffee, conſequently no fealty could be due. Lit. ſect. 215, 218. Cro. Car. 520. Kelw. 104. Cro. Eliz. 656.

And it hath been ruled in equity, that where an annuity was deviſed by will to A. and the land ſubject to the annuity to B. that B. ſhould give ſeiſin of the rent-ſeck to A. that he might have remedy for recovery of it at Common law, it being the original intention of the gift, that the deviſee ſhould have ſome benefit from it. Moor 626. 3 Chan. Ca. 92.

So when a bill was brought for 3 l. for a rent of 5 s. arrear for twelve years, the equity of the bill being that the deeds by which the rent was created were loſt, conſequently no remedy for the rent at law; and the court, on plaintiff's proving conſtant payment till the laſt twelve years, decreed defendant to pay the arrears and growing rent; for ſince by payment it was evident plaintiff had a right to the rent, and that he could not without his deeds make a title at law, therefore the court decreed defendant to pay the rent, and ſo ſubjected his perſon, which poſſibly might not have been liable by the deed which created the rent. 1 Chan. Ca. 120. But ſee Stat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. in the next diviſion of this title.

2. Statutes concerning rent.

Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 37. ſect. 1. The executors or adminiſtrators of tenants in fee-ſimple, tenants in fee-tail, and tenants for term of life, of rent ſervices, rent-charges, rent-ſecks, and fee-farms, unto whom any ſuch rent or fee-farm be due, ſhall have an action of debt for ſuch arrears againſt the tenants who ought to have paid in the life-time of their teſtator, or againſt their executors and adminiſtrators, and diſtrain for the arrears on the land charged with the payment, ſo long as the lands continue in the ſeiſin or poſſeſſion of the tenant in demean, who ought to have paid the rent or fee-farm, or in the ſeiſin or poſſeſſion of any other perſon claiming only from the ſame tenant by purchaſe, gift or deſcent, in like manner as their teſtator might have done.

Sect. 2. This act ſhall not extend to any manor in Wales, whereof the inhabitants have uſed to pay to every lord at his firſt entry, any ſum of money for diſcharge of all duties and penalties wherewith the inhabitants were chargeable to any of the lord's anceſtors.

Sect. 3. If any man have, in right of his wife, any eſtate in rents or fee-farms, and the ſame be unpaid in the wife's life; the huſband after death of his wife, his executors and adminiſtrators, ſhall have action of debt for the arrears, or may diſtrain.

Sect. 4. If any have any rents or fee-farms for term of life of any other perſon, and the rent, &c. be unpaid in the life of ſuch perſon, and after the ſaid perſon doth die; he to whom the rent or fee-farm is due, his executors and adminiſtrators, ſhall have an action of debt, or diſtrain for the ſame.

Stat. 8 Ann. cap. 14. ſect. 1. On any execution arrears of rent, not exceeding one year, to be paid, which the ſheriff is to levy and pay to plaintiff, as well as the execution money, the plaintiff paying the landlord.

Landlord dead, and after execution executed, adminiſtration is granted to A. he is not intitled to a year's rent. 1 Strange 97.

The adminiſtrator of the landlord may have an action againſt the officer for taking the goods in execution, and removing them from the premiſſes before the landlord was paid a year's rent. 1 Strange 212.

On motion on behalf of the landlord, the ſheriff was ordered to pay him his year's rent without deducting poundage. 1 Strange 643.

This ſtatute extends to the immediate landlord, and not to the ground landlord. 2 Strange 787. After the landlord had been paid a year's rent on one execution, another execution came in, and he moved to be paid another year's rent on the laſt execution, but was denied, for the intent of the act was only to continue a lien as to one year, and to puniſh him for his laches, if he lets more run in arrear. 2 Strange 1024.

Sect. 4. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon, having rent due on any leaſe for life, to bring an action for ſuch arrears, as on a leaſe for years.

Sect. 5. All diſtreſſes hereby impowered to be made, ſhall be liable to ſuch ſales, and in ſuch manner, as by 2 Will. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 5.

Sect. 6. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon having rent due on any leaſe for life, years, or at will, determined, to diſtrain for ſuch arrears, after determination of the leaſes.

Sect. 7. Provided, That ſuch diſtreſs be made within ſix calendar months after the determination of ſuch leaſe, and during the continuance of ſuch landlord's title, and during the poſſeſſion of the tenant from whom ſuch arrear became due.

Stat. 4 Geo. 2. cap. 28. ſect. 1. In caſe any tenant for life or years, or other perſon who ſhall come into poſſeſſion of any lands, &c. under or by colluſion of ſuch tenant, WILFULLY hold over after the determination of ſuch term, and after demand made in writing, for delivering poſſeſſion, ſuch perſon holding over ſhall pay DOUBLE the yearly value of the lands, &c. ſo detained.

Sect. 2. In all caſes between landlord and tenant, on half a year's rent in arrear, the landlord having a right by law to re-enter for non-payment, may, without any formal demand or re-entry, ſerve a declaration in ejectment; and in caſe of judgment, or nonſuit for not confeſſing leaſe, entry and ouſter, it ſhall appear that half a year's rent was due before declaration ſerved, and no ſufficient diſtreſs to be found, and that the leſſor in ejectment had power to re-enter; the leſſor in ejectment ſhall recover judgment and execution, not to bar the right of any mortgagee of ſuch leaſe, who ſhall not be in poſſeſſion, ſo as ſuch mortgagee, within ſix calendar months after execution executed, pay all rent in arrear, and coſts and damages, and perform all covenants and agreements on the part of the firſt leſſee.

Sect. 3. Leſſees &c. filing a bill in equity ſhall not have an injunction againſt proceedings at law, unleſs they ſhall, within forty days after anſwer filed, bring into court ſuch money as the leſſors in their anſwer ſhall ſwear to be in arrear, over and above all juſt allowances, and coſts taxed, there to remain till the hearing of the cauſe, or to be paid to the leſſors on good ſecurity, ſubject to the decree of the court; and in caſe ſuch bill ſhall be duly filed, and execution executed, the leſſors ſhall be accountable for only ſo much as they ſhall really make of the premiſes from the time of their re-entry, and if the ſame ſhall happen to be leſs than the uſual rent reſerved, the leſſees ſhall not be reſtored to the poſſeſſion until they ſhall make up the deficiency to the leſſors.

Sect. 4. If tenant at any time before trial tender or pay into court all arrears with coſts, proceedings on ejectment ſhall ceaſe.

Sect. 5. All perſons have like remedy by diſtreſs, and impounding and ſelling the ſame, in caſes of rents-ſeck, rents of aſſize, and chief rents, as in caſe of rent reſerved on leaſe.

By 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſect. 10. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon lawfully taking any diſtreſs for rent to impound or ſecure the diſtreſs on ſuch part of the premiſſes chargeable with the rent as ſhall be moſt convenient, and to appraiſe, ſell and diſpoſe of the ſame on the premiſſes, as any perſon may now do off the premiſſes, by virtue of 2 Will. & Ma. ſtat. 1. cap. 5. or of 4 Geo. 2. cap. 28.

Sect. 14. It ſhall be lawful for the landlord, where the agreement is not by deed, to recover a reaſonable ſatisfaction for the tenements occupied by defendants, in an action on the caſe for the uſe and occupation of what was held; and if in evidence on the trial any parol demiſe, or agreement not by deed, whereon a certain rent was reſerved, ſhall appear, plaintiff may make uſe thereof as an evidence of the quantum of the damages.

Sect. 15 Where any tenant for life dies before or on the day, on which any rent was reſerved on any demiſe which determined on the death of ſuch tenant for life, the executors or adminiſtrators of ſuch tenant for life may in an action on the caſe recover of the under-tenants, if ſuch tenant for life die on the day on which the ſame was made payable, the whole, or if before ſuch a day, then a proportion, of ſuch rent, according to the time ſuch tenant for life lived of the laſt year, or quarter or other time, in which the rent was growing due, making all juſt allowances.

Sect. 16. If any tenant holding tenements at a rack-rent, or where the rent reſerved be full three fourths of the yearly value of the premiſſes, who ſhall be in arrear for one year's rent, deſert the premiſes, and leave the ſame uncultivated or unoccupied, ſo as no ſufficient diſtreſs can be had to countervail the arrears; it ſhall be lawful for two juſtices of peace (having no intereſt in the premiſes) to go upon and view the ſame, and to affix on the moſt notorious part notice in writing, what day (at the diſtance of fourteen days at leaſt) they will return to take a ſecond view; and if on ſuch ſecond view the tenant, or ſome perſon on his behalf, ſhall not appear and pay the rent in arrear, or there ſhall not be ſufficient diſtreſs on the premiſſes, the juſtices may put the landlord in poſſeſſion, and the leaſe to ſuch tenants, as to any demiſe therein contained only, ſhall become void.

Sect. 18. In caſe any tenant give notice of his intention to quit, and ſhall not accordingly deliver up the poſſeſſion at the time in ſuch notice contained, the tenant, his executors or adminiſtrators, ſhall pay to the landlord double the rent which he ſhould otherwiſe have paid.

Sect. 21. In actions of treſpaſs, or on the caſe, brought againſt perſons intitled to rents or ſervices, their bailiffs or receivers, or other perſons, relating to an entry on the premiſſes chargeable with ſuch rents or ſervices, or to any diſtreſs or ſeizure, ſale or diſpoſal, of any goods thereupon, it ſhall be lawful for defendants to plead the general iſſue; and in caſe plaintiffs become nonſuit, &c. defendant ſhall recover double coſts.

By Stat 4 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 10. Tenants ſhall not be prejudiced by payment of rent to a grantor before notice of the grant. And by ſtat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 52. ſect. 42. Arrears of rent due from farmers of revenue are excepted out of the general pardon.

3. Of recovering and demanding rent, and in what caſes a demand is neceſſary.

Here the material difference is between a remedy by re-entry, and a remedy by diſtreſs, for non-payment of the rent; for where the remedy is by way of re-entry for non-payment, there muſt be an actual demand made previous to the entry, otherwiſe it is tortious; becauſe ſuch condition of re-entry is in derogation of the grant, and the eſtate at law being once defeated is not to be reſtored by any ſubſequent payment; and it is preſumed that the tenant is there reſiding on the premiſſes in order to pay the rent for preſervation of his eſtate, unleſs the contrary appears by the leſſor's being there to demand it; therefore unleſs there be a demand made, and the tenant thereby, contrary to the preſumption, appears not to be on the land ready to pay the rent, the law will not give the leſſor the benefit of re-entry, to defeat the tenant's eſtate, without a wilful default in him; which cannot appear without a demand hath been actually made on the land. Co. Lit. 201. b. Hob. 207. 331. 5 Co. 56. Dy. 51. Plowd. 70. 7 Co. 56. Vaugh. 32. (This was at Common law, but now ſee Supra, the Stat. 4 Geo 2. c. 28. ſ. 2.)

So if there had been a nomine pœnæ given to leſſor for non-payment, the leſſor muſt demand the rent before he can be intitled to the penalty. Hut. 114. Hob. 207, 331. 7 Co. 56.

But where the remedy for recovery of rent is by diſtreſs, there needs no demand previous to the diſtreſs; though the deed ſays, that if the rent be behind, being lawfully demanded, that the leſſor may diſtrain, but the leſſor, notwithſtanding ſuch clauſe, may diſtrain when the rent becomes due. So it is, if a rent-charge be granted to A. and if it be behind, being lawfully demanded, that then A. ſhall diſtrain; he may diſtrain without any previous demand, becauſe this remedy is not in deſtruction of the eſtate, for the diſtreſs is only a pledge for payment of it, and taking of diſtreſs is a legal demand of the tenant to pay the rent, which was all that was required by the deed; and the tenant is not injured by the taking of the diſtreſs, becauſe on tender of the rent the pledges are immediately to be reſtored, or a writ of detinue leis after the quantum of the rent has been ſettled in a replevin; whereas in the caſe of re-entry or of the penalty, the tenant is really injured either by loſs of his eſtate, or the payment of a greater ſum than the rent, which cannot be reſtored on payment of the rent; therefore he ſhall not be puniſhed in ſuch caſes without a wilful default in him, which cannot otherwiſe appear than by the proof of a demand, which was not anſwered by the tenant. Hob. 207. Hut. 13, 23. Moor 883. 2 Rol. Abr. 426.

But this general diſtinction muſt be underſtood with theſe reſtrictions.

That if the King makes a leaſe, reſerving rent with a clauſe of re-entry for non-payment, he is not obliged to make any demand previous to his re-entry, but the tenant is obliged to pay his rent for the preſervation of his eſtate, becauſe it is beneath the King to attend his ſubject to demand his rent. 4 Co. 73. 5 Co. 56. Latch 28. Moor 152. Dyer 87, 88.

But this exception is not to be extended to the dutchy lands though they be in the hands of the King, for the King muſt make a demand before he can re-enter into ſuch lands; but this is by the 1 H. 4. which provides, that, when the dutchy lands come to the King, they ſhall not be under ſuch government and regulations as the demeſnes and poſſeſſions belonging to the crown. Moor 149, 160.

So if a prebend make a leaſe, rendering rent, and if the rent be arrear and demanded, that it ſhall be lawful for the prebend to re-enter; if the reverſion in this caſe comes to the King, the King muſt in this caſe demand the rent, though he ſhall be by his prerogative excuſed of an implied demand; for the implied demand is the act of the law, the other, the expreſs agreement of the parties, which the King's prerogative ſhall not defeat; therefore in caſe of the King, if he makes a leaſe, reſerving rent, with a proviſo, that if the rent be in arrear for ſuch a time (being lawfully demanded, or demanded in due form) that then the leaſe ſhall be void; it ſeems that not only the patentee of the reverſion in this caſe, but alſo the King himſelf, whilſt he continues the reverſion in his own hands, is obliged to make an actual demand by reaſon of the expreſs agreement for that purpoſe. Dyer 87, 210.

But if the King, in caſes where he need not make a demand, aſſigns over the reverſion, the patentee cannot enter for non-payment, without a previous demand, becauſe the privilege is inſeparably annexed to the perſon of the King. 4 Co. 73. Moor 404. Cro. Eliz. 462. Dyer 87.

Another exception is, where the rent is payable at a place off the land, with a clauſe that if the rent be behind, being lawfully demanded at the place off the land, or where the clauſe is, that if the rent be behind, being lawfully demanded of the perſon who is to pay it, that then he may diſtrain; in theſe caſes, tho' the remedy be by diſtreſs only, yet the grantee cannot diſtrain without a previous demand: becauſe here the diſtreſs and demand being not complicate, but different acts, to be performed at different places and times, the demand muſt be previous to the diſtreſs; for diſtreſs is an act of grace, not of common right, and therefore muſt be uſed in the manner that it is given. Hob. 208. 2 Rol. Abr. 426. Moor 883. Brownl. 171. and vid. Hutt. 23. cont'.

But where the clauſe is no more than that if the rent be behind, being lawfully demanded, (without ſaying at any place off the land, or of the perſon of the grantor) that then the grantee may diſtrain, there needs no actual demand, becauſe here the diſtreſs and demand is but one complicate act, the one included in the other, and all done at one time and place, viz. on the land; for the diſtreſs is in itſelf a lawful demand, therefore needs no actual demand previous to it; becauſe all that was required by the deed was a lawful demand, which the diſtreſs in its own nature is. 2 Rol. Abr. 426. Hob. 208. and ſee Dyer 348.

And there ſeems to have been formerly another exception admitted, that where the remedy was by way of entry for non-payment, that yet there needed no demand, if the rent were made payable at any place off the land; becauſe they looked on the money payable off the land to be in nature of a ſum in groſs, which the tenant had at his own peril undertaken to pay; but this opinion has been intirely exploded, for THE PLACE OF PAYMENT DOES NOT CHANGE THE NATURE OF THE SERVICE, but it remains in its nature a rent, as much as if it had been made payable on the land; therefore the preſumption is, that the tenant was there to pay it, unleſs it be overthrown by the proof of a demand, and without ſuch demand, and a neglect or refuſal, there is no injury to the leſſor, conſequently the eſtate of the leſſee ought not to be defeated. Plow. 70. 4 Co. 73. Moor 408, 598. Cro. Eliz. 415, 435, 536. But vide ſupra 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſ. 2.

But when the power of re-entry is given to the leſſor for non-payment, without any further demand, there it ſeems that the leſſee has undertaken to pay it, whether it be demanded or not; and there can be no preſumption in his favour in this caſe; becauſe, by diſpenſing with the demand, he has put himſelf under the neceſſity of making an actual proof that he was ready to tender and pay the rent. Dyer 68.

There is another exception when the remedy is by diſtreſs, and that is, when the tenant was ready on the land to pay the rent at the day, and made a tender of it; there it ſeems there muſt be a demand previous to the diſtreſs, becauſe, where the tenant has ſhewn himſelf ready on the day by the tender, he has done all that in reaſon can be required of him; for it would put the tenant to endleſs trouble to oblige him every day to make a tender; it being altogether uncertain when the leſſor will come for his rent, when he has omitted to receive it the day he appointed by the leaſe for payment and receipt; wherefore as the leſſee muſt expect the leſſor, and be ready to pay it at the day appointed, or elſe the leſſor may diſtrain for it without any demand; ſo where the leſſor has lapſed the day of payment, and was not on the land to receive it, he muſt give the tenant notice to pay it before he can diſtrain; for the tenant ſhall be put to no trouble where it appears that he has omitted nothing on his part. Hob. 207. 2 Rol. Abr. 427.

And where the tender was made by tenant on the land at the day, there a demand on the land is ſufficient to juſtify a diſtreſs after the day; becauſe the demand in ſuch caſe is of equal notoriety with the tender, and by parity of reaſon the tenant ought to take notice of ſuch demand, as well as the leſſor of the tender on the land. Hob 207.

But if the tenant had tendred the rent on the day to the perſon of the leſſor, and he refuſed it, it ſeems by the better opinion, that the leſſor cannot diſtrain for that rent, without a demand of the perſon of the tenant; becauſe the demand ought to be equally notorious to the tenant, as the tender was to the leſſor. Hob. 207. 2 Rol. Abr. 427.

So if the ſervices by which the tenant holds be perſonal, as homage, fealty, &c. the demand muſt be of the PERSON of the tenant, becauſe this ſervice is only performable by the very perſon of the tenant; therefore a demand, where he is not, would be improper. Hut. 13. Hob. 207.

Again, if the rent be ſeck, and the tenant be ready at the laſt inſtant of the day of payment to pay the rent, and the grantor is not there to receive it, he muſt afterwards demand it of the perſon of the tenant on the lands before he can have his aſſiſe; becauſe the tenant, by the tender at the day, has done all that was required on his part; and if the grantee might have his aſſiſe, after ſuch tender on the day, without a demand of the perſon, the tenant might be made a diſſeiſor, and damages for the diſſeiſin laid on him without any wilful default in him; but in the caſe of a rent-charge, after ſuch tender of the tenant on the land, the grantee may afterwards demand the rent on the land, becauſe he has his remedy by diſtreſs, which is no more than a pledge for the rent; and this being to be found and taken on the land, the grantee need only demand his rent where he can find his remedy, which is on the land; but in this caſe if the grantee cannot find the tenant on the land to demand the rent, he may, on the next feaſt on which the rent is payable, demand all the arrears on the land; and if the tenant is not there to pay it, he has failed of his duty, and is guilty of a wilful default, which amounts to a denial; and that denial being a diſſeiſin of the rent, the grantee may have his aſſiſe, and by that ſhall recover the arrears. Cro. Car. 508. 7 Co. 57. Hob. 207. 2 Rol. Abr. 427.

But if there has been neither a tender of the rent, nor a demand of the grantee on the day, there the grantee may afterwards demand the rent on the land; becauſe the tenant having omitted to do his duty by a tender on the day, he is ſtill obliged to anſwer the legal demands of the grantee, which is well made on the land, becauſe the rent iſſues thereout; for where there is no tender on the day of payment, the rent is due and payable every day afterwards; therefore a demand in the ſame manner as the law requires is ſufficient; conſequently the non-payment, after a demand on the land, is a denial and diſſeiſin, for which the grantee may have his aſſiſe. Lit. ſect. 233. 7 Co. 57. 2 Rol. Abr. 427.

If a leaſe be made reſerving rent, and a bond given for performance of covenants and payment of the rent, the leſſor may ſue the bond without demanding the rent. Cro. Eliz. 332. Cro. Car. 76. Hob. 8.

If there be ſeveral things demiſed in one leaſe, with ſeveral reſervations, with a clauſe, that, if the ſeveral yearly rents reſerved be behind or unpaid in part, or in all, by the ſpace of one month after any of the days on which the ſame ought to be paid, that then it ſhall be lawful for the leſſor, into ſuch of the premiſſes, whereupon ſuch rents being behind is or are reſerved, to re-enter; theſe are in the nature of diſtinct demiſes, and ſeveral reſervations; conſequently there muſt be diſtinct demands on each demiſe to defeat the whole eſtate demiſed. Vaugh. 71, 72. But ſee ſupra 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſ. 2.

Alſo as to the neceſſity of a demand of the rent, there is a difference between a condition and a limitation; for inſtance, if tenant for life (as the caſe was by marriage ſettlement with power to make leaſes for twenty-one years, ſo long as the leſſee, his executors or aſſigns ſhall duly pay the rent reſerved) makes a leaſe purſuant to the power; the tenant is at his peril obliged to pay the rent without any demand of the leſſor; becauſe the eſtate is limited to continue only ſo long as the rent is paid; therefore for non-performance according to the limitation, the eſtate muſt determine; as if an eſtate be made to a woman dum ſola fuerit, this is a word of limitation which determines her eſtate on marriage Vaugh 31, 32. Vide Hob. 331. 2 Rol. Abr. 429. 2 Mod. 264. 3 Co. 64. See Dyer 87, 88. Noy 145. And the Stat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſupra.

4. Of the time of demanding rent, and the place where the demand is to be made.

The time for payment of rent, and conſequently for a demand, is ſuch a convenient time before the ſun-ſetting of the laſt day, as will be ſufficient to have the money counted; but if the tenant meet the leſſor on the land at any time of the laſt day of payment, and tenders the rent, that is ſufficient tender, becauſe the money is to be paid indefinitely on that day, therefore a tender on the day is ſufficient. Co. Lit. 202. a. Dalſt. 44. Sav. 253. 4 Leon. 171. 1 Saund. 287.

If a leaſe is made, rendring rent at Michaelmas between the hours of one and five in the afternoon, with a clauſe of re-entry, and the leſſor comes at the day about two in the afternoon, and continues to five, this is ſufficient. Cro. Eliz. 15. The demand may be by attorney. 4 Leon. 479. But the power muſt be ſpecial, for ſuch land and of ſuch tenant. Yelv. 37. 1 Brownl. 138. Demand muſt be proved by witneſſes. Dyer 68. Muſt be made of the preciſe ſum due. 1 Leon. 305. Sav. 121. Mo. 207.

If a leaſe be made, reſerving rent, on condition that if the rent be behind at the day, and ten days after, (being in the mean time demanded) and no diſtreſs to be found upon the land, that the leſſor may re-enter; if the rent be behind at the day, and ten days after, and a ſufficient diſtreſs be on the land till the afternoon of the tenth day, and then the leſſee takes away his cattle, and the leſſor demands the rent at the laſt hour of the day, and the leſſee does not pay it, and there is not any diſtreſs on the land; yet the leſſor cannot enter, becauſe he made no demand in the mean time between the day of payment and the ten days, which by the clauſe he was obliged to do. Cro. Eliz. 63. But ſee 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. Supra.

As to the place of demanding rent, we muſt obſerve the difference between a remedy by re-enty and diſtreſs; for when the rent is reſerved, on condition that if it be behind, that the leſſor may re-enter, in ſuch caſe the demand muſt be upon THE MOST NOTORIOUS PLACE on the land; therefore if there be a houſe on the land, the demand muſt be at the fore-door thereof, becauſe the tenant is preſumed to be there reſiding, and the demand being required to give notice to the tenant that he may not be turned out of poſſeſſion without a wilful default, ſuch demand ought to be in the place where the end and intention will be beſt anſwered. Co. Lit. 153, 201. 2 Rol. Abr. 428.

And it ſeems the better opinion, that it is not neceſſary to enter the houſe, though the doors be open, becauſe that is a place appropriated for the peculiar uſe of the inhabitant, into which no perſon is permitted to enter without his permiſſion, and it is reaſonable that the leſſor ſhall go no further to demand his rent, than the tenant ſhould be obliged to go, when he is bound to tender it; and a tender by the tenant AT THE DOOR of the houſe of the leſſor is ſufficient, though it be open, without entering; therefore, by parity of reaſon, a demand by the leſſor at the door of the tenant, without entering, is ſufficient. Dalſt. 59. Co. Lit. 201. 1 And. 27. 3 Leon. 4. and ſee Cro. Eliz. 15.

But when the demand is only in order for a diſtreſs, there it is ſufficient, it it be make on any notorious part of the land, becauſe this is only to intitle him to his REMEDY for his rent; therefore the whole land being equally debtor, and chargeable with the rent, a demand on it, without going to any particular part of it, is ſufficient. Co. Lit. 153.

Reparations. A tenant for life or years may cut down timber-trees to make reparations, although he be not compelled thereto; as where a houſe is ruinous at the time of the leaſe made, and the leſſee ſuffers it to fall, he is not bound to rebuild it, and yet if he fell timber for reparations, he may juſtify the ſame. *Co. Reparatione facienda, Is a writ which lies in many caſes; one whereof is where there are tenants in common or jointenants of a houſe, &c. which is fallen to decay, and one is willing to repair it, but the others are not: In this caſe the party willing to repair the ſame, ſhall have this writ againſt the others. *F. On an immaterial iſſue in a cauſe, repleader may be awarded; and repleader is to be had where the pleading hath not brought the iſſue in queſtion, which was to be tried: Alſo if a verdict be given where there was no iſſue joined, there muſt be a repleader to bring the matter to trial, &c. 2 *Lil. Abr. 123.

It was held, that, at Common law, a repleader was granted before trial, becauſe a verdict did not cure an immaterial iſſue; but that now a repleader ought never to be awarded before trial, becauſe the fault in the iſſue may be helped by the ſtatutes of jeofails: That if a repleader is denied where it ſhould be granted, or è converſo, it is error; and the judgment in repleader is general, *(viz.) Though a repleader is allowed after verdict; it has been adjudged not to be awarded after demurrer: (But a repleader hath formerly been granted after demurrer, and likewiſe after the demurrer argued) and that a repleader can never be awarded after a writ of error; but only after iſſue joined, &c. Latch 147. 3 Lev. 440. Mod. ca. 102. 7. Of the writ de returno habendo; of returns irrepleviſable, and in what manner the ſheriff is to return and execute ſuch proceſſes.

According to ſome, a replevin is, a remedy grounded and granted on a diſtreſs, being a re-deliverance of the thing diſtrained, to remain with the firſt poſſeſſor, on ſecurity (or pledges) given by him to try the right with the diſtrainer, and to anſwer him in a courſe of law. Co. Lit. 145.

According to others it is bringing the writ called replegiare facias by him who has his cattle or goods diſtrained by another, and putting in ſurety to the ſheriff, that, on delivery of the thing diſtrained, he will proſecute the action againſt the diſtrainer. *Co. We read of Canes replegiati, hounds replevied, in a caſe between the abbot of St. Albans and Geoffery Childwick, 24 Hen. 3.

Goods may be replevied by writ, which is by the Common law, or by plaint, which is by Statute law, for the more ſpeedy having again their cattle and goods.

Replevy is alſo uſed for bailing a man. Staundf. Pl. Cor. fol. 72, 74. and Weſtm. 1. c. 11 & 15. See Skene eod. verbo.

Replevin is re-delivering to the owner, (by the ſheriff) his cattle or goods diſtrained on any cauſe, on ſurety that he will purſue the action againſt him who diſtrained; and if he purſue it not, or if it be adjudged againſt him; then he who took the diſtreſs ſhall have it again, and for that purpoſe may have a writ of returno habendo. Co. Lit. 145. b. 4 Inſt. 139.

Replevin is a writ, and uſually granted in caſes of diſtreſs, and IS A MATTER OF RIGHT; ſo that if a man grants a rent with clauſe of diſtreſs, and grants further, that the diſtreſs taken ſhall be irrepleviſeable, yet they may be replevied; for ſuch reſtrant is againſt the nature of a diſtreſs, and no private perſon can alter the common courſe of the law. Co. Lit. 145.

In this writ, or action, both plaintiff and defendant are called ACTORS; the one, i. e. the plaintiff, ſuing for damages, and the avowant, or defendant, to have a return of the goods or cattle. 2 Bend. 84. Cro. Eliz. 799. 2 Mod. 149.

That the avowant is in nature of a plaintiff, appears, 1ſt, from his being called an actor, which is a term in the Civil law, and ſignifies plaintiff; 2dly, from his being intitled to have judgment de returno habendo, and damages as plaintiff; 3dly, from this, that plaintiff may plead in abatement of the avowry, conſequently ſuch avowry muſt be in nature of an action. Carth. 122. 6 Mod. 103. The avowant, being in nature of a plaintiff, need not aver his avowry with an hoc paratus eſt verificare, more than any other plaintiff need aver his count. Plowd. 263.

Nor ſhall have a protection caſt for him more than any other plaintiff. 2 Inſt. 339.

But though an avowry be in nature of an action, yet one tenant in common may avow for taking cattle damage feaſant. Cro. Eliz. 530.

Replevin is an action founded on the right, and different from treſpaſs. Carth. 74. Yelv. 148. Hob. 16. Cro. Eliz. 799.

It is now held, that as no lands can be recovered in this action, it cannot with any propriety be conſidered as a real action, though the title of lands may incidently come in queſtion, as it may do in an action of treſpaſs, or even of debt, which are actions merely perſonal. Finch's Law 316. and ſee Comb. 476. Fitzg. 109.

2. For what things a replevin lies.

It is a general rule, that plaintiff ought to have the property of the goods in him at the time of the taking: Not only a general property which every owner hath, but alſo a ſpecial property, ſuch as a perſon hath who hath goods pledged with him, or who hath the cattle of another to manure his lands, &c. is ſufficient to maintain a replevin, and in ſuch caſes either party may bring a replevin. Co. Lit. 145. Winch 26.

A replevin doth not lie of things which are feræ naturæ, as conies, hares, monkies, dogs, &c. but if things wild by nature are made tame, or are reclaimed, ſo long as they continue in THAT condition, they belong to the perſon who hath the poſſeſſion of them, and he may bring replevin; and the general rule herein ſeems to be, that A REPLEVIN LIES FOR ANY THING THAT MAY BY LAW BE DISTRAINED. 2 Rol. Abr. 430. Godb. 124.

A replevin lies of a leveret; for it has animum revertendi; for the ſame reaſon it lies of a ferret; but it is ſaid not to lie for a maſtiff dog, though an action of treſpaſs will. Br. Repl. 64. 2 Rol. Abr. 430. Sed. qu. Why will not replevin be for a maſtiff, the moſt uſeful, perhaps, of all the ſpecies.

But not of trees, or timber growing; nor of things annexed to the freehold, becauſe ſuch things cannot be diſtrained; yet replevin lies of certain iron belonging to the party's mill. F. N. B. 68.

So replevin doth not lie of deeds or charters concerning lands; for they are of no value, but as they relate thereto. Bro. Rep. 34.

Nor of money, or leather made into ſhoes. Moor 394. 2 Brownl. 139.

If a mare in foal, a cow in calf, &c. are diſtrained, and they happen to bring forth their young, whilſt they are in the cuſtody of the diſtrainer, a replevin lies for the foal, calf, &c. Bro. Repl. 41. F. N. B. 69. 1 Sid. 82.

Replevin lies for a ſhip; ſo for the ſails of the ſhip March 110. Raym. 232. Per Pollexfen Ch. J. replevin lies not for goods taken beyond ſea, though brought hither by defendant afterwards. 1 Show. 91.

3. Of the different kinds of replevins; out of what courts they iſſue, and of the power and duty of the ſheriff.

Replevin may be made either by original writ of replevin at Common law, or by plaint by the ſtat. of Marl. c. 21. Co. Lit. 145. F. N. B. 69.

By this ſtat. enacted 52 H. 3. it is provided, "That if the beaſts of any perſon be taken, and wrongfully withholden, the ſheriff, after complaint made to him thereof, may deliver them without let or gainſaying of him that took the beaſts, if they were taken out of liberties; and if the beaſts were taken within any liberties, and the bailiff of the liberty will not deliver them, then the ſheriff for default of thoſe bailiffs ſhould cauſe them to be delivered."

The miſchiefs before this act were the great delay and loſs the party was at, by having his beaſts or goods withholden from him; as alſo that when cattle were diſtrained and impounded within any liberty which had return of writs, the ſheriff was obliged to make a warrant to the bailiff of the liberty to make deliverance; and there was another miſchief when the diſtreſs was taken without and impounded within the liberty. 2 Inſt. 139. 13 Co. 31. To remedy which,

By this ſtatute the ſheriff, on plaint made to him without writ, may either by parol or precept command his bailiff to deliver the beaſts or goods, that is, to make replevin of them, and by theſe words (poſt querimoniam ſibi fact') the ſheriff may take a plaint out of the county court, and make a replevin preſently, which he is to enter in the court, as it would be inconvenient, and againſt the ſcope of the ſtatute, that the owner, for whoſe benefit the ſtatute was made, ſhould tarry for his beaſts till the next county court, which is holden from month to month. And by this act the ſheriff may hold plea in the county court on replevin by plaint, though the value be of 20 l. or above; and yet in other actions he ſhall only hold plea where the matter is under 40*s.* value. 2 Inſt. 139. 1 Keb. 205. Dalt. Sh. 430.

By the words of this law, Si averia capiant', vicecomes poſt querimoniam ſibi fact' deliberare poſſet; ſo that it becomes the ſheriff's duty on ſuch complaint, by parol or by precept to his bailiff, to replevy them, which precept may be given before any county court; but ſuch plaint is afterwards to be entered, and (as holden in Cum.) by the party who made the complaint, and not by the ſheriff. Cum. 591.

Replevins by writ iſſue properly out of Chancery, returnable into the courts of K. B. and C. B. at Weſtminſter. F. N. B. 68. Gilb. Diſtr. and Repl. 68. and vide Div. 5.

Replevins by plaint are made by the ſheriff by force of the above-mentioned ſtatute of Marleb. by which he is directed, on complaint made to him by the party, that his goods or cattle are diſtrained, to command his bailiff (which may be by parol or precept) to make deliverance; and which plaint may be taken at any time, and as well out of, as in court. Bro. Rep. pl. 4. Co. Lit. 145. 2 Inſt. 139.

Alſo it hath been agreed, that the hundred court, and courts of lords of manors, may by preſcription hold plea in replevin, ſo may incidently have power to replevy goods or cattle; but that, it ſeems, muſt be by proceſs of the court after a plaint entred, but not by parol complaint out of court. Carth. 380.

Therefore where in treſpaſs for taking goods, &c. defendant juſtified that the place where, &c. was a hundred, and time out of mind had a court of all actions, replevins, &c. grantable in or out of court, virtute cujus, &c. The queſtion was, If good or not? And the reaſon of the doubt was, becauſe the county court could not hold plea in replevin at Common law; but were enabled by the ſtatute of Marlebridge, which extends not to the hundred court, which is a court derived out of the county court; but per cur. clearly, Suppoſing they may grant them in court, yet they cannot preſcribe to grant them out of court. 2 Salk. 580. 5 Mod. 252. Skin. 674. Carth. 380. 1 Ld. Raym. 219.

The ſheriff is obliged to grant replevins in all ſuch caſes as they are allowed by law; and the officer who takes the goods by virtue of a replevin iſſuing for what cauſe ſoever, is not liable to an action of treſpaſs, unleſs the party in whoſe poſſeſſion the goods were, claims property in them; and note, that in all caſes of miſbehaviour by the ſheriff or other officers, in relation to replevins; they are ſubject to the controul of the King's ſuperior courts, and puniſhable by attachment for ſuch miſbehaviour. Carth. 381.

And though the ſheriff may grant replevins by plaint, and may proceed thereon in his county court, yet if any thing touching freehold come in queſtion, or ancient demeſne be pleaded, the ſheriff can proceed no further; nor can any ſuch proceedings be carried on in the hundred court, court baron, or any other court claiming a juriſdiction herein by preſcription. 2 H. 7. 6. 4 H. 6. 30. Co. Lit. 145. b.

So when the King is party, or the taking is in right of the crown, in theſe caſes the ſheriff is to ſurceaſe. Bro. Repl. pl. 3. 1 Brownl. 33.

It was ruled in the caſe of one Bradſhaw, that where an act of parliament orders a diſtreſs and ſale of goods, THIS is in nature of an execution, and replevin does not lie; but if the ſheriff grants one, yet it is not ſuch a contempt as to grant an attachment againſt him; and Powell Juſtice ſaid, He remembered a caſe in the Exchequer, where a diſtreſs was taken for a fee-farm rent due to the King, yet on debate no attachment was granted, though it was in the King's caſe. Trin. 12 W. 3. in C. B. Bradſhaw's caſe. See 14 Car. 2. c. 12.

And for the greater eaſe in bringing replevins, and as a duty incumbent on the ſheriff, it is enacted, by the 1ſt and 2d of Ph. & Mar. c. 18. "That the ſheriff ſhall at his firſt county day, or within two months after he receives the patent, depute and proclaim in the ſhire town four deputies to make replevins, not dwelling twelve miles diſtant from one another, on pain to forfeit for every month he wants ſuch deputy or deputies 5 l. to be divided between the King and the proſecutor."

When the ſheriff makes replevin he ought to take two kinds of pledges; plegii de proſequendo, by the Common law, and plegii de returno habendo, by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. c. 2. by which it is provided, "That ſheriffs or bailiffs from thenceforth ſhall not only receive of plaintiff pledges for purſuing the ſuit, before they make deliverance of the diſtreſs but alſo for return of the beaſts, if return be awarded; and if any take pledges otherwiſe, he ſhall anſwer for the price of the beaſts, and the lord that diſtrains ſhall have his recovery by writ, that he ſhall reſtore to him ſo many beaſts or cattle; and if the plaintiff be not able to reſtore, his ſuperior ſhall reſtore.

That if the ſheriff returns inſufficient pledges, he ſhall anſwer according to the ſtatute; for inſufficient pledges are no pledges in law; and ſuch pledges muſt not only be ſufficient in eſtate, viz. capable to anſwer in value, but likewiſe ſufficient in law, and under no incapacity; therefore infants, feme-coverts, perſons outlawed, &c. are not to be taken as pledges, nor are perſons politic, or bodies corporate. Co. Lit. 145. 2 Inſt. 340. 10 Co. 102.

In replevin the ſheriff did not return any pledges, and after iſſue joined and found, it was moved, if they could be put in by the court after verdict; and the court held they might, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. as before that ſtatute the court might take pledges on the omiſſion of the ſheriff; and a diverſity was taken between pledges for proſecuting, which were at Common law, and pro returno habendo given by this ſtatute; and the court held, that though on default of the ſheriff he was ſubject to the action of the party, that yet the taking of pledges by the court did not make the judgment erroneous. Noy 156.

A replevin by plaint was ſued in the ſheriff's court in London, and pledges were found de returno habendo ſi, &c. this plaint was removed according to their cuſtom into the mayor's court, and after into the King's Bench by certiorari, and their oyer of the certiorari being demanded, the party declared in B. R. on this a return was awarded, and on an elongat' returned, a ſcire facias went againſt the pledges in the ſheriff's court of London. On demurrer the queſtion was, whether, this caſe being removed by certiorari, the pledges in the inferior court are diſcharged, or whether they remain liable to be charged by this ſcire facias? It was adjudged, that the pledges were not diſcharged. Skin. 244. 2 Show. 421. Comb. 1, 2. 3 Mod. 56. But though an avowry be in nature of an action, yet one tenant in common may avow for taking cattle damage feaſant. Cro. Eliz. 530.

It is now held, that as no lands can be recovered in this action, it cannot with any propriety be conſidered as a real action, though the title of lands may incidently come in queſtion, as it may do in an action of treſpaſs, or even of debt, which are actions merely perſonal. Finch's Law 316. and ſee Comb. 476. Fitzg. 109.

2. For what things a replevin lies.

It is a general rule, that plaintiff ought to have the property of the goods in him at the time of the taking: Not only a general property which every owner hath, but alſo a ſpecial property, ſuch as a perſon hath who hath goods pledged with him, or who hath the cattle of another to manure his lands, &c. is ſufficient to maintain a replevin, and in ſuch caſes either party may bring a replevin, Co. Lit. 145. Winch 26.

A replevin doth not lie of things which are feræ naturæ, as conies, hares, monkies, dogs, &c. but if things wild by nature are made tame, or are reclaimed, ſo long as they continue in THAT condition, they belong to the perſon who hath the poſſeſſion of them, and he may bring replevin; and the general rule herein ſeems to be, that A REPLEVIN LIES FOR ANY THING THAT MAY BY LAW BE DISTRAINED. 2 Rol. Abr. 430. Godb. 124.

A replevin lies of a leveret; for it has animum revertendi; for the ſame reaſon it lies of a ferret; but it is ſaid not to lie for a maſtiff dog, though an action of treſpaſs will. Br. Repl. 64. 2 Rol. Abr. 430. Sed. qu. Why will not replevin be for a maſtiff, the moſt uſeful, perhaps, of all the ſpecies.

But not of trees, or timber growing; nor of things annexed to the freehold, becauſe ſuch things cannot be diſtrained; yet replevin lies of certain iron belonging to the party's mill. F. N. B. 68.

So replevin doth not lie of deeds or charters concerning lands; for they are of no value, but as they relate thereto. Bro. Rep. 34.

Nor of money, or leather made into ſhoes. Moor 394. 2 Brownl. 139.

If a mare in foal, a cow in calf, &c. are diſtrained, and they happen to bring forth their young, whilſt they are in the cuſtody of the diſtrainer, a replevin lies for the foal, calf, &c. Bro. Repl. 41. F. N. B. 69. 1 Sid. 82.

Replevin lies for a ſhip; ſo for the ſails of the ſhip March 110. Raym. 232. Per Pollexfen Ch. J. replevin lies not for goods taken beyond ſea, though brought hither by defendant afterwards. 1 Show. 91.

3. Of the different kinds of replevins; out of what courts they iſſue, and of the power and duty of the ſheriff.

Replevin may be made either by original writ of replevin at Common law, or by plaint by the ſtat. of Marl. c. 21. Co. Lit. 145. F. N. B. 69.

By this ſtat. enacted 52 H. 3. it is provided, "That if the beaſts of any perſon be taken, and wrongfully withholden, the ſheriff, after complaint made to him thereof, may deliver them without let or gainſaying of him that took the beaſts, if they were taken out of liberties; and if the beaſts were taken within any liberties, and the bailiff of the liberty will not deliver them, then the ſheriff for default of thoſe bailiffs ſhould cauſe them to be delivered."

The miſchiefs before this act were the great delay and loſs the party was at, by having his beaſts or goods withholden from him; as alſo that when cattle were diſtrained and impounded within any liberty which had return of writs, the ſheriff was obliged to make a warrant to the bailiff of the liberty to make deliverance; and there was another miſchief when the diſtreſs was taken without and impounded within the liberty. 2 Inſt. 139. 13 Co. 31. To remedy which,

By this ſtatute the ſheriff, on plaint made to him without writ, may either by parol or precept command his bailiff to deliver the beaſts or goods, that is, to make replevin of them, and by theſe words (poſt querimoniam ſibi fact') the ſheriff may take a plaint out of the county court, and make a replevin preſently, which he is to enter in the court, as it would be inconvenient, and againſt the ſcope of the ſtatute, that the owner, for whoſe benefit the ſtatute was made, ſhould tarry for his beaſts till the next county court, which is holden from month to month. And by this act the ſheriff may hold plea in the county court on replevin by plaint, though the value be of 20 l. or above; and yet in other actions he ſhall only hold plea where the matter is under 40 s. value. 2 Inſt. 139. 1 Keb. 205. Dalt. Sh. 430.

By the words of this law, Si averia capiant', vicecomes poſt querimoniam ſibi fact' deliberare poſſet; ſo that it becomes the ſheriff's duty on ſuch complaint, by parol or by precept to his bailiff, to replevy them, which precept may be given before any county court; but ſuch plaint is afterwards to be entered, and (as holden in Cum.) by the party who made the complaint, and not by the ſheriff. Cum. 591.

Replevins by writ iſſue properly out of Chancery, returnable into the courts of K. B. and C. B. at Weſtminſter. F. N. B. 68. Gilb. Diſtr. and Repl. 68. and vide Div. 5.

Replevins by plaint are made by the ſheriff by force of the above-mentioned ſtatute of Marleb. by which he is directed, on complaint made to him by the party, that his goods or cattle are diſtrained, to command his bailiff (which may be by parol or precept) to make deliverance; and which plaint may be taken at any time, and as well out of, as in court. Bro. Rep. pl. 4. Co. Lit. 145. 2 Inſt. 139.

Alſo it hath been agreed, that the hundred court, and courts of lords of manors, may by preſcription hold plea in replevin, ſo may incidently have power to replevy goods or cattle; but that, it ſeems, muſt be by proceſs of the court after a plaint entred, but not by parol complaint out of court. Carth. 380.

Therefore where in treſpaſs for taking goods, &c. defendant juſtified that the place where, &c. was a hundred, and time out of mind had a court of all actions, replevins, &c. grantable in or out of court, virtute cujus, &c. The queſtion was, If good or not? And the reaſon of the doubt was, becauſe the county court could not hold plea in replevin at Common law; but were enabled by the ſtatute of Marlebridge, which extends not to the hundred court, which is a court derived out of the county court; but per cur. clearly, Suppoſing they may grant them in court, yet they cannot preſcribe to grant them out of court. 2 Salk. 580. 5 Mod. 252. Skin. 674. Carth. 380. 1 Ld. Raym. 219.

The ſheriff is obliged to grant replevins in all ſuch caſes as they are allowed by law; and the officer who takes the goods by virtue of a replevin iſſuing for what cauſe ſoever, is not liable to an action of treſpaſs, unleſs the party in whoſe poſſeſſion the goods were, claims property in them; and note, that in all caſes of miſbehaviour by the ſheriff or other officers, in relation to replevins; they are ſubject to the controul of the King's ſuperior courts, and puniſhable by attachment for ſuch miſbehaviour. Carth. 381.

And though the ſheriff may grant replevins by plaint, and may proceed thereon in his county court, yet if any thing touching freehold come in queſtion, or ancient demeſne be pleaded, the ſheriff can proceed no further; nor can any ſuch proceedings be carried on in the hundred court, court baron, or any other court claiming a juriſdiction herein by preſcription. 2 H. 7. 6. 4 H. 6. 30. Co. Lit. 145. b.

So when the King is party, or the taking is in right of the crown, in theſe caſes the ſheriff is to ſurceaſe. Bro. Repl. pl. 3. 1 Brownl. 33.

It was ruled in the caſe of one Bradſhaw, that where an act of parliament orders a diſtreſs and ſale of goods, THIS is in nature of an execution, and replevin does not lie; but if the ſheriff grants one, yet it is not ſuch a contempt as to grant an attachment againſt him; and Powell Juſtice ſaid, He remembered a caſe in the Exchequer, where a diſtreſs was taken for a fee-farm rent due to the King, yet on debate no attachment was granted, though it was in the King's caſe. Trin. 12 W. 3. in C. B. Bradſhaw's caſe. See 14 Car. 2. c. 12.

And for the greater eaſe in bringing replevins, and as a duty incumbent on the ſheriff, it is enacted, by the 1ſt and 2d of Ph. & Mar. c. 18. "That the ſheriff ſhall at his firſt county day, or within two months after he receives the patent, depute and proclaim in the ſhire town four deputies to make replevins, not dwelling twelve miles diſtant from one another, on pain to forfeit for every month he wants ſuch deputy or deputies 5 l. to be divided between the King and the proſecutor."

When the ſheriff makes replevin he ought to take two kinds of pledges; plegii de proſequendo, by the Common law, and plegii de returno habendo, by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. c. 2. by which it is provided, "That ſheriffs or bailiffs from thenceforth ſhall not only receive of plaintiff pledges for purſuing the ſuit, before they make deliverance of the diſtreſs but alſo for return of the beaſts, if return be awarded; and if any take pledges otherwiſe, he ſhall anſwer for the price of the beaſts, and the lord that diſtrains ſhall have his recovery by writ, that he ſhall reſtore to him ſo many beaſts or cattle; and if the plaintiff be not able to reſtore, his ſuperior ſhall reſtore.

That if the ſheriff returns inſufficient pledges, he ſhall anſwer according to the ſtatute; for inſufficient pledges are no pledges in law; and ſuch pledges muſt not only be ſufficient in eſtate, viz. capable to anſwer in value, but likewiſe ſufficient in law, and under no incapacity; therefore infants, feme-coverts, perſons outlawed, &c. are not to be taken as pledges, nor are perſons politic, or bodies corporate. Co. Lit. 145. 2 Inſt. 340. 10 Co. 102.

In replevin the ſheriff did not return any pledges, and after iſſue joined and found, it was moved, if they could be put in by the court after verdict; and the court held they might, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. as before that ſtatute the court might take pledges on the omiſſion of the ſheriff; and a diverſity was taken between pledges for proſecuting, which were at Common law, and pro returno habendo given by this ſtatute; and the court held, that though on default of the ſheriff he was ſubject to the action of the party, that yet the taking of pledges by the court did not make the judgment erroneous. Noy 156.

A replevin by plaint was ſued in the ſheriff's court in London, and pledges were found de returno habendo ſi, &c. this plaint was removed according to their cuſtom into the mayor's court, and after into the King's Bench by certiorari, and their oyer of the certiorari being demanded, the party declared in B. R. on this a return was awarded, and on an elongat' returned, a ſcire facias went againſt the pledges in the ſheriff's court of London. On demurrer the queſtion was, whether, this caſe being removed by certiorari, the pledges in the inferior court are diſcharged, or whether they remain liable to be charged by this ſcire facias? It was adjudged, that the pledges were not diſcharged. Skin. 244. 2 Show. 421. Comb. 1, 2. 3 Mod. 56. S. C.

Plaintiff declared, that he diſtrained for 7 l. 10 s. rent, reſerved on a leaſe, and that defendant delivered the cattle without taking pledges; to which defendant pleaded, that plaintiff in replevin delivered to him 3 l. 10 s. for pledges, which he accepted; and on demurrer the court held, that pledges being to be found to anſwer the party, if he had good cauſe of avowry, and to be anſwerable for amercement to the King, if nonſuited, or if it be found againſt him; the taking of money or a pledge was not lawful; and that although he might take money for pledges, yet he ought not to accept leſs than plaintiff's demands; on which account the court likewiſe held the plea vicious; but they agreed, that if the mayor had taken but one pledge, (if he had been ſufficient) it had been well enough. Cro. Car. 446. 1 Jon. 378.

But it hath been adjudged, that a bond taken by the ſheriff, conditioned that if the party applying for the replevin ſhould appear at the next county court, &c. and proſecute his action with effect, and ſhould make return of the thing replevied, if return ſhould be adjudged, and ſave the ſheriff harmleſs, &c. was good in law, and agreeable to the intent of the ſtatute of Marleb. which requires pledges OR SURETIES, of which nature the obligors are; and this method of taking bond inſtead of pledges was ſaid to be of ancient uſage; and that in the old books plegii ſignified the ſame as ſureties; and that there being a proper remedy on ſuch bond, it differed from the caſe of taking a depoſite or ſum of money; but the court agreed, that at Common law this bond had been void, becauſe it had been to ſave the ſheriff harmleſs in making replevin by plaint, which he could not have done before the ſtatute of Marleb. 1 Ld. Raym. 278. 2 Lutw. 686.

If in replevin in an inferior court, the condition of the bond is, if he proſecute his ſuit commenced with effect in the court of, &c. and make return, &c. if a return be adjudged by law, and it happens, that the plaintiff hath judgment in the court below, which is afterwards reverſed on a writ of error in B. R. in ſuch caſe, unleſs the party make a return, he forfeits his bond; for though he had judgment in the court below, yet the words, if he proſecute his ſuit commenced, &c. extend to the proſecution of the writ of error, which is part of the ſuit commenced in the court below; and in this caſe, the taking ſuch bond was held to be lawful, and ſaid to be common practice. Carth. 248. 1 Show. 400. Fitzg. 158.

In debt on a replevin bond taken by the ſheriff, conditioned that if C. B. appear at the next county court, and proſecute with effect for taking, &c. and make return, &c. if return be adjudged, and ſave harmleſs the ſheriff, &c. then, &c. defendant after oyer pleaded, that at the next county court, tent' tali die, he did appear, and proſecuted, &c. until it was removed by recordari, and did ſave the ſheriff harmleſs, but doth not ſay, that no return. habend' was adjudged; on demurrer the court inclined for plaintiff; for defendant ſhould have ſaid, that no return was adjudged at all; and though he proſecuted to the recordari, yet return habend' might be adjudged afterwards; and the condition goes to any adjudication of return. Comb. 228.

An action was brought on a bond in replevin to proſecute his ſuit with effect, and alſo to make return, &c. defendant pleaded that E. G. did levy a plaint in replevin in the court before the ſteward of Weſtminſter, and that afterwards, and before the ſuit was determined, viz. ſuch a day, &c. E. G. died per quod the ſuit abated; plaintiff replied, quod bene & verum eſt, that E. G. levied ſuch a plaint againſt the defendant, who immediately afterwards exhibited an Engliſh bill in the Exchequer againſt plaintiff in that ſuit, and by injunction hindered the proceedings below until ſuch a day, &c. on which E. G. died; ſo that he did not proſecute his ſuit with effect: on demurrer to this replication the defendant had judgment; for per Holt, This was a proſecution with effect, becauſe there was neither a nonſuit or verdict againſt E. G. Carth. 519.

In action on a replevin bond common bail ſhall be filed. 1 Salk. 99.

There are two ſorts of pledges, plegii de proſequendo, and plegii de returno habendo; the pledges of proſecuting were at Common law, but thoſe de returno habendo were appointed by Weſtm. 2. cap. 2. by which ſtatute an action lies againſt the ſheriff, if he omit to take pledges, or if he take thoſe that are inſufficient; for the party may have a ſcire facias againſt the pledges, where the ſuit is in any court of record; and though in the county court, &c. a ſcire facias will not lie againſt the pledges, becauſe theſe are not courts of record, and every ſcire facias ought to be grounded on a record, yet there the party may have a precept in nature of a ſcire facias againſt the pledges. 1 Ld. Raym. 278. See Comb. 1, 2. Cum. 593.

An action on the caſe was brought again a ſheriff for taking inſufficient pledges on a replevin; to which he pleaded not guilty, and a verdict being found againſt him, and judgment given thereon in the court of C. B. on a writ of error brought in B. R. it was objected, firſt, That an action on the caſe was not the proper remedy; 2dly, Suppoſing ſuch action lay, that there ought to have been a ſcire facias firſt ſued out againſt the pledges. As to the firſt, the court held, that the party diſtraining has by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. an intereſt in the pledges, and if the ſheriff omits to take ſuch, or, which is the ſame thing, takes inſufficient ones, he is aggrieved, and conſequently intitled to his action. 2dly, That though a ſcire facias may be brought againſt the pledges, yet it does not follow from thence, that an action does not lie againſt the ſheriff; and ſuch ſcire facias, which is only to certify the inſufficiency of the pledges, is the leſs neceſſary in the preſent caſe, ſuch inſufficiency being ſet forth in the declaration, and found by the verdict. Mich. 12 Geo. 2. Rouſe v. Patterſon in B. R.

For the greater ſecurity of perſons diſtraining for rent, it is enacted, by ſtat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſ. 23. That officers having authority to grant replevins, ſhall in every replevin of a diſtreſs for rent take in their own names, from plaintiff and two ſureties, a bond in double the value of the goods diſtrained, (ſuch value to be aſcertained by the oath of one or more witneſſes not intereſted, which oath the perſon granting ſuch replevin is to adminiſter) conditioned for proſecuting the ſuit with effect without delay, and for returning the goods, in caſe a return ſhall be awarded, before any deliverance be made of the diſtreſs; and ſuch officer taking ſuch bond, ſhall, at the requeſt and coſts of the avowant, or perſon making conuſance, aſſign ſuch bond to the avowant, &c. by indorſing the ſame, and atteſting it under his hand and ſeal in the preſence of two witneſſes, which may be done without ſtamp, provided the aſſignment be ſtamped before any action brought thereon; and if the bond be forfeited, the avowant, &c. may bring an action thereupon in his own name, and the court may by rule give ſuch relief to the parties on ſuch bond, as may be agreeable to juſtice; and ſuch rule ſhall have the effect of a DEFEASANCE.

The original writ of replevin iſſues out of Chancery, and neither it nor the alias replevin are returnable, but are only in nature of a juſticies to impower the ſheriff to hold plea in his county court, when a day is given the parties; but the pluries replevin is always with this clauſe vel cauſam nobis ſignifices, and it is a returnable proceſs. F. N. B. 69, 70. Doct. pl. 313, 314. 2 Inſt. 139. Salk. 410. it is uſual to take out the alias and pluries at the ſame time. Dalt. Sh. 273.

A pluries replevin returned in Michaelmas term, the defendant claimed property, and after nothing done, nor any appearance nor continuance till Eaſter term following, at which term they appeared and pleaded, and judgment was thereupon given; though no continuance was between Michaelmas and Eaſter, yet this was not any diſcontinuance, becauſe there is not any continuance till appearance; for the parties have not any expreſs day in court, and where there is not any continuance, there cannot be any diſcontinuance. 1 Rol. Abr. 485.

The pluries replevin ſuperſedes the proceedings of the ſheriff, and the proceedings are on that, and not on the plaint, as they are when that is removed by recordari, and tho' there is no ſummons in the writ, yet it gives a good day to defendant to appear; and if he does not appear, then a pone iſſues, and then a capias. 1 Ld. Raym. 617.

Capias and proceſs of outlawry lies in replevin; for when on the pluries replegiari fac' the ſheriff returns averia elongata, then a capias in withernam iſſues, and on that being returned nulla bona, a capias iſſues, and ſo to outlawry. Capias and proceſs of outlawry in replevin were given by 25 Ed. 3. 17. 6 Mod. 84.

If on the pluries replevin the ſheriff return, that the cattle are eloigned to places unknown, &c. ſo that he cannot deliver them to plaintiff, then ſhall iſſue a withernam directed to the ſheriff, commanding him to take the cattle or goods of defendant, and detain them till the cattle or goods diſtrained are reſtored to plaintiff; and if on the firſt withernam a nihil be returned, there an alias and pluries replevin iſſue, and ſo to a capias and exigent. F. N B. 73.

The writ of withernam ought to rehearſe the cauſe which the ſheriff returns, for which he cannot replevy the cattle or goods; ſo that it does not lie on a bare ſuggeſtion, that the beaſts are eloigned, &c. F. N. B. 69 73.

If on the withernam the cattle are reſtored to the party who eloigned them, yet he ſhall pay a fine for his contempt. 2 Leon. 174.

Cattle taken in withernam may be worked, or, if cows, may be milked; for the party has them in lieu of his own. 1 Leon. 220. Dyer 280.

And as the party is to have the uſe of the cattle, he is not to have any allowance made him for the expences he has been at in maintaining them. Owen 46. Cro. Eliz. 162. 3 Leon. 235.

Scire facias againſt an executor, reciting, that where replevin was brought againſt teſtator for a cow, and judgment againſt him de returno habendo, which was not executed, that he ſhould ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not have execution The executor pleads plene adminiſtravit, upon which plaintiff demurred; and Wyld juſtice ſaid, that upon the judgment the cow is in the cuſtody of the law, therefore he ought to have execution; but the doubt is, becauſe the replevin is determined by the death of the party; yet (by him and Rainsford, being only in court) plaintiff ſhall have execution, for defendant cannot be prejudiced; for if the ſheriff return averia elongata, he ſhall not have a withernam, but of the goods of the teſtator; or if there are no goods of the teſtator, the ſheriff can take nothing, but ſhall return nulla bona, and then plaintiff hath his ordinary way to charge defendant, if he hath made a devaſtavit; and it was adjudged for plaintiff. Paſch. 27 Car. 2. in B. R. Sucklin v. Green.

W. ſues a replevin, B. removes it by recordari into the King's Bench, plaintiff does not declare, and on that a return awarded to H. upon which the ſheriff returns averia elongata, and then a withernam was awarded and executed; and now plaintiff comes and prays he may be admitted to declare, and prays a deliverance of the withernam; and it was teſtified by the clerks, that on plaintiff's ſubmiſſion to a fine for not declaring, and that being impoſed on him by the judges, he ſhall have deliverance of the withernam; and a fine of 3 s. 4 d. being accordingly impoſed on plaintiff, he then declared, and had deliverance. Noy 50. The courſe of B. R. is contrary to that of C. B.

If on an elongata returned, the ſheriff's cattle are taken in withernam, yet on the defendant's appearance, and pleading non cepit, or claiming property, defendant ſhall have his cattle again; and if they are eloigned, a withernam againſt plaintiff; for if the property or taking be in queſtion, there is no reaſon that plaintiff ſhould have defendant's cattle. 1 Ld. Raym. 614.

The withernam is but MESNE PROCESS, and cannot be on execution, becauſe it is granted before judgment. 1 Ld. Raym. 614. and ſee Comb. 201. Salk. 582.

6. Of the writ of ſecond deliverance, and the writ De proprietate probanda.

At Common law, if plaintiff in replevin had been nonſuited either before or after verdict, defendant who diſtrained ſhould have had return, but not irrepleviſeable; ſo as plaintiff after nonſuit might have had as many replevins as he would, which was vexatious and miſchievous; for remedy whereof the Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 2. reſtrains plaintiff from any more replevins after nonſuit but gives a writ of ſecond deliverance. 2 Inſt 340.

And if in ſuch writ of ſecond deliverance plaintiff be nonſuited, or if the plea be diſcontinued, or the writ abates, or if he prevails not in his ſuit, returns irrepleviable ſhall be granted. 2 Inſt. 341.

If defendant in replevin has return awarded on nonſuit of plaintiff, on which he ſues a writ de returno habendo, upon which writ the ſheriff returns averia elongata per querentem, and on this a withernam is awarded, and on the withernam defendant has tot catulla to him delivered of the goods of plaintiff, and thereupon plaintiff ſues a ſecond deliverance; he ſhall ſue it for the firſt diſtreſs taken, not for the withernam; and this by the nature and form of the writ of ſecond deliverance. 2 Rol. Abr. 435.

If a returno habendo be awarded to the ſheriff after a writ of ſecond deliverance prayed by plaintiff, this is a ſuperſedeas to the returno habendo, and cloſes the ſheriff's hand from making any return thereto; and if the ſheriff will not execute the writ of ſecond deliverance, the party has his remedy againſt him. Dyer 41. Dalt. Sh. 275.

The ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. gives the writ of ſecond deliverance out of the ſame court where the firſt replevin was granted, and a man cannot have it elſewhere; for if he may, then he ſhall vary from the place limited as to this by the ſtatute. Plowd. 206.

In replevin defendant avowed, that plaintiff being nonſuited brought a writ of ſecond deliverance, whereupon it was moved to ſtay the writ of enquiry of damages; & per curiam, This is a ſuperſedeas to the returno habendo, but not to the writ of inquiry of damages; for theſe damages are not for the thing avowed for, but are given by 21 H. 8. c. 19 As a compenſation for the expence and trouble the avowant has been at. 1 Salk. 95. and like point adjudged, Palm. 403. Latch. 72.

Error of judgment in C. B. in a ſecond deliverance; on demurrer in pleading the error aſſigned was, becauſe there was not any writ of ſecond deliverance certified, and in nullo eſt erratum being pleaded, it was moved not to be material, becauſe it is awarded on the roll, and the parties had appeared and pleaded to it; but it was adjudged ill, and reverſed for that cauſe; for there ought to be a writ, and if it vary from the declaration in the replevin, it ſhall be abated, Cro. Jac. 424.

No ſecond deliverance lies after a judgment on a demurrer, or after verdict, or confeſſion of the avowry; but in all theſe caſes the judgment muſt be entered with a return irrepleviſable; but on a nonſuit, either before or after evidence, a ſecond deliverance will lie, becauſe there is no determination of the matter, and there a writ of ſecond deliverance lies to bring the matter in queſtion; but in the caſe of demurrer and verdict the matter is determined by confeſſion of the party. 2 Lill. Reg. 457.

If plaintiff's writ abates, he may have a new writ, and is not put to his writ of ſecond deliverance. Cum. 122.

If plaintiff in replevin be nonſuited for want of delivering a declaration, if it happened thro' ſickneſs of the perſon employed to proſecute, the court will order defendant to accept a declaration on payment of coſts; otherwiſe plaintiff would be remedileſs, the writ of ſecond deliverance being taken away by the 17 Car. 2. c. 7. 1 Vent. 64. See Avowry.

If defendant in replevin claims property, the ſheriff cannot proceed; for PROPERTY MUST BE TRIED BY WRIT; and in this caſe plaintiff may have the writ de proprietate probanda to the ſheriff; and if it be found for plaintiff, then the ſheriff is to make deliverance; if for defendant, then he is to proceed no further; but as this is but an inqueſt of office, if it be found againſt plaintiff, he may have a replevin to the ſheriff; and if he return the claim of property, yet ſhall it proceed in the C. B. where the property ſhall be put in iſſue and finally tried. Co. Litt. 145. b. F. N. B. 77. Dyer 173. Cum. 592.

None but he who is party to the replevin ſhall have the writ de proprietate probanda; ſo that if on a replevin the beaſts of a ſtranger are delivered to plaintiff, ſuch ſtranger being no party to the replevin, ſhall not have this writ. 14 Hen. 4. 25. 2 Roll. Abr. 431.

The ſheriff is to return the claim of property on the pluries, before which time the writ de proprietate probanda does not iſſue, for it recites the pluries. Reg. 83. Cum. 595.

The writ de proprietate probanda is an inqueſt of office, and the ſheriff is to give notice to the parties of the time and place of executing it. Dalt. Sh. 274.

If defendant claims property in replevin, plaintiff may have the writ de proprietate probanda without continuance of the replevin, tho' it be two or three years after, becauſe by claim of property the firſt ſuit is determined. Moor 403.

If the party who hath the cattle claims property, the ſheriff cannot determine it without a writ de proprietate probanda; and then if the property be found for the party claiming, it is but an inqueſt of office, and the party who made the plaint may after ſue a writ of replevin, to which property may again be pleaded. 7 Hen. 4. 46. Cum. 594.

If plaintiff has property, and omits to claim it before the ſheriff, he may notwithſtanding plead property in himſelf or in a ſtranger, either in abatement or in bar, tho' it was formerly held, that property in a ſtranger could only be pleaded in abatement. *Cro. In replevin defendant in his avowry pleads, that the beaſts taken belong to a third perſon, and not to plaintiff, therefore prays a return; to which plaintiff demurs; for on avowant's own ſhewing he ought not to have return, having admitted the property of the beaſts to be in another; but judgment was given for defendant, for the prior poſſeſſion was in him, and he hath a right againſt all others but the right owner, and plaintiff by his demurrer hath admitted, that he hath no property in them. Comb. 477. 7. Of the writ de returno habendo; of returns irreplevisable, and in what manner the ſheriff is to return and execute ſuch proceſs.

The returno habendo is a judicial writ, which lies for him who has avowed the diſtreſs, and proved the ſame to be lawfully taken; or where, on removal of the plaint into the courts above, plaintiff, whoſe cattle were replevied, makes default, or does not declare or proſecute his action; and thereby becomes nonſuited, &c. and by this writ the ſheriff is commanded to make a return of the cattle to defendant in the replevin. 35 Hen. 6. 40. Dyer 280. Co. Lit. 145.

A bailiff who makes conuzance may have judgment of a return, and conſequently a writ de returno habendo grounded on ſuch judgment. Co. Ent. 59.

If defendant hath a return awarded him, and he ſueth a writ de returno habendo, and the ſheriff return on the pluries, quod averia elongata ſunt, &c. he ſhall have a ſcire facias againſt the pledges, &c. According to the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. and if they have nothing then they ſhall have a withernam againſt plaintiff of plaintiff's own cattle. F. N. B. 172.

Return irreplevisable is a judicial writ directed to the ſheriff for the FINAL RESTITUTION or return of cattle unjuſtly taken by another, and ſo found by verdict, or after a nonſuit in a ſecond deliverance. 2 Roll. Abr. 434.

If the plea be to the writ, or any other plea be tried by verdict, or judged on demurrer, return irrepleviſeable ſhall be awarded, and no new replevin ſhall be granted, nor any ſecond deliverance by the act of Weſtm. 2. but only on nonſuit. 2 Inſt. 340. Dyer 280.

If on iſſue joined in replevin plaintiff does not appear on the trial, being called for that purpoſe, yet return irreplevisable ſhall not be awarded, as in caſe of a verdict's being given, but the party may have a writ of ſecond deliverance, as well as if it had been a nonſuit before declaration, or appearance. 3 Leon. 49.

If a man has return irrepleviſeable, and a beaſt die in the pound, he may diſtrain a-new; ſo if the beaſt die before judgment. Hob. 61.

If return irrepleviſeable be awarded, the owner of the cattle may offer the arrears; and if defendant refuſes to deliver the diſtreſs, plaintiff may have detinue, becauſe the diſtreſs is only in nature of a pledge. 1 Ld. Raym. 720.

By the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. cap. 17. If the party who diſtrains, conveys the diſtreſs into any houſe, park, caſtle, or other place of ſtrength, and refuſes to ſuffer them to be replevied, the ſheriff may take the poſſe comitatus and on requeſt and refuſal break open ſuch houſe, caſtle, &c. and make deliverance; and this was a neceſſary law ſo ſoon after the irregular time of Hen. 3. 2 Inſt. 193. 5 Co. 93. Dalt. Sh. 373.

If the ſheriff returns, that the beaſts are incloſed in a park among ſavages, or incloſed in a caſtle, &c. he ſhall be amerced, and another writ of replevin ſhall be awarded; for he ought to have taken the poſſe com. for this was a denial. F. N. B, 257.

If the ſheriff return, quod mandavi ballivo libertatis, &c. qui nullum debit mihi reſponſum, or that the bailiff will not make deliverance of the cattle, theſe are not good returns; for by ſtatute of Weſt. 1. the ſheriff on ſuch return made to him by the bailiff, ought preſently to enter into the franchiſe, and make deliverance of the cattle taken. F. N. B. 157.

If a man ſue a replevin in the county court without writ, and the bailiff return to the ſheriff, that he cannot have view of the cattle to deliver them, the ſheriff by inqueſt of office ought to inquire into the truth thereof, and if it be found by a jury, that the cattle are eloigned, &c. the ſheriff in the county court may award a withernam to take defendant's cattle; and if the ſheriff will not award a withernam, then plaintiff may have a writ out of Chancery directed to the ſheriff rehearſing the whole matter, commanding him to award a withernam, &c. and he may have an alias, and after a pluries, and an attachment againſt the ſheriff, if he will not execute the King's command. F. N. B. 158.

If the ſheriff return, quod averia elongata ad loco incognito, this is a good return, and the party muſt purſue his writ of withernam; but if the ſheriff return averia elongata ad loco incognito INFRA COMITATUM MEUM, he ſhall be amerced, for the law intends that he may have notice in his county. Bro. Retur. de Br. pl. 100.

If in replevin the ſheriff return, quod averia mortua ſunt, that is a good return. Bro. Retur. de Br. pl. 125.

It is a good return, quod nullus venit ex parte querentis ad demonſtranda averia; but it ſeems the ſheriff is not obliged to require this. Dalt. Sh. 556. Allen. 33.

If the ſheriff be ſhewn a ſtranger's goods, and he takes them, an action of treſpaſs lies againſt him, for otherwiſe he could have no remedy; for being a ſtranger he cannot have the writ de proprietate probanda, and were he not intitled to this remedy, it would be in the power of the ſheriff to ſtrip a man's houſe of all his goods; but Keilw. ſeems to hold, that the action lies more properly againſt the perſon WHO SHEWS the goods. 2 Roll. Abr. 552. Cum 596.

The ſheriff comes to make replevin of beaſts impounded in another man's ſoil; if the place be incloſed, and has a gate open to the incloſure, he cannot break the incloſure, and enter thereby, when he may enter by the open gate; but if the owner hinders him ſo that he cannot go by the open gate for fear of death, he may break the incloſure, and enter there. 20 H. 6. 28. 2 Roll. Abr. 532.

The ſheriff is to return, that the cattle are eloigned, or that no perſon came to ſhew, &c. or a delivery; but he cannot return, that the defendant non cepit the cattle, becauſe it is ſuppoſed in the writ, and is the ground of it, which the ſheriff cannot falſify. 1 *Ld. Replication, (replicatio) Is an exception or anſwer made by plaintiff to defendant's plea: And it is alſo that which the complainant replies to the defendant's anſwer in Chancery, &c. Weſt's Symb. par. 2.

The replication is to contain certainty, and not vary from the declaration, but muſt purſue and maintain the cauſe of plaintiff's action; otherwiſe it will be a departure in pleading, and going to another matter. Co. Lit. 304. Tho' as a faulty bar may be made good by the replication; ſo ſometimes a replication is made good by a rejoinder; but if it wants ſubſtance, a rejoinder can never help it. 2 Lill. Abr. 462. A replication being intire, and ill in part, is ill in the whole: But if there be three replications, and one is ſuperfluous, and the other two ſufficient, and defendant demurs generally, plaintiff may have judgment on thoſe which are ſufficient. 1 Saund. 338. 2 Saund. 17.

Where defendant pleads in bar, and plaintiff replies inſufficiently; if defendant demurs ſpecially on the replication, and the bar is inſufficient, if the action be of ſuch a nature that a title is ſet forth in the declaration or count, as in a formedon, &c. judgment may be given for plaintiff on the inſufficient bar of defendant: And where the title doth not appear till ſet forth in the replication, and that is inſufficient, there judgment ſhall be had for defendant for the ill replication. Godb. 138. 1 Leon. 75. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 133.

A replication concludes either with hoc paratus eſt verificare, or to the country. In action on a bond to pay all ſums expended about certain buſineſs, &c. on defendant's pleading he paid all; plaintiff replies that he had not, et hoc paratus, &c. Upon a demurrer it was held plaintiff ought to have concluded to the country; becauſe there is an affirmative and negative, and if he might be admitted to aver his replication thus, there would be no end in pleading. Raym. 98.

But where new matter is offered in a replication, plaintiff ſhould aver his plea, ſo as to give defendant an opportunity to rejoin. 4 Mod. 285. Lutw. 98.

Report, (from the Lat. reportare) Is a public relation, or bringing again to memory, of caſes judicially adjudged in courts of juſtice, with the reaſons as delivered by the judges. Co. Lit. 293.

There are likewiſe reports, when the court of Chancery, or other court, refer the ſtating ſome caſe, &c. to a Maſter of Chancery, or other referee, his certificate therein is called a Report: On which the court makes an abſolute order. Pract. Solic. 67.

A Maſter in Chancery, having an order of reference, is to iſſue his ſummons for the parties to attend him at a certain time and place; when and where they may come with their counſel, clerk or ſolicitor, to defend themſelves, and maintain, or object againſt, his Report, or certificate, &c. And Maſters are to draw their Reports briefly and as ſuccinctly as may be, preſerving the matter clearly for the judgment of the court; without recital of the ſeveral points of the order of reference, or the debates of counſel before them; unleſs in caſes doubtful, when they may ſhortly repreſent the reaſons which induce them to what they do. Ibid.

Reports and certificates of Maſters in Chancery are to be filed with the regiſter in four days after the making and ſigning; and to be confirmed by the court, to which exceptions may be made, &c.

None ſhall take any money for Report of an order, or cauſe referred to them by any judges, on pain of 100*l.* &c. ſo as not to prohibit the clerk from taking 12 d. for the firſt, and 2 d. for every other ſheet. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. cap. 10. But Maſters in Chancery, may take for every Report or certificate, made on an order on hearing of a cauſe 20 s. And for any other Report, &c, made on petition or motion 10 s. And their clerks ſhall have 5 s. for writing every Report, by 13 Car. 2 Vide Reference.

A Report by a Maſter in Chancery, is as a judgment of the court. 1 Wms's Rep. 653.

By a ſtanding order of the court of Chancery, made by the Lords Commiſſioners in the 4 W. & M. it was directed, That all Reports ſhould be filed within four days after the making, otherwiſe no decree or proceedings to be had thereupon; but the Regiſter reporting, that it was ſufficient if the Report were filed before any proceedings had thereupon, tho' not done within four days after making, Ld. C. J. King agreed thereto. And the court took it to be well enough, tho' in this caſe the motion to confirm the report niſi cauſa, was made the ſame day that the Report was filed. 2 Wms's Rep. 517.

It is not uſual to confirm Reports of Receiver's accounts, per Maſter of the Rolls. 2 Wms's Rep 661.

Repoſition of the Foreſt, (repoſitio foreſtæ, i. e. a reputting to) Was a ſtatute whereby certain foreſt-grounds being made purlieu on view, were by a ſecond view put to the foreſt again. Manw. par. 1.

Repreſentation, (repræſentatio) Is perſonating another: There is an heir by repreſentation, where a father dies in the life of the grandfather, leaving a ſon, who ſhall inherit his grandfather's eſtate, before the father's brother, &c. Bro. Abr. 303. Alſo executors repreſent the perſon of the teſtator, to receive money and aſſets. Co. Lit. 209.

Reprieve, (from the Fr. repris, tho' Blackſtone takes it from reprendre) Signifies to take back or ſuſpend a priſoner from the execution and proceeding of law for that time. Terms de Ley. Every judge who hath power to order execution, hath power to grant a reprieve; and execution is often ſtaid on condition of tranſportation. But no priſoner convicted of any felony, for which he cannot have his clergy, at the ſeſſions at the Old Bailey for London or Middleſex, &c. ought to be reprieved but in open ſeſſions; and reprieves are not to be granted otherwiſe, without the King's expreſs warrant, not by order of any juſtices of goal delivery. Kel. 4. 2 Hawk. P. C. 463. Wood's Inſt. 662.

If a woman is condemned for treaſon or felony, and is found by an inqueſt or jury of matrons impanelled by the ſheriff, &c. to be quick with child, execution ſhall be reſpited, and the woman reprieved till her delivery; tho' ſhe ſhall take this favour but once; and cannot ſave herſelf by this means from pleading on her arraignment; nor from having judgment pronounced againſt her on conviction. S. P. C. 198. H. P. C. 272 Finch. 478.

Where it is found by a jury of women, that a woman convicted of felony, is with child, ſome judges have reſpited her execution till a convenient time, i. e. a month after her delivery, then to be executed, but this is irregular, for ſhe may have a pardon to plead, therefore to be reprieved till the next ſeſſions. 12 Aſſ. 10 1 *Hale's Hiſt. Repriſal, (repriſale, or repriſalia) Is taking one thing in ſatisfaction for another, derived from the Fr. repriſe; and is all one in the Common and Civil law.

Hen. IV. enacted, That application be made to the Keeper of the Privy Seal, by perſons injured in the loſs of ſhipping at ſea, contrary to treaties, &c. on evidence ſhewn, he ſhall ſign letters of requeſt to demand reſtitution and reparation; which if not made in convenient time, the Lord Chancellor is to grant letters of repriſal, to obtain the ſame by force, and for the indemnity of the perſons intereſted: And this is confirmed by the Stat. 4 H. 5. c. 7.

Repriſals are ordinary and extraordinary; ordinary repriſals are to arreſt and take the goods of merchant ſtrangers within the realm; and the other is for ſatisfaction out of the realm, and is under the Great Seal, &c. Lex Mercat. 120.

If any perſon be killed, wounded, ſpoiled, or any ways damaged in a hoſtile manner, in the territories of any potentate, to whom letters of requeſt are tranſmitted, and no ſatisfaction be made, there is no neceſſity to reſort to the ordinary proſecution, but letters of repriſal iſſue forth; and the Prince againſt whom the ſame are iſſued, is obliged to make ſatisfaction out of the eſtates of the perſons committing the injuries; and in caſe of a deficiency there, it will then be adjudged a common debt on his country. But where miſfortunes happen to perſons, or their goods, reſiding in a foreign country in time of war, repriſals are not to be granted: In this caſe they muſt be contented to ſit down under the loſs, for they are at their liberty to relinquiſh the place on the approach of the enemy, when they foreſee the country is ſubject to ſpoil: and if they continue, they muſt partake of the common calamity. Lex Mercat. or Merch. Compan. 174, 175.

Repriſals may be granted on illegal proſecutions abroad; where wrong judgment is given in matters not doubtful, which might have been redreſſed either by the ordinary or extraordinary power of the country or place, and which was apparently denied, &c. See Letters of Marque, and Black. Com. 1 V. 258. And as to Repriſal of Goods, ſee Recaption, and Black. Com. 3 V. 4.

Repriſes, (Fr. reſumptions, or a-taking back) Is uſed for deductions and payments out of a manor or lands, as rent-charges, annuities, &c. Therefore when we ſpeak of the clear yearly value of a manor or eſtate or land, we ſay it is ſo much per annum ultra repriſes, beſides all repriſes.

Repugnant, (repugnans) Is what is contrary to any thing ſaid before: And repugnancy in deeds, grants, indictments, verdicts, &c. make them void. 3 Nelſ. 135.

The Common law abhors repugnancies and all incongruities; but the former part of a deed, &c. ſhall ſtand, where the latter part is repugnant to it. Jenk. Cent. 251. 256.

Where contrarieties are in ſeveral parts of deeds or fines, the firſt part ſhall ſtand; in wills, the laſt, if the ſeveral clauſes are not reconcileable. Jenk. 96. pl. 86.

In contracts, gifts, verdicts, evidence, &c. where direct contrarieties are for the ſame thing at the ſame time, all is void. Jenk. 96. pl. 86.

A. made B. and C. executors, provided that C. ſhall not adminiſter his goods, B. and C. brought debt on bond as executors. It was held that the action was well brought; for the proviſo is void. D. 3. b. 4. pl. 7. &c.

A. gives lands to B. in tail, provided A. ſhall take the profits of part for 1000 years; the proviſo is void; for in common preſumption it takes away the benefit and intereſt of the grantee in that parcel, Cro Eliz. 35.

An award, that each ſhall give the other a general releaſe within four days after the award; proviſo that if either diſliked the award within 20 days after made, and ſhould pay to the other within the ſaid 20 days 10 l. that then the arbitrement ſhould be void, the proviſo is repugnant, and judgment for plaintiff. Cro. Eliz. 291.

A proviſo good in the commencement may by conſequence become repugnant, as grant of rent by deed for life, provided that it ſhall not charge his perſon; the proviſo is good, but if the rent be arrear, and the grantee die, his executors ſhall charge the perſon of the grantor in debt; for otherwiſe they be remedileſs; and ſo it is now repugnant, by conſequence void. 6 Rep. 41. b. See Black. Com. 2 V. 156.

Reputation, (reputatio) Is defined by Sir Edw. Coke to be vulgaris opinio ubi non eſt veritas; and he tells us, that vulgaris opinio ex duplex, viz. Una orta inter graves & diſcretos & quæ vultum veritatis habet; altera orta inter leves & vulgares homines abſque ſpecie veritatis. 4 Rep. 104. That is not reputation which this or that man ſays; but that which generally hath been, and many men have ſaid or thought. 1 Leon. 15.

A little time is ſufficient for gaining Reputation, which needs not a very ancient pedigree to eſtabliſh it; for general acceptation will produce a Reputation. Cro. Jac. 308. But it has been held, that common Reputation cannot be intended of an opinion which is conceived of four or five years ſtanding; but of long time. 2 Lill. Abr. 464. And ſome ſpecial matter muſt be averred to induce a Reputation. Ibid.

Land may be reputed parcel of a manor; tho' not really ſo. 1 Ventr. 51. 2 Mod. 69. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 137. And there is a pariſh, and office in Reputation, &c.

Reputation of Fame, Is under the protection of the law, as all perſons have an intereſt in their good name; and ſcandal and defamation are injurious to it, tho' defamatory words are not actionable, otherwiſe than as they are a damage to the eſtate of the perſon injured. Wood's Inſt. 37.

The ſecurity of Reputation or good name from the arts of detraction and ſlander, are rights to which every man is intitled, by reaſon and natural juſtice; ſince without theſe it is impoſſible to have the perfect enjoyment of any other advantage or right. Black. Com. 1 V. 134.

Requeſt, of things to be done: Where one is to do a collateral thing, agreed on making a contract, there ought to be a requeſt to do it. 2 Lill. Abr. 464. If a duty is due, it is payable without requeſt; on promiſe to pay a duty precedent on requeſt, there needs no actual requeſt; but on a promiſe for a penalty or collateral ſum, there ſhould be an actual requeſt before the action is brought. Cro. Eliz. 74. 1 Saund. 33. 1 Lev. 289.

If a debt is before a promiſe, a requeſt is not neceſſary, for then a requeſt is not any cauſe of the action; tho' upon a promiſe generally to pay on requeſt, the action ariſes on requeſt, and not before. Cro. Jac. 201. 1 Lev. 48. See poſt.

Action of debt for money due on a bond, may be brought without alledging a ſpecial requeſt. Cro. Eliz. 229, 523.

A man promiſes to re-deliver on requeſt ſuch goods as were delivered to him; if an action of detinue is brought, plaintiff need not alledge a ſpecial requeſt, becauſe the action is for the thing itſelf: But if an action of the caſe is had for theſe goods, then the requeſt muſt be ſpecially alledged; as it is not brought for the thing itſelf, but for damages. Sid. 66. 3 Salk. 309.

If a promiſe is made to pay money to plaintiff, on requeſt, no ſpecial requeſt is required: But where there are mutual promiſes between two perſons to pay each other money on requeſt, If they do not perfom ſuch an award, the requeſt is to be ſpecially alledged. And if there is a promiſe to pay money to a man on requeſt, and he dies before any requeſt made, it ſhall be paid to his executors; but not till requeſt made. 3 Salk. 309. 3 Bulſt. 259.

Where a perſon promiſes to pay a precedent duty, the general allegation licet ſæpius requiſit' is ſufficient, becauſe there was a duty without a promiſe: As for inſtance; If one buys or borrows a horſe, and promiſes to pay ſo much on Requeſt: But where the promiſe is collateral, as to pay the debt of a ſtranger on Requeſt, &c. the Requeſt is part of the agreement, and traverſable, there being no duty before the promiſe made; and for that reaſon the Requeſt muſt be ſpecially alledged, for bringing the action will not be a ſufficient Requeſt. Latch 93. 3 Leon. 200. 1 Saund. 35. 3 Salk. 308.

If a debt or duty ariſes either on bond or contract, licet ſæpius requiſitus is good; contra where it becomes a duty by the Requeſt itſelf, when it is to be alledged ſpecially. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 144.

It has been adjudged, that where the thing is a duty before any Requeſt made, a Requeſt is only alledged to aggravate damages, and ſuch Requeſt is not traverſable; but if the Requeſt makes the duty, as in aſſumpſit to do ſuch a thing on Requeſt, there the day, &c. of the Requeſt ought to be alledged, becauſe it is traverſable. Palm. 389.

If a Requeſt is to be ſpecially made, the day and year when made ſhould be ſpecially alledged. 1 Lutw. 231. 2 Lil. Abr. 466. Cro. Car. 280. But where a perſon is not reſtrained to make the Requeſt by a time limited, if made at any time during his life, it has been held to be good. Cro. Eliz. 136. And a Requeſt at any other time than named may be given in evidence. Sid. 268.

If a debt or duty does not accrue on a promiſe, until requeſt made, the ſtatute of limitations runs from the time of the requeſt, only, and not from the time of the precedent promiſe. Cro. Car. 98.

At a trial, defendant would have plaintiff to prove the Requeſt; but it was ruled that he need not; for, not being traverſed in the plea, it is admitted. 1 Lev. 166.

Unreaſonable Requeſts are not regarded in law; and there is no difference where a thing is to be done on Requeſt, and reaſonable Requeſt. Dyer 218. Cro. Car. 176. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 140, 142.

Reſceit, (Receptio) Is an admiſſion or receiving of a third perſon to plead his right in a cauſe formerly commenced between two other perſons; as where an action is brought againſt tenant for life or years, or any other particular tenant, and he makes default, in ſuch caſe he in the reverſion may move that he may be received to defend his right, and to plead with demandant.

Reſceit is likewiſe applied to the admittance of a plea, where the controverſy is between the ſame two perſons. Broke 205. Co. Lit. 192. Nelſ. 3 Abr. 146.

He in reverſion may come into court, and pray to be received in a ſuit againſt his particular tenant; and after ſuch receit the buſineſs ſhall be haſtened, as much as may be by law, without any delay of either ſide. Stat. 13 R. 2. cap. 17. But reſceit is admitted only for thoſe who have eſtates depending on particular eſtates for life, tenants by the curteſy, or after poſſibility, &c. and not for him in remainder after an eſtate tail, which is perdurable. 1 And. 133.

Huſband and wife were tenants for life, remainder to another in fee; a formedon was brought againſt the huſband, who made default after default; and thereupon the wife prayed that ſhe might be received to defend her right; but it was denied by the court, becauſe if defendant ſhould recover againſt her huſband, it would not bar her right if ſhe ſurvived him, therefore it would be to no purpoſe. Then he in remainder prayed to be received, which at firſt the court doubted, by reaſon if the huſband ſhould recover, he might falſify ſuch recovery; and becauſe his eſtate did not depend on the eſtate of the huſband alone, but on the eſtate of the huſband and wife; but at laſt he was received. 1 Leon. 86.

The ſtatute of Glouceſter enacts, that a termor may be received to falſify, if he hath a deed, and comes before judgment; this is where he in reverſion cauſeth himſelf to be impleaded by colluſion, to make the termor loſe his term, &c. 6 Ed. 1. cap. 11. And if any ſtranger come in by a collateral title, before he is received, he ſhall find ſurety to ſatisfy the demandant the value of the lands if he recovers from that time till final judgment; and demandant recovering, he ſhall be grievouſly amerced, &c. by Stat. 20 Ed. 1.

Reſcous, or Reſcue, (Reſcuſſus, from the Fr. reſcouſe, i. e. liberatio) Is a reſiſtance again lawful authority.

1. Of the different kinds of reſcues, &c.
2. Of the offence of making a reſcue, and how the offenders are to be proceeded againſt, and puniſhed.
3. Of the form of the proceedings on a reſcue.
4. In what caſes the ſheriff may return a reſcue; of the form of the return, and for what defects it may be quaſhed.

1. Of the different kinds of reſcues, &c.

If a bailiff, or other officer, on a writ arreſt a man, and others by violence take him away, or procure his eſcape; this is a reſcous IN FACT. So if one diſtrain beaſts for damage feaſant, in his ground, as he drives them in the highway towards the pound, they enter into the owner's houſe, and he withholds them there, and will not deliver them on demand, this detainer is a reſcous IN LAW. Co. Lit. lib. 2. c. 12, 161. Caſſanæus in his book De Conſuetud. Burg. f. 294. hath the ſame words coupled with reſiſtentia. It is alſo uſed for a writ which lies for this fact called Breve de reſcuſſu, whereof you may ſee both the form and uſe in F. N. B. 101. Reg. of Writs, 125, and New Book of Entries, verb. Reſcous.

This, in ſome caſes, in matters relating to treaſon, is treaſon; and in matters concerning felony, is felony. Cromp. Juſt. 54. Cowell.

In other terms, reſcue is the taking away and ſetting at liberty againſt law any diſtreſs taken for rent, or ſervices, or damage-feaſant; but the more general notion of reſcous is, the FORCIBLE freeing another from an arreſt or ſome legal commitment, which being a high offence, ſubjects the offender not only to an action at the ſuit of the party injured, but likewiſe to fine and impriſonment at the ſuit of the King. Co. Lit. 160. F. N B. 226.

But here there can be no reſcous but where the party has had the actual poſſeſſion of the cattle, or other things whereof the reſcous is ſuppoſed to be made; for if a man come to arreſt another, or to diſtrain, and is diſturbed, regularly his remedy is by action on the caſe. Co Lit. 161. a. Lit. Rep. 296. Hetl. 145

If on a fi. fa. the ſheriff ſeiſes goods which are taken away by a ſtranger, this is not properly a reſcue; for by ſeiſure of the goods, by virtue of the fieri facias, the ſheriff has a property in them, and may maintain treſpaſs, or trover for them; alſo the party injured may have an action on the caſe againſt the wrong-doer. Hetl. 145. Lit. Rep. 296.

If on a fieri facias the ſheriff returned that he had ſeiſed the goods, but that they were reſcued by B. and C. &c. this is not a good return, but he ſhall be amerced; the party alſo, at whoſe ſuit the execution iſſued, may charge him by ſcire facias for the value of the goods. 1 Vent. 21. 2 Saund. 343. 1 Show 180.

If the lord diſtrain for rent when none is due, the tenant may LAWFULLY make reſcous; ſo may a ſtranger, if his beaſts be diſtrained when no rent is due. So if the tenant tender the rent when the lord comes to diſtrain, and yet he does diſtrain, or if he diſtrain any thing not diſtrainable, as beaſts of the plough, when other ſufficient diſtreſs may be taken, the tenant may make reſcous; ſo if the lord diſtrain in the highway or out of his fee. Co. Lit. 47, 160. b. 161. a.

But though there muſt be reaſon for the diſtreſs, and that otherwiſe the reſcue cannot be unlawful; yet it hath been held in a parco fracto, that defendant cannot juſtify breaking the pound and taking out the cattle though the diſtreſs was without cauſe, becauſe they are now in the actual CUSTODY OF THE LAW. Salk. 247.

There is a difference between a man's being arreſted by a warrant on record, and by a general authority in law; for if a capias be awarded to the ſheriff to arreſt a man for felony, though he be innocent, he cannot make reſcue; but if the ſheriff will by the general authority committed to him by law arreſt any man for felony, if he be innocent he may reſcue himſelf. Co. Lit. 161. See 5 Co. 68. 6 Co. 54. Cro. Jac. 486.

2. Of the offence of making a reſcue, and how the offenders are to be proceeded againſt and puniſhed.

It ſeems agreed, that the reſcuing a perſon impriſoned for felony, is alſo felony by the Common law. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 606.

Alſo it is agreed, that a ſtranger who reſcues a perſon committed for, and guilty of high treaſon, knowing him to be ſo, is in all caſes guilty of high treaſon. Staunf. P. C. 11. 1 Jon. 455. Whether he knew that the priſoners were ſo committed or not. Cro. Car. 583.

To make a reſcue felony, it is neceſſary that the felon be in cuſtody or under arreſt for felony; therefore if A. hinder an arreſt, whereby the felon eſcapes, the townſhip ſhall be amerced for the eſcape, and A. ſhall be fined for the hindrance of his taking; but it is not felony in A. becauſe the felon was not taken. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 606. 3 Ed. 3. Coron. 333. Staunf. 31.

So to make a reſcue felony, the party reſcued muſt be under cuſtody for felony or ſuſpicion of felony; and it is all one whether he be in cuſtody for that account by a private perſon, or by an officer, or warrant of a juſtice; for where the arreſt of a felon is lawful, the reſcue of him is felony; but it ſeems neceſſary that he ſhould have knowledge that the perſon is under arreſt for felony, if he be in the cuſtody of a private perſon. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 606.

But if he be in cuſtody of an officer, there, at his peril, he is to take notice of it; ſo if there be felons in a priſon, and A not knowing it, breaks the priſon, and lets out the priſoners, though he knew not that there were felons there, it is felony. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 606. Cro. Car. 383.

A perſon committed for high treaſon, who breaks the priſon, and eſcapes, is guilty of felony, unleſs he lets others alſo eſcape whom he knows to be committed for high treaſon; in which caſe he is guilty of high treaſon, not in reſpect of his own breaking of priſon, but of the reſcous of the others. 2 Hawk. P. C. 140.

If the perſon reſcued were indicted or attainted of ſeveral felonies, yet the eſcape or reſcue of ſuch a perſon makes but one felony. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 599.

Wherever the impriſonment is ſo far groundleſs or irregular, or the breaking of a priſon is occaſioned by ſuch a neceſſity, &c. that the party himſelf, breaking priſon, is either by the Common law, or by the ſtatute De frangentibus priſonam, ſaved from the penalty of a capital offender, a ſtranger who reſcues him from ſuch impriſonment is in like manner alſo excuſed; & ſic e converſo. 2 Hawk. P. C. 139.

The return of a reſcue of a felon, by the ſheriff againſt A. is not ſufficient to put him to anſwer for it as a felony, without indictment or preſentment, by the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. c. 4. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 606.

As in caſe of an eſcape, ſo in caſe of a reſcue, if the party reſcued be impriſoned for felony, and reſcued before indictment, the indictment muſt ſurmiſe a felony done, as well as an impriſonment for felony or ſuſpicion thereof; but if the party be indicted, and taken by a capias, and reſcued, then there needs only a recital that he was indicted prout, and taken and reſcued. 1 Hal. P. C. 607.

But though the reſcuer may be indicted before the principal is convicted and attainted, yet he ſhall not be arraigned or tried before the principal be attainted; but if the perſon reſcued were impriſoned for high treaſon, the reſcuer may immediately be arraigned, for in high treaſon all are principals; alſo it ſeems that he may be immediately proceeded againſt for a miſpriſion only, if the King pleaſe. 2 Hawk. P. C. 140.

The reſcuer of a priſoner for felony, though not within clergy, yet ſhall have his clergy. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 607.

By the 6 Geo. 1. cap. 23. ſect. 5. if any perſon reſcue felons ordered for tranſportation, or aſſiſt them in making their eſcape, he ſhall be guilty of felony, and ſuffer death without benefit of clergy. See alſo 9 Geo. 1. c. 28.

As the offence of reſcuing perſons in caſes of treaſon and felony is uſually puniſhed by indictment, ſo the offence of reſcuing a perſon arreſted on meſne proceſs, or in execution after judgment, ſubjects the offender to a writ of reſcous or a general action of treſpaſs vi & armis, or an action on the caſe, in all which damages are recoverable. Alſo it is the frequent practice of the courts to grant an attachment againſt ſuch wrong-doers, it being the higheſt violence and contempt that can be offered to the proceſs of the court. Co. Lit. 161. Co. Ent. 614. Raſt. Ent. 577.

He who reſcues a priſoner from any of the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall without ſtriking a blow, ſhall forfeit his goods and profits of his lands, and ſuffer impriſonment during life; but not loſe his hand, becauſe he did not ſtrike. 22 Ed. 3. c. 13. 3 Inſt. 141.

It is clearly agreed, that for a reſcous on meſne proceſs the party injured may have either an action of treſpaſs vi & armis, or an action on the caſe, in which he ſhall recover his debt and damages againſt the wrong-doer; and the rather, becauſe on meſne proceſs he can have no remedy againſt the ſheriff. Cro. Jac. 486. Hob. 180.

Alſo it hath been adjudged, that for reſcous of a perſon in execution on a ca. ſa. or ca. utla. an action will lie againſt the reſcuer, though the party injured hath his remedy againſt the ſheriff, and the ſheriff hath his remedy againſt the wrong-doer; for perhaps the ſheriff may be dead or inſolvent; but herein it hath been held, that if he bring his action againſt the party who made the reſcue, he may plead it in bar to an action brought by the ſheriff; ſo if againſt the ſheriff or his bailiff, they may plead that he had ſatisfaction from the party, ſo that if he recovers againſt one, the other is diſcharged. Hetl. 95. Cro. Car. 109. Hut. 98. Hob. 180.

By the ſtatute 2 W. & M. ſtat. 1. cap. 5. ſect. 5. on pound-breach or reſcous of goods diſtrained for rent, the perſon grieved ſhall in a ſpecial action on the caſe recover treble damages and coſts againſt the offenders, or againſt the owners of the goods if they come to his uſe.

In an action on the caſe for a reſcous, on this ſtatute, it hath been held, that plaintiff ſhall recover treble coſts as well as treble damages, for the damages are not given by the ſtatue but increaſed; an action on the caſe lying for a reſcous at Common law. 1 Salk. 205.

An attachment will be granted not only againſt a common perſon, but even againſt a peer of the realm, for reſcuing a perſon arreſted by due courſe of law; ſo that if the ſheriff in any caſe return to the court, that a perſon arreſted or goods ſeiſed, or poſſeſſion of lands delivered by him, by virtue of the King's writ, were reſcued or violently taken from him, &c. they will award an attachment againſt the reſcuers. Dyer 212. 2 Jon. 39. Salk. 322.

But it ſeems to be the practice, not to grant an attachment in any caſe for a reſcous, unleſs the officer will return it; for it hath been found by experience, that officers will take on them to ſwear a reſcous where they will not venture to return one. 2 Hawk. P. C. 153.

A diſtinction was taken where an attachment is prayed for a reſcous in the firſt inſtance, and where a rule to ſhew cauſe is only aſked; in this affidavits of the fact are ſufficient; in the other caſe the ſheriff's return is requiſite. Trin. 5 Geo. 2. in B. R. Young v. Payne.

Where, on the return of a reſcue, an attachment is granted, and the party examined on interrogatories, upon anſwering them he ſhall be diſcharged; but if the reſcous is returned to the philazer, and proceſs of outlawry iſſues, and the reſcuer is brought into court, he ſhall not be diſcharged on affidavits. Salk. 586.

An indictment of a reſcous ought to ſet forth the ſpecial circumſtances of the fact with ſuch certainty, as to enable defendant to make a proper defence. Dyer 164. No defect can be aided by the verdict. 1 Rol. Abr. 781.

Therefore, if an indictment lay the offence on an uncertain or impoſſible day, as where it lays it on a future day, or lays one and the ſame offence at different days, or lays it on ſuch a day which makes the indictment repugnant to itſelf, it is void. Moor 555. Raſt. Ent. 263.

It has been adjudged, on exceptions taken to an indictment for a reſcous, that it was not neceſſary to alledge the place where the reſcue was made, and that it ſhould be intended that where the arreſt was, there alſo was the reſcue without the word ibidem. Cro. Jac. 345. 2 Bulſt. 208.

An exception taken to an indictment of reſcous, that it wanted the words vi & armis or manu forti, but overruled, it being held by the court, that the word reſcuſſit implies it to be done by force. Cro. Jac. 345. The ſame exception taken in Cro. Jac. 473. over-ruled, and there held, that though it were error at Common law, yet it is made good by the ſtatute 37 Hen. 8. c. 8. Vide Cro. Jac. 472. Hart's caſe.

It is ſaid, that an indictment of reſcous is not within the ſtatute of additions, and that naming the perſon indicted of ſuch a pariſh, without giving him any title, is ſufficient. 2 Inſt. 665. 2 Show. 84.

Note; On an indictment of reſcous, if it were on an arreſt upon meſne proceſs, and the party has appeared, the court will be eaſily induced to quaſh it; ſo if it be on proceſs out of an inferior court, though the party has not appeared, for no aid is given to inferior juriſdictions.

In an action for a reſcue plaintiff muſt alledge in his declaration all the material circumſtances; as that ſuch a writ iſſued, that he was arreſted, and in cuſtody, and that he was reſcued, &c. Godb. 125. 1 Lutw. 130.

In an action on the caſe for a reſcous on meſne proceſs, the evidence was, the bailiff ſtood at the ſtreet door, and ſent his follower up three pair of ſtairs in diſguiſe with the warrant, who laid hands on the party, and told him that he arreſted him; but he with the help of ſome women got from the follower, and ran down ſtairs, and defendant hearing a noiſe ran up, and put the party into a room, locked the door, and would not ſuffer the bailiff to enter. Holt doubted whether this was a lawful arreſt, being by the bailiff's ſervant, and not in his preſence; but ſaid, that plaintiff muſt prove his cauſe of action againſt the party; that he muſt prove the writ and warrant by producing ſworn copies of them; he muſt prove the manner of the arreſt, that it may appear to the court to be legal, and in point of damage he muſt prove the loſs of his debt, viz. that the party became inſolvent, and could not be retaken. 6 Mod. 211.

4. In what caſes the ſheriff may return a reſcue; of the form of the return, and for what defects it may be quaſhed.

The diſtinction herein laid down in variety of books and caſes is, that on a reſcue on meſne proceſs the ſheriff may return the reſcue, and is ſubject to no action; for that on a meſne proceſs he was not obliged to raiſe his poſſe comitatus, nor would it be convenient ſo to do on the execution of every meſne proceſs. Cro. Eliz. 868. 1 March 1. 1 Jon. 201. 3 Bulſt. 198. 1 Rol. Rep. 389. Noy 40. Moor 852. 2 Lev. 144. 6 Mod. 141. Lutw. 130, 131. But the ſheriff may, if he pleaſes, take his poſſe to arreſt one on meſne proceſs. Noy 40.

But if the ſheriff takes a man on an execution, as on a ca. ſa. and he is reſcued from him before he can bring him to priſon, though he returns the reſcue, yet this ſhall not excuſe him; for when judgment is paſſed, and he and his bail do not ſurrender him, nor pay the condemnation money, and then a capias iſſues, to which there can be no bail, there it is preſumed that he will not be forthcoming, becauſe neither he nor his bail have ſatisfied the judgment; therefore the ſheriff ought to take the poſſe comitatus; conſeqnently it cannot be a good return, that he took the body, but that it was reſcued; and the party may have an action of eſcape againſt the ſheriff on this return; and this is provided by the ſtat. Weſtm. 2. c. 39. which was made to prevent ſheriffs from returning reſcues to the King's writs. Cro. Jac. 419. 1 Rol. Rep. 388, 440. 3 Bulſt. 198. Moor 852. S. C. Probey v. Lumley—Or on a capias utlagatum after judgment. Cro. Jac. 419. 1 Rol. Rep. 389.

In an action on the caſe againſt the ſheriff for an eſcape on meſne proceſs, defendant pleaded a reſcue, which on demurrer was held a good plea, though he did not ſhew that the reſcue was returned. 3 Lev. 46.

But if one taken on meſne proceſs be once in priſon, the ſheriff cannot return a reſcous, for the law preſumes that he hath a power to keep him there. 1 Rol. Rep. 441. 3 Bulſt. 198. Cro. Jac. 419. But if the priſon is broken by the King's enemies, this ſhall excuſe the ſheriff. 4 Co. 84. 1 Vent. 239. But not if broken by rebels and traitors, for the ſheriff or gaoler hath his remedy over againſt them. 4 Co. 84. Cro. Eliz. 815. 2 Mod. 28. 1 Vent. 239.

If a felon be attainted, and in carrying him to execution is reſcued from the ſheriff, the ſheriff is puniſhable notwithſtanding the reſcue; for there is judgment given, and the ſheriff ſhould have taken ſufficient power with him; therefore in that caſe the townſhip is not finable. 1 Hal. Hiſt. P. C. 602. and there ſaid that a reſcue is no excuſe in felony.

It hath been adjudged, that the return of a reſcue by a ſheriff muſt ſhew the year and day on which it was made, ſuch return being in lieu of an indictment. 3 H. 7. 11. pl. 3. Bro. Return de Brief 97. Fitz. Coro. 45. Attach. 1.

But it hath been held, that the ſheriff's return of a reſcue on a latitat, without mentioning the day of the caption, was ſufficient; all the clerks in court affirming the precedents to have been ſo. Palm. 532.

The ſheriff's return of a reſcue, without mentioning the place where it was made, was held bad, and the party diſcharged. Moor 422. pl. 585.

Where the ſheriff returned virtute brevis mihi direct' feci warrant' A. & B. ballivis meis qui virtute inde ceperunt the defendant, & in cuſtodia mea habuerunt quouſque ſuch and ſuch reſcuſſerunt him ex cuſtodia ballivorum meorum; and this return was on motion quaſhed; for per Holt when bailiffs have arreſted the party, he is in fact in their cuſtody, but in law he is in cuſtody of the ſheriff, an anſwer either way is good, viz. that he was reſcued out of the bailiff's cuſtody, or that he was reſcued out of the ſheriff's cuſtody; but to ſay that he was in the cuſtody of theſh eriff, and yet reſcued out of the cuſtody of the bailiff is repugnant. 2 Salk. 586.

It ſeems that anciently, when the ſheriff returned a reſcue, the party was admitted to plead to it as to an indictment, but the courſe of late has been not to admit any plea to it, but drive the party to his action againſt the ſheriff in caſe the return were falſe; hence it is now ſettled that the return of a reſcue is not traverſable, but yet it hath been held that ſubmiſſion to the fine doth not conclude the party grieved from bringing his action for the falſe return, if it were ſo. *Cro. Reſcuſſor, The party who commits ſuch a reſcous. Cro. Jac. 419.

Reſeiſer, (Reſeiſire) Is retaking lands into the hands of the King, where a general livery or ouſter le main was formerly miſuſed, contrary to the order of law. Staundf. Prærog. 26.

Reſervation, (Reſervatio) A keeping aſide, or providing; as when a man lets or parts with his land, but reſerves or provides for himſelf a rent out of it, for his own livelihood; ſometimes it has the force of a ſaving or exception. Co. Lit. 143.

Exception is always of part of the thing granted, and of a thing in being: And a reſervation is of a thing not in being, but is newly created out of the lands or tenements demiſed; though exception and reſervation have been uſed promiſcuouſly. Co. Lit. 47. The proper place for a reſervation, is next after the limitation of the eſtate; and reſervation of rent may be every two, three or more years; as well as yearly, half-yearly, quarterly, &c. Co. Lit. 47. 8 Rep. 71.

It muſt be out of an houſe, or lands; and be made either by the words yeilding and praying, &c. or the word covenant, which is of both leſſor and leſſee, therefore makes a reſervation. Rol. Rep. 80.

The reſervation of rent is good, altho' it is not reſerved by apt and uſual words, if the words are equivalent. Plowd. 120. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 150. But reſervation of a rent ſecundum ratam, is a void reſervation. 2 Vent. 272. See Reddendum, Rent, &c.

Reſiance, (Reſiantia) Signifies a man's abode or continuance; whence comes the participle reſiant, that is continually dwelling or abiding in any place; and is all one with reſidence. Old Nat. Br. 85. Kitch. 33.

Reſiant-Rolls, i. e. Rolls containing the reſiants names of a tithing, &c. which are to be called over by the ſteward on holding courts leet. Comp. Court Keep.

Reſidence, (Reſidentia) Is peculiarly uſed both in the Canon and Common law, for the continuance of a parſon or vicar on his benefice: And perſonal reſidence is required of eccleſiaſtical perſons on their cures, on pain of forfeiting 10*l.* for every month. Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 13.

One of the great duties incumbent on clergymen, is that they be reſident on their livings: And on the firſt erecting parochial churches, every clergyman was obliged to reſide on his benefice, for reading of prayers, preaching, &c. by the laws and canons of the church; and by ſtatute, the parſon ought to abide on his rectory in the parſonage-houſe; for the ſtatute is intended not only for ſerving the cure, and for hoſpitality, but to maintain the houſe in repair, and prevent dilapidations: though lawful impriſonment, ſickneſs, &c. being things of neceſſity, are good cauſe of excuſe for abſence, and excepted out of the act by conſtruction of law: And it is the ſame where a perſon is employed in ſome important buſineſs for the church or King; or is entertained in the King's ſervice. 6 Rep. 21. Cro. Eliz. 580.

In an information on the ſtatute, it was adjudged, that the parſon is to live in the parſonage-houſe, and not in any other, though in the ſame pariſh. But as by ſtatute 13 Eliz. cap. 20. Leaſes made by parſons are declared void, where the parſon is abſent above eighty days in any one year, &c. On this act defendant pleaded to an agreement for tithes, that the parſon was abſent from his parſonage by the ſpace of eighty days in one year; and the jury found that he dwelt in another town adjoining, and came conſtantly to his pariſh church four days in every week, and there read divine ſervice; and it was held, that this was not ſuch an abſence as is intended by the ſtatute to avoid any agreement or leaſe made by the parſon. 1 Bulſt. 112.

A perſon allowed to have two benefices, may demiſe or leaſe one of them (on which he is non-reſident) to his curate only; but if the curate leaſes over, ſuch leaſe ſhall laſt no longer than during the curate's reſidence, without abſence above forty days in any one year. 1 Leon. 100. See Cro. Eliz. 123. Some words in the act 13 Eliz. c. 20. as to leaſes by parſons not reſident, repealed, vide 14 Eliz. cap. 11.

An incumbent preſented by the univerſity to a recuſant's living, ſhall loſe it by ſixty days abſence in a year. 1 W. & M. c. 26. ſ. 6. See 19 Vin. Abr. tit. Reſidence, and ſee Non-reſidence. And Black. Com. 1 V. 390, 392.

Reſiduary Legatee, Is he to whom the reſiduum of the eſtate is left by will. And ſuch legatee being made executor with others, ſhall retain againſt the reſt: where there are two reſiduary legatees, and one dies inteſtate, his adminiſtrator ſhall have a moiety of the ſurplus of the perſonal eſtate of the teſtator, contrary to joint executors, who are not intitled to moieties; becauſe, by making them reſiduary legatees, the teſtator intended an equal ſhare to both: And if a reſiduary legatee dies before the will is proved, his executor ſhall have adminiſtration. &c. 6 H. 7. 1 Chan. Rep. 238. Show. 26. See Executor, and Black. Com. 2 V. 514.

Reſignation, (Reſignatio) Is the yeilding up a benefice into the hands of the ordinary, called by the Canoniſts Renunciation; and though it is all one in nature with the word ſurrender, yet it is by uſe reſtrained to yeilding up a ſpiritual living to the biſhop, as ſurrender is the giving up of temporal land into the hands of the lord. And a reſignation may now be made into the hands of the King as well as the dioceſan, becauſe he has ſupremam authoritatem eccleſiaſticam, as the Pope had in ancient times; tho' it has been adjudged that a reſignation ought to be made only to the biſhop of the dioceſe, and not to the King; becauſe the King is not bound to give notice of the reſignation to the patron, as the ordinary is; nor can the King make a collation himſelf, without preſenting to the biſhop. Plowd. 498. Rol. Abr. 358.

Every parſon who reſigns a benefice, muſt make the reſignation to his ſuperior; as an incumbent to the biſhop, a biſhop to the archbiſhop, and an archbiſhop to the King, as ſupreme ordinary; and a donative is to be reſigned to the patron, not the ordinary; for in that caſe the clerk received his living immediately from the patron. 1 Rep. 137.

A common benefice is to be reſigned to the ordinary, by whoſe admiſſion and inſtitution the clerk firſt came into the church: And the reſignation muſt be made to that ordinary who hath power of inſtitution; in whoſe diſcretion it is either to accept or refuſe the reſignation; as the law hath declared him the proper perſon to whom it ought to be made, it hath likewiſe impowered him to judge thereof. Cro. Jac. 64, 198.

The inſtrument of reſignation is to be directed to the biſhop, and when the biſhop hath accepted of it, the reſignation is good, to make void the church, and not before; unleſs it be where there is no cure, when it is good without the acceptance of the biſhop.

A reſignation may be made before a public notary, but without the biſhop's acceptation it doth not make the church void: the notary can only atteſt the reſignation, in order to its being preſented, &c. Ibid.

Before acceptance of the reſignation by the biſhop, no Preſentation can be had to the church; but, as ſoon as the acceptance is made, the patron may preſent to the benefice reſigned: And when the clerk is inſtituted, the church is full againſt all men in caſe of a common perſon; though, before induction, ſuch incumbent may make the church void again by reſignation. Count. Parſ. Compan. 106.

A parſonage is not to be granted over by the incumbent, but it may be reſigned; and reſignations are to be abſolute, and not conditional; for it is againſt the nature of a reſignation to be conditional, being a judicial act. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 157.

If any incumbent corruptly reſign his benefice, or take any reward for reſigning the ſame, he ſhall forfeit double the value of the ſum, &c. given, and the party giving it, be incapable to hold the living. Stat. 31 Eliz. cap. 6. But a man may bind himſelf by bond to reſign, and it is not unlawful, but may be on good and valuable reaſons; as where he is obliged to reſign if he take a ſecond benefice, or if he be non-reſident by the ſpace of ſo many months, or to reſign on requeſt, if the patron ſhall preſent his ſon or kinſman when he ſhall be of age capable to take the living, &c. Cro. Jac. 249, 274.

Tho' bonds for reſignation of benefices have no encouragement in Chancery; for on ſuch bonds generally the incumbent is relieved, and not obliged to reſign. 1 Rol. Abr. 443.

On debt upon a bond to reſign a benefice, the court would not let defendant's counſel argue the validity of the bond, theſe bonds having been ſo often eſtabliſhed even in a court of equity. 1 Strange 227. But ſuch a bond will not be allowed, where money has been paid on it. Ibid. 534.

A parſon's refuſal to pay his tenths, it is ſaid is a reſignation, for which he may be deprived. Owen 5. And where reſignation is actually made de eccleſia, it extends to all the lands and poſſeſſions of the church. Cro. Jac. 63.

The uſual words of a reſignation are Renuncio, Cedo, Dimitto, and Reſigno; and the word Reſigno is not a proper term alone. 2 Rol. 350. See Black. Com. 1 V. 382, 393.

As to reſignation of temporal offices,—declaring at an aſſembly of the corporation, that he would hold the place of alderman no longer is a good reſignation, eſpecially ſince the corporation accepted it, and choſe another in his place; but till ſuch election he had power to waive his reſignation, but not afterwards. 2 Salk. 433.

A burgeſs of a corporation came to the mayor, and deſired the mayor to remove and diſmiſs him from the place of burgeſs. On return of this, a mandamus was denied to reſtore him; for having reſigned voluntarily, he is eſtopped to ſay, that the mayor had no power to remove him; and the caſe being ſent to Hale Ch. B. he agreed, and ſaid that a corporation, as ſuch, have power to take ſuch reſignation. Sid. 14.

But giving conſent to be removed, does not amount to a reſignation. Per Holt and Powell; a man may reſign an office by parol. Holt's Rep. 450.

Reſignation by a common-council-man need not be by deed. Lutw. 405.

Where an alderman is a juſtice of peace for life, by force of the patent of the King, who created the corporation, he cannot reſign his office of juſtice of peace; becauſe he cannot reſign it but to a ſuperior; per Coke Ch. J. Quod fuit conceſſum; per Haughton. Rol. Rep. 135. pl. 19.

Reſignation of Offices. If a man can have no title to the profits of an office, without the admiſſion or confirmation of a ſuperior, there the reſignation of that office muſt be to him. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 158.

Reſpite of Homage, (Reſpectus homagii) Is the forbearance or delay of homage, which ought to be performed by tenants holding by homage, &c. tho' it had the moſt frequent uſe for ſuch as held in knight ſervice and in capite, who formerly paid into the Exchequer every fifth term ſome ſmall ſum of money to be reſpited their homage: But this charge being incident to, and ariſing from knight ſervice, it is taken away by the ſtat. 12 Car. 2.

Reſponſalis, (Qui reſponſum defert) Is he who appears and anſwers for another in court at a day aſſigned. Glan. lib. 12. c. 1. And Fleta makes a difference between reſponſalem, atturnatum, and eſſoniatorem; and ſays that reſponſalis was for the tenant, not only to excuſe his abſence, but to ſignify what trial he meant to undergo, the combat or the country. Fleta, lib. 6. c. 21.

This word is made uſe of in the Canon law, & ſignificat procuratorem vel eum qui abſentem excuſat.

Reſtitution, (Reſtitutio) Is reſtoring any thing unjuſtly taken from another: It ſignifies alſo the ſetting him in poſſeſſion of lands or tenements, who had been unlawfully diſſeiſed of them. Cromp. Juſt. 144. And reſtitution is a writ which lies where judgment is reverſed, to reſtore and make good to defendant what he hath loſt: The court which reverſes the judgment, gives, on reverſal, a judgment for reſtitution; whereon a ſcire facias quare reſtitutionem habere non debet, reciting the reverſal of the judgment, and the writ of execution, &c. muſt iſſue forth. 2 Lill. Abr. 472. But the law doth often reſtore the poſſeſſion to one without a writ of reſtitution, i. e. by writ of habere facias poſſeſſionem, &c. in the common proceeding of juſtice on a trial at law. Ibid. 473.

There is a reſtitution of the poſſeſſions of lands in caſes of forcible entry; a reſtitution of lands to an heir, on his anceſtor's being attainted of treaſon or felony; and reſtitution of ſtolen goods, &c.

A writ of reſtitution is not properly to be granted but where the party cannot be reſtored by the ordinary courſe of law; and the nature of it is, to reſtore the party to the poſſeſſion of a freehold, or other matter of profit, from which he is illegally removed; and it extends to reſtitution on mandamus to any publick office. 2 Lill. 472, 473.

Where a judgment for land is reverſed in B. R. by writ of error, the court may grant a writ of reſtitution to the ſheriff to put the party in poſſeſſion of the lands recovered from him by the erroneous judgment; tho' there ought to be no reſtitution granted of the poſſeſſion of lands, where it cannot be grounded on ſome matter of record appearing to the court. Hill. 22 Car. And perſons who are to reſtore, are to be parties to the record; or they muſt be made ſo by ſpecial ſcire facias. Cro. Car. 328. 2 Salk. 587.

If a leaſe is taken in execution on a Fi. fa. and ſold by the ſheriff, and afterwards the judgment is reverſed; the reſtitution muſt be of the money for which it was ſold, not the term. Cro. Jac. 246. Moor 788. But a ſheriff extended goods and lands on an elegit, and returned that he took a leaſe for years, which he ſold and delivered to plaintiff as Bona & Catalla of defendant for the debt, and afterwards the judgment was reverſed for error; and it was adjudged, that the party ſhall be reſtored to the leaſe, becauſe the eligit gave the ſheriff no authority to ſell the term, therefore a writ of reſtitution was awarded. Kel. 179. And there has been in this caſe a diſtinction made between compulſory and voluntary acts done in execution of juſtice; where the ſheriff is commanded by the writ to ſell the goods, and where he is not, when the goods are to be reſtored, &c. 8 Rep. 96.

If plaintiff hath execution, and the money is levied and paid, and afterwards the judgment is reverſed, there the party ſhall have reſtitution without a ſcire facias; for it appears on the record what the party had loſt and paid; but if the money was only levied, and not paid, then there muſt be a ſcire facias ſuggeſting the ſum levied, &c. And where the judgment is ſet aſide after execution for an irregularity, there needs no ſcire facias for reſtitution; but an attachment of contempt, if on the rule for reſtitution the money is not reſtored. 2 Salk. 588.

In a ſcire facias quare reſtitution. &c. defendant pleaded payment of the money mentioned in the ſcire facias, and it was held to be no plea. Cro. Car 328. But now payment is a good plea to a ſcire facias by the ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. 2 Lill. Abr. 479.

Upon a Vi lacica removenda a parſon was put out of poſſeſſion; and on a ſuggeſtion thereof, and affidavit made, reſtitution was ordered. Cro. Eliz. 465.

The juſtices of peace, before whom an indictment for forcible entry is found, muſt give the party reſtitution of his lands, &c. who was put out of poſſeſſion by force. Stat. 8 H. 6. c. 9. But where one is indicted for a forcible entry, and the party indicted traverſes the indictment, there cannot be reſtitution before trial and a verdict, and judgment given for the party, tho' the indictment be erroneous; it being too late to move to quaſh the indictment after the traverſe, which puts the matter on trial. 2 Lill. 473, 474.

A perſon being attainted of treaſon, &c. he or his heirs may be reſtored to his lands, &c. by the King's charter of pardon; and the heir by petition of right may be reſtored if the anceſtor is executed: But reſtitution of blood muſt be by act of parliament; and reſtitutions by parliament are ſome of blood only, ſome of blood, honour, inheritance, &c. 3 Inſt. 240. Co. Lit. 8, 391. The King may reſtore the party or his heirs to his lands, and the blood, as to all iſſue begotten after the attainder. Ibid.

There ſhall be a writ of reſtitution granted to the owner of ſtolen goods, by the court where a felon is tried on indictment, after attainder of the felon, as in caſe of appeal of robbery. 21 H. 8. c. 11. And it may be alſo of money when the felon is convicted of the felony by reaſon of the evidence given by the party robbed, or by his procurement, &c. And by this ſtatute executors and adminiſtrators ſhall have reſtitution of goods, and it is ſaid notwithſtanding ſale in market-overt. 2 Inſt. 714. 3 Inſt. 242. 5 Rep. 109.

If goods ſtolen are not waived by flight, or ſeized for the King, the party robbed may take his goods again without proſecuting the felon; but after they are ſeized for the King, they may not be reſtored without appeal or indictment. Kel. 48. 2 Hawk. P. C. 168.

Reſummons, (Reſummonitio) Signifies a ſecond ſummons, or calling a man to anſwer an action, where the firſt ſummons is defeated by any occaſion; and when by death, &c. of the judges, they do not come on the day to which they were continued, for trial of cauſes, ſuch cauſes may be revived or recontinued by reſummons. Reſumption, (Reſumptio) Is particularly uſed for taking again into the King's hands ſuch lands or tenements, &c. as before on falſe ſuggeſtion he had granted by letters patent to any man. Broke 298. It is ſaid, that the King cannot grant a prerogative of power ſo, but that he may reſume it; otherwiſe it is of a grant of an intereſt. Skinner's Rep. 236. Reſumption of Grants is mentioned in the ſtat. 31 Hen. 6. c. 7. and other ſtatutes.

Retainer, (From the Latin Retinere) Signifies, in a legal ſenſe, a ſervant but not menial or familiar, that is, not continually dwelling in the houſe of his maſter, but only wearing his livery, and attending ſometimes upon ſpecial occaſions. This livery was wont to conſiſt of hats (or hoods) badges, or other ſuits of one garment by the year; and were many times given by great men, on deſign of maintenance and quarrels, therefore juſtly forbidden by ſeveral ſtatutes; as 1 R. 2. c. 7. on pain of impriſonment and forfeiture to the King; and again, 16 R. 2. c. 4. 20 R. 2. c. 1. and 1 H. 4. c. 7. by which the offenders ſhould make ranſom at the King's will; and any knight or eſquire thereby duly attainted ſhould loſe his livery, and forfeit his fee for ever, &c. Which ſtatute is further confirmed and explained by 2 H. 4. c. 21. 7 H. 4. c. 3. and 8 H. 6. c. 4. And yet this offence was ſo deeply rooted, that Edward the Fourth was neceſſitated to confirm the former ſtatutes, and further to extend their meaning, as appears by 8 Edw. 4. cap. 2. adding a ſpecial penalty of five pounds on every man who gave ſuch livery, and as much on every one ſo retained, either by writing, oath or promiſe, for every month.

Theſe are by the feudiſts called effidati, ſic enim dicuntur qui in alicujus fidem & tutelam recepti ſunt. And as our retainers are here forbidden, ſo are thoſe affidats in other countries. But moſt of the above-mentioned ſtatutes are repealed by 3 Car. 1. c. 1. Cowell.

Retainer of debts, By an executor or adminiſtrator, is a remedy effected by the mere operation of law, ſee Black. Com. 2 V. 511. 3 V. 18. and tit. Executors and Adminiſtrators.

Retaining fee, (Merces retinens) Is the firſt fee given to any ſerjeant or counſellor at law, whereby to make him ſure that he ſhall not be on the contrary part: It is, Honorarium ſeu præmium cauſidici præcedaneum, quo clienti ſuo obligatur ne adverſarii cauſam agat.

Retenementum, Is a word uſed for detaining, withholding, or keeping back. And ſine ullo retenemento was an uſual expreſſion in old deeds and conveyances of lands. Cowell.

Retinentia, A retinue, or perſons retained to a prince or nobleman. Pat. 14 R. 2.

Retractus Aquæ, The ebb or return of a tide. Plac. 30 Edw. 1.

Retraxit, Is when plaintiff cometh in perſon in court where his action is brought, and ſaith he will not proceed in it; and this is a bar to that action for ever: It is ſo called, becauſe it is the emphatical word in the Latin entry, entered thus, ſſ. Et præd. quer. in propria perſona ſua venit & dicit quod ipſe placitum ſuum præd. verſus præd. defenden. ulterius proſequi non vult, ſed abinde omnino ſe retraxit, &c.

A retraxit muſt be always in perſon; if it is by attorney, it is error: 8 Rep. 58. 3 Salk. 245.

As to a retraxit, it is a bar to any action of equal nature brought for the ſame cauſe or duty; but a nonſuit is not. 1 Inſt. 208. See Wilſ. par. 1. 90.

If plaintiff ſays he will not appear, this is not a retraxit, but nonſuit: But if the plaintiff ſays he will NOT SUE, it is a retraxit. 2 Danv. Abr. 471. And retraxit is always on the part of plaintiff or demandant; and it cannot be before a declaration, for before the declaration it is only a nonſuit. 3 Leon. 47. 2 Lill. Abr. 476.

If paintiff enter a retraxit againſt one joint-treſpaſſer, it is a releaſe to the other. Cro. Eliz. 762. Sed qu? and ſee the next caſe. But if a retraxit be entered as to one appellee in appeal of murder, the ſuit may be continued againſt the reſt; becauſe the appellant is to have a ſeveral execution againſt every one of them. H. P. C. 190. In a prohibition by three, a retraxit of one ſhall not bar the other two plaintiffs. Moor 469. Nelſ. Abr. 165. See Nolle Proſequi. And Black. Com. 3 V. 296, 395.

Rette, (Fr.) A charge or accuſation. Stat. Weſt. 1. cap. 2.

Return, (Returna, or retorna, from the Fr. retour, i. e. redditio, recurſus) Hath many applications in law; but is moſt commonly uſed for the return of writs, which is the certificate of the ſheriff made to the court, of what he hath done touching the execution of any writ directed to him; and where a writ is executed, or defendant cannot be found, &c. then this matter is indorſed on the back of the writ by the officer, and delivered into the court whence the writ iſſued, at the day of the return thereof in order to be filed. Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 39. 2 Lill. Abr. 476.

The name of the ſheriff muſt always be to the return of writs; otherwiſe it doth not appear how they came into court; If a writ be returned by a perſon to whom it is not directed, the return is not good, it being the ſame as if there was no return on it. And after a return is filed it cannot be amended; but before it may. Cro. Eliz. 310. 2 Lil. Abr. 477, 478.

If the ſheriff doth not make a return of a writ, the court will amerce him: ſo if he makes an inſufficient return; and if he makes a falſe return, the party grieved may have an action on the caſe againſt him. Wood's Inſt. 71.

If a ſheriff return a vouchee ſummoned, where in truth he is dead and there is no ſuch perſon; or in a præcipe quod reddat that the tenant is dead, &c. there may be an averment againſt ſuch returns, by the ſtat. 14 Ed. 3. c. 8. Jenk. Cent. 121, 122.

Some returns are a kind of declaration of an accuſation; as the return of a reſcous, and the like; and theſe muſt be certain and perfect, or they will be ill. 11 Rep. 40. Plow. 63, 117. Keilw. 165.

Writs to do things in franchiſes, are directed to, and returned by the ſheriff, to whom bailiffs make their returns: And an action will lie againſt a ſheriff, who takes the return of one who is no bailiff, and againſt him who makes it; and likewiſe againſt the bailiff of a franchiſe, for negligence in execution, &c. 7 Ed. 4. 14. 12 Ed. 4. 15. Moor, c. 606.

Sheriffs are to accept of returns of bailiffs of liberties, where they are ſufficient. 1 Danv. 191.

Returno Habendo, Is a writ which lies where cattle are diſtrained and replevied, and the perſon who took the diſtreſs juſtifies the taking, and proves it lawful; on which the cattle are to be returned to him.

This writ alſo lieth when the plaint in replevin is removed by recordare, into the King's Bench or Common Pleas, and he whoſe cattle are diſtrained makes default, and doth not proſecute his ſuit. F. N. B. 74. See Replevin.

Returnum irreplegiabile, Is a writ judicial, directed to the ſheriff for the final reſtitution or return of cattle to the owner when unjuſtly taken or diſtrained, and ſo found by verdict; and it is granted after a nonſuit in a ſecond deliverance. Reg. Judic. 27.

Reve, or Gereve, (From the Saxon word, Græſa, Præfæctus. Lambard's explication of Saxon words, verb. Præfectus) Signifies with us the bailiff of a franchiſe or manor eſpecially in the Weſtern part of England: Hence ſhire-reve for ſheriff. See Kitchin 43.

Revelach, rebellion, from revellare, to rebel. Quicunque faciebat revelach vel latrocinium vel violentiam fœminæ in domo inferebat, 20 ſolidis emendebatur. Gale. Domeſday, tit. Ceſtreſcire.

Reveland, Domeſday book. ſherefordſc. Terra Regis. Hæc terra fuit tempore Edwardi Regis Tainland, ſed poſtea converſa eſt in Reveland. Et item dicunt legati Regis, quod ipſa terra & cenſus qui inde exit, furtim aufertur a rege.

The land here ſaid to have been Thaneland, T. E. R. and after converted into Reveland, ſeems to have been ſuch land as being reverted to the King after the death of his Thane, who had it for life, was not ſince granted out to any by the King, but reſted in charge on the account of the Reve or bailiff of the manor, who (as it ſeemeth) being in this lordſhip of Hereford, like the Reeve in Chaucer, a falſe brother, concealed the land from the auditor, and kept the profit of it, till the ſurveyors, who are here called legati Regis, diſcovered this falſhood, and preſented to the King that furtim aufertur Regi.

This paſſage from Domeſday-book is imperfectly quoted by Sir Edward Coke, in his Inſtitutes, ſect. 117. who from theſe words draws a falſe inference, That land holden by knight ſervice was called Thain-land, and land holden by ſocage was called reve-land. Cowell. See Spelman of Feuds, c. 24. See Teinland.

Revels, Signify with us ſports of dancing, maſking, &c. formerly uſed in Princes courts, the inns of court, or other noblemens houſes, which are commonly performed by night; and there was an officer to order and ſuperviſe them, who was intitled Maſter of the Revels, Cowell.

Revenue, (Fr.) Is properly the yearly rent which accrues to any man from his lands and poſſeſſion; and is generally uſed for the revenues or profits of the crown.

Whoever chuſes to be informed of the fiſcal prerogatives of the King, or ſuch as regard his revenue; which the Britiſh conſtitution hath veſted in the royal perſon, in order to ſupport his dignity and maintain his power, will find them very curiouſly and learnedly treated of by Blackſtone, in the 8th Chapter of the firſt Vol. of his Commentaries.

Reverſal, Of judgment, is making it void for error, and when, on the return of a writ of error, it appears that the judgment is erroneous, then the court give judgment, Quod judicium revocetur, adnulletur & penitus pro nullo habeatur. 2 Lill. Abr. 481.

The eldeſt judge of the court, or in his abſence the next in ſeniority, always pronounces the reverſal of an erroneous judgment openly in court, on the prayer of the party; and formerly it was the courſe to pronounce it in French, to this effect, Pur les errors evandit, & auter errors manifeſt in le record, ſoit le judgment reverſe, &c. Trin. 22 Car. B. R. The judge now only ſays, judgment affirmed, or, judgment reverſed, as the caſe happens.

Reverſal of a judgment may be pronounced conditionally, i. e. That the judgment is reverſed if defendant in the writ of error doth not ſhew good cauſe to the contrary at an appointed time; and this is called a revocetur niſi; and if no cauſe be then ſhewn, it ſtands reverſed without further motion. 2 Lill. 482.

The ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. hath provided a new writ, where judgment is reverſed after verdict, or where an outlawry is reverſed, &c. Lutw. 264. Vide Attainder, Error, Judgment, Outlawry.

Reverſion, (Reverſio, from Revertor) Signifies a returning again; therefore Reverſio terræ eſt tanquam terra revertens in poſſeſſione donatori ſive hæredibus ſuis poſt donum finitum. 1 Inſt 142.

A reverſion hath two ſignifications; the one is an eſtate left, which continues during a particular eſtate in being; and the other is the returning of the land after the particular eſtate is ended: It is ſaid to be an intereſt in the land, when the poſſeſſion ſhall fall, and ſo it is commonly taken; or it is when the eſtate which was parted with for a time, ceaſeth and is determined in the perſons of the alienees or grantees, &c. and returns to the grantor or donor, or their heirs from whence derived. Plow. 160. 1 Inſt. 142.

But the uſual definition of a reverſion is, that it is the reſidue of an eſtate left in the grantor after a particular eſtate granted away, continuing in him who granted the particular eſtate; and where the particular eſtate is derived out of his eſtate: As in a gift in tail, the reverſion of the fee-ſimple is in the donor; and in a leaſe for life, or years, the reverſion is in the leſſor: Alſo a reverſion takes place after a remainder, where a perſon makes a diſpoſition of a leſs eſtate, than that whereof he was ſeiſed at the time of making thereof. 1 Inſt. 22, 142. Wood's Inſt. 151.

When the particular eſtate determines, then the reverſion comes into poſſeſſion, and before it is ſeparated from it; for he who hath the poſſeſſion, cannot have the reverſion, becauſe, by uniting them, the one is drowned in the other. 2 Lill. Abr. 484.

The reverſion of land when it falls, is the land itſelf; and the poſſeſſion of the tenant, preſerves the reverſion of the lands, with the rents, &c. in the donor, or leſſor. 1 Inſt. 324.

A reverſion of an eſtate of inheritance, may be granted by bargain and ſale inrolled, leaſe and releaſe, fine, &c. And by the grant of lands, a reverſion will paſs; tho' by the grant of a reverſion, land in poſſeſſion will not paſs. Bridgm. Conveyan. 237. 6 Rep. 36. 5 Rep. 124. 10 Rep. 107.

If one have a reverſion in fee, expectant on a leaſe for years, he may make a bargain and ſale of his reverſion for one year, and then make a releaſe to the bargainee in fee; by which the reverſion in fee will paſs to the bargainee. 2 Lil. Abr. 483. And a reverſioner may covenant to ſtand ſeiſed of a reverſion to uſes, &c. 11 Rep. 46. Likewiſe a reverſion may be deviſed by will; and a teſtator being ſeiſed in fee of lands which he had in poſſeſſion, and of other lands in reverſion, deviſed all his lands for payment of debts; adjudged, that by the words all his lands, the reverſion as well as the poſſeſſion paſſed. 2 And. 59. Cro. Eliz. 159.

A perſon deviſed a manor to A. B. for ſix years, and ſome other lands to C. D. and his heirs; and all the reſt of his lands to his brother, and the heirs male of his body; and it was held that theſe words, "the reſt of his lands," did not only extend to the lands which were not deviſed before, but to the reverſion in fee of the manor, after the determination of the eſtate for years. Allen 28. And by deviſe of all lands, tenements and hereditaments, undiſpoſed of before in a will, a reverſion in fee will paſs. 2 Vent. 285. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 166.

One ſeiſed of lands in fee, deviſes part thereof to B. for life, and after, by the ſame will, gives to C. all his lands not before particularly diſpoſed of; by this deviſe of "all lands," &c. the reverſion of the part given for life paſſes to C. Preced. Chanc. 202. There was leſſee for years, remainder for life, reverſion in fee, the tenant for life died, and the leſſee for years did not attorn to him in the reverſion; yet it was reſolved, that it paſſed without attornment, and he might bring an action of debt, or avow. Hetl. 73.

If tenant for life, and he in reverſion, join in a leaſe for life, or gift in tail, rendering rent; it ſhall enure, after the death of tenant for life, to him in reverſion. 1 Inſt. 214.

The particular eſtate for life or years, and his eſtate in reverſion, are divers and diſtinct; therefore aid may be prayed of him in the reverſion: Yet theſe eſtates have relation one to another. 3 Shep. Abr. 220.

Copyholder for life, cannot by forfeiture or otherwiſe deſtroy the eſtate in reverſion: And he who hath a reverſion cannot be put out of it, unleſs the tenant be ouſted of his poſſeſſion alſo. 39 Hen. 6. Plowd. 162. Yelv. 1.

Reverſions expectant on an eſtate-tail, are not aſſets, or of any account in law, becauſe they may be cut off by fine and recovery; but it is otherwiſe of a reverſion on an eſtate for life, or years. 1 Inſt. 173. 6 Rep. 38. Wood's Inſt. 151.

No leaſe, rent-charge, or eſtate, &c. made by tenant in tail in remainder, ſhall charge the poſſeſſion of the reverſioner. 2 Lill. 448. But as no ſtatute hath made any proviſion for thoſe who have remainders or reverſions on any eſtate-tail, they are barred by a recovery. 10 Rep. 32.

There were no reverſions or remainders on eſtates in tail, at Common law: And by the Common law, no grantee of a reverſion could take advantage of any condition or covenant broken by the leſſees of the ſame land; but by ſtatute, grantees of reverſions may take advantage of conditions and covenants againſt leſſees of the ſame lands, as fully as the leſſors and their heirs; and the leſſees may have the like remedies againſt the grantees of reverſions, etc. 1 Inſt. 327. 32 H. 8. c. 34.

A reverſioner may bring action on the caſe for ſpoiling trees; for any injury to his reverſion, he may have this action; but he cannot have treſpaſs, which is founded on the poſſeſſion. 3 Lev. 209, 233. 3 Cro. 55.

He in reverſion ſhall have a writ of entry ad communem legem, where tenant for life, etc. aliens the lands: And writ of intruſion, after their deaths, etc. New Nat. Br. 461.

How to plead a reverſion in fee. 2 Lutw. 1174.

The difference between a reverſion and a remainder, is that a remainder is general, and may be to any man, but to him who granteth the land, for term of life or otherwiſe; and a reverſion is to himſelf from whom the conveyance of the land proceeded, and is commonly perpetual, &c: And remainder is an eſtate, appointed over at the ſame time: But the reverſion is not always at the ſame time appointed over. See Remainder. And Black. Com. 2 V. 175. Reverſions in Offices, vide Office.

Review, (Fr. Reveue) A Bill of Review in Chancery, is where the cauſe hath been heard, and the decree therein ſigned; but ſome error appears in the body of the decree, or new matter is diſcovered in time after the decree made: Which bill muſt be exhibited by leave of the court, and is uſually done on oath made of the diſcovery of new matter, which could not be had or uſed at the time of the decree paſſed; and the ſum of 20*l.* muſt be depoſited in court, on bringing this bill, as a ſecurity for coſts and delay, if the matter be found againſt the party, &c. Ord. in Chan. 69. *Pract. Revival of perſons hanged. It is clear, that if, on judgment to be hanged by the neck till dead, the criminal be not throughly killed, but revives, the ſheriff muſt hang him again. 2 Hal. P. C. 412. 2 Hawk. P. C. 463. For the former hanging was no execution of the ſentence; and, if a falſe tenderneſs were to be indulged in ſuch caſes, a multitude of colluſions might enſue. Nay, even while abjurations were in force, ſuch a criminal, ſo reviving, was not allowed to take ſanctuary and abjure the realm; but his fleeing to ſanctuary was held an eſcape in the officer. *Fitzh. Reviving, Is a word metaphorically applied, to rents and actions, and ſignifies renewing them after they are extinguiſhed. Of which ſee many examples in Broke, tit. Revivings of Rents, Actions, &c. 23. See 19 Vin. Abr. 228—230.

Revivor, or Bill of Revivor, or Reviver, Is when a bill hath been exhibited in Chancery, againſt one who anſwers, and before the cauſe is heard, or if heard, and the decree is not inrolled, either party dies: In this caſe a bill of Revivor muſt be brought, praying the former proceedings may ſtand revived, and be put in the ſame condition as at the time of abatement.

If a party dieth, a female plaintiff marries, or there have been no proceedings on a decree, &c. for a year paſt, the decree and proceedings muſt be revived by ſubpœna ſcire facias, or if the decree be inrolled, by bill of Revivor: But if the parties are not heirs or executors, &c. to the party dead, the decree or cauſe is to be revived by original bill, and not by ſubpœna ſcire facias or bill of Revivor; and a bill of Revivor lies not on a decree of long ſtanding, but an original bill is to be preferred. Practiſ. Solic. 122. See Black. Com. 3 V. 448.

Revocation, (Revocatio) Signifies the calling back of a thing granted; or a deſtroying or making void of ſome deed that had exiſtence until the act of Revocation made it void. 2 Lil. Abr. 485. And a revocation may be either general, of all acts and things done before; or ſpecial, to revoke ſuch a thing: And where any deed or thing is revoked, it is as if it never had been. 5 Rep. 90. Perk. ſect. 105. In voluntary deeds and conveyances, there are frequently proviſoes containing power of revocation, which being coupled with an uſe, and tending to paſs by raiſing of uſes, according to the Stat. 27 Hen. 8. c. 10. are allowed to be good, and not repugnant; as where one ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee, covenants to ſtand ſeiſed thereof to the uſe of himſelf for life, and after to the uſe of his ſon in tail, remainder over, &c. with proviſo that he may revoke any of the ſaid uſes; now, if afterwards he revokes them, he is ſeiſed again in fee, without entry or claim: But in caſe of a feoffment or other conveyance, whereby the feoffee or grantee is in by the Common law, ſuch proviſo would be merely repugnant and void. 1 Inſt. 237. Stat. 27 Hen. 8. c. 10.

Voluntary eſtates made with power of revocation, as to purchaſers, are held in equal degree with conveyances made by fraud and covin to defraud purchaſers. 27 Eliz. c. 4. 3 Rep. 82.

Uſes, and powers in contingency and poſſibility, by mutual aſſent of parties may be revoked and determined; and as by indenture they may be raiſed, ſo, by proviſo or limitation in the ſame indenture, they may be extinguiſhed and deſtroyed. 10 Rep. 86. And where a power of revocation is reſerved for a man to diſpoſe of his own eſtate, it ſhall always have a favourable conſtruction; but it ſhall be taken ſtrictly when it is to charge the eſtate of another. 2 Vent. 250.

When there is a power to revoke uſes, a new declaration of uſes is a ſufficient revocation of the former, without any expreſs diſannulling, &c. Alſo if power is reſerved to a man to revoke a deed by writing, ſubſcribed and ſealed in the preſence of two or more credible witneſſes; if he makes his will in writing, without making any expreſs revocation, it will be a good revocation, and the will a good execution of the power. Hob. 312. Raym. 295. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 168, 169. Though it hath been held, that all incident circumſtances preſcribed by the proviſo or power of revocation, as to ſubſcriptions, witneſſes, &c. ought to be obſerved. 6 Rep. 33. 10 Rep. 143. 2 Lil. 487.

It hath been decreed, that the limitation of new uſes is good, where the expreſs power in the firſt deed was only to revoke. 1 Chanc. Rep. 242. If a perſon make a feoffment in fee, or levy a fine, &c. of the lands, before the deed of revocation is executed; theſe amount to a revocation in law, and extinguiſh the power of revocation. 1 Vent. 371. 1 Rep. 111. Power of revocation may be releaſed; and where a man has an intire power of revocation, and he ſuſpends or extinguiſhes it as to part, he may revoke as to the reſidue, if the conveyance was by way of uſe; but not where a condition is annexed to the land. 1 Rep. 174. Moor 615. A will is revocable; and a laſt will revokes the former: Though a new publication of the firſt will, where there are two wills, it is ſaid may revoke the laſt. Perk. 479. 2 Sid. 2. See 3 Mod. 207.

Wills are to be revoked by ſome other will in writing, ſigned in the preſence of three witneſſes, or by cancelling by the teſtator, &c. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. A will revoking a former, though it muſt be ſubſcribed by three witneſſes, it is ſaid need not be in the teſtator's preſence, as the will of lands muſt be, by the ſtatute. 1 P. Williams 344. If a perſon cancels or revokes either the duplicate or original will, this avoids both, they being but one will, and muſt ſtand or fall together.

But where a man makes a ſecond will, and intends that as a revocation of the firſt; if it be inſufficient, it ſhall not deſtroy the firſt will though cancelled. 3 Mod. 220, 258. 2 Vern. 741.

A. makes his will in 1759, and at the ſame time a duplicate thereof; he ſaid, he made it to pleaſe his wife, but that it was not a will to his liking. The duplicate was left with his daughter. He afterwards ſends for his attorney, tears off the ſeals, and orders the witneſſes names to be cut out; which was done in his preſence. He made a new will the ſame day, with expreſs clauſe of revocation, gave it the attorney to keep, ſaying he would not have the heir ſee it. He afterwards ſent to his attorney in order to make a new one, and to bring his ſecond; the will was ſent; but before the attorney came the teſtator was inſenſible; and died that day without making any other will. The cancellation of the firſt will in his own poſſeſſion was a revocation both of it and of the duplicate; nor did the revocation of the ſecond will, ſet up the firſt. Burtenſhaw v. Gilbert. Llofft's Reports 465.

The teſtator is to be of a good diſpoſing memory when he revokes his will, as well as when he makes it; he muſt have animum revocandi, as well as animum teſtandi, to make an effectual revocation. Show. 89. Cro. Jac. 497. Hard. 374. 3 Mod. 203.

Writings of revocation are to be taken according to the ſubject matter, viz. where a laſt will cannot ſtand with the firſt. Ibid. A teſtator made his will, and ſome time afterwards made a feoffment of the lands in the will to uſes; and adjudged this was a revocation of his will, becauſe a will cannot take effect till after his death. Dyer 74. A tenant in tail made his will in writing, which was duly executed; afterwards he made a bargain and ſale of the ſame lands contained in the will, to make a tenant to the præcipe, in order to ſuffer a common recovery, which was done accordingly, and he declared the uſes to himſelf and his heirs: by the bargain and ſale, &c. the will was revoked. 3 Lev. 108.

It hath been admitted to be a ſettled rule in Chancery, that where a teſtator deviſes his land in fee to one, and after mortgages it in fee to another, and then dies before the principal and intereſt is paid; this is not a total revocation of the will, but only quoad ſo much for which the lands were mortgaged, and the deviſee ſhall have the equity of redemption. 1 Salk. 236, 258. Where lands are deviſed to one in fee, and after mortgaged to the ſame perſon, it is a revocation in toto of the deviſe; but if the land be mortgaged to a ſtranger, in that caſe it is otherwiſe. Preced. Canc. 515. A man ſeiſed of lands, deviſes the ſame in fee, or for life, and afterwards makes a leaſe thereof to another for years, it ſhall not be a revocation but during the years: Though in caſe a perſon has deviſed lands to one and his heirs, and after leaſes the ſame to him for a certain term, to commence after his death; this is a revocation of the whole eſtate. 1 Rol. Abr. 616. 2 Cro. 49.

In caſe a fortune be given to a child by the father, ſubſequent to the making of his will, wherein he had bequeathed her a portion; this ſhall be taken as a revocation of the legacy and will for ſo much. Preced. in Chan. 183. A perſon being unmarried, by will deviſed all his perſonal eſtate to T. P. and afterwards he married and had ſeveral children; and died without making any other will: It was ruled by Commiſſioners of Delegates, that there being ſuch an alteration of his eſtate and circumſtances, ſo widely different from the time of making his will to his death, there was room to preſume a revocation, and that he did not continue of the ſame mind when he died. 2 Salk. 592.

Letters of attorney, and other authorities, may be revoked, by the perſons giving the powers; and as they are revocable in their nature, it has been adjudged, that they may be revoked, though they are made irrevocable. 8 Rep. 82. Wood's Inſt. 286. Theſe revocations of a power regularly muſt be made after the ſame manner it was given; and there ought to be notice to the party, &c. But if once the power be executed, a revocation after will come too late. Dyer 210.

A warrant of attorney from a defendant to appear and accept a declaration, and plead for the defendant, may not be revoked with an intent to ſtay the plaintiff's proceedings; but the defendant on good cauſe ſhewn to the court may change his attorney, ſo as he plead by another in due time. Mich. 24 *Car. None ſhall ride armed by night or day to the terror of the people, or come with force and arms before the King's juſtices, &c. during their office, upon pain to forfeit their armour, and ſuffer impriſonment at the King's pleaſure; and a fine may be ſet upon them by the juſtices, by 10 Rich. 2. cap. 1. And no perſon can excuſe the going or riding armed in public, by alledging that he wears armour for his defence againſt an aſſault; but men may wear common arms according to their quality and the faſhion, and have attendants with them armed agreeable to their characters; alſo perſons may ride or go armed to take felons, ſuppreſs riots, execute the King's proceſs, &c. 3 Inſt. 162.

Riens arrear, A plea uſed in an action of debt for arrearages of account, whereby the defendant alledges that there is nothing in arrear. Book Entr.

Riens per Deſcent, Is the plea of an heir, where he is ſued for his anceſtor's debt, and hath no land from him by deſcent, or aſſets in his hands. 3 Cro. 151. In an action of debt againſt the heir, who pleads riens per deſcent, judgment may be had preſently; and where aſſets deſcend, a ſcire facias lies againſt the heir, &c. 8 Rep. 134. This means a judgment of aſſets, in futuro.

Rier County, (Retro Comitatus, from the Fr. arrear, i. e. poſterior) Is oppoſed to full and open county; and appears to be ſome public place, which the ſheriff appoints for receipt of the King's money, after the end of his county court. 2 Ed. 3. cap. 5. *Stat. Riffiare, (from the Sax. riefe, rapina) Is to take away any thing by force; from whence comes our Engliſh word rifle. Leg. Hen. 1. c. 57.

Riflura, A ſlight wound in the fleſh: It is mentioned in Fleta, lib. 1. c. 41.

Right, (jus) In general ſignification includes not only a right for which a writ of right lies, but alſo any title or claim, either by virtue of a condition, mortgage, or the like, for which no action is given by law, but only an entry. Co. Lit. lib. 3. cap. 8. ſect. 445.

There is jus proprietatis, a right of property; jus poſſeſſionis, a right of poſſeſſion; and jus proprietatis & poſſeſſionis, a right both of property and poſſeſſion; and this was anciently called jus duplicatum: For example, If a man be diſſeiſed of an acre of land, the diſſeiſee hath jus proprietatis, the diſſeiſor hath jus poſſeſſionis; and if the diſſeiſee releaſe to the diſſeiſor, he hath jus proprietatis & poſſeſſionis. Co. Lit. lib. 3. ſect. 447.

Jus eſt ſextuplex. 1. Jus recuperandi. 2. Intrandi. 3. Habendi. 4. Retinendi. 5. Percipiendi. 6. Et poſſidendi. Co. 8 Rep. Edward Altham's caſe.

Gilbert, Treat. of Ten. 18. ſays, That the diſſeiſor has only the naked poſſeſſion, becauſe the diſſeiſee may enter and evict him; but againſt all other perſons the diſſeiſor has right, and in this reſpect only can be ſaid to have the right of poſſeſſion; for in reſpect to the diſſeiſee he has no right at all. But when a deſcent is caſt, the heir of the diſſeiſor has jus poſſeſſionis, becauſe the diſſeiſee cannot enter upon his poſſeſſion, and evict him, but is put to his real action, being the freehold caſt upon the heir; and ſays, That the notions of the law do make this title to him, that there may be a perſon in being to do the feudal duties, to fill the poſſeſſion, and to anſwer the actions of all perſons whatever; and ſince it is the law that gives him this right, and obliges him to theſe duties, antecedent to any act of his own, it muſt defend ſuch poſſeſſion from the act of any other perſon whatever; till ſuch poſſeſſion be evicted by judgment; which being alſo the act of law may deſtroy the heir's title.

There are alſo a preſent and future right; a jus in re, which may be granted to a ſtranger; and what is called a naked right, or jus ad rem, where an eſtate is turned to a right, on a diſcontinuance, &c. Co. Lit. 345.

A right in writs and pleadings, is properly in one, when he is ouſted of the poſſeſſion of his eſtate by diſſeiſin or wrong, and hath remedy by entry, or action:

But right doth alſo include an eſtate in eſſe in conveyances; and therefore if tenant in fee-ſimple makes a leaſe and releaſe of all his right in the land to another, the whole eſtate in fee paſſes. Wood's Inſt. 115, 116.

Sir Edward Coke tells us, That of ſuch an high eſtimation is right, that the law preſerveth it from death and deſtruction; trodden down it may be, but never trodden out: And there is ſuch an extreme enmity between an eſtate gained by wrong and an ancient right, that the right cannot poſſibly incorporate itſelf with the eſtate gained by wrong. 1 Inſt. 279. 6 Rep. 70. 8 Rep. 105. A right may ſometimes ſleep, though it never dies; a long poſſeſſion exceeding the memory of man, will make a right; and if two perſons are in poſſeſſion by divers titles, the law will adjudge the poſſeſſion in him that hath the right. Co. Lit. 478. 6 Lit. ſect. 158. Where there is no remedy, there is preſumed to be no right by law. Vaugh. 38.

No commands ſhall be made under the great or little Seal, to diſturb or delay common right Stat. 2 Ed. 3. c. 8. See Recto. See alſo Property, and 19 Vin. Abr. 230—233.

Rights and Liberties. The rights and liberties of the Engliſh ſubject are ſecured (not granted) by Magna Charta, confirmed by many ſubſequent ſtatutes, and particularly by the act of the firſt of William and Mary, ſtat. 2. c. 2. (36.) See moſt of the laws relative to this ſubject collected together, with many obſervations, and an eſſay on the conſtitution, in an octavo work, called Britiſh Liberties, being an enlargement of Care's Engliſh Liberties.

Rights and Liberties. The declaration of rights and liberties againſt the conduct of King James II. ſets forth, That he, by the aſſiſtance of divers evil counſellors, did endeavour to ſubvert the laws and liberties of this kingdom; by exerciſing a power of diſpenſing with, and ſuſpending of laws; by levying money for the uſe of the crown by pretence of prerogative, without conſent of parliament; by raiſing and keeping a ſtanding army, in time of peace; by violating the freedom of election of members to ſerve in parliament; by violent proſecutions in the court of King's Bench; and cauſing partial and corrupt jurors to be returned on trials; exceſſive bail to be taken; and exceſſive fines to be impoſed; alſo cruel puniſhments inflicted, &c. All which were declared to be illegal, and infringing upon the ancient rights and liberties of the people. Stat. 1 W. & M. ſt. 2. c. 2. (36.)

Ringa, A military girdle; from the Sax. ring, i. e. annulus, circulus, becauſe it was girt round the middle: But, according to Bracton, ringa enim dicuntur quod renes circumdant, unde dicitur accingere gladio. Bract. lib. 1. c. 8.

Riot, Rout, and unlawful Aſſembly, Riot, (riota and riottum, from the Fr. riotte, quod non ſolum rixam & jurgium ſignificat, ſed vinculum etiam, quo plura in unum, faſciculorum inſtar, colligantur) Signifies the forcible doing of an unlawful thing by three, or more perſons aſſembled together for that purpoſe. Weſt. Symbol. part. 2. tit. Indictments, ſect. 65. The difference between a riot, rout and unlawful aſſembly, ſee in Lamb. Eiren. lib. 2. c. 5. Stat. 1 Mar. c. 12. and Kitchin 19. who gives theſe examples of riots, the breach of incloſures, banks, conduits, parks, pounds, houſes, barns, the burning of ſtacks of corn, &c. Lamb. ubi ſupra, mentions theſe, to beat a man, to enter upon a poſſeſſion forcibly. Cowell.

Holt Ch. J. in delivering the opinion of the court, ſaid, That the books are obſcure in the definition of riots, and that he took it, that it is not neceſſary to ſay they aſſembled for that purpoſe; but there muſt be an unlawful aſſembly; and as to what act will make a riot or treſpaſs, ſuch an act as will make a treſpaſs will make a riot. 11 Mod. 116. pl. 2. Trin. 6 Ann. B. R. The Queen v. Soley.

As if a number of men aſſemble with arms, in terrorem populi, though no act is done, it is a riot. Hob. 91. If three come out of an alehouſe, and go armed, it is a riot. 3 H. 7. 1. Per Holt Ch. J. in delivering the opinion of the court. 11 Mod. 116, 117. The Queen v. Soley.

Hawkins ſays, A riot ſeems to be a tumultuous diſturbance of the peace by three perſons, or more, aſſembling together of their own authority, with an intent mutually to aſſiſt one another againſt any who ſhall oppoſe them, in the execution of ſome enterprize of a private nature, and afterwards actually executing the ſame in a violent turbulent manner, to the terror of the people, whether the act intended was of itſelf lawful or unlawful. Hawk. P. C. 155. c. 65. ſ. 1.

A rout ſeems to be, according to the general opinion, a diſturbance of the peace by perſons aſſembling together with an intent to do a thing, which if it be executed will make them rioters, and actually making a motion towards the execution thereof: but by ſome books, the notion of a riot is confined to ſuch aſſemblies only, as are occaſioned by ſome grievance common to all the company, as the incloſure of land in which they all claim a right of common, &c. However, in as much as it generally agrees with a riot, as to all the reſt of the above-mentioned particulars, requiſite to conſtitute a riot, except only in this, that it may be a compleat offence without the execution of the intended enterprize, it ſeems not to require any farther explication. Hawk. P. C. 158. c. 65. ſ. 8.

That an unlawful aſſembly, according to the common opinion, is a diſturbance of the peace by perſons barely aſſembling together, with an intention to do a thing, which, if it was executed, would make them rioters, but neither actually executing it, nor making a motion toward the execution of it; but he ſays this ſeems to be much too narrow a definition; for any meeting whatſoever of great numbers of people with ſuch circumſtances of terror, as cannot but endanger the public peace, and raiſe fears and jealouſies among the King's ſubjects, ſeems properly to be called an unlawful aſſembly; as where great numbers, complaining of a common grievance, meet together armed in a warlike manner, in order to conſult together concerning the moſt proper means for the recovery of their intereſts; for no one can foreſee what may be the event of ſuch an aſſembly. Hawk, P. C. 158. c. 65. ſ. 9.

If a man be in his houſe, and he hears that J. S. will come to his houſe to beat him, he may well make an aſſembly of people of his friends and neighbours to aſſiſt and aid him in ſafe keeping his perſon. Per Fineux Ch. J. Br. Riots, pl. 1. cites 21 H. 7. 39.

But if a man be menaced or threatened that if he comes to the market of B. or to W. that he ſhall be beat, he cannot make an aſſembly of people to aſſiſt him to go there, and this in ſafeguard of his perſon; for he need not go there, and he may have remedy by ſurety of the peace; but the houſe of a man is to him his caſtle and his defence, and where he properly ought to abide, &c. Br. Riots, pl. 1. cites 21 H. 7. 39. Per Fineux Chief Juſtice.

Dalt. Juſt. cap. 137. cites S. P. Hawk. Pl. C. 158. cap. 65. ſect. 10. cites S. C. accordingly, and ſays, That ſuch violent methods cannot but be attended with the danger of raiſing tumults and diſorders to the diſturbance of the public peace.—Though a man may ride with arms, yet he cannot take two with him to defend himſelf even though his life is threatened; for he is in the protection oj the law which is ſufficient for his defence. Per Holt Ch. J. in delivering the opinion of the court. 11 Mod. 116, 117. pl. 2. Trin. 6 Ann. B. R. The Queen v. Soley.

If a number of people aſſembled together in a lawful manner, and upon a lawful occaſion, as for electing a mayor (as it was in this caſe) or the like, and during the aſſembly a ſudden affray happens, this will not make it a riot ab initio; but it is only a common affray. Ld. Raym, 965. Trin. 2 Ann. Grampound Corporation's caſe.

If a number of people aſſemble in a riotous manner to do an unlawful act, and a perſon, who was upon the place before upon a lawful occaſion, and not privy to their firſt deſign, comes and joins himſelf with them he will be guilty of a riot equally with the reſt. Per Holt Ch. J. which Powell J. ſeemed to agree. Ld. Raym. Rep. 965. Trin. 2 Ann. Grampound Corporation's caſe.

Holt Ch. J. thought an aſſembly might meet together with ſuch circumſtances of terror as to be a riot. 2 Salk. 594, 595. pl. 4. Trin. 6 Ann. in the caſe of The Queen v. Soley & al'

If ſeveral are aſſembled lawfully without any ill intent, and an affray happens, none are guilty but ſuch as act; but if the aſſembly was originally unlawful, the act of one is imputable to all. Per Holt Ch. J. 2 Salk. 595. 6 Ann. at niſi prius in Middleſex. The Queen v. Ellis.

It ſeems agreed, that a number of perſons, being met together at a fair, or market, or church-ale, or any other lawful and innocent occaſion, happen on a ſudden quarrel to fall together by the ears, they are not guilty of a riot, but of a ſudden affray only, of which none are guilty, but thoſe who actually engage in it; becauſe the deſign of their meeting was innocent and lawful, and the ſubſequent breach of the peace happened unexpectedly without any previous intention concerning it; yet it is ſaid, that if perſons innocently aſſembled together, do afterwards, upon a diſpute happening to ariſe among them, form themſelves into parties, with promiſe of mutual aſſiſtance, and then make affray, they are guilty of a riot, becauſe, upon their confederating together with an intention to break the peace, they may as properly be ſaid to be aſſembled together for that purpoſe from the time of ſuch confederacy, as if their firſt coming together had been on ſuch a deſign; however, it ſeems clear, that if, in an aſſembly of perſons met together on any lawful occaſion whatſoever, a ſudden propoſal ſhould be ſtarted of going together in a body to pull down a houſe or incloſure, or to do any other act of violence, to the diſturbance of the public peace, and ſuch motion be agreed to and executed accordingly, the perſons concerned cannot but be rioters, becauſe their aſſociating themſelves together for ſuch a new purpoſe is no way extenuated by their having met at firſt upon another. Hawk. Pl. C. 156, 157. c. 65. ſ. 3.

A mayor and alderman of a town making a riot, are puniſhable in their natural capacities; but where they have countenanced dangerous riots within their precincts, their liberties have been ſeized, or the corporation fined. 3 Cro. 252. Dalt. 204, 326. Women may be puniſhed as rioters; but infants under the age of fourteen years, are not puniſhable. Dalt. 325. Wood's Inſt. 429. By the Common law, riots are puniſhed by fine and impriſonment; and, if enormous, by pillory: And by ſtatute, Juſtices of the peace have power to reſtrain rioters, &c. to arreſt and impriſon them, and cauſe them to be duly puniſhed. 34 Ed. 3. c. 1. As ſoon as the ſheriff and other the King's miniſters hear of a riot, or other aſſembly againſt the peace, they, with the power of the county, ſhall apprehend ſuch offenders, and put them in priſon until delivered by law. 27 R. 2. c. 8. And two or more juſtices of the peace, dwelling near the place where ſuch offences ſhall be committed, together with the ſheriff or under-ſheriff of the county, ſhall, by the power of the county, if need be, ſuppreſs riots, routs, &c. arreſt the offenders, and record what ſhall be done in their preſence; by which record the offenders ſhall ſtand convicted, as by Stat. 15 R. 2. in caſe of forcible entries; and if offenders are departed, the ſaid juſtices, &c. ſhall within a month after make inquiry thereof, and hear and determine the ſame; and if the truth cannot be found, then, within a further month, the juſtices and ſheriffs are to certify to the King and council, &c. on default whereof, the juſtices, &c. ſhall forfeit 100*l.* 13 H. 4. c. 7.

Theſe ſtatutes are underſtood of great and notorious riots: And the record of the riot within the view of the juſtices, by whom it is recorded, is ſuch a conviction as cannot be traverſed, the parties being concluded thereby; but they may take advantage of the inſufficiency of the record, if the juſtices have not purſued the ſtatute, &c. It is ſaid that the offenders being convicted upon the record of their offence, in the preſence of the juſtices, ought to be ſent immediately to gaol, till they pay a fine aſſeſſed by the ſame juſtices; which fine is to be eſtreated into the Exchequer; or the juſtices may record ſuch riot, and commit the offenders, and after certify the record into B. R. or to the aſſiſes or ſeſſions: If the offenders are gone, then the juſtices ſhall inquire by a jury; and the riot being found, they are to make a record of it, and fine them, or receive their traverſe, to be ſent by the juſtices to the next quarter-ſeſſions, or into the King's Bench, to be tried according to law. Dalt. 200, 201, 202.

It hath been adjudged, that where rioters are convicted upon the view of two juſtices, the ſheriff muſt be a party to the inquiſition on the Stat. 13 H. 4. c. 7. But if they diſperſe themſelves before conviction, the ſheriff need not be a party; for in ſuch caſe the two juſtices may make the inquiſition without him; and this is pro Domino Rege: And if the juſtices neglect to make an inquiſition within a month after the riot, they are liable to the penalty for not doing it within that time; but the lapſe of the month doth not determine their authority to make an inquiſition afterwards. 2 Salk. 592.

Rioters convicted on view of two juſtices, and of the ſheriff of the county, are to be fined by the two juſtices and the ſheriff; and if the ſheriff do not join in ſetting the fine, it is error; for the ſtatute requires that he ſhould be joined with the juſtices in the whole proceedings. Raym. 386. 13 H. 4. c. 7. By the 2 H. 5. c. 8. If the juſtices make default in inquiring of a riot; at the inſtance of the party grieved, the King's commiſſion ſhall be iſſued to inquire, by ſufficient and indifferent men of the county, at the diſcretion of the Chancellor; and the coroners ſhall make the panel of inqueſt upon the ſaid commiſſion, which is returnable into the Chancery, &c. and by this ſtatute, heinous rioters are to ſuffer one year's impriſonment.

The Lord Chancellor, having knowledge of a riot, may ſend the King's writ to the juſtices of peace, and to the ſheriff of the county, &c. requiring them to put the ſtatute in execution; and the Chancellor, upon complaint made, that a dangerous rioter is fled into places unknown, and on ſuggeſtion under the ſeals of two juſtices of peace and the ſheriff, that the common fame runneth in the county of the riot, may award a capias againſt the party, returnable in Chancery upon a certain day, and afterwards a writ of proclamation returnable in the King's Bench, &c. 2 Hen. 5. c. 9. 8 Hen. 6. c. 14.

If one juſtice of peace hath notice of a riot, he muſt endeavour to remove it, and may bind the rioters to the good behaviour; and if they have no ſureties, or refuſe to be bound, he may commit them to priſon. 13 Hen. 4. c. 7. Mod. Inſt. 368. Where riots are commited, the ſheriff, upon a precept directed to him, is to return twenty-four perſons dwelling within the county to inquire thereof, &c. 19 Hen. 7. c. 13.

The Stat. 1 Geo. 1. ſt. 2, c. 5, enacts, That if any perſons, to the number of twelve or more, unlawfully and riotouſly aſſembled againſt the peace, being required by a juſtice of peace, ſheriff, under-ſheriff, mayor, or other head officer of any town, &c. by proclamation in the King's name, to diſperſe themſelves, ſhall continue together an hour afterwards, they ſhall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy; and perſons thus aſſembled and continuing, are to be apprehended and carried before a juſtice of peace, &c. And if, in reſiſtance, the rioters are killed, the perſons concerned in it ſhall be indemnified: Perſons by force hindering the proclamation, it ſhall be adjudged felony; and the offenders nevertheleſs guilty, if they do not diſperſe, &c.

Rioters demoliſhing any church, chapel, or dwelling-houſe, are guilty of felony; and inhabitants of towns and hundreds are to yield damages for rebuilding or reparation, to be levied and paid in ſuch manner as money recovered againſt the hundred, by perſons robbed on the highway, &c. Proſecutions on this act are to be commenced within one year after the offence: And this is the ſevereſt ſtatute that hath been made againſt rioters, but it being wholly in the affirmative, it doth not take away any authority in the ſuppreſſing a riot by Common law, or by other ſtatutes. Wood's Inſt. 430. Rivers, By the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. c. 47. The King may grant commiſſions to perſons to take care of rivers, and the fiſhery therein: And the Lord Mayor of London is to have the conſervation in breaches and ground overflown as far as the water ebbs and flows in the river Thames. 4 Hen. 7. c. 15. Commiſſioners were appointed to prevent exactions of the occupiers of locks, wears, etc. upon the river Thames weſtward from the city of London to Cricklade in the county of Wilts, and for aſcertaining the rates of water carriage, on the ſaid river, etc. by Stat. 6 and 7 W. 3. c. 16. As to annoyances in rivers, either poſitively by actual obſtructions, or negatively, by want of reparations, the perſons ſo obſtructing, or ſuch individuals, as are bound to repair and cleanſe them, or (in default of theſe laſt) the pariſh at large, may be indicted, diſtrained to repair and amend them, and in ſome caſes fined. *Black. 167. By 6 Geo. 2. c. 37. and 10 Geo. 2. c. 32. it is made felony, without benefit of clergy, maliciouſly to cut down any river or ſea-bank, whereby lands may be overflowed. By 1 Geo. 2. c. 19. To deſtroy the toll-houſes, or any ſluice or lock on any navigable river, is made felony to be puniſhed with tranſportation for ſeven years. And by 8 Geo. 2. c. 20. Deſtroying ſluices upon rivers is made felony without benefit of clergy, and the offence may be tried as well in an adjacent county, as in that where the fact is committed.

Rivers made navigable. Duties and impoſitions are granted to recover and preſerve the navigation of the river Dee, by 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 24. Robbers. During the middle ages the highways were ſo much infeſted with banditti, that it was neceſſary for travellers to form themſelves into companies or caravans, that they might be ſafe from the aſſaults of robbers. Bouquet Recueil des Hiſt. Vol. 7. 515. They became ſo frequent and audacious, that the authority of the civil magiſtrate was unable to repreſs them. The eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction was called in to aid it, councils were held with great ſolemnity, the bodies of the ſaints were brought thither, and, in preſence of their ſacred reliques, anathemas were denounced againſt robbers, and other violators of the public peace. *Id. Robbery, (Robaria) Is a felonious taking away of another man's goods from his perſon or in his preſence againſt his will, putting him in fear, and of purpoſe to ſteal the ſame. Weſt. Symbol. part. 2. tit. Indictments. ſect. 60. And this offence was called robbery, either becauſe they bereaved the true man of ſome of his robes or garments, or becauſe his money or goods were taken out of ſome part of his garment or robe about his perſon. Co. 3 Inſt. cap. 16. This is ſometimes called violent theft. Weſt. Symbol. ibid. which is felony of two-pence. Kitchin, fol. 16. and 22 Lib. aſſ. 39. See Skene de verborum ſignif. verb. Reif, and Cromp. Juſtice of Peace, fol. 30.

Robbery is a felony by the Common law, committed by a violent aſſault upon the perſon of another, by putting him in fear, and taking from his perſon his money, or other goods of any value whatſoever. 3 Inſt. 68. c. 16.

1. What is or amounts to a robbery in reſpect of the manner, or perſon from whom any thing is taken.
2. Of raiſing hue and cry, and what kind of robbery it muſt be, to make the hundred chargeable.
3. Who is to bring the action, and of the previous ſteps requiſite.
4. At what time the action is to be brought; what evidence is neceſſary, and what ſhall excuſe the hundred.
5. Of levying the money, on the hundredors.

1. What is or amounts to a robbery in reſpect of the manner, or perſon from whom any thing is taken.

The circumſtance of putting one in fear makes the difference between a robbery and a cut-purſe; both take it from the perſon, but this takes it clam et ſecrete without aſſault or putting in fear, and the robber by violent aſſault and putting in fear. 3 Inſt. 68. cap. 16.

Wherever a perſon aſſaults another, with ſuch circumſtances of terror as put him into fear, and cauſes him, by reaſon of ſuch fear, to part with his money, the taking thereof is adjudged robbery, whether there were any weapon drawn or not, or whether the perſon aſſaulted delivered his money upon the other's command, or afterwards gave it to him upon his ceaſing to uſe force, and begging an alms; for he was put into fear by his aſſault, and gives him his money to get rid of him. Hawk. Pl. C. 96, 97. cap. 34. ſect. 9.

In the caſe of Macdaniel and others, at the Old Bailey ſeſſions in December 1755. Mr. Juſtice Foſter was of opinion, that if a man attacked by an highwayman and robbed, previous to the robbery reſiſts, and is overpowered, without being under any fear at all, it is not the leſs robbery upon that account. Foſt. 128.

The words of the indictment, violenter et felonice cepit, muſt be underſtood that there is an actual taking in deed, and a taking in law, and that may be when a thief receives, etc. For example: If thieves rob a true man, and finding but little about him, take it, this is an actual taking; and by threats of death compel him to ſwear upon a book to fetch them a greater ſum, which he does and delivers it to them, which they receive, this is a taking in law by them, and adjudged robbery; for fear made him take the oath, and the oath and fear continuing, made him bring the money, which amounts to a taking in law; and in this caſe there needs no ſpecial indictment, but the general indictment (Quod violenter & felonice cepit) is ſufficient. And ſo it is, if at the firſt the true man for fear delivers his purſe, etc. to the thief. 3 Inſt. 68. cap. 16.

See Hawk. P. C. 96. c. 34. ſ. 4. The thief muſt be in poſſeſſion of the thing ſtolen, or otherwiſe he is not guilty of robbery. 3 Inſt. 69. c. 16. S. P. Hawk. Pl. C. 96. c. 34. ſect. 6. But though he is not guilty of robbery he is highly puniſhable by fine and impriſonment, etc. for ſo enormous a breach of the peace. See infra.

The words of the indictment are (a perſona) etc. If the true man, ſeeking to eſcape for the ſafeguard of his money, caſts it into a buſh, which the thief perceiving, takes it: This is a taking in law from the perſon, becaſe it is done at one time. 3 Inſt. 69. cap. 16. S. P. And ſo he drives my cattle in my preſence out of my paſture, or takes my hat which fell from my head, he may be indicted as having taken things from my perſon. Hawk. Pl. C. 96. cap. 34. ſect. 8. See alſo 3 Inſt. 69. cap. 16. And. 116. pl. 161. Sty. 156.

In ſome caſes, a man may be ſaid to rob me, where in truth he never actually had any of my goods in his poſſeſſion; as where I am robbed by ſeveral in one gang, and one of them takes my money, in which caſe, in judgment of law, every one of the company ſhall be ſaid to take it, in reſpect of that encouragement which they give to another thro' the hopes of mutual aſſiſtance in their enterprize: Nay, though they miſs of their firſt intended prize, and one of them afterwards rides from the reſt, and robs a third perſon in the ſame highway, without their knowledge, out of their view, and then returns to them, all are guilty of robbery; for they came together with an intent to rob, and to aſſiſt one another in ſo doing. Hawk. Pl. C. 96. cap. 34. ſect. 7.

If a carrier's man or ſon conſpire to rob him, and do it accordingly, the carrier not being privy to it, he may ſue the hundred on the ſtatute of Winton; but the conſpiracy may be given in evidence in mitigation of damages; per Roll Ch. J. Style 427. Mich. 1654. Matthew v. The hundred of Godalmin.

If a man ſervant be robbed of his maſter's goods in his maſter's ſight, this ſhall be taken for a robbing of the maſter. Style 156. Mich. 1649. per Roll Ch. J. in Wright's caſe.

An attempt to rob is made felony with benefit of clergy, by 7 Geo. 2. c. 21.

2. Of raiſing hue and cry, and what kind of robbery it muſt be to make the hundred chargeable.

The levying of hue and cry is injoined by ſeveral acts of parliament, and to this purpoſe it is enacted by Weſtm. 1. cap. 9 "That all be ready and apparelled at the ſummons of the ſheriff, to purſue and arreſt felons."

Though ſome imagined that hue and cry was grounded on this ſtatute; yet Lord Coke ſays, That it was uſed long before, as appears even by this ſtatute, which, inſtead of introducing a new law, inforces obedience to that which was founded on the ancient laws of the realm. 2 Inſt. 171.

By the ſtatute of 4 Ed. 1. De officio coronatoris, hue and cry ſhall be levied for all murders, burglaries, men ſlain, or in peril to be ſlain, as other where is uſed in England; and all ſhall follow the hue and ſteps as near as they can.

By the ſtatute of Winton, or 13 Ed. 1. ſt. 2. c. 1. it is enacted, "That from thenceforth every country ſhall be ſo well kept, that immediately upon robberies and felonies committed freſh ſuit ſhall be made from town to town, and from country to country." And cap. 2. of the ſaid ſtatute, if the country will not anſwer for the bodies of ſuch offenders, the people dwelling in the country ſhall be anſwerable for the robberies done, and alſo the damages: And if the robbery be done within the diviſion of the two hundreds, both the hundreds, and the franchiſes within them ſhall be anſwerable.

The ſtatute of Winton gives the action againſt the hundred; but by ſubſequent ſtatutes, ſuch as 27 Eliz. cap. 13. 8 Geo. 2. cap. 16. ſeveral alterations and additions have been made therein.

It ſeems to be admitted, that no kind of robbery will make the hundred liable, but that which is done openly, and with force and violence; and that therefore the private ſtealing, or taking any thing from the party does not come within the ſtatutes which make the hundred liable, becauſe the hundred is not liable in not preventing the robbery, but becauſe they did not apprehend the robbers, which in private felonies, and of which they had no notice, it would be difficult, if not impoſſible, for them to do. 7 Co. 6, 7. 2 Salk. 614.

Alſo it hath been adjudged, and is admittted in all the books which ſpeak of this matter, that a robbery in a houſe, whether it be by day or by night, does not make the hundred liable: The reaſons whereof are, that every man's houſe is in law eſteemed his caſtle, which he himſelf is obliged to defend, and into which no man can enter, to ſee what is doing there, without his leave; alſo being done in a houſe, the inhabitants of the hundred cannot be preſumed to have notice of it, ſo as to be able to apprehend the offenders. 7 Co. 6. a. Sendil's caſe.

But if a perſon be aſſaulted in the highway, and carried into a houſe, and there robbed, it ſeems the hundred ſhall be liable; for otherwiſe the proviſion made by the ſtatute would be eluded. 1 Sid. 263. and ſee 1 Salk. 614. Fareſl. 159. Alſo it does not ſeem neceſſary, that the robbery ſhould be committed in the highway, nor alledged to have been ſo by the plaintiff in his declaration. Fareſl. 159. It may be in a private way, or be in a coppice; and in both caſes the hundred ſhall be chargeable. 2 Salk. 614. and vide Carth. 71. 3 Mod. 258. 1 Show. 60. Comb. 150. S. C. adjudged between Young and the inhabitants of the hundred of Tolſcomb.

The robbers ought to be taken in 40 days, to excuſe the hundred. In 3 Lev. 320. it is ſaid, that upon ſearch of the parliament roll it appears, that the ſtatute of Winton gives only forty days to the country, and that the ſtatute 28 Ed. 3. c. 11. is but a confirmation thereof; and accordingly it was adjudged, where the plaintiff brought an action on the ſtatute of Winton, and declared that he was robbed, and none of the robbers taken within forty days, according to the ſaid ſtatute; and with this the modern precedents agree, as Raſt. Ent. 406. Co. Ent. 351. Hern. 215. Theſ. Brev. 141. 2 Sal. 376.

Nevertheleſs the inhabitants ſhall make freſh ſuit and purſuit after the offenders.

It is clearly agreed that for a robbery committed in the night the hundred is not chargeable, becauſe they cannot be preſumed to have notice thereof, ſo as to be able to apprehend the robbers. 7 Co. 6. b. Milborne's caſe. 2 Inſt. 569.

But yet it is not neceſſary that the robbery ſhould be committed after ſun-riſe, and before ſun-ſet, for if there be as much day-light at the time that a man's countenance may be diſcerned thereby, though it be before ſun-riſe or after ſun-ſet, the hundred ſhall be liable. 7 Co. 6. a. Aſhpole's caſe. Cro. Jac. 106. 1 And. 158. 1 Leon. 57. Savil 33. vide Carth. 71. Comb. 150. 3 Mod. 258. 1 Show. 60. S. P. admitted,

It hath been held, that if robbers drive or oblige the waggoner to drive his waggon from the highway by day, but do not rob or take any thing till night, that yet this is a robbery in the day-time ſo as to charge the hundred. Sid 263. Fareſl. 159. Alſo ſee Hutton 125.

Plaintiff was travelling in the highway in the hundred of A. where he was ſet upon and carried into the hundred of B. and robbed in a copſe in the highway of this hundred; it was adjudged that the hundred of B. ſhould be liable. 2 Salk. 614, 6 5. Fareſl. 157. S. C. Cowper v. The Hundred of Baſingſtoke.

By the 27 Eliz. cap. 13. par. 2. it is enacted, "That the inhabitants and reſiants of every hundred (with the franchiſes within the precinct thereof) wherein negligence, fault or defect of purſuit and freſh ſuit after hue and cry made ſhall happen to be, ſhall anſwer and ſatisfy the one moiety of all ſuch money and damages as ſhall be recovered againſt the hundred, with the franchiſes therein, in which any robbery or felony ſhall be committed, to be recovered by action of debt, &c. by and in the name of the clerk of the peace for the time being, of or in every ſuch county, and recovery by the party or parties robbed ſhall be, without naming the chriſtian name or ſurname of the ſaid clerk of the peace; which moiety ſo recovered ſhall be to the uſe of the inhabitants of the hundred where any ſuch robbery, &c. ſhall be committed,"

3. Who is to bring the action, and of the previous ſteps requiſite.

If a ſervant be robbed in the abſence of his maſter, of his maſter's money, it is clear that the maſter may maintain an action for it againſt the hundred, but then the ſervant muſt make oath that he knew not any of the robbers. Cro. Car. 37. Raymond v Hundred of Oking adjudged. Alſo the ſervant being robbed in his maſter's abſence, may himſelf maintain an action againſt the hundred, and may declare that he was poſſeſſed ut de bonis ſuis propriis, &c. And though the jury find that he was robbed of his maſter's money, yet ſhall he recover; for the ſervant is poſſeſſed ut de bonis ſuis propriis, againſt all, and in reſpect of all, but him that hath the very right. 2 Salk. 613-4. 4 Mod. 303. Comb. 263. If a ſervant be robbed in the preſence of the maſter, the maſter muſt ſue; and the oath of the maſter is ſufficient. 2 Salk. 613. per cur'. Carth. 147.

There muſt be an oath, vide Carth. 145. 2 Salk. 613. 1 Show. 94. 3 Mod. 287. S. C. Aſhcomb v. The Hundred of Elthorn: and vide infra.

If A. and B. travelling together are robbed of a ſum of money, to which they are both jointly intitled, they may both join in action againſt the hundred; ſecus if they had ſeparate and diſtinct intereſts. Dyer 370. a. pl. 59.

By ſtatute 27 Eliz. cap. 13. par. 11. it is enacted, That no perſon that ſhall happen to be robbed ſhall maintain any action, or take any benefit of the ſtatutes which make the hundred liable, except the perſon ſo robbed ſhall, with as much convenient ſpeed as may be, give notice of the robbery ſo committed unto ſome of the inhabitants of ſome town, village or hamlet, near unto the place where any ſuch robbery ſhall be committed.

In the conſtruction of this clauſe of the ſtatute it hath been holden,

That if a perſon be robbed in a highway in diviſis hundredorum, he need not give notice to the inhabitants of each hundred, but notice to either of them is ſufficient. Cro. Jac. 675. Foſter v. The hundred of Specknor and Iſle-

worth, adjudged, vide alſo, Cro. Car. 41, 379. 1 Show. 94.

It hath been reſolved, that though the notice given be five miles from the place where the robbery was committed, that it is ſufficient; the reaſon whereof is, becauſe that the party, who is a ſtranger to the country, cannot have conuzance of the neareſt place or town. March. 11. Alſo if the party robbed give notice with as much convenient ſpeed as may be, though he be otherwiſe remiſs in not purſuing the robbers, or refuſes to lend his horſe for that purpoſe, yet he ſhall not loſe his action for this, nor the hundred be excuſed. March 11. 2 Leon 82. S. P. agreed per cur'.

Now by the 8 Geo. 2. cap. 16. ſect. 1. it is further enacted, "That no perſon ſhall maintain any action againſt the hundred, unleſs he ſhall, beſides the notice already required by the laſt ſtatute, with as much convenient ſpeed as may be, after any robbery committed, give notice thereof to one of the conſtables of the hundred, or to ſome conſtable, borſholder, headborough or tithingman of ſome town, pariſh, village, hamlet or tithing, near unto the place where ſuch robbery ſhall happen, or ſhall leave notice in writing of ſuch robbery at the dwelling houſe of ſuch conſtable, &c. deſcribing ſo far as the nature and circumſtances of the caſe will admit, the felon, and the time and place of the robbery, and alſo ſhall, within the ſpace of twenty days next after the robbery committed, cauſe public notice to be given thereof in the London Gazette, therein likewiſe deſcribing, ſo far as the nature and circumſtances of the caſe will admit, the felon, and the time and place of ſuch robbery, together with the goods and effects whereof he was robbed."

By the 27 Eliz. c. 13. par. 11. it is enacted, "That the party robbed ſhall not have any action, except he ſhall firſt, within twenty days next before ſuch action to be brought, be examined upon his corporal oath, before ſome juſtice of the peace of the county where the robbery was committed, whether he knows the parties that committed the robbery, or any of them: and if, upon examination, it be confeſſed, that he knows the parties, or any of them, that then he ſhall, before the action be commenced, enter into ſufficient bond by recognizance before the ſaid juſtice, effectually to proſecute the ſame perſon and perſons."

In the conſtruction of this clauſe of the ſtatute, the following points have been holden;

That if the party does not know the robbers at the time of the robbery committed, tho' he happens to know them afterwards, it is not material. March 11.

It hath been adjudged, that the oath may be taken before a juſtice of the county, though not in the county at the time of adminiſtering it. 1 Jones 239. Helier v. The hundred of Benhurſt.

As to giving bond for payment of coſts, by ſtat. 8 Geo. 2. cap. 16. it is enacted, "That before any action commenced the party ſhall go before the chief clerk, or ſecondary, or the filazer of the county wherein ſuch robbery ſhall happen, or the clerk of the pleas of that court wherein ſuch action is intended to be brought, or their reſpective deputies, or before the ſheriff of the county wherein the robbery ſhall happen, and enter into a bond to the high conſtable, or high conſtables of the hundred in which the robbery ſhall be committed, in the penal ſum of one hundred pounds with two ſufficient ſureties to be approved of by ſuch chief clerk, &c. with condition for ſecuring to ſuch high conſtable or high conſtables, the due payment of his or their coſts, after the ſame ſhall be taxed by the proper officer, in caſe the plaintiff in ſuch action ſhall happen to be nonſuited, or ſhall diſcontinue the action, or in caſe judgment ſhall be given on demurrer, or a verdict againſt him."

4. At what time the action is to be brought; what evidence is neceſſary; and what ſhall excuſe the hundred.

By 27 Eliz. c. 13. par. 9. The action is to be brought within one year after the robbery committed.

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it hath been holden; That if a perſon be robbed the 9th of October 13 Jac. and ſo laid that the teſte of the writ be the 9th Octob. 14 Jac. that this is not purſuant to the ſtatutes; and that in this action, which is penal againſt the hundred, there is no reaſon to exclude the day on which the fact was done, nor to make ſuch conſtruction as is done in protections and the inrolment of deeds, which have always received a benign interpretation. Hob. 139, 140. Moor 878. pl. 1233. 1 Brownl. 156. S. C. Norris v. Hundred of Gawtry. Vide 1 Sid. 139. 1 Keb. 495. S. C. Newman v. Inhabitants of Strafford.

An action was brought by the maſter, on the ſtatute of Winton, for a robbery committed on his ſervant, in which he declared of an aſſault and battery done to himſelf, (though then 50 miles from the place) alſo that he made oath that he did not know any of the perſons; the iſſue was entered of record, and the jury appeared at the bar ready to try it; but being for other buſineſs adjourned to another day, the plaintiff obſerving his miſtake moved to amend, by declaring of a robbery on his ſervant, &c. and it appearing that the year in which the action muſt be brought was expired, and conſequently the action muſt be loſt if not allowed, the court, after long debate and conſideration of former precedents, admitted him to amend. 3 Lev. 347. Beartroft ver. Hundred of Barnham and Stone.

It ſeems that, from the neceſſity of the caſe, the party himſelf that was robbed is to be admitted as a witneſs, but then his teſtimony muſt be corroborated by collateral proof and circumſtances, and ſuch as may induce a jury to believe that a robbery was actually committed, and that the party loſt what he declared for. 2 Leon. 12.

By 8 Geo. 2. c. 16. it is enacted, "That in any action againſt any hundred, any perſon inhabiting within the hundred, or any franchiſe thereof, ſhall be admitted as witneſs for or on behalf of the hundred."

By 27 Eliz. cap. 13. par. 8. it is enacted, "That where any robbery is committed by two, or a greater number of malefactors, and that it happen any one of the ſaid offenders to be apprehended by purſuit, to be made according to the ſtatutes, that then, no hundred or franchiſe ſhall in any wiſe incur the penalty loſs or forfeiture mentioned in the ſtatutes, although the reſidue of the malefactors ſhall happen to eſcape." See 1 Vent. 118, 325. Raym. 221. 2 Lev. 4. S. C. Methwin ver. Hundred of Thiſtleworth, and vide infra.

If hue and cry be made towards one part of the county, and an inhabitant of the hundred apprehends one of the robbers within another, this is a taking within the ſtatute. 1 Vent. 118, 119. per Hale Ch. J.

By the 8 Geo. 2. cap. 16. it is enacted, "That no hundred, or franchiſe therein, ſhall be chargeable by virtue of any of the ſtatutes, if any one or more of the felons, by whom ſuch robbery ſhall be committed, be apprehended within the ſpace of forty days next after public notice given in the London Gazette, as by the ſtatute is provided."

By 27 Eliz. c. 13. par. 14. it is enacted, "That after execution of damages by the party or parties ſo robbed had, it ſhall be lawful (upon complaint made by the party charged) to and for two juſtices of the peace (whereof one to be of the quorum) of the ſame county, inhabiting within the hundred, or near unto the ſame where any ſuch execution ſhall be had, to aſſeſs and tax rateably and proportionably, according to their diſcretions, all and every the towns, pariſhes, villages and hamlets, as well of the ſaid hundred where any ſuch robbery ſhall be committed, as of the liberties within the ſaid hundred, to and toward an equal contribution, to be had and made for the relief of the inhabitants, againſt whom the party or parties robbed before that time had execution."

The conſtables, &c. are to levy the money and pay it over to the juſtices, and they are to deliver it over to the inhabitants, for whoſe uſe it was collected.

The ſame taxation is to be in caſes where there's default or negligence of purſuit and freſh ſuit, for the benefit of inhabitants having damages or money levied on them.

It hath been holden, that a perſon occupying lands in an hundred, although he hath no houſe or dwelling there, is an inhabitant within the meaning of the ſtatute, for that otherwiſe the ſtatute might be eluded. 2 Saund. 423. Leigh v. Chapman.

And now, for the more equal rating and levying the money for which the hundreds are chargeable, by the 8 Geo. 2. cap. 16. it is enacted, " That no proceſs for appearance in any action to be brought upon either of the ſtatutes againſt any hundred, ſhall be ſerved on any inhabitant thereof, ſave only upon the high conſtable, or high conſtables of the hundred wherein the robbery ſhall happen, who are to cauſe public notice thereof to be given, to enter an appearance, and defend the action, as adviſed. On recovery by the plaintiff and execution iſſued, the ſheriff is to ſhew it to two juſtices, who are to cauſe an aſſeſſment, as directed by 27 Eliz. c. 13. which is to include the high conſtable's coſts." Vide the Stat. and ſee to the ſame purpoſe as to not executing writ of execution on any particular inhabitant, on any judgment obtained by virtue of any act of parliament. Stat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 46. ſ. 34.

By ſtat. 22 Geo. 2. cap. 24. No perſon ſhall recover againſt any inhabitants of any hundred, in any action on any of the ſtatutes of hue and cry, more than 200*l.* unleſs the perſons robbed, at the time of ſuch robbery for which ſuch action is brought, be in company two at leaſt, to atteſt the truth of being ſo robbed.

Sacrament, (Sacramentum) Is the moſt ſolemn act of worſhip amongſt us, being inſtituted by our Saviour himſelf; and by the Rubrick there muſt be three at the leaſt to communicate, and a miniſter is not without lawful cauſe to deny it to any who ſhall devoutly and humbly deſire it: But notorious ſinners are not to be admitted to it till they have repented; nor thoſe who maliciouſly contend, until they are reconciled, &c. alſo the Sacrament is not to be adminiſtered to ſuch who refuſe to be preſent at the prayers of the church, or to ſtrangers; for a miniſter is not obliged to give it to any but thoſe of his own pariſh; and the partakers of the Holy Sacrament ought to ſignify their names to the curate at leaſt a day before it is adminiſtred. Can. 27. Count. Pariſ. Com. 36, 37, 38.

If a miniſter refuſe to give the Sacrament to any one, being required by the biſhop, he is to certify the cauſe of ſuch refuſal; and a parſon refuſing to adminiſter the Sacrament to any without juſt cauſe, is liable to be ſued in action on the caſe; becauſe a man may have a temporal loſs by ſuch refuſal. Right Clergy 489. By ſtatute, no perſon ſhall be choſen into any office of magiſtracy, or place of truſt, &c. unleſs they receive the Sacrament, according to the rites of the church of England, and deliver a certificate thereof to the court of King's Bench or quarter-ſeſſions, under the hand of the miniſter, and prove it by witneſſes. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 4. 25 Car. 2. c. 2. In every pariſh church the Sacrament is to be adminiſtered three times in the year, (whereof the feaſt of Eaſter to be one) and every layman is bound to receive it thrice every year, &c. In colleges and halls of the Univerſities, the Sacraments are to be adminiſtered the firſt or ſecond Sunday of every month; and in Cathedral Churches, upon all principal feaſt-days, Canon 21, 22, 23. Sacrilege, Sacrilegium) Is church robbery, or a taking of things out of a holy place; as where a perſon ſteals any veſſels, ornament, or goods of the church: And it is ſaid to be a robbery of God, at leaſt of what is dedicated to his ſervice. 3 Cro. 153. If any thing belonging to private perſons, left in a church, be ſtolen, it is only common theft, not ſacrilege: But the Canon law determines that alſo to be ſacrilege; as likewiſe the ſtealing of a thing known to be conſecrated, in a place not conſecrated. Treat. Laws 360.

By the Civil law, ſacrilege is puniſhed with greater ſeverity than any other thefts; and the Common law diſtinguiſhed this crime from other robberies; for it denied the benefit of the clergy to the offenders, which it did not do to other felons: But by ſtatute is is put upon a footing with other felonies, by making it felony excluded of clergy, as moſt other felonies are. 2 Inſt. 250.

All perſons not in holy orders, who ſhall be indicted, whether in the ſame county where the fact was committed, or in a different county, of robbing any church, chapel, or other holy place, are excluded from their clergy, by 23 H. 8. c. 1. 25 H. 8. c. 3. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 10. And all perſons in general are ouſted of their clergy for the felonious taking of any goods out of any pariſh church, or other church or chapel, by the 1 Ed. 6. c. 12. But the word robbing being always taken to carry with it ſome force, it ſeems no ſacrilege is within theſe ſtatutes, which is not accompanied with the actual breaking of a church, &c. Kel. 58, 69. Dyer 224. And the ſtatute 23 H. 8. c. 1. is the only act which extends to acceſſaries to theſe robberies; except the offence amount to burglary, in which caſe acceſſaries before are ouſted of clergy, by 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9. 2 Hawk. P. C. 351.

Sacrilege, Or alienation to laymen and to profane or common purpoſes of what was given to religious perſons and to pious uſes, was a guilt which our forefathers were very tender of incurring; and therefore when the order of the Knights Templars was diſſolved, their lands were given to the Knights Hoſpitallers of Jeruſalem for this reaſon——Ne in pios uſus erogata contra donatorum voluntatem in alios uſus diſtraherentur. Paroch. Antiq. 390.

Sale, (Venditio) Is the transferring the property of goods from one to another, upon valuable conſideration: And if a bargain is that another ſhall give me 5 l. for ſuch a thing, and he gives me earneſt, which I accept, this is a perfect ſale. Wood's Inſt. 316. On ſale of goods, if earneſt be given to the ſeller, and part of them are taken away by the buyer, he muſt pay the reſidue of the money upon fetching away the reſt, becauſe no other time is appointed; and the earneſt given binds the bargain, and gives the buyer a right to demand the goods; but a demand without paying the money is void: And it has been held, that, after the earneſt is taken, the ſeller cannot diſpoſe of the goods to another, unleſs there is ſome default in the buyer; therefore if he doth not take away the goods and pay the money, the ſeller ought to require him ſo to do; and then if he doth not do it in convenient time, the bargain and ſale is diſſolved, and the ſeller may diſpoſe of them to any other perſon. 1 Salk. 113. A ſeller of a thing is to keep it a reaſonable time, for delivery: But where no time is appointed for delivery of things ſold, or for payment of the money, it is generally implied that the delivery be made immediately, and payment on the delivery. 3 Salk. 61. Where one agrees for wares ſold, the buyer muſt not carry them away before paid for; except a day of payment is allowed him by the ſeller. Noy 87.

It is ſaid a perfect bargain and ſale between parties, will be good, tho' the ſeller knows of an execution that is againſt him; and doth ſell the goods to prevent the falling of it upon them. 3 Shep. Abr. 115. A ſale may be of any living or dead goods in a fair or market, be they whoſe they will, or however the ſeller come by them; if made with the cautions required by law: But if one ſell my goods unduly, I may have them again. Doct. & Stud. 328. Perk. Sect. 93. If a man affirm a thing ſold is of ſuch a value when it is not, this is not actionable; but if he actually warrants it, at the time of the ſale, and not afterwards, it will bear an action, being part of the contract. 2 Cro. 5, 386, 630. 1 *Rol. Sanction of Laws. With regard to the ſanction of laws, or the evil that may attend the breach of public duties; it is oberved, that human legiſlators have for the moſt part choſen to make the ſanction of their laws rather vindicatory than remuneratory, or to conſiſt rather in puniſhments, than in actual particular rewards. Becauſe, in the firſt place, the quiet enjoyment and protection of all our civil rights and liberties, which are the ſure and general conſequence of obedience to the Municipal law, are in themſelves the beſt and moſt valuable of all rewards. Becauſe, alſo, were the exerciſe of every virtue to be enforced by the propoſal of particular rewards, it were impoſſible for any ſtate to furniſh ſtock enough for ſo profuſe a bounty. And farther, becauſe the dread of evil is a much more forcible principle of human action, than the proſpect of good. (Locke, Hum. Und. l. 2. c. 21.) For which reaſon, tho' a prudent beſtowing of rewards is ſometimes of exquiſite uſe, yet we find that thoſe Civil laws which enforce and enjoin our duty, do ſeldom, if ever, propoſe any privilege or gift to ſuch as obey the law; but do conſtantly come armed with a penalty denounced againſt tranſgreſſors, either expreſsly defining the nature and quantity of the puniſhment, or elſe leaving it to the diſcretion of the judges, and thoſe who are entruſted with the care of putting the laws in execution.

Of all the parts of a law the moſt effectual is the vindicatory. For it is but loſt labour to ſay, "do this, or avoid that," unleſs we alſo declare, "this ſhall be the conſequence of your non-compliance." We muſt therefore obſerve, that the main ſtrength and force of a law conſiſts in the penalty annexed to it. Herein is to be found the principal obligation of human laws. Black. Com. 1 V. 56, 7.

Sanctuary, (Sanctuarium) Is a place privileged for the ſafe-guard of offenders lives, being founded upon the law of mercy, and the great reverence and devotion which the Prince bears to the place whereunto he grants ſuch privilege. Sanctuaries were firſt granted by King Lucius to our churches and their precincts; and among all other nations, our ancient Kings of England ſeem to have attributed moſt to thoſe ſanctuaries, permitting them to ſhelter ſuch as had committed both felonies and treaſons; ſo as within forty days they acknowledged their fault, and ſubmitted themſelves to baniſhment; during which ſpace, if any layman expelled them he was excommunicated; and if a clerk, he was made irregular. *Mat. Sanctuaries, It has been obſerved, did not gain the name of ſuch till they had the Pope's bull, tho' they had full privilege of exemption from temporal courts by the King's grant only: But no ſanctuary granted by general words, extended to high treaſon; tho' it extended to all felonies, except ſacrilege, and to all inferior crimes, not committed by a ſanctuary man; and it never was a protection againſt any action civil, any farther than to ſave the defendant from execution of his body, &c. 2 *Hawk. Scandalum magnatum, Is the ſpecial name of a ſtatute, and alſo of a wrong done to any high perſonage of the land, as prelates, dukes, earls, barons, and other nobles; and alſo to the chancellor, treaſurer, clerk of the Privy ſeal, ſteward of the houſe, juſtice of one bench or other, and other great officers of the realm, by falſe news, or horrible or falſe meſſages, whereby debates and diſcords betwixt them and the commons, or any ſcandal to their perſons might ariſe. Stat 2 R. 2. cap. 5. and hath given name to a writ, granted to recover damages thereupon. Cowell.

At the time of making the law, on which this action is founded, the conſtitution of this kingdom was martial, and given to arms; the very tenures were military, and ſo were the ſervices; as knight-ſervice, caſtle-guard and eſcuage; ſo that all provocations by vilifying words were revenged by the ſword, which often created factions in the Commonwealth, and endangered the government itſelf; for in this kind of quarrels the great men, or peers of the realm, uſually engaged their vaſſals, tenants and friends; ſo that laws were then made againſt wearing of liveries or badges, and againſt riding armed; ſo the ſtat. Weſtm. 2. appoints that the offender ſhall ſuffer impriſonment until he produces the author of a falſe report. 2 Mod. 156.

The law on which this action is grounded, is the 2 Rich. 2. ſtat. 1. cap. 5. which, after ſpeaking of "deviſors of falſe news, and horrible lies, of Prelates, Dukes, Earls, Barons, and other nobles and great men of the realm, and alſo of the chancellor, treaſurer, clerk of the Privy ſeal, ſteward of the King's houſe, juſtices of the one bench or of the other, and other great officers of the realm," enacts, "that none contrive or tell any falſe things of Prelates, Lords, and of others aforeſaid, whereof diſcord or ſlander might riſe within the realm, and he who doth the ſame ſhall be impriſoned 'till he have brought him forth that did ſpeak the ſame." This ſtatute is recited by the 12 R. 2. cap. 11. and thereby it is further provided, that the offender ſhall be puniſhed by the advice of the council. 4 Inſt. 51. 4 Co. 12. b. See *Black. 1. Who may bring this action, and for what words it lies.
2. Of the proceedings in this action.

1. Who may bring this action, and for what words it lies.

It hath been held, that the King is not included in the words great men of the realm, as the ſtatute begins with an enumeration of perſons of an inferior rank, as Prelates, Dukes, &c. Cromp. Juriſd. 19, 35.

Alſo it is held, that a woman noble by birth is not intitled to this action. Cromp. Juriſ. 34.

It hath been adjudged, that tho' there was no viſcount at the time of making this ſtatute, (the firſt viſcount being John Beaumont who was created viſcount, 18 Hen. 6.) yet when created noble, tho' by a new title, he was intitled to his action on this ſtatute. Cro. Car. 136. Palm. 565. Viſcount Sey and Seal v. Stephens.

Alſo it hath been adjudged, that ſince the union a peer of Scotland may have an action on this ſtatute, and that it is not neceſſary for him to alledge that he hath a ſeat and voice in parliament; for by the 5 Ann. c. 8, art. 23. All peers of Scotland after the union ſhall be peers of Great Britain, and have rank and precedency, &c. be tried, &c. and enjoy all privileges of peers as the peers of England now do or hereafter may enjoy, except the right and privilege of ſitting in the Houſe of Lords, and the privilege depending thereon, and particularly the right of ſitting upon the trial of peers. Cum. 439. Lord Viſcount Falkland v. Phipps.

It hath been contended for, that no words of ſlander are puniſhable by this ſtatute, unleſs they are actionable at Common law, and that they are only aggravated by the ſtatute, which, in this reſpect, is like the King's proclamation. 2 Mod. 161. Sir Robert Atkins in his argument. Freem. 222.

But the contrary hereof ſeems to have been holden in moſt of the caſes on this head, and not without reaſon, as it would be to no purpoſe to make a law, and thereby to give a peer an action for ſuch words as a common perſon might have before the making of the ſtatute, and for which the peer himſelf had equally a remedy by the Common law; and therefore the deſign of the ſtatute muſt be, not only to puniſh ſuch things as import a great ſcandal in themſelves, or ſuch for which an action lay at the Common law, but alſo ſuch things as ſavoured of any contempt of the perſons of the peers or great men, and brought them into diſgrace with the Commons, whereby they took occaſion of provocation and revenge. 2 Mod. 156.

It hath been obſerved, that no action was brought on this ſtatute 'till 100 years after the making thereof, the Lords ſtill continuing the military way of revenge to which they had been accuſtomed. 2 Mod. 156. Sir Francis Pemberton's argument.

The firſt caſe on this ſtatute, ſaid to be reported, is in Keilw. where the Lord Beauchamp brought an action of ſcan. mag. againſt Sir Richard Crofts, for that the ſaid Richard had ſued out a writ of forgery of falſe deeds againſt him; and it was held, that the taking out the writ being done in a legal way, and in a courſe of juſtice, the action did not lie. Keilw. 26, 27. 2 Mod. 164. cited.

Scan. mag. brought for ſaying of a judge, you are a corrupt judge, and held actionable. Cromp. Jur. 35. Ld. Ch. J. Dyer's caſe. So for theſe words, He impriſoned me till I gave him a releaſe. 3 Leon. 376. Lord Wincheſter's caſe, cited Freem. 221. So theſe words, You have writ a letter to me, which I have to ſhew, which is againſt the word of God, againſt the Queen's authority, and to the maintenance of ſuperſtition, and that I will ſtand to prove againſt you, were held actionable, and 500 marks damages given. Cro. Eliz. 1. Biſhop of Norwich v. Prickett. So of theſe words, My Lord Mordant did know that Prude robbed Shotbolt, and bid me compound with Shotbolt for the ſame, and ſaid he would ſee me ſatisfied for the ſame tho' it coſt him 100*l.* which I did for him, being my maſter, otherwiſe the evidence I could have given would have hanged Prude. Cro. Eliz. 67. Ld. Mordant v. Bridges. For theſe words wrote in a letter, I have heard that your Lordſhip hath ſought by uncharitable means to bereft me of my life, lands and liberty, an action lies. Moor 142. Ld. Lumley v. Fox. 4 Co. 16. S. C. that the action as well lies for words written as thoſe ſpoken. 2 Show. 505.

An action of ſcan. mag. was brought for theſe words, There are more jeſuits come into England ſince the Earl of Northampton was Lord of the Cinque ports than ever there were before, and held actionable. 12 Co. 132. Earl of Northampton's caſe. In ſcan. mag. for theſe words ſpoken by a parſon in the pulpit, The lord of Leiceſter is a wicked and cruel man, and an enemy to the reformation in England, adjudged actionable, and 500*l.* damages given. 2 Sid. 21. Ld. Leiceſter v. Mandy.

So for theſe words, The Earl of Pembroke is of ſo little eſteem in the country, that no man of reputation hath any eſteem for him, and no man will take his word for 2*d.* and no man of reputation values him more than I do the dirt under my feet; and held actionable, tho' ſaid they would not be ſo in the caſe of a common perſon. Freem. 49. Earl of Pembroke v. Saniel.

If one ſays, I met J. S. whom I do not know, but my Lord P. ſent after me to take my purſe, an action of ſcandalum magnatum lies, tho' not poſitively ſaid my Lord P. ſent him, or that it was to take the purſe feloniouſly; which laſt, in caſe of an action by a common perſon, might be a good exception. 1 Lev. 277. 1 Sid. 434. 2 Keb. 537. E. of Peterborough v. Sir John Mordant. Vide 1 Sid. 233. 1 Keb. 813. 1 Lev. 148. Marquis of Dorcheſter v. Proby. If one ſays of a peer, He is an unworthy man, and acts againſt law and reaſon; an action of ſcan. mag. lies, notwithſtanding the words are general, and charge him with nothing certain: And ſo adjudged by North, Windham, and Scroggs againſt the opinion of Atkins, who ſaid the ſtatute extended not to words of ſo ſmall and trivial a nature, but to ſuch only which were of greater magnitude, by which diſcord might ariſe, &c. and therefore the words horrible lies were inſerted in the ſtatute. Note; the rule laid down by the court in this caſe was, that words ſhould not be conſtrued either in a rigid or mild ſenſe, but according to the general and natural meaning and agreeable to the common underſtanding of all men. 2 Mod. 151, &c. 1 Mod. 232. Freem. 220. Lord Townſhend v. Doctor Hughes.

2. Of the proceedings in this action.

It is now clearly agreed, that tho' there be no expreſs words in the ſtatute which give an action, yet the party injured may maintain one on this principle of law, that when a ſtatute prohibits the doing of a thing, which if done might be prejudicial to another, in ſuch a caſe he may have an action on that very ſtatute for his damages. 2 Mod. 152.

That tho the action is to be brought tam pro domino rege quam pro ſe ipſo, yet the party is to recover all the damages. 1 Peer Will. 690. That if the words are actionable at Common law, the peer hath his election to proceed on the ſtatute, or at Common law. Freem. 49. It hath been held, that this being a general law, the plaintiff need not recite it particularly, and that if he ſets forth ſo much thereof as ſhews his caſe to be within the ſtatute, it is ſufficient. Cro. Car. 136, 2 Sid. 21. Freem. 425. That it is now ſettled that no new trial is to be granted in ſcan. mag. for exceſſive damages; which points ſeem to have been firſt determined in the caſe of Lord Townſhend v. Dr. Hughes, where the jury gave 4000*l.* damages. 2 Mod. 151. 1 Mod. 231.

It has been ruled, that in ſcan. mag. the defendant cannot juſtify, let the words be ever ſo true, becauſe the action is brought qui tam, in which the King is concerned; but it hath been held that the defendant may explain the words by ſhewing the occaſion of ſpeaking of them, and thereby extenuate the meaning of them, as was done in Lord Cromwell's caſe. 4 Co. 14. 2 Mod. 166. Freem. 220. Poph. 67.

In ſcan. mag. the court will never change the venue on the common affidavit that the words were ſpoken in another county, becauſe a ſcandal raiſed on a peer of the realm reflects on him thro' the whole kingdom; and he is a perſon of ſo great notoriety, that there is no neceſſity of his being tied down to try his cauſe among his neighbourhood. Carth. 400. 2 Salk. 668. Vide 1 Lev. 56. 1 Keb. 514. 1 Sid. 185. 2 Mod. 216.

But in the caſe of Lord Shafteſbury v. Graham, the court in ſcan. mag. on a ſpecial affidavit of the plaintiff's power and intereſt in the county where the action was laid, made a rule for changing the venue; but note, that the books, which report and cite this caſe, mention it as a caſe of the times, and that it was owing to the great influence that Lord had in the city of London that the court varied from the general rule, and which rule hath ever ſince, notwithſtanding this caſe, been adhered to. 2 Jo. 198. 1 Vent. 363. Skin. 40. 2 Show. 200.

It hath been held, that the ſtatute, giving the writ of error in the Exchequer chamber, does not extend to ſcan. mag. Cro. Car. 286. Alſo it hath been held, that the ſtatute 27 Eliz. c. 8. for bringing a writ of error in the Exchequer chamber does not extend to this action. Cro. Car. 385. 1 Sid. 143. It hath been held, that in an action of ſcan. mag. ſpecial bail is not required. 3 Mod. 41. Holt Rep. 640. It hath been held, that no coſts are to be given the plaintiff on his obtaining a verdict. 2 Show. 506.

1. Of the nature of the writ, and in what caſes it is a proper remedy.

A ſcire facias is deemed a judicial writ, and founded on ſome matter of record, as judgments, recognizances and letters patent, on which it lies to inforce the execution of them, or to vacate or ſet them aſide; and though it be a judicial writ of execution, yet it is ſo far in nature of an original, that the defendant may plead to it, and is in that reſpect conſidered as an action; and therefore it is held, that a releaſe of all actions, or a releaſe of all executions, is a good bar to a ſci. fa. Lit. ſect. 505. Co. Lit. 290. b. 291. a. F. N. B. 267.

But though it be held that a ſci. fa. is in nature of an original, yet it hath been adjudged, that no writ of error lies into the Exchequer chamber on a judgment given in B. R. on a ſci. fa. the ſtatute 27 Eliz. cap. 8. which gives the writ of error, mentioning only ſuits or actions of debt, detinue, covenant, account, actions upon the caſe, ejectione firmæ, or treſpaſs. *Cro. If one hath judgment in a quare impedit, and afterwards, before execution, the party is outlawed, the King may have a ſci. fa. to execute the judgment, the King having privity enough in this caſe to ſhew execution, becauſe the thing, as it was in the plaintiff, veſted in the King. Moor 241. *Cro. A ſci. fa. brought by the ſucceſſor of a preſident of the college of phyſicians in London, upon a judgment in debt obtained by him upon the ſtatute 14 & 15 H. 8. c. 5. againſt practiſing phyſic in London without a licence, but died before execution; it was objected on demurrer, that the ſci. fa. ought to have been brought by the executor or adminiſtrator of him who recovered: But without argument the court held, that the ſucceſſor might well maintain the action, for the ſuit is given to the college by a private ſtatute, and the ſuit is to be brought by the preſident for the time being; and he having recovered in right of the corporation, the law ſhall transfer that duty to the ſucceſſor of him who recovered. Cro. Jac. 159. Dr. Atkins v. Gardinor.

A ſci. fa. was brought in the court of C. B. to reverſe a fine in ancient demeſne; and it was ruled, that no ſuch writ lay, but that the party ought to bring his writ of deſceit. Mich. 7 W. 3. in C. B. Zouch v. Thompſon.

2. Of the ſcire facias to revive judgments, and after what time neceſſary.

There have been different opinions whether a ſci. fa. lay at Common law or not; but this doubt, ſays my Lord Coke, aroſe for want of diſtinguiſhing between perſonal and real actions. 2 Inſt. 469.

At Common law, if after judgment given, or recognizance acknowledged, the plaintiff did not ſue out execution within the year, the plaintiff or his conuſee was driven to his original upon the judgment, and the ſcire facias in perſonal actions was given by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. c. 45.

But in real actions, or upon a fine, though no execution was ſued out within a year after the judgment given or fine levied, yet after the year a ſci. fa. lay for the land, &c. becauſe no new original lay upon the judgment or fine. 2 Inſt. 470.

A ſci. fa. lay as well in mixed as real actions, and upon a judgment in an aſſiſe. So it lay upon a judgment in a writ of annuity. Salk. 258, 600.

It hath been adjudged, that if there be judgment in ejectment, and no execution ſued thereon in a year and a day, an habere facias poſſeſſionem cannot be ſued out after without a ſcire facias; and Holt Ch. But though, after a year and a day, there can be no execution of a judgment without a ſcire facias, yet if the plaintiff hath been delayed by a writ of error, he may take out execution within a year and a day after the judgment affirmed. 5 Co. 88. Moor 566. pl. 772. *Cro. So if after the year after the recovery the defendant brings a writ of error, and the judgment is affirmed, tho' before the writ of error brought the recoverer was put to his ſci. fa. yet this affirmance is a new judgment, and the recoverer may have within the year after the affirmance a fi. fa or capias without a ſcire facias. 1 Rol. cution; and though the court ſaid that an elegit ought to be actually taken out within the year, yet being informed by the clerks of the court, that it had been the practice for many years to make ſuch entry, &c. it was ſaid to be the law of the court, and they ordered the execution to ſtand. Carth. 283. Seymour v. Greenvil. 2 Show. 235. Note; after ſuch motion, and judgment revived by ſci. fa. if the defendant dies before execution, the plaintiff muſt ſue a new ſci. fa. but may have it without motion, for the judgment was revived before. Salk. 598. Hardiſty v. Barny.

After a judgment, if the plaintiff within the year ſues a ſcire facias he cannot have a capias within the year until he hath a new judgment on the ſcire facias. 1 Rol. Abr. 900. Trin. 13 Car. 1. Roberts v. Piſing. See Black. Com. 3 V. 421.

3. Of the ſcire facias on recognizances and ſtatutes.

Recognizances and ſtatutes are conſidered as judgments, being obligations ſolemnly acknowledged, and entered of record, and the ſci. fa. on thoſe is the judicial writ and proper remedy which the conuſee hath; but herein we muſt diſtinguiſh between recognizances at Common law and ſtatutes merchant, &c. for, upon the former, if the conuſee did not take out execution within a year after the day of payment aſſigned in the recognizance, he was obliged to commence the ſuit again by original; the law preſuming the debt might have been paid, if they did not ſue execution within the year after the money became payable; but this law is altered by Weſtm. 2. c. 49. by which the conuſee hath a ſci. fa. given him to revive the judgment, and put it in execution, if the conuſor cannot ſtop it by pleading ſuch matter as the law judges ſufficient for that end, ſuch as a releaſe, &c. but the conuſee of a ſtatute merchant, &c. may at any time ſue execution on them without the delay or charge of a ſci. fa.. Lit. Rep. 89. That a capias lies not on a recognizance, but only a ſci. fa. 1 Brownl. 83. Co. Lit. 291. 2 Inſt. 469. F. N. B. 296. Bro. Recog. 17.

Alſo as to recognizances at Common law, and ſtatutes and recognizances introduced by ſtatute law, we muſt further diſtinguiſh, that if on the firſt the conuſee dies before execution ſued, his executor ſhall not ſue it, even within the year, without bringing a ſci. fa. againſt the conuſor; the reaſon is, becauſe the law preſumes the debt might have been paid to the teſtator, and therefore will not ſuffer the debtor to be moleſted, unleſs it appear that he hath omitted to perform the judgment; and this is to be done by ſci. fa. brought by the executor, for the alteration of the perſon altereth the proceſs at Common law; but this tending to delay, the ſci. fa. is taken away in ſtatutes and recognizances by ſtatute law, by the ſeveral acts of parliament which introduced them, and therefore upon the death of the conuſee of a ſtatute merchant, &c. his executors may come into Chancery, and upon their producing the teſtament and the ſtatute, ſhall have execution without a ſci. fa. as the teſtator himſelf might. 2 Inſt. 395, 471. Bro. Stat. Merch. 16, 43, 50.

If a man be bound in a recogniſance to the King, upon condition to be of good behaviour, &c. he cannot be indicted for breach of the good behaviour, by which he forfeits his recognizance, without a ſci fa. for if a ſc. fa. had been brought, he might have pleaded ſome matter in diſcharge thereof. 4 Inſt. 181. 1 *Rol. If a man acknowledges a recognizance to be paid at a day within the year after the date of the recognizance, in this caſe he may have execution by fi. fa. or elegit within the year after the day of payment, though the year be paſt from the date of the recognizance. 21 Ed. 3. 22. b. 1 *Rol. If a man recovers an annuity, he ſhall have execution for every time that occurs after by fi. fa. or elegit within the year after the time incurred, though the year be paſt from the judgment, but not after the year without a ſci. fa. 1 Rol. Abr. 900. 2 Inſt. 471. Salk. 258, 600.

If two acknowledge a recognizance of 100 l. quilibet eorum in ſolido, that is jointly and ſeverally, the conuſee may ſue ſeveral ſci. fa. againſt the conuſors upon this recognizance. 2 Inſt. 395 See farther as to ſci. fa. againſt bail, Black. Com. 3 V. 416. et infra.

4. Of pleading to a ſcire facias.

Scire facias may be pleaded to, before judgment given upon it; afterwards it is too late: Though a writ of error may be brought to reverſe the judgment on the ſcire facias, if that be not good on which the judgment was grounded. Ibid. 503. Payment was no plea at Common law to a ſcire facias upon a judgment; becauſe it is a debt upon record. 3 Lev. 120. But this was altered by 4 Ann. c. 16. ſ. 12. which gives defendants liberty to plead ſuch payment.

Whatever is pleadable to the original action in abatement, ſhall not be pleaded to diſable the plaintiff from having execution on a ſcire facias; becauſe the defendant had admitted him able to have judgment. 1 Salk. 2. If a judgment be obtained againſt an executor, and afterwards a ſcire facias is brought againſt him upon that judgment, he cannot plead a judgment recovered againſt his teſtator, and that he hath not aſſets ultra, &c. becauſe he might have pleaded it to the firſt action; for it is a ſettled rule that if a defendant hath a matter proper for his defence, and he neglects to plead it in bar to the action at the time he may, he ſhall never take advantage of it after. 2 Strange 732. In ſcire facias on a judgment in debt, or other perſonal action, the defendant cannot plead non-tenure of the land generally, where it is contrary to the return of the ſheriff; though he may plead a ſpecial non-tenure: But on a ſcire facias to have execution in a real action, the defendant may plead non-tenure generally, becauſe the freehold is in queſtion, and that is favoured in law; and the ter-tenants may plead there are other ter-tenants not named, and pray judgment if they ought to anſwer quouſq; the others are ſummoned, &c. though it would be otherwiſe if the ſcire facias had been againſt particular tenants by name. 2 Salk. 601. On a ſcire facias to have execution upon a judgment in action of debt, every ter-tenant is to be contributory; and therefore one ſhall not anſwer, as long as he can ſhew that another is liable, and not warned: Contra on a ſcire facias upon a judgment in a real action; for every tenant is to anſwer for that which he hath, and one may be contributory, and the other not. 2 Cro. 507. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 204.

5. Of ſcire facias againſt ter-tenants, and againſt whom to be brought, &c.

There is to be a ſcire facias againſt the heir and ter-tenants to reverſe a common recovery of lands, the ſcire facias is to iſſue againſt all the ter-tenants, for they are to gain or loſe by the judgment in the recovery. Raym. 16. 3 Mod. 274. A ſcire facias to have execution of a fine, ſhall not be ſued againſt leſſee for years; but againſt him who hath the freehold, who may have ſome matter to bar the execution Cro. Eliz. 471. 2 Brownl. 144. In ejectment, it was adjudged, that a ſcire facias might be brought by the leſſee, though he was but nominal, and that it may be had by the leſſor himſelf; as either of them may have a writ of error on the judgment: And that it might be brought againſt thoſe who were ſtrangers to the judgment, and againſt the executors of the defendant, &c. 2 Lutw. 1267.

6. Of other points generally, not claſſed under the former heads.

A defendant being ſummoned upon a ſcire facias, and the ſummons returned, if he doth not appear, but lets judgment go by default, he is for ever barred. 1 Lev. 41, 42. If the ſheriff hath returned him warned, he ſhall not have audita querela on a releaſe, &c. for the defendant might have pleaded the ſame on the return of the ſcire facias; but if the ſheriff return nihil, on which an execution is awarded, he ſhall have audita querela. New Nat. Br. 230. In the firſt caſe, he might have appeared and pleaded; in the other, not being warned, he was not bound to appear. Where there has been no ſcire feci, and only two nihils, the court will often relieve upon motion, and not put the party to an audita querela. Salk. 93, 264. 2 Strange 1075.

It is a frequent practice, to ſue out two ſcire facias's and yet the ſheriff to return a nihil, but where the party hath reaſon to ſuſpect ſuch practice, (which is not, in my opinion, very fair) he may ſearch the office, and, on finding the alias ſcire facias left there, for return, appear, though he is not warned or ſummoned.

Where the plaintiff in the judgment releaſeth the defendant of all judgments and executions, &c. the defendant may, upon his releaſe, ſue out a writ of ſcire facias againſt the plaintiff in the judgment ad cognoſcendum ſcriptum ſuum relaxationis; and he need not ſue out his audita querela. Hil. 5 W. & M. B. R.

If one ſues out two writs of ſcire facias, one after the other, where it is upon a judgment by bill, there ought to be fifteen days incluſive between the teſte of the firſt and return of the ſecond ſcire facias. Salk. 559. And the teſte of the alias ſcire facias is to be the day of the return of the firſt. 3 Ann. B. R. 9 Lil. 503. Coſts allowed in ſuits on writs of ſcire facias, &c. Scire facias againſt bail, To an action, is where a capias ad ſatisfac. is ſued out and returned non eſt inventus againſt the principal, and the writ filed; after which this writ is brought to have execution againſt the bail, &c. And, if upon the ſcire facias, or two nihils returned, the bail do not appear, judgement ſhall be entered againſt them. 1 Inſt. 290. Lutw. 1273. (See the preceding head.) In C. B. there is but one ſcire facias againſt the bail, and, upon a nihil returned, there is execution; but in B. R. there are two ſcire facias's and two nihils, and the firſt is to be duly returned, before the ſecond ſued out; and there muſt be fifteen days incluſive between the teſte of the firſt and the return of the laſt 2 Salk. 599. There muſt be a particular warrant of attorney to a ſcire facias againſt the bail; for a warrant in the principal action is no warrant to the ſcire facias, becauſe theſe are diſtinct actions; and the particular warrant is to be entered when the ſuit commences, which is when the writ is returned. 2 Salk. 603. When a ſcire facias is brought againſt the bail, it muſt be in ea parte; and where it is brought againſt the defendant in the principal action, it is to be in hac parte. 2 Salk. 599. If bail are proſecuted on a ſcire facias when a writ of error is depending in the Exchequer-Chamber, and the defendants, the bail will confeſs judgment, and enter into a rule to pay the debt, or to deliver up the principal within four days after the judgment affirmed; in ſuch caſe the proceedings on the ſcire facias ſhall be ſtayed. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 130. And if there be no good judgment againſt the principal, judgment againſt the bail by ſcire facias may be reverſed, &c. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 190. See Bail, and Black. Com. 3 V. 416.

Scire facias ad audiendum Errores, On writs of error. There are to be fifteen days between the teſte and return of every ſcire fac. ad audiend. error. upon a writ of error returnable in B. R. And if on the return of two nichils, &c. the defendant in error doth not appear, it is not then with him as in caſe of a ſci. fac. quare execution' non, &c. But the cauſe is to be ſet down to be heard by the court, and the plaintiff in errors ſhall be held thereunto ex parte. 2 Lil. Abr. 499. If a writ of error is brought in B. R. and the record brought in, the defendant appearing may thereupon ſue out a ſcire facias quare executionem habere non debet, and an alias ſcire facias after that, if there be not a ſcire feci returned on the firſt writ; and if the plaintiff in error after a ſcire feci or two nichils returned, doth not, before the rule for judgment upon the ſcire facias is out, appear and aſſign errors, or plead to the ſcire facias, there will be judgment againſt him, Quod habeat executionem, &c. But the writ of error depends ſtill until judgment is affirmed or reverſed, or the plaintiff in error is nonſuited. Ibid. 502.

Scire facias in detinue. In detinue, after judgment, the plaintiff ſhall have a diſtringas, to compel the defendant to deliver the goods, by repeated diſtreſſes of his chattels; or elſe a ſcire facias againſt any third perſon in whoſe hands they may happen to be, to ſhew cauſe why they ſhould not be delivered. Black. Com. 3 V. 413.

Scire facias to remove an uſurper's clerk. On a quare impedit, and ne admittas ſued out, if the biſhop, after receipt of the latter writ, admit any perſon, even tho' the patron's right may have been found in a jure patronatus, then the plaintiff, after he has obtained judgment in the quare impedit, may remove the incumbent, if the clerk of a ſtranger, by writ of ſcire facias. Black. Com. 3 V. 248.

Scire facias upon a recognizance In Chancery, may be ſued out to extend lands, &c. If upon a ſcire facias upon a recognizance in the Chancery, the record be tranſmitted into B. R. to try the iſſue, and the plaintiff is nonſuit; he may bring a new ſcire facias in B. R. upon the record there. 2 Saund. 27. Where a ſtatute is acknowledged, and the cogniſor afterwards confeſſeth a judgment, and the land is extended thereon; in this caſe the cogniſee ſhall have a ſcire facias to avoid the extent of the lands; but if the judgment be on goods, it is otherwiſe. 1 Brownl. 37. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 186. Scire facias lies on recognizance of the peace, &c. removed into B. R.

Scire facias to repeal letters patent and grants. Where the crown hath unadviſedly granted any thing by letters patent, which ought not to be granted, or where the patentee hath done an act that amounts to a forfeiture of the grant, the remedy to repeal the patent, is by writ of ſcire facias in Chancery. Black. Com. 3 V. 260, 261. which vide.

A ſcire facias to repeal a patent, muſt be brought where the record is, which is in Chancery; and there are to be two of theſe writs ſued out of the petty-bag office directed to the ſheriff of Middleſex, who, by a letter under the ſeal of his office muſt ſend notice to the corporation or perſon whoſe concern the patent is, that there is a ſcire facias iſſued out returnable at ſuch a time, and remaining with him, for the revocation of ſuch a patent, and that if they do not appear thereunto, judgment will be had againſt them by default; and this letter to be delivered to the corporation or perſon intereſted in ſuch patent, by ſome perſon who can make oath thereof. Dalton's Sheriff. On a ſci. fac. out of Chancery returnable in B. R. to repeal letters patent, it was held, that if the letters patent are granted to the prejudice of any perſon, as if a fair is granted to the damage of the fair of another, &c. he may have a ſcire facias on the inrollment of ſuch grant in Chancery, as well as the King in other caſes; but it may be a queſtion, whether a ſcire fa. upon a record in Chancery is returnable in B. R. though after it is made returnable into B. R. that court, and not the Chancery, hath the juriſdiction of it. Mod. Caſ. 229. In all caſes at common law, where the King's title accrues by a judicial record, and he grants his eſtate over; the party grieved could not have a ſcire facias againſt the patentee, but was forced to his petition to the King; otherwiſe it is when his title is by conveyance on record, which is not judicial. 4 Rep. 59. The King hath a right to repeal a patent by ſcire facias, where he was deceived in his grant, or it is to the injury of the ſubject. 3 Lev. 220. And where a common perſon is obliged to bring his action, there, upon an inquiſition or office found, the King is put to his ſcire facias, &c. 9 Rep. 96. A ſcire facias to repeal letters patent doth not abate by the demiſe of the crown. 1 Strange 43.

Scire facias's Have iſſued to repeal the grants of offices, for conditions broken, non-attendance, &c. And for diſability, or, in caſe of forfeiture, the offices may be ſeized without ſci. fac. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 201, 202. See Black Com. 3 V. 261.

Secretary, (Secretarius à Secretis) A title given to him that is ab Epiſtolis & Scriptis Secretis; as the two Secretaries of State, &c. The Secretaries of State have an extraordinary truſt which renders them very conſiderable in the eyes of the King, and of the ſubject alſo; whoſe requeſts and petitions are for the moſt part lodged in their hands, to be repreſented to his Majeſty, and to make diſpatches thereupon, purſuant to his Majeſty's directions: They are Privy Counſellors, and a Council is ſeldom or never held without the preſence of one of them; they wait by turns, and one of theſe Secretaries always attends the court, and by the King's warrant, prepares all bills or letters for the King to ſign, not being matter of law. And depending on them is the office called the Paper Office, which contains all the public writings of ſtate, negotiations, and, diſpatches, all matters of ſtate and council, &c. and they have the keeping of the King's ſeal, called the ſignet, becauſe the King's private letters are ſigned with it. There was but one Secretary of State in this kingdom, 'till about the end of the reign of King Hen. 8. but then that great and weighty office was thought proper to be diſcharged by two perſons, both of equal authority, and ſtiled Principal Secretaries of State. The correſpondence with all parts of Great Britain is managed by either of the Secretaries, without diſtinction; but in reſpect to foreign affairs, all nations which have intercourſe of buſineſs with Great Britain, are divided into two provinces, the Southern and the Northern; of which the Southern is under the ſenior, and the Northern is under the junior Secretary, &c. Our Secretaries of State have power to commit perſons for treaſons, and other offences againſt the ſtate, as conſervators of the peace at Common law, or as juſtices of peace all over England; and it is incident to their office. 1 Salk. 347. Wood's Inſt. 458. Qu. If they are not conſtantly named in the commiſſions of the peace for every county in England and Wales; and whether they have any power to commit but in virtue thereof, as juſtices of the peace? Se Defendendo, Is a plea for him that is charged with the death of another perſon, by alledging that he was driven unto what he did in his own defence; and the other ſo aſſaulting him that, if he had not done as he did, he muſt have been in danger of his own life; which danger ought to be ſo great, as that it appears to have been otherwiſe inevitable. Staundf. P. C. lib. 1. c. 7. Any perſon in his defence may kill another for the ſafety of his life; and where a man is attacked, a defence may be made without expecting the firſt blow, which may render a perſon incapable of making any defence: But a defence ought to be always unblameable, not to take revenge. Bac. Max. 25. If a man attack another perſon on a ſudden falling out, and, before a mortal wound is given, the other flies to the wall, or ſome other unpaſſable place, to ſave his life, and being ſtill purſued kills the perſon making the aſſault; from the unavoidable neceſſity of it, this is ſe defendendo; and ſo in the like caſes. Bract. 3 Edw. 3. A flight upon neceſſity, to make killing another ſe defendendo, muſt not be a feigned one to gain breath, or opportunity to fall on afreſh; but it muſt be a flying from the danger, as far as the party can, either by reaſon of ſome wall, ditch, company, or the fierceneſs of the aſſailant will permit. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 483. If A. aſſaults the maſter, who flies to avoid death, and the ſervant kills A. in his maſter's defence, it is homicide defendendo of the maſter; tho', if he had not been driven to that extremity, it would have been manſlaughter. Ibid. 484. Plowd. 100. And if I have a weapon in my hand, and a perſon aſſaults me, if he runs ſo haſtily after me, that he runneth on my ſword which I hold forth for the defence of myſelf, and ſo is killed, it is ſe defendendo: But if there be any malice in the caſe, or one kill him before he need to do it, the offence will be of a higher nature. Fitz. Coron. 284, 286, 307. Poult. 119. There is no expreſs judgment in chancemedley, or ſe defendendo; but the offender is let to mainpriſe to ſue out his pardon; and yet his goods and chattels are forfeited: Tho' where one kills another in his own defence, upon the ſpecial matter found, it is ſaid he may be diſmiſſed without any forfeiture, or pardon purchaſed. 2 Inſt. 148. 3 Inſt. 220. 1 Inſt. 391. *H. In Weſtmorland a bolſter or pillow is called a cod; and in other northern parts a pin-cuſhion is termed a pin-cod.——Pro uno ſeed-cod empto 4 d. Paroch Antiq. 549. Kennet's Gloſſ'.

Seeder, A ſeedſman, or one who ſows the land. Blount.

Seignior, (Fr. Seignieur, i. e. Dominus) Is in general ſignification as much as Lord; but particularly uſed for the Lord of the fee, or of a manor, as Seigneur among the Feudiſts is he who grants a fee or benefit out of the land to another; and the reaſon is, becauſe, having granted away the uſe and profit of the land, the property or dominium he ſtill retains in himſelf. Hotom. F. N. B. 23.

Seigniorage, Is a royalty or prerogative of the King, whereby he claims an allowance of gold and ſilver brought in the maſs, to be exchanged for coin. As ſeigniorage, out of every pound weight of gold, the King had for his coin 5 s. of which he paid to the Maſter of the Mint for his work ſometimes 1 s. and ſometimes 1 s. 6 d. Upon every pound weight of ſilver, the ſeigniorage anſwered to the King in the time of King Edw. 3. was eighteen pennyweight, which then amounted to about 1 s. out of which he ſometimes paid 8 d. at others 9 d. to the Maſter: In the reign of King Hen. 5. the King's ſeigniorage of every pound of ſilver was 15 d. &c. Stat. 9 Hen. 5. cap. 1. Hale's Sher. Acc. pag. 3.

Seignior in groſs, Seemeth to be one that is a Lord, but of no manor, and therefore can keep no court. F. N. B. fol. 3. See next title.

Seigniory, (Dominium) Is borrowed from the French ſeigneurie, i. e. dominatus, imperium, principatus; and ſignifies with us a manor or lordſhip, ſeigniory de Sokemans, Kitchin, fol. 80. Seigniory in groſs, which ſeems to be the title of him who is not lord by means of any manor, but immediately in his own perſon; as tenure in capite, whereby one holds of the King as of his crown, is ſeigniory in groſs. Kitchin, fol. 206. See Seigniory.

Seiſin, (ſeiſina, Fr. ſeiſine) In the Common law ſignifies poſſeſſion. To ſeiſe is to take poſſeſſion of a thing; and primer ſeiſin is the firſt poſſeſſion. Co. Lit. 152. There is a ſeiſin in deed or in fact, and a ſeiſin in law; a ſeiſin in deed is when an actual poſſeſſion is taken; and ſeiſin in law is where lands deſcend, and one hath not actually entered on them, &c. 1 Inſt. 31. Seiſin in law is a right to lands and tenements, though the owner is by wrong diſſeiſed of them: And he who hath an hour's actual poſſeſſion quietly taken, hath ſeiſin de droit et de claime, whereof no man may diſſeiſe him, but muſt be driven to his action. Perk. 457, 458. A ſeiſin in law is ſufficient to avow upon; but to the bringing an aſſiſe actual ſeiſin is required, &c. 4 Rep. 9. Seiſin of a ſuperior ſervice, is ſeiſin of all inferior ſervices which are incident thereto: And ſeiſin of homage is a ſeiſin of all other ſervices, becauſe in the doing thereof the tenant takes upon himſelf to do all ſervices. 4 Rep. 80. 1 Danv. Abr. 647. The ſeiſin of rent, or other annual ſervices, is a ſufficient ſeiſin of caſual ſervices. 4 Rep. 80. But ſeiſin of one annual ſervice is not ſeiſin of another annual ſervice; as if there be lord or tenant by fealty, ten ſhillings rent, and three days work in the year; in this caſe ſeiſin of the rent is no ſeiſin of the work, nor is ſeiſin of the rent ſeiſin of the ſuit of court, which is annual. 4 Rep. 9. 1 Danv. Abr. 647. 2 Lil. 507. The ſeiſin of the father is not ſufficient for the heir: Though if a fine be levied to one for life, the remainder to another in tail, and the tenant for life takes ſeiſin of the ſervices, this will be a good ſeiſin for him in remainder; and the ſeiſin of a leſſee for years is ſufficient for him in reverſion. 2 H. 6. 7. 45 Ed. 3. 26. 1 Danv. 646, 805. Where a man is ſeiſed of a reverſion, depending upon an eſtate for life, the pleading of it is that he was ſeiſed of it ut de feodo, leaving out the word dominico; but if it be a reverſion in fee, expectant upon the determination of a leaſe for years, there he may plead that he was ſeiſed of it in dominico ſuo ut de feodo. Dyer 185, 257. Rep. 20, 27. 4 Rep. 62. Seiſin is never to be alledged, but where it is traverſable; and when a defendant alledgeth a ſeiſin in fee in any one under whom he claims, the plaintiff cannot alledge a ſeiſin in another, without traverſing, confeſſing or avoiding of the ſeiſin alledged by the defendant. Cro. El. 30. 1 Brownl. 170. If a ſeiſin in fee is alledged, it ſhall be intended a lawful ſeiſin till the contrary appears. 2 Lutw. 1337. But the party is to ſhew of what eſtate he is ſeiſed, &c. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 215. See Stat. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 2. See Black. Com. 2 V. 131, 209. Livery of ſeiſin, id. 2 V. 311. Seiſina habenda, quia Rex habuit Annum, Diem & Vaſtum, Is a writ that lies for delivery of ſeiſin to the lord of lands or tenements, after the King in right of his prerogative hath had the year, day and waſte, on a felony committed, &c. Reg. Orig. 165.

Seiſing of Heriots, Is the ſeiſing of the beſt beaſts, &c. (where an heriot is due) on the death of the tenant. It is a ſpecies of ſelf-remedy, not much unlike that of taking of cattle or goods in diſtreſs, only in the latter caſe they are ſeiſed as a pledge, in the former, as the property of the perſon for whom ſeiſed. See Black. Com. 3 V. 15.

Seizure of Goods for Offences. No goods of a felon or other offender can be ſeiſed to the uſe of the King, before forfeited: And there are two ſeiſures, one verbal only, to make an inventory, and charge the town or place, when the owner is indicted of the offence; and the other actual, which is the taking of them away afterwards on conviction, &c. 3 Inſt. 103.

Sel, Denotes the bigneſs of a thing to which it is added; as Selwood is a great wood.

Selda, (from the Sax. ſelde, a ſeat, or ſtool) Is uſed for a ſhop, ſhed, or ſtall in a market. Aſſiſ. 9 R. 1. It is alſo made to ſignify a wood of ſallows or willows: And Sir Edward Coke takes ſelda for a ſalt-pit. Co. Lit. 4.

Self-bane, (Sax. ſelf-bana) Is where a man murders himſelf, called felo de ſe.

Self-Defence. As to the defence of one's ſelf, or the mutual and reciprocal defence of ſuch as ſtand in the relations of huſband and wife, parent and child, maſter and ſervant: if the party himſelf, or any of theſe his relations, be forcibly attacked in his perſon or property, it is lawful for him to repel force by force; and the breach of the peace which happens, is chargeable upon him only who began the affray. 2 Rol. Abr. 546. 1 Hawk. P. C. 131. See Black. Com. 3 V. 3. Alſo vide Homicide, and Black. Com. 1 V. 130. 4 V. 183.

Self-Murder. The law hath ranked this among the higheſt crimes, making it a peculiar ſpecies of felony, a felony committed on one's ſelf. A felo de ſe is he that deliberately puts an end to his own exiſtence, or commits any unlawful malicious act, the conſequence of which is his own death. The puniſhment is, an ignominious burial in the highway, with a ſtake driven through his body; and a forfeiture of all his goods and chattels to the King. This forfeiture has relation to the time of the act done in the felon's life-time, which was the cauſe of his death. See Black. Com. 4 V. 189, 190.

Self-Preſervation. Every creature has implanted in it by nature a ſtrong deſire of ſelf-preſervation: And by our ancient law, if a man ſtole victuals merely to ſatisfy his preſent hunger, being for the preſervation of life, it was not felony; but this law is become obſolete. Staundſ. P. C. See Se Defendendo.

Selion of Land, (ſelio terræ) Is derived from the Fr. ſeillon, which ſignifies a ridge of ground riſing between two furrows, and contains no certain quantity, but ſometimes more and ſometimes leſs: Therefore Crompton ſays, that a ſelion of land cannot be in demand, becauſe it is a thing incertain. Cromp. Juriſd. 221.

Septennial Elections. Blackſtone, in his Commentaries, 1 V. 189 ſays, (after obſerving that the utmoſt extent of time that the ſame parliament was allowed to ſit, by the Stat. 6 W. & M. c. 2. was three years) "But by the Stat. 1 Geo. 1. ſt. 2. c. 38. (in order, profeſſedly to prevent the great and continued expences of frequent elections, and the violent heats and animoſities conſequent thereupon, and for the peace and ſecurity of the government then juſt recovering from the late rebellion) this term was prolonged to ſeven years; and, what alone is an inſtance of the vaſt authority of parliament, the very ſame houſe, that was choſen for three years, enacted its own continuance for ſeven." I may add, they might, with equal juſtice and propriety, have voted themſelves perpetual members, have filled up the vacancies, of their own authority, have totally changed the conſtitution, and formed a moſt deſpotic ariſtocracy, or rather oligarchy! It was a moſt ſhameful breach of the very high truſt the people had repoſed in their conſtituents!

Septuageſima, The third Sunday before Quadrageſima Sunday in Lent, and is called Septuageſima, becauſe it is about the ſeventieth day before Eaſter; as Sexageſima and Quinquageſima, are thus denominated from their being, the one ſixty, and the other fifty days before the ſame feaſt, which are all of them days appropriated by the church to acts of penance and mortification, preparatory to the devotion of Lent. From Septuageſima Sunday until the Octaves after Eaſter, the ſolemnizing of marriage is forbidden by the Canon law; and the laws of King Canutus ordained a vacancy from judicature, from Septuageſima to Quindena Paſchæ. See Stat. Weſtm. 1. c. 51.

Septuagint. The ſeventy interpreters of the Bible; who were in truth ſeventy-two, viz. ſix out of every one of the twelve tribes. Lit. Dict.

Septum, An encloſure ſo called, becauſe it is encompaſſed cum ſepe & foſſa, with a hedge and a ditch, at leaſt with a hedge; and it ſignifies any place paled in.

Sepulchre, (ſepulchrum) Is the place where any body lies buried; but a monument is ſet up for the memorial of the deceaſed, though the corpſe lie not there. Cowell.

Sepultura, An offering made to the prieſt for the burial of a dead body. Domeſd.

Sequatur ſub ſuo Periculo, Is a writ that lies where a ſummons ad warrantizand' is awarded, and the ſheriff returns that the party hath nothing whereby he may be ſummoned; then goes forth an alias and a pluries, and if he come not in on the pluries, this writ ſhall iſſue. Old Nat. Br. 163.

Sequela Cauſæ, The proceſs and depending iſſue of a cauſe for trial.

Sequela Curiæ, Is uſed for a ſuit of court.——— Et quod ſint liberi a ſequela curia. Mon. Ang. tom. 2. p. 253.

Sequela molendini, The owing ſuit to a particular mill, or being bound to grind corn in that place only; which was a duty and ſervice laid upon many tenants. Concedere ſequelam molendini, was to grant all the toll and profit ariſing from ſuch cuſtomary rights. Cowell.

Sequela Villanorum, The retinue and appurtenances to the goods and chattels of villeins, which were at the abſolute diſpoſal of the lord. in former times, when any lord ſold his villein, it was ſaid dedi B. nativum meum cum tota ſequela ſua; which included all the villein's offſpring. Paroch. Antiq. 216, 288.

Sequendum & Proſequendum, Signify to follow a cauſe; as where a guardian is admitted ad proſequend' for an infant, &c. 1 Vent. 74.

Sequeſter, (ſequeſtrare) Is a term uſed in the Civil law for renouncing; as when a widow comes into court, and diſclaims having anything to do, or to intermeddle with her huſband's eſtate who is deceaſed, ſhe is ſaid to ſequeſter.

Sequeſtration, (ſequeſtratio) Signifies the ſeparating or ſetting aſide of a thing in controverſy, from the poſſeſſion of both the parties that contend for it; and it is two-fold, voluntary and neceſſary; voluntary, is that which is done by conſent of each party; neceſſary, is what the judge of his authority doth, whether the party will or not. Forteſcue, cap. 50. Dyer 232, 256. And there is a ſequeſtration on a perſon's ſtanding out all the proceſſes of contempt for non-appearance in Chancery upon a bill exhibited; ſo, where obedience is not yielded to a decree, the court will grant a ſequeſtration of the lands of the party, &c. And a ſequeſtration is alſo a kind of execution for debt; eſpecially in the caſe of a beneficed clerk, of the profits of the benefice, to be paid over to him that had the judgment, till the debt is ſatisfied. 2 Inſt. 472. 2 Rol. Abr. 474. But the moſt uſual ſequeſtration of a benefice, is upon a vacancy, for the gathering up the fruits of the benefice to the uſe of the next incumbent; and the profits of the church, being in abeyance, are to be received by the churchwardens by appointment of the biſhop, to make proviſion for the cure during the vacancy, &c. Stat. 28 Hen. 8. cap. 11.

Sequeſtration is alſo the act of the ordinary, diſpoſing of the goods of one that is dead, whoſe eſtate no man will meddle with. See Kennet's Gloſſary in Sequeſtrare.

Sequeſtration in the court of Chancery is a commiſſion uſually directed to ſeven perſons therein named, and impowering them to ſeize the defendant's real and perſonal eſtate into their hands, (or it may be ſome particular part or parcel of his lands) and to receive and ſequeſter the rents and profits thereof, until the defendant ſhall have anſwered the plaintiff's bill, or performed ſome other matter which has been ordered and enjoined him by the court, for not doing whereof he is in contempt. Curſ. Canc. 89.

A ſequeſtration out of Chancery is grounded on the return of the ſerjeant at arms, wherein it is certified that the defendant had ſecreted himſelf; and therefore this proceſs iſſues, and gives authority and power to the ſequeſtrators (who are perſons of the plaintiff's own naming) to enter upon and ſeize his, the defendant's, real and perſonal eſtate.

It appears that there were great ſtruggles between the Common law courts and courts of Equity, before this proceſs came to be eſtabliſhed; the former holding that a court of conſcience could only give remedy in perſonam, and not in rem; that ſequeſtrators were treſpaſſers, againſt whom an action lay; and in the caſe of Colſton v. Gardiner, the Chancellor cites a caſe, where they ruled, that if a man killed a ſequeſtrator in the execution of ſuch proceſs, it was no murder. Cro. Eliz. 651. Brograve v. Watts, 1 Mod. 259. (But 2 Mod. 258. that the Chancellor having iſſued ſuch ſequeſtration, it will be as binding as any other proceſs according to the rules of the Common law. 2 Chanc. Ca. 44.)

But theſe were ſuch bloody and deſperate reſolutions, and ſo much againſt common juſtice and honeſty, which requires that the decrees of this court, which preſerved men from deceit, ſhould not be rendered illuſory, that they could not long ſtand; but this proceſs got the better of theſe reſolutions on this ground; 1ſt, That the extraordinary juriſdiction might puniſh contempts by the loſs of eſtate as well as the impriſonment of the perſon, becauſe that liberty being a greater benefit than property, if they had a power to commit the perſon, they might take from him his eſtate till he had anſwered his contempts. 2dly, To ſay that a court ſhould have power to decree about things, and yet ſhould have no juriſdiction in rem, is a perfect ſoleciſm in the conſtitution of the court itſelf. 2 Peer Wil. 621. 2 Ch. Ca. 44.

It has been ſaid, that the firſt inſtance of a ſequeſtration, after a decree, was Sir Thomas Read's caſe in Lord Coventry's time, and that it was afterwards awarded in Chancery, in the caſe of Hyde v. Pitt, 1666, and affirmed in parliament: and by the court of Exchequer, Graves v. Fountaine, 1687, and ſince, without ſcruple. The doubt formerly was, that lands were not liable to execution before the ſtatute Weſtm. 2. cap. 18. 1 Ch. Ca. 92. 2 Ch. Ca. 44.

In Vernon's Reports it is ſaid, that ſequeſtrations were firſt introduced in Lord Bacon's time, and then but ſparingly uſed in proceſs, and after a decree to ſequeſter the thing in demand only. 1 Vern. 423. See Black. Com. 2 V. 444.

1. In what caſes a ſequeſtration is to be awarded.

A ſequeſtration niſi is the firſt proceſs againſt a peer or member of the Houſe of Commons. 2 Peer Wil. 385. 1 Ch. Ca. 61, 138. S. P.

A ſequeſtration is alſo the firſt proceſs againſt the menial ſervant of a peer, within the words and meaning of the ſtatute 12 & 13 W. 3. c. 3. for that otherwiſe ſuch ſervant would have greater privilege than his lord. 1 Peer Wil. 535.

If there be a ſequeſtration niſi againſt a peer for want of an anſwer, and the peer puts in an anſwer, that is inſufficient; yet the order for a ſequeſtration ſhall not be abſolute, but a new ſequeſtration niſi. 2 Peer Wil. 385.

Notwithſtanding the ſuperintendent power of the courts in this kingdom over thoſe in Ireland, and what is ſaid in ſome of our books, it ſeems to be now the better opinion, that the court of Chancery here cannot award a ſequeſtration againſt lands in Ireland. 1 Vern. 76. 2 Ch. Ca. 189. 2 Peer Wil. 261.

It was ſaid, that ſuch proceſs had been awarded to the governor of North Carolina; but herein it was doubted whether ſuch ſequeſtration ſhould not be directed by the King's council, where alone an appeal lies from the decrees in the plantations. 2 Peer Wil. 261.

Copyholds may be ſequeſtered, though not extendible at Common law or the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. for courts of equity have poteſtatem extraordin' & abſolutam; but it ſeems a doubt whether ſuch a ſequeſtration can be revived againſt the heir of a copyholder, which ariſes from the difficulty of obliging the lord to admit, and depriving the lord of his fine, &c. upon the death of his tenant. 2 Ch. Ca. 46. Vide 1 Bernard. 431.

A ſequeſtration out of Chancery is more effectual than an execution by fieri facias at law, for a ſequeſtration may lie againſt the goods, though the party is in cuſtody upon the attachment; whereas in law, if a capias ad ſatisfaciendum is executed, there can no fi. fa. iſſue. Caſes in Lord Talbot's Time, 222.

Where the ſequeſtrators ſeize the real eſtate of the party, any tenant or other perſon who claims title to the eſtate ſo ſequeſtered, either by mortgage, judgment, leaſe, or otherwiſe, who hath a title paramount to the ſequeſtration, ſhall not be obliged to bring a bill to conteſt ſuch title, but he ſhall be let in to conteſt ſuch a title in a ſummary way.

He may move by his counſel as of courſe to be examined pro intereſſe ſuo; and in this caſe the plaintiff is to exhibit interrogatories in order to examine him for a diſcovery of his title to the eſtate, and he muſt be examined upon ſuch interrogatories accordingly; and the maſter muſt ſtate the matter to the court; and the parties may enter into proof touching the title to the eſtate in queſtion; and when the maſter hath ſtated the whole matter, the court proceeds to give judgment therein upon the report; and if it appears that the party who is examined pro intereſſe ſuo hath a plain title to the eſtate, and is not affected with the ſequeſtration, then it is to be diſcharged as againſt him, with or without coſts, as the court ſhall determine upon the circumſtances of the caſe, and ſo vice verſa. See Cum. 712. 1 Peer Wil. 308.

The ſequeſtration binds from the time of awarding the commiſſion, and not only from the time of executing it and its being laid on by the commiſſioners; for if that ſhould be admitted, then the inferior officer would have ligandi & non ligandi poteſtatem. 1 Vern. 58.

2. The power and duty of the ſequeſtrators; and when a ſequeſtration is determined.

The ſequeſtrators are officers of the court, and as ſuch are ameſnable to the court, and are to act from time to time in the execution of their office as the court ſhall direct; they are to account for what comes to their hands, and are to bring the money into court as the court ſhall direct, to be put out at intereſt, or otherwiſe, as ſhall be found neceſſary; but this money is not uſually paid to the plaintiff, but is to remain in court until the defendant hath appeared or anſwered and cleared his contempt, and then whatſoever hath been ſeized ſhall be accounted for and paid over to him; however, the court hath the whole under their power, and may do therein as they pleaſe, and as ſhall be moſt agreeable to the juſtice and equity of the caſe.

The plaintiff's counſel may move and obtain an order for tenants to attorn and pay their rents to the ſequeſtrators, or for the ſequeſtrators to ſell and diſpoſe of the goods of the party, and to keep the money in their hands, or to bring it into court, as ſhall be moſt adviſeable and diſcretionary, and fitting for the court to do.

Sequeſtrators on meſne proceſs are accountable for all the profits, and can retain only ſo far as to ſatisfy for contempt. 1 Vern. 248.

If ſequeſtrators, having power to ſell timber, diſpoſe of 7000*l*. worth, and only bring 2000*l*. to account, they, as officers and agents of the court, are reſponſible, and not the plaintiff. 1 Vern. 161.

A ſequeſtration is in nature of a levari at Common law, and the party ſequeſtering has neither jus in rem, vel in re; the legal eſtate of the premiſſes remaining in every reſpect as before. 1 Peer Wil. 307.

Sequeſtrators being in poſſeſſion of a great houſe in St. James's ſquare, which was the defendant's for life, the court ordered that the maſter allow a tenant for the houſe, and the ſequeſtrators to make a leaſe, and the tenant to enjoy. 3 Ch. Rep. 87.

It was moved, that the irregularity of a ſequeſtration might be referred to the deputy, which was taken out againſt the defendant for not appearing, by reaſon of its being taken out ſooner than by the courſe of the court it could, and yet the ſequeſtrators had taken the goods off the premiſſes, and threatened to ſell them; the chief baron ſaid, that as to the carrying the goods off the premiſſes, it was clear the ſequeſtrators could do that, becauſe a ſequeſtration upon meſne proceſs anſwers to a diſtringas at law; but however, as to ſelling them, the court agreed in the preſent caſe it could not be lawful, and ſaid it had lately been ſettled on debate; and obſerved further, that courts of equity could not authoriſe ſequeſtrators to ſell goods even upon a decree until Lord Stamford's caſe, which makes decrees in this reſpect equivalent to a judgment; and even now, the counſel ſaid, ſequeſtrators cannot ſell but by leave of the court; however, the court ſaid this was a matter proper for them to conſider upon another occaſion, and therefore only referred the irregularity of the ſequeſtration as to the point of time to the deputy. 1 Barnard. Rep. 212. in Scacc'.

A ſequeſtration that iſſues as a meſne proceſs of the court will be diſcontinued and determined by the death of the party; but where a ſequeſtration iſſues in purſuance of a decree, and to compel the execution of it, there, though the ſame be for a perſonal duty, it ſhall not be determined by the death of the party. 1 Vern. 58.

A ſequeſtration was againſt the father, who appeared to be only a tenant for life, and on his death the ſequeſtration was diſcharged. 1 Ch. Ca. 241. 2 Ch. Ca. 46.

Sequeſtration in London, Is made upon an action of debt; and the courſe of proceeding in it is thus: The action being entered, the officer goes to the ſhop or warehouſe of the defendant, when there is no body within, and takes a padlock and hangs it upon the door, &c. uſing theſe words, viz. I do ſequeſter this warehouſe, and the goods and merchandizes therein of the defendant in the action, to the uſe of the plaintiff, &c. and ſo puts on his ſeal, and makes return thereof at the Compter; then four court days being paſt, the next court after the plaintiff may have judgment to open the doors of the ſhop or warehouſe, and to appraiſe the goods therein by a ſerjeant, who takes a bill of appraiſement, having two freemen to appraiſe them, for which they are to be ſworn at the next court holden for that Compter; and then the officer puts his hand to the bill of appraiſement, and the court giveth judgment: Though the defendant in the action may put in bail before ſatisfaction, and ſo diſſolve the ſequeſtration; and after ſatisfaction, may put in bail ad diſproband' debitum, &c. Pract. Solic. 429.

Sequeſtro habendo, Is a writ judicial for the diſcharging a ſequeſtration of the profits of a church benefice granted by the biſhop at the King's command, thereby to compel the parſon to appear at the ſuit of another; and the parſon upon his apppearance, may have this writ for the releaſe of the ſequeſtration. Reg. Serement, (Fr.) An oath which is to be taken before a perſon who hath power to adminiſter it, or ſhall be void. 2 Keb. 284. See Oath.

Serjeant or Sergeant, (Lat. Serviens) Is a word diverſely uſed in our law, and applied to ſundry offices and callings. Firſt a Serjeant at law, (Serviens ad legem) otherwiſe called Serjeant Counter or of the Coif, is the higheſt degree in the Common law, as a Doctor is in the Civil law; but, according to Spelman, a doctor of law is ſuperior to a ſerjeant, for the very name of a doctor is magiſterial, but that of a ſerjeant is only miniſterial. To theſe ſerjeants, as men beſt learned and experienced in the law and practice of the courts, one court is ſevered to plead in, by themſelves, which is that of the Common Pleas, where the Common law of England is moſt ſtrictly obſerved; yet they are not ſo limited as to be reſtrained from pleading in any other court, where the judges (who cannot be ſuch till they have taken the degree of ſerjeant) call them brothers, and hear them with great reſpect; and of which one or more are ſtiled the King's Serjeants, being commonly choſen out of the reſt in reſpect of their great learning, to plead for the King in all his cauſes, eſpecially upon indictments for treaſon, &c. In other kingdoms the King's Serjeant is called Advocatus Regis: and here in England, in the time of King Edward the Sixth, Serjeant Benloe wrote himſelf ſolus ſerviens ad legem, there being for ſometime none but himſelf; and in Ireland at this day there is only a King's Serjeant. Serjeants at law are made by the King's writ directed unto ſuch as are called, commanding them to take upon them that degree by a certain day; and by the writ or patent of creation it appears that the honour of ſerjeant at law, is a ſtate and dignity of great reſpect: In conferring theſe degrees much ceremony is uſed; and the ſerjeants choſen hold a ſumptuous feaſt, like that at a coronation, which formerly continued ſeveral days; alſo they make preſents of gold rings to a conſiderable value, &c. Forteſcue, c. 50. 3 Cro. 1. Dyer 72. 2 Inſt. 213, 214. Their privilege of being impleaded in C. B. &c. Vide Privilege. See Black. Com. 1 V. 24. 3 V. 28.

Serjeants at Arms. Their office is to attend the perſon of the King; to arreſt perſons of condition offending, and give attendance on the Lord High Steward of England, ſitting in judgment on any traitor, &c. There may not be above thirty Serjeants at Arms in the realm, who ſhall not oppreſs the people, on pain to loſe their offices, and be fined, by the ſtat. 13 R. 2. c. 6. And two of them, by the King's allowance, do attend on the two houſes of parliament; the office of him in the houſe of commons is, the keeping of the doors, and the execution of ſuch commands touching the apprehenſion and taking into cuſtody of any offender, as that houſe ſhall injoin him. Another of them attends on the Lord Chancellor in the Chancery; and one on the Lord Treaſurer of England: Alſo one upon the Lord Mayor of London on extraordinary ſolemnities, &c. They are in the old books called Virgatories, becauſe they carried ſilver rods gilt with gold, as they now do maces, before the King. Stat. 7 Hen. 7. c. 3. Crompt. Jur. 9. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 38. See Black. Com. 3 V. 444.

Serjeants, Of a more inferior kind are Serjeants of the Mace, whereof there is a great band in the city of London, and other corporate towns, that attend the mayor or other head officer, chiefly for matters of juſtice, &c. Kitch. 143. Formerly all the Juſtices in Eyre had certain officers attending them called Serjeants, who were in the nature of tip-ſtaves. Weſtm. 1. c. 30. And the word Serjeant is uſed in Britton for an officer belonging to the county; which is the ſame with what Bracton calls Serjeant of the Hundred, being no more than bailiff of the hundred. Bract. lib. 5. c. 4. And we read of ſerjeants of manors of the peace, &c.

Serjeants of the Houſhold, Are officers who execute ſeveral functions within the King's Houſhold, mentioned in the ſtat. 33 H. 8. c. 12.

Serjeanty, (ſerjeantia) Signifies in law a ſervice, that cannot be due from a tenant to any lord but to the King only; and this is either grand ſerjeanty, or petit; the firſt is a tenure whereby one holds his lands of the King by ſuch ſervices as he ought to do in perſon to the King at his coronation; and may alſo concern matters military, or ſervices of honour in peace, as to be the King's butler, carver, &c. Petit ſerjeanty, is where a man holds lands of the King, to furniſh him yearly with ſome ſmall thing towards his wars; and in effect payable as rent. Though all tenures are turned into ſocage by the 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. Yet the honourary ſervices of grand ſerjeanty ſtill remain, being therein excepted. Lit. 153, 159. 1 Inſt. 105, 108. Sermonium, Was an interlude or hiſtorical play, acted by the inferior orders of the clergy, aſſiſted by youths; in the body of the church, ſuitable to the ſolemnity of ſome high proceſſion day; and before the improvements of the ſtage, theſe ruder ſorts of performances were even a part of the unreformed religion. *Collect. Servants, Are ſuch as men of trades and profeſſions employ under them, to aſſiſt them in their particular callings; or ſuch perſons as others retain to perform the work and buſineſs of their families, which comprehends both men and women: And ſervants are menial, or not ſo; menial, being domeſtics living within the walls of the houſe. Wood's Inſt. 51. Every perſon under the age of thirty years, that has been brought up in handicraft trades, and hath not lands of inheritance, or for life, of the yearly value of forty ſhillings, or is not worth ten pounds in goods, and ſo allowed by two juſtices of peace; and not being retained with any perſon in huſbandry, or in the ſaid arts, not being lawfully hired as a ſervant with any nobleman or gentleman, or having any farm or other holding whereupon he may employ his labour; ſhall, upon requeſt made by any perſon uſing the myſtery wherein ſuch perſon hath been exerciſed, be obliged to ſerve him as a ſervant therein, on pain of impriſonment. 5 Eliz. c. 4. And by the ſame ſtatute, perſons are compellable to ſerve in huſbandry by the year, with any perſon that keepeth or uſeth huſbandry, and who will require any proper perſon to ſerve; and the juſtices of peace have authority herein, and to aſſeſs the wages of ſuch ſervants in huſbandry, order payment, &c. Alſo two juſtices, and mayors or head officers of any city or town, may appoint any poor woman of the age of twelve years, and under forty, unmarried, to go to ſervice by the year, &c. for ſuch wages and in ſuch manner as they think fit; and if any ſuch woman ſhall refuſe to go abroad as a ſervant, then the ſaid juſtices, &c. may commit ſuch woman until ſhe is bound to ſervice. Stat. Ibid.

If any maſter ſhall give more wages than aſſeſſed by the juſtices; or any ſervant takes more, or refuſes to ſerve for the ſtatute wages; they are puniſhable; but a maſter may reward his ſervant as he pleaſes, ſo as it be not by way of contract on the retainer: And,

A maſter cannot put away a ſervant nor a ſervant depart before the end of his term without ſome reaſonable cauſe, to be allowed by one juſtice; nor after the end of the term without a quarter's warning given before witneſſes, if a maſter diſcharges a ſervant otherwiſe he is liable to a penalty of forty ſhillings. 5 Eliz. c. 4. And where ſervants quit their ſervice, teſtimonials are to be given by conſtables and two houſholders, &c. declaring their lawful departure; and a ſervant not producing ſuch a teſtimonial to the conſtable where he deſigns to dwell, is to be impriſoned till he gets one; and in default thereof be whipped as a vagabond; maſters retaining them without ſuch teſtimonial, ſhall forfeit five pounds. But the teſtimonial concerns, only ſervants in trades and huſbandry. Stat. Ibid.

No perſon may retain a ſervant for leſs than a year, by the ancient ſtatutes; if one retains a ſervant generally, without expreſſing any time, the law conſtrues it for a year; and where a ſervant is hired for a year, according to the ſtatute, and the maſter dieth within that time, the executor muſt pay the wages. Dalt. 129. 1 Inſt. 42. If a woman ſervant marrieth, ſhe is obliged to ſerve out her year; but if a ſingle woman who is with child procures herſelf to be retained with a maſter, who knows nothing thereof, this is a good cauſe to diſcharge her from her ſervice; and ſo if ſhe be gotten with child during her ſervice. Dalt. 92. Reſol. Ann 1633. A ſervant retained for a year, falling ſick, ought not to be diſcharged therefore, or for any diſability by the act of God; neither may his wages be abated for theſe cauſes. Dalt. 129.

Maſter and ſervant may part by conſent, and then the allowance of the diſcharge by a juſtice of peace is not neceſſary: And a maſter's detaining wages, not allowing ſufficient meat, &c. or the maſter's wife beating him, are good cauſes for a ſervant's departure; but they muſt be allowed by a juſtice. Dalt. If a maſter put away his ſervant, he muſt pay him his wages to the time he ſerved, though if the ſervant go away from his ſervice before the end of the time agreed, he ſhall forfeit all his wages. Dalt. 129. A ſervant is not to depart from his ſervice; and if he refuſeth to do his buſineſs, this is a departure in law, altho' he go not away. Noy's Max. 90.

Enticing away a ſervant, or retaining and keeping one who departed from his maſter without licence, knowing him to be a ſervant to another, the maſter may have action of the caſe againſt the perſon doing it. 2 Lev. 63. Stat. 23 Ed. 3. In caſe an action is brought for enticing away, or retaining or employing a ſervant, it is adviſable to give notice to the intended defendant, that the party is ſervant to the plaintiff, and to demand him, on proving ſuch notice and a ſubſequent employment during the time for which the plaintiff hired, retained, took and engaged the ſervant, will intitle the plaintiff to a verdict. To this proof muſt be added proof of the contract between the plaintiff and the ſervant, and that the time was not expired. But if a man do retain another's ſervant, not knowing that he was in the ſervice of the other, he ſhall not be puniſhed for ſo doing, if he do not retain him after notice of his firſt ſervice: And if a perſon do retain one to ſerve him forty days, and another doth afterwards retain him to ſerve for a year, the firſt covenant is avoided, becauſe the retainer was not according to the ſtatute. New. Nat. Br. 374, 375. i. e. according to the above law.

But there are many caſes, where ſervants may be retained for a longer or ſhorter term than a year, not within the above ſtatute, in which caſes, enticing away or retaining after notice of ſuch ſervants, will ſubject the offender to an action.

A maſter is anſwerable for the actions and treſpaſſes of his ſervant in many caſes; but not for treſpaſs of battery, &c. nor in criminal caſes, unleſs done by his command. Noy's Max. 99. And if the maſter order his ſervant to diſtrain another man's cattle, and after he hath diſtrained he kills or abuſes the diſtreſs, the maſter ſhall not anſwer it. Noy 111. If a man has a ſervant known to be ſuch, and he ſend him to fairs and markets to buy or ſell, his maſter ſhall be charged if the thing come to his uſe; tho' if the ſervant makes a contract in his maſter's name, the contract will not be binding, unleſs it were by the maſter's command or aſſent; and where a ſervant borrows money in his maſter's name, without order, that does not bind the maſter. Doct. & Stud. Dial. 2. c. 42. A ſervant buys things in his own name, the maſter ſhall not be charged, except the things bought come to his uſe, and he have notice of it. Kitch. 371. Where a maſter always gives his ſervant money, he ſhall not anſwer for what the ſervant buys on truſt; but if he ſends ſometimes on truſt, he muſt anſwer to his uſual tradeſmen for what is ſo taken up on truſt by him. Wood's Inſt. 56.

A maſter uſed to give his ſervant money every Saturday, to defray the charges of the foregoing week; and the ſervant kept the money; per Holt Ch. J. the maſter is here chargeable; for the maſter at his peril ought to take care what ſervant he employs; and it is more reaſonable that he ſhould ſuffer for the cheats of his ſervants, than ſtrangers and tradeſmen who do not employ them. 3 Salk. 234. It has been adjudged, that where a ſervant uſually buys goods for his maſter upon tick, and takes up things in his maſter's name, but for his own uſe, the maſter is liable; but it is not ſo where the maſter uſually gives him ready money: That if the maſter gives the ſervant money to buy goods for him, and he converts the money to his own uſe, and buys the goods upon tick, yet the maſter is anſwerable, if the goods come to his uſe; otherwiſe he is not: Alſo a note under the hand of an apprentice ſhall bind his maſter, where he is allowed to deliver out notes, tho' the money is never applied to the maſter's uſe; but if he be not allowed or accuſtomed to deliver out notes, his note ſhall not bind the maſter, if the money be not applied to the uſe of the maſter. 3 Salk. 234, 235.

The act of a ſervant ſhall not bind the maſter, unleſs he acts by authority of his maſter; and therefore if a maſter ſends his ſervant to receive money, and the ſervant inſtead of money takes a bill, and the maſter as ſoon as told thereof diſagrees, he is not bound by this payment: But acquieſcence, or any ſmall matter, will be proof of his maſter's conſent, and that will make the act of the ſervant the act of his maſter. Hill. 2 Ann. B. R. 2 Salk. 442. For what is within the compaſs of a ſervant's buſineſs, the maſter ſhall be generally chargeable; and alſo have advantage of the ſame againſt others. Noy's Max. An aſſumpſit of the ſervant, by order and appointment of the maſter, ſhall bind his maſter; and a promiſe to my ſervant is good to me: If my bailiff buy cattle to ſtock my ground, I ſhall be chargeable in debt for the money; and if he ſell corn for me, I may have action in my own name againſt the buyer. Bro. 24. Godb. 360. If one owe me money, and I ſend my ſervant for it, and he pay it to him; this is a good payment and diſcharge, tho' the ſervant do not bring the ſame to me: But if I ſend him not, it is otherwiſe. Doct. & Stud. 138.

A maſter ſends his ſervant with deceitful wares to market, and orders him to ſell them, but ſays not to whom, if he ſells them, no action will lie againſt the maſter: Tho' if he had bid the ſervant ſell them to ſuch a man in particular, and he had done ſo, the maſter would be chargeable in an action on the caſe. 11 Ed. 4. Kitch. 185. The maſter is liable for the neglects of his ſervant; (tho' not the wilful wrong) where a carrier's ſervant loſes things delivered to him, the maſter muſt anſwer it, and action lies againſt him; and if goods be undertaken to be carried ſafely for hire, but by negligence are ſpoiled, it has been held, that whoſoever employs another, is anſwer-ble for him, and undertakes for his care to all that make uſe of him. 2 Salk. 440. If a ſurgeon undertakes the cure of a perſon, and, by ſending medicines by his ſervant, the wound is hurt and made worſe, the patient ſhall have action againſt the maſter, and not againſt the ſervant. 18 Hen. 8. And where a ſmith's ſervant pricks a horſe in ſhoeing him, the maſter ſhall anſwer the damages. Wood's Inſt. 56.

A maſter may maintain the cauſe of his ſervants: He may bring an action for the battery of a ſervant, whereby he loſes his ſervice, which is to be alledged: And if a ſervant is cozened of his maſter's money, the maſter may have action on the caſe againſt the perſon that cozened him. 9 Rep. 113. 10 Rep. 130. 1 Roll. Abr. 98. An action was ſometime ſince tried, againſt a lottery office keeper, for a large ſum of money, paid by the plaintiff's ſervant, the property of the maſter, without his privity, for inſurance of tickets, and a verdict againſt the defendant. Coram Lord Manſfield at Guildhall. In caſe a ſervant give away his maſter's goods, the maſter may have action againſt the receiver. Noy's Max. 94.

Where a ſervant damages goods of his maſter, action lies againſt him; and being employed to ſell goods in his maſter's ſhop, if the ſervant carries away and converts them to his own uſe, action of treſpaſs may be brought by the maſter againſt the ſervant; for the ſervant cannot meddle with them in any other manner than to ſell them. 5 Rep. 14. 1 Leon. 88. Moor 244. But if a ſervant be robbed, without his default, &c. he ſhall be excuſed, and allowed it in his account. 1 Inſt. 9.

Servants going or making away with, imbeziling or purloining any of their maſter's goods, to the value of 40*s.* are guilty of felony, by the ſtat. 21 Hen. 8. c. 7. and 12 Ann. c. 7. And aſſaulting their maſters, they may be bound to the good behaviour, or be committed to priſon for a year, &c.

By the ſtat. 20 Geo. c. 19. All complaints and diſputes between maſters and ſervants in huſbandry hired for a year or longer, or between maſters and artificers, handicraftſmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glaſsmen, potters, and other labourers employed for any certain time, ſhall be heard and determined by a juſtice or juſtices of the peace, altho' no rate of wages hath been made that year by the juſtices, and may order payment of ſo much wages as to him and them ſhall ſeem juſt, provided that the ſum in queſtion ſhall not exceed 10 l. to any ſervant, nor 5 l. to any artificer, &c. and in caſe of non-payment by twenty-one days, may iſſue a warrant to levy the ſame of the maſter's goods. And upon complaint on oath of any miſdemeanor, miſcarriage or ill behaviour in any ſuch ſervant, artificer, &c. ſuch juſtice or juſtices may puniſh the offender by commitment to the houſe of correction, there to be corrected and held to hard labour, not exceeding a calendar month; or by abating ſome part of his or her wages, or by diſcharging ſuch ſervant, artificer, &c. from his or her ſervice or employment. And on complaint upon oath of any miſuſage, refuſal of neceſſary proviſion, cruelty, or other ill-treatment to ſuch ſervant, artificer, &c. by any maſter, the juſtice or juſtices may ſummon the Maſter to appear before him or them, and, upon proof thereof upon oath to the ſatisfaction of ſuch juſtice or juſtices, he or they may diſcharge ſuch ſervant or artificer, &c. from his ſaid ſervice or employment, ſuch diſcharge to be given gratis.

Perſons thinking themſelves aggrieved by any ſuch determination, may appeal to the next ſeſſions of the peace. But Certiorari lies not to remove any ſuch proceedings to any of the Courts at Weſtminſter. There being a proviſo in the act, that nothing therein contained ſhould extend to the ſtannaries in Devon and Cornwall, by the ſtat. 27 Geo. 2. c. 6. that proviſo is repealed, and it is thereby enacted that all the proviſions and regulations in the ſaid ſtat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 19. relating to ſervants in huſbandry, &c. ſhall extend to ſuch tinners and miners as ſhall be employed in the ſaid ſtannaries; but not to hinder any perſon from applying to the ſtannary courts, or to the warden, ſub-warden, or ſteward of the ſtannaries, in relation to any of the aforeſaid matters. See Artificers, Felony, Labourers, Manufacturers, and Black. Com. 1 V. 423, 425. 3 V. 142, 153. 4 V. 230, 231.

Servi, Bond-men, or ſervile tenants. Our northern ſervi had always a much eaſier condition than the Roman ſlaves. Servis non in noſtrum morem deſcriptis per familiam miniſteriis utuntur. Suam quiſque ſedem, ſuos penatis regit. Frumenti modum dominus, aut pecoris, aut veſtis, colono, injungit, & ſervus hactenus paret. Tacitus de Moribus Germanorum. Which plainly deſcribes the condition of our Saxon and Norman ſervants, natives and villains, whoſe ſervitude did more reſpect their tenure, than their perſons. No author has fixed the diſtinction between ſervus and villanus, though undoubtedly their ſervile ſtate was different, for they are all along in the Domeſday-Book diſtinguiſhed from each other. So in Burceſter there were——Quinqui ſervi, & viginti octo villani, &c. It is ſuppoſed the ſervi were thoſe, whom our lawyers have ſince called pure villanes, and villanes in groſs, who, without any determined tenure of land, were at the arbitrary pleaſure of the lord appointed to ſuch ſervile works, and received their wages or maintenance at diſcretion of the lord. The other were of a ſuperior degree, and were called villani, becauſe they were villæ & glebæ adſcripti, i. e. held ſome cottage and lands, for which they were burdened with ſuch ſtated ſervile offices, and were conveyed as appurtenant to the manor or eſtate to which they belonged. See Kennet's Gloſſary.

The name and quality of their bondage do often occur in Domeſday regiſter: And their condition, no doubt, was worſe than that of the bordarii or Cotſeti, who performed likewiſe ſome ſervile offices for their lord, and yet as to their perſons and goods were not obnoxious to ſervitude, as the proper ſervi were. Theſe were of four ſorts, 1. Such as ſold themſelves for a livelihood. 2. Debtors that were to be ſold, for being incapable to pay their debts. 3. Captives in war, retained and employed as perfect ſlaves. 4. Nativi, ſuch as were born ſervants, and by ſuch deſcent belonged to the ſole property of the Lord.—All theſe had their perſons, their children, and their goods, at the diſpoſal of their Lord, incapable of making any wills, or giving away any thing. Cowell. They are alſo ſaid to be ſervi teſtimentales, thoſe which we now call covenant ſervants. Leg. Athelſt. c. 34.

Service, (Servitium) Is that duty which the tenant, by reaſon of his fee or eſtate, oweth unto the lord.

Our ancient law books make many diviſions of it; as into perſonal and real; free and baſe; continual or annual; caſual and accidental; intrinſick and extrinſick, &c. Bract. lib. 2. Brit. c. 66. 4 Co. Rep. 9.

Perſonal ſervice, is where ſomething is to be done by the perſon of the tenant, as homage and fealty; and real, was wards and marriages, when in uſe.

Annual and certain ſervice is rent, ſuit of court to the lord, &c.

Accidental ſervices, are heriots, reliefs and the like: And ſome ſervices are only for the lord's benefit; and ſome pro bono publico. Co. Copyhold 22. Co. Litt. 222. 22 E. 4. 3.

Alſo ſervices are ſaid to be intire; of chattels valuable, ſuch as an ox, or things pleaſureable, as a hawk, &c. And ſo are thoſe perſonal, and conſiſting of manual work, or to exerciſe ſome office, &c.

The ſtatute of Magna Charta ordains, that no freeman ſhall ſell ſo much of his lands, but that of the reſidue the lord may have his ſervices. 9 Hen. 3. c. 32. In feoffments to a man and his heirs, the feoffee ſhall hold the land of the lord by the ſame ſervices as the feoffor, &c. Stat. 18 Edw. 1. And where ſervices are intire, and cannot be divided; upon the alienation of parcel of the lands by the tenant, the ſervices ſhall be multiplied, and every alienee render the whole ſervice; tho' by the purchaſe of parcel by the lord, the whole is extinct, except in caſe of fealty and heriot cuſtom. 6 Rep. 1. Wood's Inſt. 133.

All perſons in office to take the ſacrament, and the declaration againſt tranſubſtantiation, 25 Car. 2. c. 2. Reading the articles to indemnify againſt neglect in point of time, ib.

Service Secular, Signifies worldly ſervice, contrary to Spiritual and eccleſiaſtical. Stat. 1 Ed. 4. c. 1.

Servitium Forinſecum, A ſervice which did not belong to the chief lord, but to the King: it was called forinſecum and foraneum, becauſe it was done foris, vel extra ſervitium quod ſit domino capitali: And we find ſeveral grants of liberties with the appurtenances, ſalvo forenſi ſervitio, &c. in Mon. Ang. tom. 2. pag. 48.

Servitium Intrinſecum, Is that ſervice which was due to the chief lord alone from his tenants within his manor. Bracton, lib. 2. Fleta, lib. 3.

Servitium Liberum, A ſervice to be done by feudatory tenants, who were called liberi homines, and diſtinguiſhed from vaſſals, as was their ſervice; for they were not bound to any of the baſe ſervices of ploughing the lord's land, &c. but were to find a man and a horſe, or go with the lord into the army, or to attend his court, &c. and ſometimes it was called ſervitium liberum armorum; as in an old rental of the manor of South Malling in Eſſex, mentioned by Somner in his treatiſe of Gavelkind, pag. 56.

Servitium Regale, Royal ſervice, or the prerogatives that within a royal manor belonged to the lord of it; which were generally reckoned to be the following, viz. power of judicature in matters of property; and of life and death in felonies and murders; right to waifs and eſtrays; minting of money; aſſize of bread and beer; and weights and meaſures: All which privileges it is ſaid were annexed to ſome manors by grant from the King. *Paroch. A ſeſſions is to be held in Wales, twice in every year in each county by judges appointed by the King, to be called the great ſeſſions of Wales, in which all pleas of real and perſonal actions ſhall be held, with the ſame form of proceſs and in as ample a manner as in the court of Common Pleas at Weſtminſter: And writs of error ſhall lie from judgments therein (it being a court of record) to the court of King's Bench at Weſtminſter.

Seſſion of Gaol Delivery. A Seſſion held for delivering a gaol of the priſoners therein being. See Black. Com. 4 V. iii. And Crown Circuit Com. 1 V. 6, 57, 58.

And the juſtices in Seſſions have power to hear and determine treſpaſſes againſt the public peace, &c. and many offences by ſtatute: This court is held four times in a year at ſome place within the county, &c. Alſo, beſides the General Seſſions of the peace, there are private Seſſions held by the juſtices, for divers particular branches of the buſineſs of their offices. Dalt. Juſt. 573. See Black. Com. 4 V. 268.

K. Cha.* 1.

Set-off. A ſet-off may be either by plea, or notice. In ſuch caſe the defendant acknowledges the juſtice of the plaintiff's demand on the one hand; but, on the other, ſets up a demand of his own, to counter-balance that of the plaintiff, either in the whole or in part. Vide the ſtatutes 2 Geo. 2. c. 22. and 8 Geo. 2. c. 24.

Several Fiſhery, A free fiſhery, or excluſive right of fiſhing in a public river, is a royal franchiſe; and is conſidered as ſuch in all countries where the feodal polity has prevailed. Black. Com. 2 V. 39.

Several Inheritance, An inheritance conveyed, ſo as to deſcend, or come to two perſons ſeverally by moieties, &c. Vide Inheritance.

Several Tail, Is that whereby land is given and intailed ſeverally to two. Co. Lit.

Several Tenancy, (Tenura ſeparalis) A plea or exception taken to a writ that is laid againſt two perſons as joint-tenants, who are ſeveral. Bro. 273.

Severalty, Eſtates in. He that holds lands or tenements in ſeveralty, or is ſole tenant thereof, is he that holds them in his own right only, without any other perſon being joined or connected with him in point of intereſt, during his eſtate therein. Black. Com. 2 V. 179.

Severance, Is the ſingling or ſevering of two or more joined in one writ or action. There is a Severance of the tenants in an aſſiſe, when one or two diſſeiſees appear upon the writ, and not the other. Book Intr. 81. A Severance in debet, where two executors, &c. are plaintiffs, and one refuſeth to act or proſecute. Ibid. 220. Severance in quare impedit; in attaints, &c. 5 Rep. 97. And it lies in real, as well as perſonal actions; and on writs of error. F. N. B. 78. 10 Rep. 135. In writ of error, if three defendants in the action bring error, and one releaſes the errors, he may be ſummoned and ſevered, and then the other two ſhall proceed to reverſe the judgment. 6 Rep. 26. And if in error where there are ſeveral plaintiffs, one only appears and aſſigns errors; this is not good, without ſummoning and ſevering the reſt. Cro. Eliz. 893.

It has been held, that ſummons and Severance lies in partition; yet he who was ſevered ſhall have his part: For partition muſt be made of the whole. Jenk. Cent. 211. And in caſe of jointenants of lands, by Severance the proſecution of the ſuit is ſevered, but not the jointure; for where one alone recovers afterwards, the other may enter into the moiety recovered. Ibid. 40. Summons and Severance is uſually before appearance; as nonſuit is after appearance. 10 Rep. 134. But, according to Hale, there are two ſorts of Severances, one when a plaintiff will not appear; and the other when ſeveral plaintiffs appear, but ſome will not proceed and proſecute. Hard. 317. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 255. If a plaintiff or defendant on a writ of Summons and Severance, ſued out againſt him by another, doth not come in upon it, judgment ſhall be had ad proſequendum ſolum; and this hath been done in B. R. by giving a rule to appear and come in. 2 Lill. Abr. 539. See Summons and Severance.

Severance of Corn. The cutting and carrying it from off the ground: and ſometimes the ſetting out the tithes from the reſt of the corn, is called Severance. 2 Cro. 325. And where executors of tenants for life, &c. dying before Severance, ſhall have corn ſown, ſee Emblements.

Severance of Jointure, An eſtate in joint-tenancy may be ſevered and deſtroyed, by deſtroying any of its conſtituent unities. 1. That of time, which reſpects only the original commencement of the joint eſtate, cannot indeed (being now paſt) be affected by any ſubſequent tranſactions. But, 2. The joint-tenant's eſtate may be deſtroyed, without any alienation, by merely diſuniting their poſſeſſion. For joint-tenants being ſeiſed per my et per tout, every thing that tends to narrow that intereſt, ſo that they ſhall not be ſeiſed throughout the whole, and throughout every part, is a Severance or deſtruction of the jointure. By ſtatutes 31 H. 8. c. 1. and 32 H. 8. c. 32. joint-tenants either of inheritances or other leſs eſtates, are compellable by writ of partition to divide their lands. 3. Sewer, (Sewera) Is a freſh-water trench, or little river incompaſſed with banks on both ſides, to carry the water into the ſea, and thereby preſerve the lands againſt inundations, &c. The Kings of England granted Commiſſions of Sewers long before any ſtatute was enacted in parliament for it; and during the reigns of King Hen. 6. Ed. 4. & Hen. 7. ſeveral ſtatutes were made for appointing commiſſions of ſewers in all parts of the realm where needful; ſome to endure ten years, ſome fifteen years, and others five years, &c. with certain powers to the commiſſioners; which commiſſions, by the 23 Hen. 8. c. 5. are to be ſettled by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, and the two chief juſtices, or any three of them, whereof the Lord Chancellor to be one; and are to continue ten years, unleſs repealed by a new commiſſion: And by this law, the commiſſioners oath is appointed: they are to be qualified as to eſtates, by having lands, tenements or hereditaments, in fee or for life, worth forty marks per Ann. beſides repriſes (except they are reſident in and free of a corporation; and have moveables worth 100 l) and if they execute the commiſſion, not being thus qualified or before ſworn, they incur a forfeiture of 40 l. Commiſſioners that may lawfully act, have an allowance for their pains of 4 s. per Diem, and their clerks 2 s. out of the taxes to be laid and levied. 23 H. 8. c. 5.

The commiſſioners of ſewers have power to make and ordain laws, but not to continue in force longer than their commiſſion by this ſtatute; and may decree lands to be ſold to levy charges aſſeſſed, upon non-payment, &c. Stat. Ibid. All laws, and ordinances of the commiſſioners, are to remain in force till repealed, notwithſtanding the determination of their commiſſion; and clerks of commiſſioners of ſewers are to eſtreat fines and penalties impoſed by the commiſſioners yearly into the Exchequer, by 13 Eliz. c. 9.

The buſineſs of the commiſſioners of ſewers is to repair ſea-banks, and walls, ſurvey rivers, public ſtreams, ditches, &c. and make orders for that purpoſe. They have authority grounded on the ſtatutes, to inquire of all nuſances, and offences committed by the ſtopping of rivers, erecting mills, not repairing of banks and bridges, &c. and to tax and aſſeſs all whom it may concern, for the amending of defaults, which tend to the obſtruction or hindrance of the free paſſage of the water through its ancient courſes: and they may arreſt carts and horſes, and take trees, paying a reaſonable price for them, for reparations; appoint workmen, bailiffs, ſurveyors, and other officers, &c. Terms de Ley 541. 4 Inſt. 275. Laws Sew. 86, 96.

They proceed by jury and view, in their inquiries into annoyances and defects of repairs; and the jury may amerce for neglects: Alſo the commiſſioners may puniſh by fine for contempts, and where officers are negligent in their duty; though they may not impriſon perſons for diſobedience to their orders. Laws Sew. But they cannot intermeddle where there is not a public prejudice; nor can they make a new river.

Upon the ſtatute 23 Hen. 8. c. 5. of ſewers, the commiſſioners decreed, that a new river ſhould be made out of another large river, through the main land for ſeven miles, unto another part of the old river; and for that purpoſe they laid a tax of a ſum in groſs upon ſeveral towns; adjudged that the commiſſioners have no power to make a new river, or any new invention to caſt out water, &c. for ſuch things are to be done in parliament: But they may order an old bank to be new made, or alter a ſewer upon any inevitable neceſſity; and the tax of a ſum in groſs is not warranted by their commiſſion they being to tax every owner or poſſeſſor of the lands, according to the quality of their lands, rents, and number of acres, and their reſpective portions and profits, whether of paſture, fiſhing, &c. 10 Rep. 141.

Commiſſioners of ſewers are to tax all equally, who are in danger to receive any damage by the waters, and not only thoſe whoſe lands are next adjoining; becauſe the rage of the waters may be ſo great, that the land contiguous may not be of the value to make the banks; and therefore the ſtat. 6 Hen. 6. c. 6. will have all that are in danger to be contributory. 5 Rep. 100. The commiſſioners having made a rate, according to the quantity and quality of the land, &c. may grant warrants to diſtrain for it; or the land may be decreed to be ſold to pay the rate: But the decrees of commiſſioners of ſewers are to be certified into the Chancery, and have the King's aſſent to be binding; and the commiſſioners, and their proceedings, are ſubject to the juriſdiction of the King's Bench. 23 Hen. 8. c. 5. 1 Vent. 67.

There are ſeveral cauſes and conſiderations for which perſons may be obliged to repair and maintain ſewers; as frontagers were bound to the repairs of the walls and banks, &c. by reaſon of frontage, by 37 Lib. Aſſiſ. pl. 10. The being owner of a bank, wall, or other defence, is a ſufficient inducement to impoſe the charge of the repairs thereof upon ſuch owner. 1 Hen. 7. Preſcription and cuſtom are much of the ſame nature, and the law takes notice of them in this caſe; but preſcription doth not bind a man to the repairs, except it be ratione tenuræ. 21 Ed. 4. 38. 19 Hen. 7. By tenure of land, a perſon may be bound to repair a wall, bank, or defence mentioned in the ſtatute of ſewers. 12 H. 4. A man may bind himſelf and his heirs by covenant expreſly to repair a bank, wall, or ſewer, and be good; yet this ſhall not bind the heir after his death, where aſſets are not left from the anceſtor, who entered into the covenant. Callis.

The uſe of defences may tie a man to the reparation thereof; if one and his anceſtors have had the uſe of a river by ſailing up and down the ſame, or have uſed a ferry on or over it, &c. Laws Sew. 57. If no perſon or grounds can be known, who ought to make repairs by tenure, preſcription, cuſtom, or otherwiſe, then the commiſſioners are to tax the level: And by the laws and ſtatutes of ſewers, all ſhall be charged, &c. Ibid. 67, 68. If it is found before commiſſioners of ſewers, that ſuch a perſon ought to repair a bank; and this is removed into B. R. the court will not quaſh the inquiſition, or grant a new trial, except he repair it; and if afterwards he is acquitted, he ſhall be reimburſed. Sid. 78. In caſes of ſewers, the court of King's Bench inquire into the nature of the fact, before they grant a certiorari to remove orders; that no miſchief may happen by inundations in the mean time, which is a diſcretionary execution of their power. 1 Salk. 146.

The court commonly hears counſel on both ſides, where orders of commiſſioners of ſewers are removed by certiorari, before ſuch orders are filed; for, if good, the court will grant a procedendo, which cannot be done after they are filed: but now they will file them in any caſe, where there is no danger likely to enſue. 1 Salk. 145. If commiſſioners of ſewers proceed after a certiorari delivered out of B. R. attachment will iſſue againſt them, and they may be fined. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 218. An order of ſewers was made for levying of 9 d. per acre on thirteen hundred and twelve acres, to be paid to the clerk, to be applied towards defraying of charges in and about the execution of the commiſſion; and held to be good, the act does not require it ſhould be on the occupiers; and there is an expreſs power to allow charges. 2 Str. 1127. 10 Co. 139.

Orders of ſewers being removed by certiorari, the court would not file the orders till they had heard the objections debated, ſo as to have it in their power to ſend the orders back again. 2 Str. 1263. The court held, that a certiorari to bring up an order made by the commiſſioners, for the removal of their own clerk, was of common right, and not diſcretionary, as in the caſe of other orders, where great inconveniences may follow by inundations in the mean time. 1 Str. 609.

The ſea, creeks, and bays, on the coaſts, are all within the ſtatutes of ſewers, in point of extent; but they and the ſhores, and the relinquiſhed grounds, are out of the commiſſion of ſewers, to be determined thereby: but ports and havens, as well as the walls and banks of waters, are within the commiſſion of ſewers; and the ſhore and grounds left by the ſea, when they are put in gainage and made profitable, are then within the power of the commiſſion of ſewers: And though before, the ground left by the ſea is not, as to defence, within the commiſſion of ſewers; yet a wall or bank may be thereon raiſed, for the ſuccour of the country, although not for any private commodity, the commiſſion of ſewers aiming at the general good. Callis's Read. Laws Sew. 31, 32. 5. The ſheriff cannot diſpoſe of his bailiwick; and of his power and duty in appointing an under ſheriff.

1. Of ſheriffs generally.

It ſeems that anciently the government of the county was by the King lodged in the Earl or Count, who was the immediate officer to the crown; and this high office was granted by the King at will, ſometimes for life, and afterwards in fee; but when it became too burthenſome, and could not be commodiouſly executed by a perſon of ſo high rank and quality, it was thought neceſſary to conſtitute a perſon duly qualified to officiate in his room and ſtead; from hence he is called in Latin Vicecomes, and Sheriff from Shire Reeve, i. e. governor of the ſhire or county. He is likewiſe conſidered in our books as bailiff to the crown: and his county of which he hath the care, and in which he is to execute the King's writs, is called a bailiwick. Dav. 60. Savil 43. 1 Rol. Rep. 274. Co. Lit. 168. Vide Pref. to 9 Rep. 33.

It is ſaid by Lord Coke and by Dalton, that Earls, by reaſon of their high employments and attendance upon the King, being not able to follow all the buſineſs of the county, were delivered of all that burthen, and only enjoyed the honour as they now do, and that labour was laid upon the ſheriff; ſo that now the ſheriff doth all the King's buſineſs in the county; and the ſheriff, though he be ſtill called Vicecomes, yet all he doth, and all his authority, is immediately from and under the King, and not from or under the Earl; ſo that at this day the ſheriff hath all the authority for the adminiſtration and execution of juſtice, which the count or Earl had; the King by his letters patent now committing to the ſheriff Cuſtodiam Com'. 9 Co. 49. Dalt. Sher. 2.

He is at this day conſidered as an officer of great antiquity, truſt and authority, having, as Mr. Dalton obſerves, from the King the cuſtody, keeping, command and government (in ſome ſort) of the whole county committed to his charge and care; and, according to Lord Coke, he is ſaid to have triplicem cuſtodiam, viz. Vitæ juſtitiæ, vitæ legis, & vitæ reipublicæ, &c. Vitæ juſtitiæ to ſerve proceſs, and to return indifferent juries for the trial of mens lives, liberties, lands, and goods; vitæ legis to execute proceſs and make execution, which is the life of the law; and vitæ reipublicæ to keep the peace. Co. Lit. 168. Dalt. Sh. 5.

It ſeems that anciently, and before the ſtat. 9 Ed. 2. Sheriffs were elected by the freeholders of the county, as the coroners are at this day, and conſequently that their offices did not determine by the death of the King. 2 Inſt. 558. 2 Brownl. 282.

And though at this day the King hath the ſole appointment of ſheriffs, except in counties palatine, and where there are jura regalia, yet it hath been adjudged, that the office of ſheriff is an entire thing, and that therefore the King cannot apportion or divide it, that is, he cannot determine it in part as for one town or one hundred; neither can he abridge the ſheriff of any thing incident to or belonging to his office. Dav. 60. 4 Co. 33. Milton's caſe, *Dalt. The Lord Mayor and citizens of London have the ſhrievalty of London and Middleſex in fee, by charter; and two ſheriffs are annually elected by them, for whom they are to be anſwerable: If one of theſe ſheriffs dies, the other cannot act till another is made, and there muſt be two Sheriffs of London, which is a city and county, though they make but one ſheriff of the county of Middleſex: they are ſeveral as to plaints, in their reſpective courts. 3 Rep. 72. Show. Rep. 289.

2. Who are qualified or exempt from ſerving the office of ſheriff.

It is provided by ſeveral acts of parliament, that no man ſhall be ſheriff in any county, except he have ſufficient lands within the ſame county where he ſhall be ſheriff, whereof to anſwer the King and his people in caſe that any perſon ſhall complain againſt them; and that none that is ſteward or bailiff to a great lord ſhall be made ſheriff. 9 Ed. 2. 2 Ed. 3. c. 4. 4 Ed. 3. c. 9. 5 Ed. 3. c. 4.

It is holden that the King hath an intereſt in every ſubject, and a right to his ſervice, and that no man can be exempt from the office of ſheriff but by act of parliament or letters patent. Sav. 43. 9 Co. 46.

And on this foundation it was adjudged in Sir John Read's caſe, who was made high ſheriff of Hertfordſhire, at the time he was excommunicated for non-payment of alimony, that an information properly lay againſt him for not executing the office; though it was objected on his behalf, that the oath and ſacrament injoined by act of parliament are neceſſary qualifications for all ſheriffs, which he was diſabled to take by reaſon of the excommunication; but the court held that he was puniſhable for not removing the diſability, it being in his power to get himſelf abſolved from the excommunication; and that therefore it could be no excuſe. 2 Mod. 299. Attorney General v. Sir John Read.

And though in the above caſe it was admitted, that the ſubject was bound to ſerve the King in ſuch capacity as he is in at the time of the ſervice commanded, yet it was inſiſted upon, that he was not obliged to qualify himſelf to ſerve in every capacity; and that therefore a priſoner for debt is not bound nor compellable to be ſheriff, no more than a perſon is bound to purchaſe lands to qualify himſelf to be either a coroner or juſtice of the peace; and it was likewiſe ſaid, that by the ſtatute 3 Jac. 1. c. 4. Every recuſant is diſabled; he may conform, but he is not bound to it; for if he ſubmits to the penalty, it is as much as is required by law. 2 Mod. 301.

Diſſenters are not compellable to ſerve the office of ſheriff. The Chamberlain of London and Evans, in the houſe of Lords, 1766.

If a man is diſabled by a judgment in law to bear an office, he is excuſed; nam judicium redditur in invitum; for though his fault or neglect was the occaſion of ſuch judgment, yet it is a mark ſet upon him by the government. Salk. 168. 4 Mod. 273.

And as nothing but an invincible neceſſity can exempt a perſon from ſerving the office of ſheriff, &c. on this foundation a by-law made in London, that no freeman choſen ſheriff, &c. ſhall be excuſed unleſs he voluntarily ſwears he is not worth 10,000*l.* &c. and that if he openly refuſes to take the office, then to forfeit the ſum of 400*l.* was adjudged good. Salk. 142. Carth. 480. 5 Mod. 438. City of London v. Vanacre.

Sh.* 6. But it may be put off to another day. Cro. Car. 13, 595.

And yet the King by his prerogative may make and appoint the ſheriffs without this uſual aſſembly, and election or nomination in the Exchequer, as is the daily practice at this day upon the death of any ſheriff. Dyer 225. Dalt. Sh. 6.

The ſheriffs in every of the ſhires of Wales ſhall be nominated yearly by the lord preſident, council and juſtices of Wales, and ſhall be certified up by them; and after appointed and elected by the King as other ſheriffs be, 34 Hen. 8. cap. 26. Dalt. Sh. 6.

The ſheriff, before he doth exerciſe any part of his office, and before his patent is made out, is to give ſecurity in the King's Remembrancer's office in the Exchequer, under pain of 100*l.* for the payment of his proffers, and all other profits of the ſheriffwick; but theſe ſecurities are never ſued, unleſs there is a deficiency in the ſheriff's effects. Dalt. Sh. 7.

The ſheriff, before he takes upon him the exerciſe of his office, muſt not only take the oaths of allegiance and abjuration injoined to all officers by divers acts of parliament, but all ſheriffs, except thoſe of Wales and the counties palatine, muſt take the oath, appointed by ſtat. 3 G. 1. c. 15. ſ. 18. for the due execution of their office.

If a perſon refuſed to take upon him the office of ſheriff, it was uſual to puniſh him in the Star-chamber; and he may now be proceeded againſt by information in the court of King's Bench. Alſo if he refuſes to take the oaths injoined him, or officiates in the office before he hath thus qualified himſelf, the court, which hath a general ſuperintendancy over all officers and miniſters of juſtice, will grant an information againſt him; and it hath been held, that a refuſal of oaths injoined to be taken, amounts to a refuſal of the office. Dalt. Sh. 15. Dyer 167. 3 Lev. 116. Carth. 307.

A ſheriff at the entrance into his ſheriffalty, is to go to the Remembrancer's office in the Exchequer, and there enter into a recognizance with ſureties, with conditions for payment of his proffers or accounts: then his attorney, &c. will write him a note, ſignifying that he is choſen ſheriff of ſuch a county, and hath entered a recognizance; which he muſt deliver to one of the ſix clerks in Chancery, to make his patent by; with the writ of aſſiſtance, and writ of diſcharge to his predeceſſor: And, in the next place, the new ſheriff is to go to a maſter in Chancery, if he be in London, to take the oaths. Dalt. Sher. 291.

If the ſheriff be not in London, the oath may be taken by dedimus poteſtatem, directed to any two juſtices of the peace of the ſame county, one to be of the quorum, or to any other commiſſioner or commiſſioners, or before one of the judges of aſſiſe for that county, or one of the maſters in Chancery, who, it is ſaid, may as well as the judge adminſter ſuch oath without any dedimus. Dalt. 4. The ſheriff can execute no other office; how long to continue in office; and of his juriſdiction.

It is holden, that a ſheriff cannot be elected knight of the ſhire for that county for which he is ſheriff. 4 Inſt. 48. Lit. Rep. 326. Sir Simon Dewe's Jour. 38, 436.

And altho' a ſheriff is by virtue of his office a conſervator of the peace, yet it is enacted by the 1 Mar. ſt. 2. c. 8. ſ. 2. that no perſon having the office of ſheriff of any county ſhall exerciſe the office of juſtice of the peace in any county where he ſhall be ſheriff during the time he ſhall uſe the office of ſheriff. Dalt. Sh. 27.

By the 1 Hen. 5. c. 4. it is enacted, That no under-ſheriff, ſheriff's clerk, receiver, nor ſheriff's bailiff, ſhall be attorney in any of the King's courts during the time that he is in office. Dalt. Sh. 454.

By the 14 Ed. 3. c. 7. Confirmed by 23 H. 6. c. 8. It is enacted, That no ſheriff, under-ſheriff, nor ſheriff's clerk, ſhall tarry or abide in his office above one year, upon pain to forfeit two hundred pounds a year as long as he occupieth the office; and every pardon made for ſuch offence or forfeiture ſhall be void; and ſee 42 Ed. 3. cap. 9. London, Middleſex, &c. are not within theſe ſtatutes. 3 G. 1. c. 15. ſ. 21.

By the 1 Rich. 2. c. 11. it is enacted, That none that hath been ſheriff of any county a year ſhall be within two years next choſen again, or put in the ſame office, if there be other ſufficient. Confirmed by 23 H. 6. c. 8.

And by the 1 H. 5. c. 4. it is enacted, That they that be bailiffs of ſheriffs one year, ſhall be in no ſuch office by three years next following, except bailiffs of ſheriffs which inherit in their office.

By the Common law the patents of ſheriffs, like all other commiſſions, determined by the death or demiſe of the King; but now by the ſtatutes 7 W. & M. and 1 Ann. ſuch commiſſion ſhall remain in full force for the ſpace of ſix months next after ſuch death or demiſe, unleſs ſuperſeded, determined or made void by the next ſucceſſion. Dyer 165. Dalt. Sh. 17. Vide 7 Co. 30.

It hath been held, that the office of ſheriff doth not determine by the party's becoming a peer on the death of his father, but that he ſtill remains ſheriff ad voluntatem Regis. Cro. Eliz. 12 Sir Lewis Mordant's caſe.

By the fourth of H. 4. c. 5. it is enacted, That every ſheriff ſhall be dwelling in proper perſon within his bailiwick for the time he ſhall be ſuch officer, and that the ſheriff ſhall be ſworn to do the ſame.

Hence it is clear, that a ſheriff hath no juriſdiction in any other county, nor can he do a judicial act, in which his perſonal preſence is required, out of his county; but it is held that he may do a miniſterial act, as make a panel, or return a writ out of his county, unleſs he is beyond ſea. Dalt. Sh. 22. 9 H. 4. 1.

See farther, Plowd. 37. Dalt. Sher. 23.

A ſheriff may make and deliver the return of a writ any where. Wilſon, par. 1. fol. 328. A ſheriff gives out a blank warrant upon a writ which is filled up by an attorney, this is ill. Id. par. 2. fol. 47.

5. The ſheriff cannot diſpoſe of his bailiwick; and of his power and duty in appointing an under-ſheriff.

By the 23 Hen. 6. cap. 10. it is provided, "That no ſheriff ſhall let to farm in any manner his county, nor any of his bailiwicks, hundreds, or wapentakes."

In the conſtruction hereof it hath been holden, that this is a particular law, and muſt be pleaded, otherwiſe the judges cannot take notice of it. 3 Keb. 678. Ellis v. Nelſon.

It hath been held, that a leaſe thereof, though no rent was ever received, is within the ſtatute; the intent thereof being that ſheriffs ſhould keep their counties in their own hands. 20 Hen. 7. 13. See Dalt. Sher. 23, 24. Plowd. 87. Moor 781.

By the 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. ſ. 10. "It ſhall not be lawful for any perſon to buy, ſell, let or take to farm, the office of under-ſheriff or deputy ſheriff, ſeal-keeper, county-clerk, ſhire-clerk, gaoler, bailiff, or any other office pertaining to the office of high ſheriff, or to contract for any of the ſaid offices, on forfeiture of 500*l.* one moiety to his Majeſty, the other to ſuch as ſhall ſue in any court at Weſtminſter, within two years after the offence."

Provided, that nothing in this act ſhall hinder any high ſheriff from conſtituting an under-ſheriff or deputy-ſheriff, as by law he may, nor to hinder the under-ſheriff in any caſe of the high-ſheriff's death, when he acts as high ſheriff, from conſtituting a deputy, nor to hinder the receipt of, or accounting to the ſheriff, &c. for legal fees. See Dalt. 3, 514. Hob. 13. 2 Brownl. 281.

The high ſheriff may execute the office himſelf, and the under-ſheriff hath not, nor ought to have, any eſtate or intereſt in the office itſelf; neither may he do any thing in his own name, but only in the name of the high ſheriff, who is anſwerable for him. Dalt. Sher. 3. Salk. 96.

By the 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. ſ. 8. it is enacted, "That if any ſheriff ſhall die before the expiration of his year, or before he he ſuperſeded, the under-ſheriff ſhall nevertheleſs continue in his office, and execute the ſame in the name of the deceaſed, till another ſheriff be appointed and ſworn; and the under-ſheriff ſhall be anſwerable for the execution of the office during ſuch interval, as the high ſheriff would have been; and the ſecurity given by the under-ſheriff and his pledges, ſhall ſtand a ſecurity to the King, and all perſons whatſoever, for the performing of his office during ſuch interval."

The under-ſheriff, before he intermeddle with the office, is to be ſworn; this is injoined by the ſtat. 27 Eliz. cap. 12. and the form of the oath there preſcribed. Before this ſtatute the under-ſheriff was never ſworn. 1 Rol. Rep. 274. per Coke.

And now by the 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. ſ. 19. It is enacted, That all under-ſheriffs of any counties in South Britain, except the counties in Wales, and county palatine of Cheſter, before they enter upon their offices, ſhall take an oath, appointed by that act, for the execution of their office. Vide the Statute.

A ſheriff cannot appoint two deputy ſheriffs extraordinary. Wilſon, par. 2. fol. 378.

As a maſter or owner of a ſhip may have an action for the freight; either the one or the other are anſwerable, where goods are damaged in the ſhip. 1. Of ſimony, generally.

Simony is a corrupt contract for a preſentation to any benefice of the church, for money, gift, or reward: It is defined to be, ſtudioſa voluntas emendi vel vendendi aliquid ſpirituale aut ſpirituali annexum opere ſubſecuto.——Alſo venditio rei ſacræ; ſo called from Simon Magus. And ſome authors mention ſimony per munus triplex; as per munus a manu, i. e. by bribery, where money is paid down for a benefice; per munus a lingua, by favour and flattery; per munus ab obſequio, i. e. by a ſordid ſubjection to the patron, or doing him ſervices: To which has been added, the making of preſents, without taking any notice of expecting a church benefice.

It was agreed by all the juſtices, Trin. 8 Jac. That if the patron preſent any perſon to a benefice with cure, for money, that ſuch preſentation, &c. is void, tho' the preſentee were not privy to it; and the ſtatute gives the preſentation to the King. Co. 12 Rep. fol. 74. Simony may be by compact between ſtrangers, without the privity of the incumbent or patron. Cro. 1 par. fol. 331. Bawderoke's caſe. Hob. Rep. fol. 165. Noy's Rep. fol. 22. Paſcall's caſe. 3 Inſt. 153. Some authors mention ſimoniacum per munus triplex, and tell us of a perſon who took off the cap of Groſulan, an archbiſhop of Milan, and ſhaking it told the people, Iſte Groſulanus qui eſt ſub iſta cappa (& non de alio dico) eſt ſimoniacus, &c. per munus a manu, i. e. by bribery, per munus a lingua, i. e. by favour and flattery, per munus ab obſequio, i. e. by a ſordid ſubjecting himſelf to the patron. Cowell.

Simony is generally ſaid to be the buying or ſelling holy orders, or ſome eccleſiaſtical benefice. An eccleſiaſtical benefice, in the larger ſenſe of it, in which it is here uſed, comprehends not only parochial benefices, but all eccleſiaſtical dignities and promotions. As by this offence worthy and learned men are kept out of the church, and a door is, to the great ſcandal of religion and prejudice of morality, opened to perſons by no means qualified to diſcharge the duties of the ſacred function, it is of the utmoſt conſequence to ſociety that it be prevented. With a view to this, canons were anciently made, by which a very ſtrict oath was enjoined; and it was puniſhed with deprivation or diſability, as the caſe required.

In 1 Inſt. 17. b. 89. a. ſimony is mentioned as a thing ſo deteſtable in the eye of the Common law, that a plaintiff in quare impedit could not before the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. recover damages for the loſs of his preſentation, it being conſidered as a thing of no value; nor could a guardian in ſocage preſent to an advowſon in the right of his heir, becauſe, as he could take nothing for it, he could not bring it to account. This doctrine is confirmed in 3 Inſt. 176. and the book adds, that it is the more odious to the Common law, becauſe it is frequently accompanied with perjury, for the preſentee is ſworn to commit no ſimony.

In Cro. Ch. 353. Mackaller and Todderick, it is ſaid that this has by the law of God and of the land been always accounted a great offence, In Hob. 167. Wincomb and Pulleſton, it is laid down, that a bond on a ſimoniacal contract is againſt law, becauſe ex turpi cauſa, and contra bonos mores; nay, that it is as void as an uſurious bond, which, if paid by an executor, is a devaſtavit. The ſame is held in Cro. Car. 425. Byrte and Manning. In Carth. 252. Bartlett and Vinor, ſuch bonds are ſaid to be void as being againſt law, altho' they are not ſo declared by the ſtatute. As neither the conſideration of the heinouſneſs of the offence, nor the proviſion made againſt it by the Canon or Common law, was ſufficient to put a ſtop to this miſchief, it was at length reſtrained under ſevere penalties by ſtat. 31 Eliz. cap. 6. See farther 4 New Abr. 465.

2. What ſhall be deemed ſimony; and the penalty on this offence.

By ſtat. 31 Eliz. c. 6. ſect. 35. it is enacted, 'That if any perſon or perſons, bodies politic or corporate, ſhall for any ſum of money, reward, &c. or by reaſon of any promiſe, &c, preſent or collate any perſon to any benefice, &c. every ſuch preſentation, collation, &c. ſhall be utterly void, and it ſhall be lawful for the Queen, her heirs and ſucceſſors, to preſent, &c. unto ſuch benefice, &c. and that every perſon or perſons, bodies politick or corporate, that ſhall give or take any ſuch ſum of money, &c. or take or make any ſuch promiſe, &c. ſhall forfeit the double value of one year's profit of every ſuch benefice, &c. and the perſon ſo corruptly] taking, &c. ſuch benefice, &c. ſhall be adjudged a diſabled perſon in law to enjoy the ſame.'

By ſect. 6. it is enacted, 'That if any perſon ſhall for any ſum of money, reward, &c. admit, inſtitute, inſtall, induct, inveſt, or place any perſon in or to any benefice, &c. ſhall forfeit the double value of one year's profit of every ſuch benefice, &c.' Vide the ſtatute.

A donative is not within the words of the ſtatute; yet, as a corrupt preſentation thereto is within the miſchief intended to be thereby remedied, it is within the meaning of it. Cro. Car. 331. Bawderick and Mackaller. For the ſame reaſon the corrupt promoting to, or obtaining of a curacy, has been held to be ſimony. Carth. 485. Biſhop of St. David's and Lucy.

This offence is more frequently committed when a church is void; but it may be committed when it is full. If a contract be, when a church is full, to give a ſum of money for a preſentation to it, when it ſhall become void, this is a ſimoniacal contract. 1 Brownl. 7. So the buying when a church is full, with intent to preſent a certain perſon, and the preſenting that perſon when the living becomes void, is ſimony. Lane 102. Kitchin v. Calvert. Noy 25. Winchcomb v. Pulleſten. So the purchaſe of the next avoidance of a church when the incumbent is ſick or near dying, with intent to preſent a certain perſon, and the preſenting him, is ſimony. Winch. 63. Sheldon v. Brett. Noy 25. Hughes 390. See 4 New Abr. 469. But it hath been held, that for a father to purchaſe a preſentation, in order to provide for his ſon, is not ſimony; for the ſon is not concerned in the bargain, and the father is by nature bound to make a proviſion for him. Cro. Eliz. 686. Moor 916.

Notwithſtanding the determinations, that if one perſon purchaſed the next preſentation of a benefice, when full, with deſign to preſent a certain perſon, and did preſent him, it was ſimony, it became a doubt whether it was ſo for a clerk himſelf to purchaſe for himſelf the next turn in a living?. To remove this it was enacted, 'That if any perſon ſhall for money or profit, in his own name, or in the name of any other perſon, procure the next preſentation or collation to any benefice, and be preſented or collated thereto, it ſhall be deemed to all intents and purpoſes a ſimoniacal contract,' 12 Ann. ſt. 2. cap. 12. par. 2.

From all theſe authorities it appears, that altho' it be lawful, except in the caſes excepted, to purchaſe the next avoidance when a church is full, there is great danger of being guilty, at leaſt in foro conſcientiæ, of this offence. It is fit it ſhould be ſo, elſe men would be for ever purchaſing for their ſons and friends, and the almoſt neceſſary conſequence of ſuch a traffick in livings, would be the filling the church with very improper perſons. 4 New Abr. 469.

It is equally ſimony where the preſentation is by a perſon uſurping the right to preſent, as if it had been by the perſon having a good right. 3 Inſt. 153. So if a preſentation be by one uſurping the right of patronage, and pending a quare impedit for removing his clerk, who is after removed, the living is ſold, this is ſimony, for the church was never full of that clerk; and by this means the ſtatute might be eluded, for it would only be getting an uſurper to preſent while the living was void, and then ſelling it. 3 Lev. 115. Walk v. Hammerſly, S. C. 2 Vent. 32. A corrupt contract with the wiſe of the patron is ſimoniacal, altho' the patron is not privy to it. 1 Rol. Rep. 255. Cro. Jac. 385. If a clerk contracts to give money for being preſented to a church, and is after preſented gratis; this is ſimony. Lane 103. Kitchin v. Calvert. In this caſe the clerk is an unfit perſon, for having at that time been capable of intending to buy a living corruptly. It alſo implies ſome defect in him; for the preſumption is that perſons well qualified will always be preferred, and have therefore no need to purchaſe. With this agrees Cro. Eliz. 789. where ſimony is ſaid to be voluntas ſive deſiderium emendi vel vendendi ſpiritualia vel ſpiritualibus adhærentia. This offence may be by a corrupt contract between ſtrangers, even when neither the patron nor incumbent is privy to it; for if there be a corrupt contract, it matters not by whom it is made: But in this caſe the preſentee is not ſimoniacus, and only ſimoniace promotus. Cro. Car. 331. Bawderick v. Mackaller. Sid. 329. 3 Lev. 337. Lane 103. Kitchin v. Calvert. See Lane 73. and 3 Lev. 338.

If a ſtranger, the church being void, contracts with the patron for a grant of the void turn, and preſents a clerk not privy to the contract; yet, although the grant being of a choſe in action is void, as the incumbent comes in by a ſimoniacal contract, he is not to be conſidered as an uſurper, but as one ſimoniace promotus Cro. Eliz. 788. Baker v. Rogers. So where a father, the church being void, contracts with the grantee of the void turn to permit the grantor to preſent his ſon, and it is done, this is a ſimoniacal promotion. Cro. Jac 533. Booth v. Potter. So if a father, in conſideration of a clerk's marrying his daughter, doth covenant with the father of the clerk, to procure for him a preſentation to a certain church when it ſhall become void, and he is afterwards thereto preſented, it is a ſimoniacal promotion. Cro. Car. 425. Birt. v. Manning.

Theſe three laſt caſes may ſerve to confirm what has been obſerved, that, in the caſe of ſimony, it is unlawful for a father to do what may not be done by a ſtranger. See Noy 142. Cro. Car. 426. Lutw. 343.

3. How far bonds of reſignation are lawful; and the power exerciſed over ſuch bonds by the court of Chancery.

A bond of reſignation is a bond given by the perſon intended to be preſented to a benefice, with condition to reſign the ſame; and is ſpecial or general. The condition of a ſpecial one is to reſign the benefice in favour of ſome certain perſon, as a ſon, kinſman, or friend of the patron, when he ſhall be capable of taking the ſame; by a general bond the incumbent is bound to reſign on the requeſt of the patron. 4 New Abr. 470.

A bond with condition to reſign within three months after being requeſted, to the intent that the patron might preſent his ſon when he ſhould be capable, was held good; and the judgment was affirmed in the Exchequer chamber; for that a man may without any colour of ſimony bind himſelf for good reaſons, as if he takes a ſecond benefice, or if he be non-reſident, or that the patron may preſent his ſon, to reſign; but if the condition had been to let the patron have a leaſe of the glebe or tithes, or to pay a ſum of money, it had been ſimoniacal. Cro. Jac. 248. Jones v. Lawrence.

The doctrine laid down in Jones and Lawrence, which was in the caſe of a ſpecial bond, was not many years after extended to that of a general bond, and the judgment in this laſt was alſo affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber. Cro. Car. 180. Babington v. Wood.

The authority of thoſe two caſes having been repeatedly recogniſed, at length it was conſidered as a point ſettled, that a general bond of reſignation is good, and the court refuſed to let the validity of it be called in queſtion. Str. 227. Peele v. Counteſs of Carliſle.

So in a late caſe, Mr. Serjeant Draper being about to argue againſt the validity of ſuch a bond, he was ſtopped by the court. MS. Rep. Trin. 27 Geo. 2. Wyndham v. Bower.

If a bond of reſignation, which ought only to be made uſe of to keep the incumbent to reſidence or good behaviour, be made an improper uſe of, the court of Chancery will interpoſe. Chan. Prec. 513. 2 Chan. Rep. 399. A perpetual injunction was granted againſt ſuch a bond, becauſe it appeared, on hearing the cauſe, that the patron had made uſe of it to prevent the incumbent from demanding his tithes. 1 Vern. 411. Durſton v. Sands.

An injunction has been granted where an ill uſe has been made of the bond, i. e. by taking an annuity from the incumbent, for the uſe of the nephew, for whom the living was intended. Str. 534.

A bill being brought to be relieved againſt a judgment obtained on a bond to reſign upon requeſt, it appeared to have been offered to the incumbent, that if he would give 700*l.* he ſhould not be ſued upon it. Satisfaction was ordered to be entered upon the judgment, and a perpetual injunction was granted. A new bond of reſignation in penalty of 200*l.* a much leſs ſum was indeed decreed; but no action was to be brought on it without leave of the court: And the Lord Keeper ſaid he did not know that ſuch bonds were uſed before the ſtatute; that they had been ſince allowed only to preſerve the benefice for the patron himſelf, or ſome child or friend of his, or to prevent non-reſidence or a vicious courſe of life in an incumbent; and that though a bond be to reſign generally, he would not allow it to be put in ſuit, unleſs ſome ſuch reaſon was ſhewn for requiring a reſignation, becauſe a door would be thereby opened for ſimony. Eq. Caſes Abr. 86. Hilliard v. Stapleton.

On a bill to be relieved againſt a judgment on ſuch a bond, the defendant proved miſbehaviour, and it was for that reaſon diſmiſſed. Eq. Caſes Abr. 228. Hodgſon v. Thornton. So a bond to reſign on requeſt ſhall not be made uſe of to turn out the incumbent, unleſs there be non-reſidence or groſs miſbehaviour; and if any other uſe be made of it, the court will grant an injunction. Chan. Prec. 513. Hawkins v. Turner. From ſome of theſe caſes, and particularly the laſt, which was Paſch. 5 Geo. there is reaſon to conclude that general bonds of reſignation were not then held good in equity: But later determinations ſhew that they now are. A bond to reſign generally has been often held good in the court of Chancery. Str. 227. Peele v. Counteſs of Carliſle.

4. Whether the ordinary is obliged to accept a reſignation on ſuch bond; and ſome objections to theſe bonds conſidered.

However it may be now ſettled, that ſuch bonds are good both in law and equity; a queſtion has ariſen, and is not perhaps ſettled by judicial determinations, whether the ordinary is obliged to accept a reſignation on ſuch a bond? It is ſaid it is in the power of the ordinary to diſcourage the uſe of ſuch bonds, for he may refuſe to accept a reſignation made by conſtraint of one of them. Watſ. Com Inc. 24.

The biſhop refuſed to accept a reſignation on ſuch a bond, and ordered the incumbent to continue to ſerve the cure, declaring that he would never countenance ſuch unjuſt practices. 2 Chan. Rep. 398. Durſton. v. Sands. An ordinary is not obliged to accept a reſignation on ſuch a bond, unleſs there be juſt cauſe to turn the incumbent out of the benefice. Chan. Prec. 513. Hawkins v. Turner.

In a late caſe a grant was to a clerk of the two firſt of three livings which ſhould fall, provided he was capable when they did fall of holding them. In order to make himſelf capable of taking one of theſe benefices, Griffith the clerk tendered a reſignation of another benefice to the ordinary, but he refuſed to accept it. One of the queſtions made in this caſe was, whether the ordinary was obliged to accept this reſignation? It was inſiſted by Mr. Henley on one ſide, that no caſe could be adduced to ſhew that the ordinary can arbitrarily refuſe to accept a reſignation of a benefice. Mr. Attorney Murray, who was on the other ſide, contented himſelf, as to this objection, with ſaying, that the plaineſt points having ſcarce ever been called in queſtion are ſupported by the feweſt authorities. No decree was made as to this point, but Lord Hardwicke intimated it once or twice ſo ſtrongly to be his opinion, that the ordinary ought to have accepted the reſignation, that he did afterwards accept it. What fell from theſe great men on this occaſion, is enough to render the doctrine of the two laſt caſes ſuſpicious: For if theſe are law, ſome notice would undoubtedly have been taken of them. This was not indeed in the caſe of a reſignation bond; but it was perhaps a ſtronger caſe; for if the ordinary cannot refuſe, where, as here, a clerk would reſign merely to take another benefice, it would be ſtrange to hold he may refuſe a reſignation made at the requeſt of a patron, in conſequence of an agreement with him, which it has been again and again determined both at law and in equity, he has a right to make. Marquis of Rockingham v. Griffith, Eaſter term, 27 Geo. 2.

Whatever doubt may ſtill remain, as to the ordinary's being obliged to accept a reſignation on ſuch a bond, theſe two things have, as will preſently appear, been determined; that the patron cannot preſent again till he has accepted it; and that, whether he does or not, the obligor is liable to the penalty of the bond, if he undertakes as is uſually done for the acceptance of the ordinary. 4 New Abr. 473. If a preſentation be made before the biſhop ſhop accepts the reſignation of the laſt incumbent, it is void. Caſes in the time of Queen Ann 276. Riely v. Adams. Noy 147. Cro. Jac. 198. If the obligor binds himſelf to reſign a benefice, it is upon him to procure the ordinary's acceptance of his reſignation. Lutw. 693. Studholme v. Norriſon.

To an action upon a bond, with condition ſo to reſign on requeſt that the patron may preſent again, it was pleaded that the ordinary would not accept the defendant's reſignation. On a demurrer this plea was held bad; and per cur', it ſhould have been averred that the ordinary accepted the reſignation, for his acceptance being, as is laid down, Cro. Jac. 198. neceſſary to compleat the reſignation, it was the duty of the obligor, who undertook to reſign, to procure this. So if one undertakes to enfeoff another, he undertakes to make livery as incident thereto. The biſhop as to the obligee is a ſtranger, and if an obligor undertakes for the act of a ſtranger, he is at his peril, as is held 1 Saund. 215. to procure it. MS. Reports Hilar. 28 Geo. 2. Heſcot v. Gray.

The reſult of the whole is, that bonds of reſignation are good in law, and that equity will reſtrain all improper uſe of them. It is not always true, but is ſo much oftner than ſuperficial and haſty thinkers imagine, that the law, and particularly that part of it which is deduced from judicial determinations, is founded in ſolid reaſon; and it may perhaps be ſhewn that it is ſo in the preſent caſe. The attempting this will at leaſt be excuſable, becauſe ſome great and good men have expreſſed their diſlike of theſe bonds. 4 New Abr. 473. which vide.

The principal of the particular objections is, that which is reported to have fallen from Holt Ch. J. Comb. 394. that is, that a reſignation bond comes as near ſimony as poſſible; it being eaſy to procure a round ſum of money thereby. By making the penalty of the bond adequate to the value of the benefice, and agreeing privately that the money ſhall be paid, it would without doubt be an oblique way of ſelling it, and more than come near, for it would be downright ſimony. If there was no other way, or not as eaſy a one, to do the ſame thing, this objection would be inſurmountable; but if there is, it can never be of much importance to ſtop this up. The ſame clerk, whoſe conſcience would allow him to do this, might as well advance the money agreed upon at firſt, or, if that did not ſuit him, give an abſolute bond to pay the money at a future day. As the ſame crime might ſtill be committed, and with as much ſecrecy, what good end would it anſwer to prohibit ſuch bonds, which, as is allowed by all, may be made uſe of by a patron to puniſh neglect of duty or immoral conduct in the incumbent, and for other good purpoſes? 4 New Abr. 473, 474.

Another objection is, that, when the patron takes a general bond of reſignation, it is only a preſentation during pleaſure. Be it ſo, and ſuppoſe, which is the utmoſt that can be ſuppoſed, that it is not taken with a deſign to awe the incumbent into great care in the diſcharge of his duty, but to let ſome friend or relation afterwards into the benefice. It by no means neceſſarily follows that the church, which is the grand thing to be guarded againſt, will therefore be filled with an unfit perſon. If the ſucceſſor, which may be the caſe, is better qualified for the office, the intereſt of religion will be advanced by the exchange. If he be not ſo well qualified, it is a misfortune; but it is ſuch a one as, in the preſent circumſtances of things, cannot be entirely prevented. While the right of patronage, or while human nature continues as it is, there will be miſtakes in judgment, and patrons will be induced by partiality to judge too well of the abilities of a relation or friend; but it makes no difference, whether either of theſe happens when the benefice is at firſt void, or at any given time after; or if there be any, it is in favour of the practice, for the miſchief, for ſo long at leaſt as the firſt incumbent holds the living, is thereby poſtponed. 4 New Abr. 474. For more learning on this ſubject, ſee 19 Vin. Abr. & 4 New Abr. tit. Simony, and Black. Com. 1 V. 389, 393. 2 V. 278. 4 V. 62.

N. B.* 195. And if a biſhop or prebendary be diſſeiſed, and afterwards he releaſeth to the diſſeiſor; this is an alienation, upon which may be brought a writ De ſine aſſenſu capitali: But the ſucceſſor may enter upon the diſſeiſor, if he doth not die ſeiſed, notwithſtanding the releaſe of his predeceſſor; for, by the releaſe, no more paſſeth than he may rightfully releaſe. New Nat. Br. 432. A perſon may have this writ of lands upon demiſes of ſeveral predeceſſors, &c.

Si non omnes, Is a writ on aſſociation of juſtices, by which, if all in commiſſion cannot meet at the day aſſigned, it is allowed that two or more of them may finiſh the buſineſs. Reg. Orig. 202. F. N. B. 185. And after the writ of aſſociation, it is uſual to make out a writ of Si non omnes, directed to the firſt juſtices, and alſo to thoſe who are ſo aſſociated to them, which, reciting the purport of the two former commiſſions, commands the juſtices, that if all of them cannot conveniently be preſent, ſuch a number of them may proceed, &c. F. N. B. 111.

Sinking Fund, Is a proviſion made by parliament, conſiſting of ſurpluſages of other funds, appropriated for paying the public debts of the nation: And many late ſtatutes have been made for applying the growing produce thereof; alſo money is often borrowed on the credit of the ſinking fund, uſually one million a year towards raiſing ing ſupplies for public ſervice. See the ſeveral ſtatutes concerning the funds.

This ſinking fund is the laſt reſort of the nation; its only domeſtic reſource, on which muſt chiefly depend all the hopes we can entertain of ever diſcharging or moderating our incumbrances. And therefore the prudent application of the large ſums, now ariſing from this fund, is a point of the utmoſt importance, and well worthy the ſerious attention of parliament; which was thereby enabled in the year 1765, to reduce above two millions ſterling of the public debt. *Black. Six Clerks in Chancery. Theſe are officers in Chancery of ancient continuance, and they were heretofore ſpiritual perſons, as may appear by the Stat. 14 & 15 H. 8. They are principally concerned in matters of equity; and tranſact and file all proceedings by bill and anſwer; and alſo iſſue ſome patents that paſs the great ſeal, as pardons of men for chancemedley, patents for ambaſſadors, ſheriffs patents, and ſome others: And all theſe matters are tranſacted by their under-clerks, or others by them appointed. They likewiſe ſign all office copies in order to be read in court, and alſo certificates, and attend upon the court in term, by two at a time, at Weſtminſter, and there read the pleadings.

The buſineſs of the office is done by their under-clerks, each of which has a ſeat in the office, (in Chancery-Lane) and whereof every ſix clerk has a certain number, uſually about ten, beſides two waiting clerks in each diviſion; all which are accountable to their reſpective ſix clerks for the buſineſs they tranſact. Harriſon's Chan. Pract. 1 V. 25, 26.

Sixhindi, Were ſervants of the ſame nature with rod-knights, viz. Bound to attend their lord wherever he went; but they were accounted among the Engliſh Saxons as freemen, becauſe they had lands in fee, ſubject only to ſuch tenure. Leg. Inæ, cap. 26. See Hindeni.

Slaves. There are no ſlaves in England; one may be a villein here, but not a ſlave. 2 Salk. 666.

There is not at this day any villenage by tenure, or in groſs. See Hargrave's argument on the caſe of Somerſet, a negro.

As to ſlavery, as Blackſtone obſerves, it is now laid down (Salk. 666.) that a ſlave or negro, the inſtant he lands in England, becomes a freeman; that is, the law will protect him in the enjoyment of his perſon and his property; yet, with regard to any right which the maſter may have acquired to the perpetual ſervice of John or Thomas, this will remain exactly in the ſame ſtate as before; for this is no more than the ſame ſtate of ſubjection for life, which every apprentice ſubmits to for the ſpace of ſeven years, or ſometimes for a longer term. Black. Com. 1 V. 424, 425. From this doctrine it evidently follows, that the maſter may maintain an action againſt any one, who, after notice, retains or harbours, or detains from his maſter's ſervice, a negro, &c. againſt the will of the maſter: and this, whether the negro be or be not baptiſed, which does not in any manner alter the caſe.—See Black. Com. 1 V. 423, 4. and Monteſq. Spirit of Laws, L. xv. and of the ſlavery of negroes. Id. cap. 5.

Smoke-Silver. Lands were holden in ſome places by the payment of the ſum of 6 d. yearly to the ſheriff, called Smoke-Silver. Pat. 4 Ed. 6. Smoke-ſilver and ſmoke-penny are to be paid to the miniſters of divers pariſhes, as a modus in lieu of tithe-wood: And in ſome manors, formerly belonging to religious houſes, there is ſtill paid as appendant to the ſaid manors, the ancient Peter Pence by the name of Smoke-money. Twiſd. Soc, (Sax.) Signifies power, or liberty to miniſter juſtice and execute laws; alſo the circuit or territory wherein ſuch power is exerciſed: Whence our law Latin word ſoca is uſed for a ſeigniory or lordſhip enfranchiſed by the King, with the liberty of holding or keeping a court of his ſockmen: And this kind of liberty continues in divers parts of England to this day, and is known by the names of ſoke and ſoken. Bract. lib. 3. Lamb.—Nullus ſockman habeat impune peccandi; i. e. None hath liberty of ſinning without puniſhment. Leg. H. 1.

Socage, or Soccage, (Socagium, from the Fr. Soc, that is, vomer, a coulter or plough-ſhare) Is a tenure of lands by or for certain inferior ſervices of huſbandry to be performed to the lord of the fee.

Skene de verbor ſignif. ſays, Socage is a tenure of lands, when a man is enfeoffed freely, without any ſervice, ward, relief, or marriage, and pays to his Lord ſuch duty as is called petit ſerjeanty, &c.

There is free ſocage, and baſe ſocage, otherwiſe called villenage.——And, according to Bracton, Socagium liberum eſt, ubi ſit ſervitium in denariis Dominis capitalibus, & nihil inde omnino datur ad ſcutum & ſervitium Regis. This free ſocage is alſo called common ſocage. Stat. 37 H. 8. c. 20. Other diviſions there are in our books, viz. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 8. num. 3. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 94. and others.

But by the ſtatute 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. all tenures ſhall be adjudged and taken to be turned into free and common ſocage. See Kennet's Gloſſary in Socage.

This was a tenure of ſo large an extent, that Littleton tells us, all the lands in England, which were not held in knights ſervice, were held in ſocage. So that it ſeems the land was divided between theſe two tenures, and as they were of different natures, ſo the deſcent of theſe lands was in a different manner; for the lands held in knights ſervice deſcended to the eldeſt ſon; but theſe held in villano Socagio, equally among all the ſons; yet if there was but one meſſuage, the eldeſt ſon was to have it, ſo as the reſt had the value of that meſſuage to be divided between them. Bracton, lib. 2. cap. 35, 36. See Black. Com. 2 V. 79, 98. 4 V. 412, 461.

Socagers, Were thoſe tenants whoſe tenure was called Socage; otherwiſe ſtiled Sockmen.

Socmans, or Sokemans, (Socmanni) Are ſuch tenants as hold their lands and tenements by Socage tenure, of which there are ſeveral kinds, viz. Sokemans of frank tenure, Kitchin, fol. 81. Sokemans of baſe tenures, ibid. and Sokemans of ancient demeſne, which laſt ſeem properly to be ſtiled Sockmans. Cowell.

Socmen. The huſbandmen among our Saxon anceſtors were of two ſorts; one, that hired the Lord's outland or tenementary land, like our farmers; the other, that tilled and manured his inland or demeans (yielding operam, not cenſum, work, not rent) and were thereupon called his Sockmen, or ploughmen. Spelman of Feuds, cap. 7. But after the conqueſt, the proper Sockmanni, or Sokemanni, often mentioned in Domeſday, were thoſe tenants who held by no ſervile tenure, but commonly paid their rent as a Soke or ſign of freedom to the Lord, tho' they were ſometimes obliged to cuſtomary duties for the ſervice and honour of their Lord. Cowell.

Socna, (Sax. Socne) A privilege, liberty, or franchiſe. Chart. Canut. Reg.

Sodor and Man, Biſhoprick of. By ſtat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 28. authority was given to the treaſury to purchaſe the intereſt of the then proprietors of the Iſle of Man, (which was formerly a diſtinct juriſdiction) for the uſe of the crown: which purchaſe was at length completed in the year 1765, and confirmed by ſtatutes 5 Geo. 3. c. 26 & 39. See the Statutes. The Biſhoprick of Man or Sodor, or Sodor and Man, was formerly within the province of Canterbury, but annexed to that of York, by ſtat. 33 H. 8. c. 31.

Soke, Soc, Sok, Soca, Generally ſignify liberty or privilege of tenants excuſed from cuſtomary burdens and impoſitions. Sometimes Soka, or Soke, was the territory or precinct in which the chief Lord did exerciſe his Sac, Sake, or Saka, his liberty of keeping court, or holding trials within his own Soke or juriſdiction. Sometimes it ſignified a payment or rent to the Lord for uſing his land with ſuch liberty and privilege, as made the tenant a Socman or freeholder, upon no other conditions than a quit-rent. Cowell.

Soke, Significat libertatem curiæ tenentium quam ſocam appellamus. Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 47. Stat. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 15.

Sokemans, and Sokemanries. The former certain copyhold tenants ſo called, the latter their tenures. Which Britton, c. 66. deſcribes to be “ lands and tenements, “ which are not held by knight-ſervice, nor by grand “ ſerjeanty, nor by petit, but by ſimple ſervices, being “ as it were lands enfranchiſed by the King or his predeceſſors from their antient demeſne.” And the ſame name is alſo given them in Fleta, lib. 1. c. 8. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 99, 100. And Socmans, Socmen, &c.

Soke-reeve, The lord's rent-gatherer in the ſoke or ſoken. Fleta.

Soldiers. The military ſtate of England includes the ſoldiery by land and ſea; and it is againſt our ancient law to keep up any army of ſoldiers in the time of peace. In time of war particular orders are made for the order and diſcipline of officers and ſoldiers, which are to be conſulted upon all emergencies: and therefore we are not to expect many ſtanding and perpetual laws on that account. Wood's Inſt. 45. The chief ſtatutes relating to the army, and their contents, are as follow, viz. By 18 H. 6. c. 19. Soldiers retained, departing from their colours, without licence, are guilty of felony. The 7 Hen. 7. cap. 1. and 3 Hen. 8. cap. 5. enact, That if a captain ſhall not have the whole number of his ſoldiers, or not pay them their due wages, within ſix days after he hath received it, he ſhall forfeit all his goods and chattels, and ſuffer impriſonment. By the 4 & 5 Ph. & M. c. 3. If any perſon being commanded to muſter, doth abſent himſelf (having no lawful excuſe) he ſhall ſuffer ten days impriſonment, or pay a fine of 40 s. And if any one authoriſed to levy or muſter ſoldiers, ſhall take any reward to diſcharge or ſpare any from the ſaid ſervice, he ſhall forfeit ten times as much as he ſhall take, &c. The ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. cap. 4. ordains, That if any perſon go beyond ſea, to ſerve any foreign prince, as a ſoldier, and he do not take the oath of allegiance before he goes, it is felony; and if he is a gentleman or officer, that is going to ſerve a foreign prince, he is to be bound with two ſureties not to be reconciled to the ſee of Rome, &c. or it will be felony.

By 31 Car. 2. cap. 1. no ſoldiers ſhall be quartered on any perſons without their conſent; and inhabitants of places may refuſe to quarter any ſoldier, notwithſtanding any order whatſoever. The 4 & 5 W. & M. &c. was made for puniſhing mutiny and deſertion, &c. And by 10 & 11 W. 3. Officers and ſoldiers may exerciſe trades. The 1, 4, 7, 9 & 10, &c. Ann. were made for puniſhing mutiny and deſertion of ſoldiers, and falſe-muſters; and for better payment of the army and quarters, &c. Since which there have been a variety of acts to puniſh mutiny and deſertion, &c. in general, all formed on the ſame plan. Vide the laſt.

The 3 Geo. 1. cap. 2. and 4 Geo. 1. cap. 4. ordain, That no ſoldier ſhall be taken out of the ſervice, by any proceſs, except it be for ſome criminal matter or for a real debt amounting to 10*l.* of which affidavit is to be made; and if any ſoldier be otherwiſe arreſted, a juſtice of peace by warrant under his hand ſhall diſcharge him: Yet the plaintiff may file an appearance, in an action of debt upon notice thereof given, and proceed to judgment and execution, other than againſt the body of ſuch ſoldier. A ſerjeant in the guards cannot be arreſted under 10*l.* Wilſ. par. 1. fol. 216.

A common ſoldier cannot be a vagrant within the ſtat. 17 Geo. 2. Wilſ. par. 1. fol. 331.

By the 5 Geo. 1. cap. 5. when an officer or ſoldier is accuſed of a capital crime, the commanding officer, on application made to him, is to uſe his utmoſt endeavours to deliver over the criminal to the civil magiſtrate, and he is not to be tried by a court-martial in eight days; within which time, application is to be made: but after that the criminal may be tried by a court-martial.

Stat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 6. No juſtice of peace having a military office, ſhall be concerned in quartering of ſoldiers in the company, &c. under his command: And victuallers refuſing ſoldiers quartered, or conſtables receiving reward to excuſe them, are to forfeit not above 5 l. nor under 40*s.* 3 Geo. 2. cap. 2. By ſubſequent acts, no juſtice, conſtable, &c. may direct more billets for quartering ſoldiers than there are effective men: And if any ſoldier be quartered on a private houſe, without the owner's conſent, he may have his remedy at law; and officers or conſtables that quarter wives, children, or maid ſervants of any officer or ſoldier in ſuch manner; the officer ſhall be caſhiered, and conſtable forfeit 20*s.* Likewiſe where perſons are grieved in billeting ſoldiers, by conſtables, they may complain to the juſtices of peace, who ſhall order ſo many to be removed as they ſee cauſe.

Officers or ſoldiers, if they deſtroy game on their marches, or poultry or fiſh, being convicted before a juſtice, are to forfeit 5 l. an officer, and 20*s.* a ſoldier. Ibid. When any perſon is inliſted a ſoldier, he ſhall within four days be carried before the next juſtice of peace or chief magiſtrate of a town, and declare that he did it voluntarily; upon which the juſtice is to certify it, and give him the oath of fidelity, &c. But if then he diſſents, on returning the money received, and 20*s.* for charges, he ſhall be diſcharged: And military officers acting contrary to this act, to incur the like penalty as for making a falſe-muſter. 8 Geo. 2. c. 2. If a perſon abſconds, or refuſes to go before a juſtice, in order to declare his aſſent or diſſent; he ſhall be deemed a liſted ſoldier, and may be proceeded againſt as if he had taken the oath directed by the articles of war. Stat. 10 Geo. 2. And in caſe any ſubject here or in Ireland ſhall liſt or enter himſelf, or any one procure him, to go beyond the ſeas, with an intent to be inliſted as a ſoldier, to ſerve any foreign prince or ſtate, without leave of his Majeſty, he ſhall be guilty of felony; but if ſuch perſon liſted, in fourteen days after diſcover upon oath before any juſtice, &c. the perſon by whom he was drawn in, ſo as he may be apprehended and convicted, the party diſcovering is to be indemnified. 9 Geo. 2. c. 30. His Majeſty may form articles of war, and conſtitute courts-martial as well in Great Britain and Ireland, as in the iſlands of Minorca, Gibraltar, &c. And if any officer or ſoldier deſerts his Majeſty's ſervice beyond ſea, and eſcape into this realm, or Ireland, he ſhall be tried here, as if the offence had been committed within this realm. Sole Corporations. A corporation ſole conſiſts of one perſon only and his ſucceſſors, in ſome particular ſtation, who are incorporated by law, in order to give them ſome legal capacities and advantages, particularly that of perpetuity, which in their natural perſons they could not have had. In this ſenſe the King is a ſole corporation, ſo is a biſhop; ſo are ſome deans and prebendaries, diſtinct from their ſeveral chapters: And ſo is every parſon and vicar. But Lord Coke was of opinion, that it did not conſiſt of any certain number of acres. This word ſolinus was probably from the Sax. ſulk a plough, but what quantity of land this ſolin, ſulling, or ſwoling did contain, is not ſo eaſily determined. It ſeems to have been the ſame with a plough-land; ſo that in Domeſday, Se defendit pro uno ſolino, is, it is taxed for one carucate or plough-land. Cowell.

Standard, (From the Fr. Eſtandart, &c. ſignum, vexillum) In the general ſignification, is an Enſign in War. And it is uſed for the ſtanding meaſure of the King, to the ſcantling whereof all the meaſures in the land are or ought to be framed, by the clerks of markets, aulnagers, or other officers, according to Magna Charta and divers other ſtatutes: And it is not without good reaſon called a ſtandard, becauſe it ſtandeth conſtant and immoveable, having all meaſures coming towards it for their conformity; even ſoldiers in the field have their ſtandard or colours, for their direction in their march, &c. to repair to. Britton, c. 30. There is a ſtandard of money, directing what quantity of fine ſilver and gold, and how much allay, are to be contained in coin of old ſterling, &c. And ſtandard of plate, and ſilver manufactures. Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 11. Stannaries, (Stannaria, from the Lat. ſtannum, i. e. tin) Are the mines and works where tin metal is got and purified; as in Cornwall and Devonſhire, &c. Camden Britt. 199. The tinners are called Stannary-men; who had great liberties granted them by King Edw. 1. before they were abridged by the ſtat. 50 Edw. 3. by which ſtatute the privileges of the tinners are limited and expounded; and the juriſdiction of the Stannary courts is ſettled by the 16 & 17 Car. 1. c. 15. All labourers in and about the Stannaries, are to have the privilege of the Stannary court while they work there; and may not be impleaded in any other court, for any cauſe ariſing within the Stannaries; except for pleas of land, life or member: The juriſdiction of this court is guided by ſpecial laws and cuſtoms, and by preſcriptions; and no writ of error lieth upon a judgment in the Stannary court, but it ſhall be reverſed, where wrong, by appeal to the ſteward of the court where the matter lieth; or from the ſteward to the deputy-warden of the Stannaries; from the under-warden to the lord-warden of the Stannaries; and from him to the King's privy-council. 4 Inſt. 230, 232. Plowd. 327. 12 Rep. 9. 1 *Roll. Tranſitory actions between tinner and tinner, &c. though not concerning the Stannaries, or ariſing therein, if the defendant be found within the Stannaries, may be brought into theſe courts, or at Common law; but if one party alone is a tinner, ſuch tranſitory actions which concern not the Stannaries, nor ariſe therein, cannot be brought in the Stannary-courts. 4 Inſt 231. Labourers in the Stannaries may recover their wages before juſtices of peace. 27 Geo. 2. c. 6. See Black. Com. 3 V. 80.

Staple, (Stapulum) Comes from the Fr. eſtape, i. e. forum vinarium, a market or ſtaple for wines, which are the principal commodity of France; or rather from the Germ. ſtapulen, which ſignifieth to gather, or heap any thing together: In an old French book it is written à Calais Eſtape de la Laine, &c. i. e. The ſtaple for wool: And with us, it hath been a public mart appointed by law to be kept at the following places, viz. Weſtminſter, York, Lincoln, Newcaſtle, Norwich, Canterbury, Chicheſter, Wincheſter, Exeter and Briſtol, &c. A Staple court was held at the Wool Staple in Weſtminſter, the bounds whereof began at Temple-Bar and reached to Tuthill; in other cities and towns, the bounds are within the walls; and where there are no walls, they extend through all the towns; and the court of the mayor of the Staple is governed by the law merchant in a ſummary way, which is the Law of the Staple. 4 Inſt. 235. See ſtat. 27 Ed. 3. ſt. 2. The Staple goods of England are wool, woolfels, leather, lead, tin, cloth, butter, cheeſe, &c. as appears by the ſtatute 14 R. 2. c. 1. Star, (Starrum, a contraction from the Hebr. ſhetar, a deed or contract) All the deeds, obligations, &c. of the Jews, were anciently called ſtars, and written for the moſt part in Hebrew alone, or in Hebrew and Latin; one of which yet remains in the treaſury of the Exchequer, written in Hebrew, without points, the ſubſtance whereof is expreſſed in Latin juſt under it, like an Engliſh condition under a Latin obligation: This bears date in the reign of King John; and many ſtars, as well of grant and releaſe, as obligatory, and by way of mortgage, are pleaded and recited at large in the plea-rolls. Paſch. 9 Edw. 1. Star-Chamber, (Camera ſtallata, otherwiſe called Chamber des eſtoylles,) Was a chamber at Weſtminſter ſo called (as Sir Thomas Smith, de Rep. Anglor, lib. 2. c. 4. conjectures,) becauſe at firſt the cieling thereof was adorned with images of gilded Stars. And in the 25 Hen. 8. cap. 1. it is written the ſtarred chamber. Henry the Seventh, and Henry the Eighth, ordained by the ſtatutes, viz. 3 Hen. 7. cap. 1. and 21 Hen. 8. cap. 2. That the Chancellor, aſſiſted by others there named, ſhould have power to puniſh routs, riots, forgeries, maintenances, embraceries, perjuries, and other ſuch miſdemeanors as were not ſufficiently provided for by the Common law, and for which the inferior judges were not ſo proper to give correction: And becauſe that place was before ſet apart to the like ſervice, it was ſtill uſed accordingly. Touching the officers belonging to this court, ſee Camd. p. 112, 113.

But by the ſtatute 16 Car. 1. c. 10. This court, commonly called the Star-chamber, and all juriſdiction, power, and authority thereto belonging, are aboliſhed. Cowell.

Molloy and Blackſtone ſeem to think it was called the Star-chamber, becauſe the recognizances which the Jews formerly entered into, to the crown, and which were called Stars, were kept in that chamber. See Black. Com. 1 V. 230. 4 V 263, 422, 426, 430.

And makers of powder for hair, are to make entries of their workhouſes at the office of Exciſe; and any officer may enter warehouſes and ſhops, and examine the powder, which being mixed ſhall be forfeited, and the ſum of 20 l. Stat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 14.

Stated damages. A court of equity cannot, any more than a court of law, relieve againſt a penalty, in the nature of ſtated damages; as a rent of 5 l. an acre for ploughing up ancient meadow: Nor againſt a lapſe of time, where the time is material to the contract; as in covenants for renewal of leaſes. Both courts will equitably conſtrue, but neither pretends to controul or change, a lawful ſtipulation or engagement. 2 Atk. 239. Black. Com. 3 V. 435.

Statute, (Statutum) Has divers ſignifications: Firſt, It ſignifies an act of parliament made by the King, Lords and Commons; and Secondly, it is a ſhort writing called a Statute Merchant, or Statute Staple, which are in the nature of bonds, &c. and called Statutes, as they are made according to the form expreſly provided in certain ſtatutes. 5 H. 4. c. 12.

To ſtatutes enacted in parliament, there muſt be the aſſent of the King, Lords, and Commons, without which there can be no good act of parliament; but there are many acts in force, though theſe three aſſents are not mentioned therein, as Dominus Rex ſtatuit in parliamento, and Dominus Rex in parliamento ſuo ſtatuta edit, and de communi concilio ſtatuit, &c. Plowd. 79. 2 Bulſt 186. And Sir Edw. Coke ſays, that ſeveral ſtatutes are penned like charters in the King's name only; though they were made by lawful authority. 4 Inſt. 25. Before the invention of printing, all ſtatutes were proclaimed by the ſheriff in every county, by virtue of the King's writ. 2 Inſt. 526, 644.

Some ſtatutes are general, and ſome are ſpecial: And they are called general from the genus, and ſpecial from the ſpecies; as for inſtance: the whole body of the ſpirituality is the genus, but a biſhop, dean, and chapter, &c. is the ſpecies: Therefore ſtatutes which concern all the clergy, are general laws; but thoſe which concern biſhops only are ſpecial. 4 Rep. 76. The ſtatute 21 H. 8. c. 13. which makes the acceptance of a ſecond living by clergymen, an avoidance of the firſt, is a general law, becauſe it concerns all ſpiritual perſons.

All ſtatutes concerning myſteries and trades in general, are general or public acts; though an act which relates to one particular trade is a private ſtatute. Dyer 75. A ſtatute which concerns the King is a public act; and yet the ſtat. 23 Hen. 8. concerning ſheriffs, &c. is a private act. Plowd. 38. Dyer 119. It is a rule in law, that the courts at Weſtminſter ought to take notice of a general ſtatute, without pleading it: but they are not bound to take notice of particular or private ſtatutes unleſs they are pleaded. 1 Inſt. 98.

Statutes againſt the power of ſubſequent parliaments are not binding; notwithſtanding the ſtatute 42 Ed. 3. c. 3. declares that any ſtatute made againſt Magna Charta ſhall be void: And this is evident, ſeeing many parts of Magna Charta have been repealed and altered by ſubſequent acts. Read. on Stat. Vol. 4. p. 340. And the law has been miſtaken in this point; for the ſtatutes which intervene between the 9 Hen. 3. and 42 E. 3. are not repealed, though they vary from, and are contrary to Magna Charta. Jenk. Cent. 2. Statutes continue in force although the records of them are deſtroyed, by the injury of time, &c. But if a ſtatute is againſt reaſon, or impoſſible to be performed, it is void. 4 Rep. 76. 2 Inſt. 587.

Old ſtatutes muſt give place to new, where they are contrary; but when there is a ſeeming variance between two ſtatutes, and no clauſe of non obſtante in the latter, ſuch conſtruction ſhall be made that both may ſtand. 11 Rep. 56. Dyer 347. By repealing of a repealing ſtatute, the firſt ſtatute is revived: And where one ſtatute is repealed by another, the acts done in the mean time are valid. 4 Vol. Read. Stat. Jenk. Cent. 233.

Statutes conſiſt of two parts, the words, and the ſenſe; and it is the office of an expoſitor, to put ſuch a ſenſe upon the words of the ſtatute, as is agreeable to equity and right reaſon: Equity muſt neceſſarily take place in the expoſition of ſtatutes; but explanatory acts are to be conſtrued according to the words, and not by any manner of intendment; for it is incongruous for an explanation to be explained. Plowd. 363, 465. Cro. Car. 23.

The preamble of a ſtatute, which is the beginning thereof, going before, is, as it were, a key to the knowledge of it, and to open the intent of the makers of the act; it ſhall be deemed true, and therefore good arguments may be drawn from the ſame. 1 Inſt. 11. It is the moſt natural and genuine expoſition of a ſtatute, to conſtrue one part by another part of the ſame ſtatute, for that beſt expreſſes the meaning of the makers: The words of an act of parliament are to be taken in a lawful and rightful ſenſe, and the conſtruction of ſtatutes in general muſt be made in ſuppreſſion of the miſchief, and for the advancement of the remedy, intended by the ſtatute; but ſo that no innocent perſon by a literal conſtruction ſhall receive any damage. 1 Inſt. 24, 381.

The beſt way to expound a ſtatute, is to conſider what anſwer the law-givers would probably have given to the queſtion made, if propoſed to them. Plowd. 465. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 245.

In the uſual expoſition of ſtatutes, theſe things are to be obſerved, viz. 1. What was the Common law before the making of the ſtatute? 2. The miſchief and defect which the Common law did not provide againſt. 3. What remedy the ſtatute hath appointed to cure this miſchief. 4. The true reaſon of the remedy. 3 Rep. 5.

Where a ſtatute gives a remedy for any thing, it ſhall be preſumed there was no remedy before at Common law: And the rules to conſtrue acts of parliament, are different from the ſtrict rules of the Common law; Though, in the conſtruction of a ſtatute, the reaſon of the Common law gives great light. Raym. 191, 355. 2 Inſt. 301. If an act of parliament is dubious, long uſage may be good to expound it by; and the meaning of things ſpoken and written, muſt be as hath been conſtantly received; but where uſage is againſt the obvious meaning of a ſtatute, by the vulgar and common acceptation of words, then it is rather an oppreſſion than an expoſition of the ſtatute. Vaugh. 169, 170.

A ſtatute which alters the Common law, ſhall not be ſtrained beyond the words, except in caſes of public utility, when the end and deſign of the act appears to be larger than the words themſelves. Ibid. 179. Relative words in any ſtatute, may make a thing paſs as well as if particularly expreſſed: And caſes of the ſame nature ſhall be within the ſame remedy. Raym. 54.

Such ſtatutes as are beneficial to the people, ſhall be expounded largely, and not with reſtriction. Style 302. The expoſition of ſtatutes concerning the eccleſiaſtical courts, belongs to the common law courts: And a ſtatute made in imitation of the common law, is to be expounded by it. Hob. 83, 97. An affirmative act, does not repeal a precedent affirmative ſtatute. The affirmative words of ſtatutes do not change the common law, without negative words added therein And the ſtatute of wills, being in the affirmative, doth not take away the cuſtom to deviſe land in places where it is. Jenk. Cent. 212. Dyer 155. 1 Inſt. 111. If a ſtatute be made only in affirmance of the ancient common law, and doth not enact any thing new, but what was before provided for; it is nevertheleſs a ſtatute, and may be pleaded: But the defendant hath a plea at common law. Style's Reg. 301. An act of parliament in affirmance of the common law, extends to all times after, though it mentions only to give remedy for the preſent; and where a thing is granted by ſtatute, all neceſſary incidents are granted with it. 1 Inſt. 235.

Wherever a ſtatute gives or provides a thing, the common law ſupplies all manner of requiſites. Hard. 62. Every ſtatute made againſt an injury, gives a remedy by action, expreſly or implicitly. 2 Inſt. 55, 74. And beſides an action upon the ſtatute, as the ſubjects private remedy; the offender may be puniſhed for contempt at the King's ſuit, by fine, &c. 2 Co. Inſt. 131, 163. Things for neceſſity ſake, or to prevent failure of juſtice, are excepted out of ſtatutes. Ibid. 118.

Statutes made for the public good are to be expounded, ſo as to attain their end. 1 Strange 253, 258. Keble's Statutes and Raſtal's differed, and they who were for adhering to Keble proved they had examined him with the parliament roll. The chief juſtice ruled it was enough, and Keble was read. 1 Strange 446. Where an act of parliament only gives a remedy to the party grieved, it ſhall not be conſidered as a penal ſtatute. Wilſon, par. 1, fol. 412. Statute Merchant. A Statute Merchant is a bond of record, acknowledged before the Clerk of the Statutes Merchant, and lord mayor of the city of London, or two merchants aſſigned for that purpoſe; and before the mayors of other cities and towns, or the bailiff of any borough, &c. ſealed with the ſeal of the debtor and the king, upon condition that, if the obligor pays not the debt at the day, execution may be awarded againſt his body, lands, and goods, and the obligee ſhall hold the lands to him, his heirs and aſſigns, till the debt is levied. Terms de Ley. The Statute of Acton Burnel, 11 Ed. 1. And Stat. de Mercatoribus, 13 Ed. 1. ſtat. 3. enact that the merchant ſhall cauſe his debtor to appear before the Mayor of the city of London, or other city or town, and there acknowledge the debt, &c. by recogniſance, which is to be inrolled, the roll whereof muſt be double, one part to remain with the mayor, and the other with the clerk appointed by the King; and then one of the clerks is to write the obligation, which ſhall be ſealed with the debtor's ſeal and that of the King, &c.

If the debt be not paid at the day upon the merchant's account, the mayor is to cauſe the debtor to be impriſoned, if to be found, and in priſon to remain until he hath agreed the debt; and if the debtor cannot be found, the mayor ſhall ſend the recogniſance into the Chancery, from whence a writ ſhall iſſue to the ſheriff of the county where the debtor is, to arreſt his body, and keep him in priſon till he agree the debt; and within a quarter of a year, his lands and goods ſhall be delivered to him to pay the debt; but if the debtor do not ſatisfy the debt within that time, all his lands and goods ſhall be delivered to the merchant by a reaſonable extent, to hold until the debt is levied thereby; and in the mean time he ſhall remain in priſon; but when the debt is ſatisfied, the body of the debtor is to be delivered, together with his lands. If the ſheriff return a non eſt inventus, &c. the merchant may have writs to all the ſheriffs where he hath any land; and they ſhall deliver all the goods and lands of the debtor by extent, and the merchant ſhall be allowed his damage, and all reaſonable coſts, &c.

All the lands in the hands of the debtor, at the time of the recogniſance, acknowledged, are chargeable; though, after the debt is paid, they ſhall return to grantees, if they are granted away, as ſhall the reſt to the debtor: the debtor or his ſureties dying, the merchant ſhall not take the body of the heir, &c. but ſhall have his lands until the debt is levied. If the debtor have ſureties they ſhall be proceeded againſt in like manner as the debtor; but ſo long as the debt may be levied of the goods of the debtor, the ſureties are to be without damage. Alſo the merchant ſhall, beſides the payment of his debt, be ſatisfied for his ſtay, and detainer from his buſineſs. In London, out of the commonalty, two merchants are to be choſen and ſworn by this ſtatute; and the ſeal ſhall be opened before them, whereof one piece is to be delivered to the ſaid merchants, and the other remain with the clerk; and before theſe merchants, &c. recogniſances may be taken; a fee of 1 d. per pound is allowed to the clerk for fixing the King's ſeal; and a ſeal is to be provided that ſhall ſerve for fairs, &c. but the ſtatute extends not to Jews. Stat. ibid. Cro. Car. 440, 457.

Statutes Merchant were contrived for the ſecurity of merchants only, to provide a ſpeedy remedy to recover their debts; but at this day they are uſed by others who follow not merchandize, and become one of the common aſſurances of the kingdom. Bridg. 21. Owen 82. Statute Staple, Is a bond of record, acknowledged before the mayor of the ſtaple, in the preſence of all or one of the conſtables; to this end, ſays the ſtatute, there ſhall be a ſeal ordained, which ſhall be affixed to all obligations made on ſuch recognizance acknowledged in the ſtaple; this ſeal of the ſtaple is the only ſeal the ſtatute requires to atteſt this contract; but it is no more under the power or diſpoſal of the mayor, than that appointed by the Statute Merchant; for though the ſtatute appoints him the cuſtody of it, yet it is in ſuch a manner, that he cannot affix it to any obligation without their conſent, it being to remain in the mayor's hands, under the ſecurity of their own ſeals. 2 Rol. Abr. 466. Stat. 27 Ed. 3. c. 9.

To underſtand a little of the original and conſtitution of the ſtaple, and the advantage the nation had by this eſtabliſhment, we muſt obſerve, that the place of reſidence, whither the merchants reſorted with their ſtaple commodities, was anciently called Eſtaple, which ſignifies no more than mart or market; and this was formerly appointed out of the realm, as at Calais, Antwerp, &c. and other ports on the continent, which were neareſt to us, and whither the merchants might with ſafety coaſt it. 4 Inſt. 238.

But beſides theſe ſtaple ports appointed abroad, there were others appointed at home, whither all the ſtaple commodities were carried in order to their exportation, ſuch as London, Weſtminſter, Hull, &c. this was found to be of great uſe and conſequence to the prince in particular, and to the intereſt and credit of the nation in general; for at theſe ſtaple ports were the King's cuſtoms eaſily collected, and were by the officers of the ſtaple, at two ſeveral payments, returned into the Exchequer; beſides, at theſe ſtaples, all merchants goods were carefully viewed and marked by the proper officers of the ſtaple; and this neceſſarily avoided the exportation of decayed goods, or ill wrought manufactures, and conſequently fixed a ſtamp of credit on the merchandizes exported, which, upon the view, always anſwered the expectation of the buyer. Maline's Lex Merc. 337—338. See the 27 Ed. cap. 1.

The ſtaple merchandizes, according to Lord Coke, are only wool, woolfells, leather, lead and tin; others butter, cheeſe and cloths; but, whatever they were, the mayor and conſtables had not only conuſance of all contracts and debts relating to them, but they had likewiſe juriſdiction over the people, and all manner of things touching the ſtaple; this power was given them, leſt the merchants ſhould be diverted and drawn from their buſineſs and trade, by applying to the Common law, and running through the tedious forms of it, for a determination of their differences, and for the greater encouragement of merchants, that they might have all imaginable ſecurity in their contracts and dealings, and the moſt expeditious method of recovering their debts, without going out of the bounds of the ſtaple. 4 Inſt. 238. Maline's Lex Mer. 337. 27 Ed. 3. c. 8.

By this it appears, that this ſecurity was only deſigned for the merchants of the ſtaple, and for debts only on the ſale of merchandizes brought thither; yet in time others began to apply it to their own ends, and the mayor and conſtable would take recognizances from ſtrangers, ſurmiſing it was made for the payment of money for merchandizes brought to the ſtaple; to prevent this miſchief, the parliament in 23 H. 8. reduced the ſtatute ſtaple to its former channel, and laid a penalty of 40 l. on the mayor and conſtables who ſhould extend the benefit of the ſtatute to any but thoſe of the ſtaple; but though the ſtatute of 23 H. 8. c. 6. deprived them of this benefit; yet it framed a new ſort of ſecurity, to be uſed ad libitum by all men, known by the name of a recognizance on 23 H. 8. or a recognizance in the nature of a ſtatute ſtaple, ſo called, becauſe this act limits and appoints the ſame proceſs, execution and advantage in every particular, as is ſet down in the ſtatute ſtaple. Co. Lit. 290.

A recogniſance therefore in nature of a ſtatute ſtaple, as the words of the act declare, is the ſame with the former, only acknowledged under other perſons; for, as the ſtatute runs, the chief juſtices of the King's bench and Common pleas, or in their abſence, out of term, the mayor of the ſtaple at Weſtminſter, and the recorder of London jointly together, ſhall have power to take recognizances for payment of debt in the form ſet down in the ſtatute; in this, as in the former caſes, the King appoints a ſeal to atteſt the contract. Co. Lit. 290. a. 4 Inſt. 238. 2 Rol. Abr. 466. Co. Ent. 12.

Debt lies as well upon a Statute Staple as upon a bond: And a ſtatute acknowledged on lands, is a preſent duty, and ought to be ſatisfied before an obligation; a debt due on an obligation being but a choſe in action, and recoverable by law, and not a preſent duty by law, as a debt upon a ſtatute, judgment, or recognizance is, upon which preſent execution is to be taken without farther ſuit. Cro. Eliz. 355, 461, 494. 2 Lil. Abr. 536.

But a judgment in a court of record, ſhall be preferred in caſe of execution before a Statute: Though if one acknowledge a ſtatute, and afterwards confeſs judgment;

if the land be extended thereon, the cogniſee ſhall have a Scire facias to avoid the extent upon the judgment. 6 Rep. 45. 1 Brownl. 37. It is otherwiſe as to goods, for there he that comes firſt, ſhall be firſt ſerved. Ibid. The cogniſor of a ſtatute grants his eſtate to the cogniſee; by this the execution of the ſtatute will be ſuſpended. 2 Cro. 424. But if the cogniſee, before execution of a ſtatute, releaſe to the cogniſor all his right to the land; it will not be a diſcharge of the whole execution: For, notwithſtanding, he may ſue execution of his body and goods. 3 Shep. Abr. 326. Upon a ſtatute ſtaple, a Capias and extent of lands, goods, and chattels are contained in one writ; but it is not ſo on a Statute Merchant. Jenk. Cent. 163. In Chancery the proceedings on a Statute Staple, are in the petty bag office; and Statutes Staple are ſuable in the King's Bench or Common pleas, as well as in Chancery. Cro. Eliz. 208. On a ſtatute's being ſatisfied, it is to be vacated by entering ſatisfaction, &c. Statute Staple and Statutes Merchant are to be entered within ſix months, or ſhall not be good againſt purchaſers. 27 Eliz. c. 4. See the ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. for preventing delays in extending ſtatutes. Vide Recognizance.

Statutes Merchant and Staple, Tenants thereby. He that is in poſſeſſion of lands on a ſtatute merchant, or ſtaple, is called tenant by ſtatute merchant, or ſtatute ſtaple, during the time of his poſſeſſion: And creditors ſhall have freehold in the lands of debtors, and recovery by novel diſſeiſin, if put out; but if tenant by ſtatute merchant, or ſtatute ſtaple, hold over his term, he that hath right may ſue out a venire facias ad computand', or enter, as upon an elegit. 27 Ed. 3, &c

An incident to a Corporation as ſoon as it is duly erected, and which is annexed of courſe, is, to make by-laws, or private ſtatutes for the better government of the Corporation; which are binding upon themſelves, unleſs contrary to the laws of the land, and then they are void. This is included by law in the very act of incorporation. Black. Com. 1 V. 475.

Staurum, Any ſtore or ſtanding ſtock of cattle, proviſion, &c. Mat. Weſtm. Anno 1259.

Stealing, Is the fraudulent taking away of another man's goods, with an intent to ſteal them, againſt, or without the will of him whoſe goods they are. The Civil law, judges upon theft to be ſatisfied by the recompence of four-fold; and privy theft, by the recompence of double; but the law of England adjudges both thoſe offences to be death, if the value of the thing ſtolen be above twelve-pence. Cowell. See Larceny.

Stealing an Heireſs. This is the forcible abduction and marriage of an Heireſs. It is made felony in the principal and his acceſſaries by 3 H. 7. c. 2. and by 39 Eliz. c. 9. The benefit of clergy is taken away from all ſuch felons, except acceſſaries after the offence.

Sterling, (Sterlingum) Was the epithet for ſilver money current within this kingdom, and took its name from this; that there was a pure coin ſtamped firſt in England by the Eaſterlings, or merchants of Eaſt Germany, by the command of King John; and Hoveden writes it Eſterling. Inſtead of the pound ſterling, we now ſay ſo many pounds of lawful Engliſh money; but the word is not wholly diſuſed, for though we ordinarily ſay lawful money of England, yet in the mint they call it ſterling money; and when it was found convenient, in the fabrication of monies, to have a certain quantity of baſer metal to be mixed with the pure gold and ſilver, the word ſterling was then introduced; and it has ever ſince been uſed to denote the certain proportion or degree of fineneſs, which ought to be retained in the reſpective coins. Lownds's Eſſay upon coins 14.

Steward, (Seneſcallus, compounded of the Sax. Steda, i. e. Room, or Stead, and Weard, a ward or keeper) Is as much as to ſay a man appointed in my place or ſtead, and hath many applications, but always denotes an officer of chief account within his juriſdiction. The greateſt of theſe officers is, The Lord High Steward of England, who anciently had the ſuperviſing and regulating, next under the King, the adminiſtration of juſtice, and all other affairs of the realm, whether civil or military; and the office was hereditary, belonging to the Earls of Leiceſter, till forfeited to King Hen. 3. But the power of this officer being very great, of late the office of High Steward of England hath not been granted to any one, only pro hac vice, either for the trial of a peer of the realm on an indictment for a capital offence; or for the determination of the pretenſions of thoſe who claim to hold by grand ſerjeanty, to do certain honourable ſervices to the King at his coronation, &c. for both which purpoſes he holds a court, and proceeds according to the laws and cuſtoms of England; and he to whom this office is granted muſt be of nobility and a Lord of parliament. 4 Inſt. 58, 59. Crompt. Juriſd. 84. 13 Hen. 8. 11. 2 Hawk. P. C. 5. Of the nine great officers of the crown, the Lord High Steward is the firſt; but when the ſpecial buſineſs, for which he is appointed, is once ended, his commiſſion expires. The firſt Lord High Steward, that was created for the ſolemnizing of a Coronation, was Thomas ſecond ſon of Hen. 4th; and the firſt Lord Steward, for the trial of a peer, was Edward Earl of Devon, on the arraignment of John Holderneſs Earl of Huntingdon in the ſame reign. Lex Conſtitution. 170.

There is a Lord Steward of the Houſhold, mentioned Stat. 24 Hen. 8. cap. 13. whoſe name was changed to that of Great Maſter of the Houſhold, Anno 32 Hen. 8. But this ſtatute was repealed by 1 Mar. cap. 4. and the office of Lord Steward of the houſhold revived. He is is the chief officer of the King's court, to whom is committed the care of the King's houſe; he has authority over all officers and ſervants of the houſhold, except thoſe belonging to the chapel, chamber, and ſtable; and the palace royal is exempted from all juriſdiction of any court, but only of the Lord Steward, or, in his abſence, of the treaſurer and comptroller of the houſhold, with the Steward of the Marſhalſea, who by virtue of their offices, without any commiſſion, hear and determine all treaſons, murders, felonies, breaches of the peace, &c. committed in the King's palace: Beſides the Treaſurer and Comptroller, The Lord Steward hath under him a Cofferer, ſeveral Clerks of the Green Cloth, &c. He attends the King's perſon at the beginning of parliaments; and is a white ſtaff officer, which he breaks over the hearſe on the death of the King, and thereby diſcharges all officers under him: Of this officer's ancient power, read Fleta, lib. 2. and F. N. B. 241. In the liberty of Weſtminſter, an officer is choſen and appointed, called High Steward and there is a Deputy Steward of Weſtminſter; and the word Steward is of ſo great diverſity, that in moſt corporations, and all houſes of honour, an officer is found of this name and authority. Stewards of Manors, ſee Copyhold. Stews, (from the Fr. Eſtuves, i. e. Thermæ Balneum) Are thoſe places which were permitted in England to women of profeſſed incontinency, and that for hire would proſtitute their bodies to all comers; ſo called, becauſe diſſolute perſons are wont to prepare themſelves for venereous acts by bathing; and hot baths were by Homer reckoned among the effeminate ſort of pleaſures. Theſe ſtews were ſuppreſſed by King Henry 8. about the year 1546.

Stick of Eels, A quantity or meaſure of twenty-five. A bind of eels contains ten ſticks, and each ſtick twenty-five eels. Stat. of Weights and meaſures.

Stickler, An inferior officer who cuts wood within the King's parks of Clarendon. Rot. Parl. 1 H. 6.

Stilyard, Steelyard, Otherwiſe called the Style-houſe, in the pariſh of Allhallows in London, was by authority of parliament aſſigned to the merchants of the Hanſe and Almaine or Eaſterling merchants, to have their abode in for ever, with other tenements, rendering to the Mayor of London a certain yearly rent. Stat. 14 Ed. 4. In ſome records it is called Gildhalda Teutonicorum; and it was at firſt denominated ſtilyard, of a broad place or court where ſteel was ſold, upon which that houſe was founded. See 19 H. 7. c. 32. & 22 H. 8. c. 8. 1 Ed. 6. c. 13.

Stint, common without. There are commons without ſtint, and which laſt all the year. By the ſtatute of Merton however, and other ſubſequent ſtatutes, the lord of the manor may encloſe ſo much of the waſte as he pleaſes, for tillage or wood-ground, provided he leaves common ſufficient for ſuch as are entitled thereto. *Black. Stiremannus, (ſturemannus, Sax. ſteor-man) A pilot of a ſhip, or ſteers-man. Domeſd.

Stirpes, diſtribution per. Under the ſtatute of diſtributions it will ſometimes happen that perſonal eſtates are divided per capita, and ſometimes per ſtirpes; whereas the Common law knows no other rule of ſucceſſion but that per ſtirpes only. They are divided per capite to every man an equal ſhare, when all the claimants claim in their own rights, as in equal degree of kindred, and not jure repreſentationis, in the right of another perſon. As if the next of kin be the inteſtate's three brothers A. B. and C. here his eſtate is divided into three equal portions, and diſtributed per capita, one to each: But if one of theſe brothers (A.) had been dead, leaving three children, and another (B.) leaving two; then the diſtribution muſt have been per ſtirpes, viz. one third to A.'s three children, another third to B.'s two children, and the remaining third to C. the ſurviving brother: Yet if C. had alſo been dead, without iſſue, then A.'s and B.'s five children being all in equal degree to the inteſtate, would take in their own rights per capite, viz. each of them one fifth part. Prec. Chanc. 54. Black. Com. 2 V. 517. It is otherwiſe as to real eſtates. See the next title, or head.

Stirpes, ſucceſſion in. The lineal deſcendants, in infinitum, of any perſon deceaſed, ſhall repreſent their anceſtor; that is, ſhall ſtand in the ſame place as the perſon himſelf would have done, had he been living.

Thus the child, grandchild, or great-grandchild (either male or female) of the eldeſt ſon ſucceeds before the younger ſon, and ſo in infinitum. And theſe repreſentatives ſhall take neither more nor leſs, but juſt ſo much as their principals would have done. As if there be two ſiſters, Margaret and Charlotte, and Margaret dies leaving ſix daughters; and then John Stiles, the father of the two ſiſters, dies, without other iſſue: Theſe ſix daughters ſhall take among them exactly the ſame as their mother Margaret would have done, had ſhe been living; that is, a moiety of the lands of John Stiles in coparcenary. This taking by repreſentation is called a ſucceſſion by ſtirpes, according to the roots. Black. Com. 2 V. 217. So if Charlotte had died leaving three children, her three children would be intitled to the moiety the mother would have had, if living: Contrary to the caſe of diſtribution of perſonal eſtates under the ſtatute.

All ſtockjobbing not authorized by act of parliament, or by charter, or uſed by obſolete charters, ſhall be void, and the undertakings are declared nuſances, &c. by Stat. 6 Geo. 1. cap. 18. All præmiums to deliver or receive, accept or refuſe any public ſtock, or ſhare therein, and contracts in nature of wagers, putts and refuſals relating to the value of the ſtock, ſhall be void; and the præmiums returned, or may be recovered by action with double coſts; and the perſons entering into or executing any ſuch contract, ſhall forfeit 500 l. No money ſhall be given to compound any difference, for not delivering or transferring ſtock, or not performing contracts; but the whole money agreed, is to be paid, and the ſtock transferred on pain of 100 l. Perſons buying, on refuſal or neglect to transfer at the day, may buy the like quantity of ſtock, of any other perſon, and recover the damage of the firſt contractor: And contracts for ſale of any Stock, where contractors are not actually poſſeſſed of or intitled unto the ſame, to be void; and the parties agreeing to ſell, &c. incur a penalty of 500 l. Brokers making agreements, &c. and doing contrary, are alſo liable to penalties: But this act not to hinder lending money on Stocks, or contracts for re-delivering or transferring thereon, ſo as no præmium be paid for the loan more than legal intereſt. Stat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 8. Made perpetual by 10 Geo. 2. c. 8. As to Stocks ſold, it is held, that an actual transfer is not neceſſary, unleſs the perſon to whom it ought to be made, was at the place and time ready to accept it; and then the time of tender is the laſt hour of the day on which the Stock was to be transferred. Mod. Caſ. in L. and E. 106, 219. If the plaintiff doth not ſet forth in his declaration that he was at the South-Sea Houſe, &c. on the day, at ſuch a time, and ſtaid till the laſt hour, to transfer his Stock, he cannot maintain his action. Paſch. 8 Geo. 1. In equity it has been adjudged, if a truſtee, or executor, with the truſt money buys ſtocks, and thereby gains conſiderably, he ſhall have the advantage of it to himſelf; in reſpect of the hazard he ran of being a loſer by it, which he muſt have borne, if able. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 398. But in a like caſe, where money laid out on Stocks was greatly improved; it was decreed, that as, if the Stock had fallen, the truſt muſt have ſuffered; ſo its accidental riſe ſhall be for the benefit of it. 1 P. Williams 649. See Brokers and Felony.

Stocks, (cippus) A wooden engine to put the legs of offenders in, for the ſecuring of diſorderly perſons, and by way of puniſhment in divers caſes ordained by ſtatute, &c. Perſons buying or receiving lead, iron, copper, braſs, bell-metal or ſolder, knowing it to be ſtolen, to be tranſported. 29 Geo. 2. c. 30. Stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9. & 5 Ann. c. 31. makes the perſon receiving ſtolen goods, knowing them to be ſtolen, acceſſary to the theft and felony. And by 1 Ann. c. 9. and 5 Ann. c. 31. the receivers may be proſecuted for a miſdemeanor, tho' the principal felon be not taken.

Trover for goods ſtolen from the plaintiff, and ſold to defendant not in a market overt; but in his ſhop (not in London) it appeared in evidence that the defendant did not know they were ſtolen goods, and Lord Hardwicke ſaid in ſuch caſe, tho' the property was not (ſtrictly ſpeaking) altered, yet, as it was a fair tranſaction, he would hold the plaintiff to ſtrict proof, that theſe were the identical goods ſtolen, and he not being able to prove that was nonſuited. Rep. Temp. Hardwicke per Annaly, 349. If the owner of the goods knew they were ſtolen, waived by the felon in his flight, or ſeiſed by the king's officers as ſuſpected to be ſtolen; there the party ſhall not have reſtitution, unleſs he proſecutes the thief to conviction. Id. 350. Stranger, (derived from the Fr. eſtranger, alienus) Signifies generally, in our language, a man born out of the realm, or unknown. In the law it hath a ſpecial ſignification, for him that is not privy to an act: As a ſtranger to a judgment, is he to whom a judgment doth not belong; and in this ſenſe it is directly contrary to party or privy. Old Nat. Strond, An old Saxon word ſignifying the ſame as ſtrand.

Strumpet, (meretrix) A whore, harlot, or courteſan: This word was heretofore uſed for an addition. Plac. apud Celtr. 6 Hen. 5.

Stryke, The eighth part of a ſeam or quarter of corn, a ſtryke or buſhel. Cartular. Rading. MS. 116.

Stud of mares, Is a company of mares kept for breeding of colts; from the Sax. ſtodmare, i. e. equa ad foetum.

Stultifying one's ſelf. It hath been ſaid, that a non compos himſelf, though he be afterwards brought to a right mind, ſhall not be permitted to alledge his own inſanity, in order to avoid his grant; for that no man ſhall be allowed to ſtultify himſelf, or plead his own diſability: But late opinions, feeling the inconvenience of this rule, have in many points endeavoured to reſtrain it. Comb. 469. 3 Mod. 310, 311. 1 Equ. Caſ. Abr. 279. And it ſeems to be ſettled, that their acts are only binding, in caſe they be afterwards agreed to, when their imbecillity ceaſes. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 291, 292.

Sturgeon, May be imported, 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 24. The King ſhall have Sturgeon taken in the ſea, or elſewhere within the Realm, except in certain places privileged by the King. 17 Ed. 2. ſtat. 1. c. 11.

Style, (appello) Is to call, name, or intitle one; as the ſtyle of the King of England is George the Third, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c.

There is an Old and New Style, uſed in the dates of things abroad; the latter being eleven days before the former.

The New Stile was eſtabliſhed by 24 G. 2. c. 23. And the opening of Commons, and doing of other things depending on any moveable feaſt, muſt be according to this Stile. 25 G. 2. c. 30.

Subarrare. Florence of Worceſter tells us, that King Alfred ſubarravit & duxit a noblewoman of Mercia, anno 868.

Sub-deacon, An antient officer in the church, made by the delivery of an empty platter and cup by the biſhop, and of a pitcher, baſon and towel by the archdeacon: His office was to wait on the deacon with the linen on which the body, &c. was conſecrated, and to receive and carry away the plate with the offerings at ſacraments, the cup with the wine and water in it, &c. He is often mentioned by the monkiſh hiſtorians, and particularly in the Apoſtolical Canons, 42, 43.

Subjection, civil. Civil ſubjection is the obligation, whereby the inferior is conſtrained by the ſuperior to act contrary to what his own reaſon and inclination would ſuggeſt. Obedience to the laws in being is undoubtedly a ſufficient extenuation of civil guilt before the municipal tribunal. Black. Com. 4 V. 28.

Subjects, (ſubditos) Are the members of the Commonwealth under the King their head. Wood's Inſt. 22.

Subinfeudation, Was where the inferior lords, in imitation of their ſuperiors, began to carve out and grant to others minuter eſtates than their own, to be held of themſelves, and were ſo proceeding downwards, in infinitum, 'till the ſuperior lords obſerved, that by this method of ſubinfeudation they loſt all their feodal profits, of wardſhips, marriages, and eſtreats, which fell into the hands of theſe meſne or middle lords, who were the immediate ſuperiors of the terretenant, or him who occupied the land. This occaſioned the Stat. of Weſtm. 3. or quia emptores, 18 Ed. 1. to be made: which directs, that, upon all ſales or feoffments of lands, the feoffee ſhall hold the ſame, not of his immediate feoffor, but of the chief lord of the fee of whom ſuch feoffor himſelf held it. And from hence it is held, that all manors exiſting at this day muſt have exiſted by immemorial preſcription; or at leaſt ever ſince the 18 Ed. 1. when the ſtatute of quia emptores was made. Black. Com. 2 V. 91, 92.

Subjugalis, Is any beaſt carrying the yoke. Matt. Paris, 1249.

Sublegerius, (from the Sax. ſybleger, i. e. inceſtus) One who is guilty of inceſtuous whoredom.

Sub-marſhal, An officer in the Marſhalſea, who is deputy to the Chief Marſhal of the King's Houſe, commonly called the Knight Marſhal, and hath the cuſtody of the priſoners there. He is otherwiſe termed Under Marſhal. Cromp. Juriſ. 104.

Submiſſion, Of matters to arbitrament, by bond or covenant, &c. upon which an action may be brought on non-performance of the award, if it is made for payment of money. 10 Rep. 131. See Arbitrament.

Subnervare, To cut the ſinews of the legs or thighs; to ham-ſtring: And it was an old cuſtom in England, meretrices & impudicas mulieres ſubnervare.

Subornation, (ſubornatio) A ſecret under-hand preparing, inſtructing, or bringing in a falſe witneſs; and from hence ſubornation of perjury is the preparing or corrupt alluring to perjury. Subornation of witneſſes we read of in the 32 Hen. 8. c. 9. And procuring or ſuborning a witneſs to give falſe teſtimony in any court of record concerning lands or goods, the offender ſhall forfeit 40 l. or ſuffer impriſonment for half a year, ſtand on the pillory, &c. by 5 Eliz. c. 9. See Perjury.

Subpoena, Is a writ whereby common perſons are called into Chancery, in ſuch caſes where the Common law hath provided no ordinary remedy; and the name of it proceeds from the words therein, which charge the party called to appear at the day and place aſſigned, ſub pœna centum librarum, &c. Weſt. Symb. par. 2. Cromp. Juriſdict. 33. The ſubpœna is the leading proceſs in the courts of equity; and by ſtatute, when a bill is filed againſt any perſon, proceſs of ſubpœna ſhall be taken out to oblige the defendant to appear and anſwer the bill, &c. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. Where a defendant abſconds, or goes beyond ſea, to avoid being ſerved with proceſs of ſubpœna to appear, &c. ſee 5 Geo. 2. c. 25. and infra ſit ſubpœna in equity, And there are ſeveral of theſe writs in Chancery; as the ſubpœna ad reſpondend', ſubpœna ad replicand' & ad rejungend', ſubpœna ad teſtificand' & ad audiend' judicium, &c. which writs are to be made out by the proper clerks of the ſubpœna office; and ſubpœna's to anſwer muſt be perſonally ſerved by being left with the defendant, or at his houſe with one of the family, on affidavit whereof, if the defendant do not anſwer, attachment ſhall be had againſt him, &c. Pract. Solic. 5, 6. A ſubpœna ad teſtificandum lies for the calling in of witneſſes to teſtify in any cauſe, not only in Chancery, but in all other courts; and in that court, and in the Exchequer, it is made uſe of in law and equity. The two chief writs of ſubpœna are to appear and to teſtify; and the latter iſſues out of the court where the iſſue is joined, upon which the evidence is to be given. 2 Lill. Abr. 536. In this writ the 100 l. penalty is inſerted only in terrorem, being never levied; though if a witneſs, ſerved with a ſubpœna, refuſe to appear, on tender of his charges, the party injured thereby may recover 10 l. damages, and other recompence by action of the caſe. 5 Eliz. c. 9. 12. See Black. Com. 3 V. 369.

Subpoena ad teſtificandum. A writ or proceſs, to bring in witneſſes to give their teſtimony. See ſtat. 5. Eliz. c. 9. If a witneſs on being ſerved with this proceſs does not appear, the court will iſſue an attachment againſt him, or a party plaintiff or defendant, injured by his non-attendance, may maintain an action againſt the witneſs. See Black. Com. 3 V. 369.

Subpoena duces tecum. This is a writ or proceſs of the ſame kind with the preceding ſubpœna, including a cauſe of requiſition, for the witneſs to bring and produce books and papers, &c. in his hands, belonging to, or wherein the parties are intereſted; or tending to elucidate the matter in queſtion. See Black. Com. 3 V. 382.

Subpoena in equity. A proceſs in Equity, calling on a defendant to appear and anſwer to the complainant's bill. See Black. Com. 3 V. 445. and the ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 25. Which enacts that where the party cannot be found to be ſerved with ſubpœna, and abſconds (as believed) to avoid being ſerved, a day ſhall be appointed him to appear to the bill of the plaintiff; which is to be inſerted in the London Gazette, read in the pariſh church where the defendant laſt lived, and fixed up at the royal exchange: And if the defendant doth not appear upon that day, the bill ſhall be taken pro confeſſo. As to the original of this ſubpœna, ſee Black. Com. 3 V. 51: And ſee ſupra ſubpœna.

Subſcription of witneſſes. A will of lands muſt by ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſ. 5. be atteſted or ſubſcribed by three credible witneſſes at leaſt; In other conveyances, the actual ſubſcription of the witneſſes is not required by law, though it is prudent for them ſo to do. Black. Com. 2 V. 378.

Subſequent Conditions. Theſe are ſuch by the failure or nonperformance of which an eſtate already veſted may be defeated. Black. Com. 2 V. 154. which vide.

Subſequent Evidence. In attaint, he that brings the attaint can give no other evidence to the grand jury, than what was originally given to the petit. Black. Com. 3 V. 403. The proceeding by attaint is now out of uſe, as the courts of law will grant a new trial, where cauſe ſufficient can be ſhewn, on an application in due time.

On a re-hearing in equity, all the evidence taken in the cauſe, whether read before or not, is admitted to be read; Becauſe it is the decree of the Chancellor himſelf, who only now ſits to hear reaſons why the decree ſhould not be enrolled and perfected; at which time all the omiſſions of either evidence or argument may be ſupplied. Gill. Rep. 151, 152. Black. Com. 3 V. 454. 455.

Subſidy, (ſubſidium) Signifies an aid, tax, or tribute, granted to the King for the urgent occaſions of the kingdom, to be levied on every ſubject of ability according to the value of his lands or goods. Some perſons have held, that the ſubſidy of tonnage, &c. might be taken by the King of his own prerogative; eſpecially in a caſe of neceſſity, and for the publick good, as to make an equality of trade: And that the precedents of the Exchequer make the law herein. But the law was adjudged otherwiſe, by both houſes of parliament. Jenk. Cent. 208. Dyer 165. Lane 24. Cro. Car. 601. Vide Cuſtoms, and Tax.

Hiſtory does not mention that the Saxon Kings had any ſubſidies after the manner of ours at preſent; but they had both levies of money and perſonal ſervices towards the building and repairing of cities, caſtles, bridges, military expeditions, &c. which they called Burgbote, Brigbote, Herefare, Heregeld, &c. But when the Danes harraſſed the land, King Ethelred ſubmitted to pay them for redemption of peace ſeveral great ſums of money yearly. This was called Danegeld, for the levying of which every hide of land was taxed yearly at twelve pence, lands of the church only excepted, and thereupon it was after called, hydagium, and that name remained afterwards upon all taxes and ſubſidies impoſed upon lands; but ſometimes it was laid upon cattle, and then was termed horngeld. The Normans called theſe ſometimes taxes, ſometimes tallages, otherwiſe auxilia & ſubſidia. The Conqueror had theſe taxes, and made a law for the manner of their levying, as appears in Emendationibus ejus, pag. 125. ſect. Volumus & firmiter, &c. Many years after the conqueſt they were levied otherwiſe than now, as every ninth lamb, every ninth fleece, and every ninth ſheaf. 14 E. 3. ſtat. 1. cap. 20. Of which you may ſee great variety in Raſtal's Abridgment, tit. Taxes, Tenths, Fifteenths, Subſidies, &c. and 4 Inſt. fol. 26 and 33. Whence we may gather there is no certain rate, but as the parliament ſhall think fit. Subſidy is in our ſtatutes ſometimes confounded with cuſtoms. 11 H. 4. cap. 7. Cowell. See Black. Com. 1 V. 307, 310, 311, 315. 4 V. 416.

No aid to be taken but by aſſent of parliament, 14 Ed. 3. ſt. 2. c. 1.

Subſtance. The ſubſtance of things is moſt to be regarded; and therefore our law doth prefer matter of ſubſtance, before matters of circumſtance, &c. as in the ſtatutes 36 E. 3. c. 15. 33 H. 6. c. 10. 21 H. 7. c. 24. 23 Eliz. c. 4.

Subſtitute, (Subſtitutus) One placed under another perſon to tranſact ſome buſineſs, &c. See Attorney.

Subtraction of conjugal Rights. This is when either huſband or wife lives ſeparate from the other without any ſufficient reaſon; in which caſe the eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction (on a ſuit for reſtitution of conjugal rights) will compel them to come together again, if either party be weak enough to deſire it, contrary to the inclination of the other. Black Com. 3 V. 94.

Subtraction of Legacies. This is the withholding or detaining of Legacies: As a conſequential part of teſtamentary juriſdiction, the ſpiritual court adminiſters redreſs herein, by compelling the executor to pay them. In this caſe the courts of equity exerciſe a concurrent juriſdiction with the eccleſiaſtical courts, as incident to ſome other ſpecies of relief prayed by the complainant; as to compel the executor to account for the teſtator's effects, or aſſent to the legacy, or the like. For, as it is beneath the dignity of the king's courts to be merely ancillary to other inferior juriſdictions, the cauſe, when once brought there, receives there alſo it's full determination. Black. Com. 3 V. 98.

Subtraction of Rents and Services, &c. This happens, when any perſon, who owes any ſuit, duty, cuſtom, rent, or ſervice to another, withdraws or neglects to perform or pay it, &c. See Black. Com. 3 V. 230.

Subtraction of Tithes. This is the withholding of tithes, from the parſon or vicar, whether the former be a clergyman, or a lay appropriator. See ſtat. 27 H. 8. c. 20. 32 H. 8. c. 7. And Black. Com. 3 V. 88, 102. alſo vide Tithes.

Suburbani, Are huſbandmen, according to the Monaſticon. Tom. 2. p. 468.

Succeſſion to the Crown, ſee King.

Succeſſion ab inteſtato. The ſtatute of diſtributions bears ſome reſemblance to the Roman law, of ſucceſſions ab inteſtato. See Black. Com. 2 V. 516.

Succeſſion to Goods and Chattels. The gaining a property in chattels, either perſonal or real, by ſucceſſion, is, in ſtrictneſs of law ,only applicable to corporations aggregate of many, as dean and chapter, mayor and commonalty, maſter and fellows, and the like; in which one ſet of men may, by ſucceeding another ſet, acquire a property in all the goods, moveables, and other chattels of the corporation. Black. Com. 2 V. 430.

Succeſſion to the Crown. The ſucceſſion to the crown hath already been noticed under Settlement. See farther Black. Com. 1 V. 197. 4 V. 433.

Succeſſor. (Lat.) Is he that followeth or cometh in another's place. Sole corporations may take a fee-ſimple eſtate to them and their ſucceſſors; but not without the word ſucceſſors: And ſuch a corporation cannot regularly take in ſucceſſion goods and chattels; and therefore if a leaſe for a hundred years be made to a perſon and his ſucceſſors, it hath been adjudged only an eſtate for life: Nor may a ſole corporation bind the ſucceſſors. 4 Rep. 65. 1 Inſt. 8, 46, 94. 4 Inſt. 249. An aggregate corporation may have a fee-ſimple eſtate in ſucceſſion without the word ſucceſſors; and take goods and chattels in action or poſſeſſion, and they ſhall go to the ſucceſſors. Wood's Inſt. 111. Suffragan, (Suffraganes, Chorepiſcopus, Epiſcopi vicarius) Is a Titular Biſhop ordained to aid and aſſiſt the biſhop of the dioceſe in his ſpiritual function; or one who ſupplieth the place inſtead of the biſhop. Some writers call theſe Suffragans by the name of Subſidiary Biſhops, whoſe number is limited by the ſtat. 26 H. 8. cap. 14. By which ſtatute it was enacted, That it ſhould be lawful for every biſhop, at his pleaſure, to elect two honeſt and diſcreet ſpiritual perſons within his dioceſe, and to preſent them to the King, that he might give to one of them ſuch title, ſtile and dignity of ſuch of the Sees in the ſaid ſtatute mentioned, as he ſhould think fit: And that every ſuch perſon ſhould be called Biſhop Suffragan of the ſame See, &c. This act ſets forth at large for what places ſuch Suffragans were to be nominated by the King; and if any one exerciſe the juriſdiction of a Suffragan, without the appointment of the biſhop of the dioceſe, &c. he ſhall be guilty of a *Præmunire. Suggeſtion, (ſuggeſtio) Is in law a ſurmiſe, or repreſenting of a thing; and by magna charta no perſon ſhall be put to his law on the ſuggeſtion of another, but by lawful witneſſes. 9 H. 3. c. 28. Suggeſtions are grounds to move for prohibitions to ſuits in the ſpiritual courts, &c, when they meddle with matters out of their juriſdictions. 2 Lil. Abr. 536. Though matters of record ought not to be ſtayed upon the bare ſuggeſtion of the party; there ought to be an affidavit made of the matter ſuggeſted, to induce the court to grant a rule for ſtaying the proceedings upon the record. 2 Lill 537. There are ſuggeſtions in replevin, for a returno habendo; which it is ſaid are not traverſable, as there are for prohibitions to the ſpiritual or admiralty courts. 1 Plowd. 76 Breaches of covenants and deaths of perſons muſt be ſuggeſted upon record, &c. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 10. Suicide. See Self Murder, and Black. Com. 4 V. 189.

Suit, (ſecta, Fr. ſuite, i. e. conſecutio, ſequela) ſignifies a following another; but in divers ſenſes. The firſt is a ſuit in law, and is divided into ſuit real and perſonal; which is all one with action real and perſonal. 2. Suit of court, an attendance which the tenant owes to the court of his lord. 3. Suit covenant, when a man hath covenanted to do ſuit in the Lord's court. 4. Suit cuſtom, where I and my anceſtors owe ſuit time out of mind. 5. Suit is the following one in chaſe, as freſh ſuit: And this word is uſed for a petition made to the King, or any great perſonage. See Black. Com. 3 V. 295.

Suit and Service. When the tenant had profeſſed himſelf to be the man of his ſuperior or lord, the next conſideration was concerning the ſervice, which, as ſuch, he was bound to render for the land he held. This, in pure, proper, and original feuds, was only twofold: To follow, or do ſuit to, the lord in his courts in time of peace; and in his armies or warlike retinue, when neceſſity called him to the field. Black. Com. 2 V. 54.

Suit of Court, That is, ſuit to the lord's court, is that ſervice which the feudary tenant was bound to do at the Lord's court. At firſt it was expreſly mentioned in the grant how often theſe courts ſhould be held. This appears by Fleta, l. 2. c. 71. par. 14. Qui faciant ſectas ad curiam domini & quot ſectas per annum. Sometimes one or more, but never exceeding three. Thorn mentions two, viz. Et faciant ſectam ad curiam Cantuariæ bis per annum, ſcilicet, in feſto Michaelis & Paſchæ. But all the lord's tenants were not bound to attend his courts, but only thoſe to whom their eſtates were granted upon that condition; But every man was bound to attend the ſheriff's turn twice in every year; which ſee in ſecta regalis. And if the inheritance, by reaſon whereof the tenant was bound to attend only at one court, did deſcend to co-heirs, he who had capitalem partem, was bound to attend the lord's court both for himſelf and all the coheirs. Cowell.

Suits at law. Are to be proſecuted in certain times limited by the ſtatute 21 Jac 1. c. 16, &c. Thoſe perſons who acted as lieutenants, deputy lieutenants, juſtices of peace, &c. not authoriſed, at the bringing in of King William, were indemnified from vexatious ſuits, by 1 W. & M. c. 8. So perſons that acted for ſecurity of the government, during the rebellion in the late reign. 1 Geo. 1. c. 39. Perſons deſiring to end any ſuits or controverſies, for which there is no remedy but by perſonal action or bill in equity, may agree that their ſubmiſſion to the award of arbitrators, ſhall be made a rule of court, &c. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 15. See Black. Com. 3 V. 116.

Suit in equity, The firſt commencement (in Chancery) is by preferring a bill to the Lord Chancellor in the ſtile of a petiton, ſetting forth the circumſtances of the caſe at length, as ſome fraud, truſt or hardſhip, and praying relief, and alſo proceſs of ſubpoena againſt the defendant. The defendant is to anſwer, upon oath, to all the matter charged in the bill. Or the defendant may plead and demur, or demur alone, as adviſed by counſel. If the defendant anſwers, and the plaintiff finds ſufficient matter confeſſed in the defendant's anſwer to ground a decree upon, he may proceed to the hearing of the cauſe on bill and anſwer only. But, in that caſe, he muſt take the defendant's anſwer to be true in every point. Otherwiſe the courſe is for the plaintiff to reply generally to the anſwer, averring his bill to be true, certain, and ſufficient, and the defendant's anſwer to be directly the reverſe; which he is ready to prove as the court ſhall award: upon which the defendant rejoins, averring the like on his ſide; which is joining iſſue upon the facts in diſpute. Summary convictions. A ſummary proceeding is ſuch as is directed by ſeveral acts of parliament (for the Common law is a ſtranger to it, unleſs in the caſe of contempts) for the conviction of offenders, and the inflicting of certain penalties created by thoſe acts of parliament. In theſe caſes there is no intervention of a jury, but the party accuſed is acquitted or condemned by the ſuffrage of ſuch perſon only, as the ſtatute hath appointed for his judge, as one or more juſtice of the peace, &c. See Black. Com. 4 V. 277, &c.

Summer-hus-Silver. A payment to the lords of the wood in the Wealds of Kent, who uſed to viſit thoſe places in ſummer-time, when their under-tenants were bound to prepare little ſummer-houſes for their reception, or elſe pay a compoſition in money. Cuſtum de Sittingburn, MS.

Summons, (ſummonitio) Is with us as much as vocatio in jus, or citatio among the Civilians. Fleta, lib. 6. cap. 6. In general, it is a writ to the ſheriff to warn one to appear at a day; and muſt be by certain ſummoners on the tenant's land, not his goods, &c. And, if againſt an heir, ſhall be on the lands that did deſcend; or making default, at the grand cape he may wage his law of non ſummons. 6 Rep. 54. 37 H. 6. c. 26. There is a ſummons in writs of formedon, &c. And on every ſummons upon the land in a real action, fourteen days before the return, proclamation is to be made thereof on a Sunday, at or near the door of the church or chapel of the place where the land lies, which muſt be returned with the names of the ſummoners: And if ſuch proclamation ſhall not be had, then no grand cape ſhall iſſue, but an alias and a pluries ſummons, until a ſummons and proclamation be duly made and returned. Cro. Eliz. 42. 2 Lil. Abr. 538. In a præcipe quod reddat, no man ſhall loſe his land without being ſummoned. Jenk. Cent. 98. Summons of members of parliament and diſtreſs is given by 10 Geo. 3. c. 50. vide tit. Parliament. See Black. Com. 3 V. 279.

Summons and ſeverance. This title is diſtinguiſhed in the books by the name of ſummons and ſeverance; but the proper name is ſeverance; for the ſummons is only a proceſs, which muſt, in certain caſes, iſſue before judgment of ſeverance can be given. 4 New Abr. 660. Severance is a judgment, by which, where two or more are joined in an action, one or more of theſe is enabled to proceed in ſuch action without the other or others. 4 New Abr. 660.

It is a principle of law, where two or more have a joint right to a thing, they muſt join in an action for the recovery thereof. 4 New Abr. 660. Joint-tenants muſt implead jointly; for they claim under one and the ſame title. 1 Inſt. 180. So parceners, who make but one heir, muſt, in order to recover the poſſeſſion of their anceſtor, be joined in præcipe. 1 Inſt. 163, 164. Executors, becauſe the right of their teſtator devolves on all of them, muſt likewiſe all join in an action for the recovery thereof. Godolph. Orph. Leg. 134. Salk. 3. Carth. 61.

And wherever the right of action is in two or more perſons, and they have not all joined in any action that is brought, the defendant may plead in abatement: for, if one could recover in ſuch caſe ſingly, every other might do the ſame; and by this means a defendant would be liable to anſwer in divers actions for the ſame thing. Cro. Eliz. 554. Deering v. Moor. 9 Rep. 37. Salk. 3, 32. 2 Lev. 113. 3 Lev. 354. 1 Mod. 102.

It is indeed in the power of any one or more, where two or more have a joint right of action, to commence a ſuit in the name of all whoſe ſuch right is: but, notwithſtanding that a plea in abatement would be thereby prevented, it would ſtill be in the power of any one of them, by neglecting to appear, or refuſing to proceed afterwards in ſuch ſuit, to render it fruitleſs. 1 Inſt. 139. Bro. Summ. and Sev. pl. 17. For if two or more join in bringing an action, and one makes default, the nonſuit of him is the nonſuit of them all. Bro. Summ. and Sev. pl. 5, 7. So if divers join in a writ of error, the aſſignment of errors cannot be by one without the others. Cro. Eliz. 192. Andrews v. Ld. Cromwell.

To prevent the great inconvenience, and the failure of juſtice, which would be if perſons, in whom there is a joint right of action, ſhould be precluded, by the negligence or colluſion of any one of them, from having the effect of a ſuit for the recovery of ſuch right; the law has provided, that if any one of thoſe perſons, in whoſe name a joint action is commenced, does not appear, or after appearance makes default, the other or others may have judgment ad ſequendum ſolum, or, in other words, a judgment of ſeverance. Hard. 48. Manly v. Lovel. Bro. Summ. and Sev. pl. 4, 16. And ſee ib. pl. 18. F. N. B. 128. 1 Inſt. 139.

The conſequence of this judgment is, that, notwithſtanding the ſeverance of one or more who did not appear or who made default, the other plaintiff or plaintiffs in the action may proceed in the ſuit. 4 New Abr. 661.

Where two or more are plaintiffs in an action, and one of theſe has not appeared, he muſt be ſummoned before judgment of ſeverance can be given againſt him: for it is a general rule, that a nonſuit is in no caſe peremptory before appearance, becauſe a writ may have been purchaſed in the plaintiff's name without his privity. 1 Inſt. 139. Bro. Summ. and Sev. pl. 10. 2 Rol. Abr. 488.

But if two joint plaintiffs have both appeared, and afterwards one makes default, the court may, without iſſuing any ſummons, immediately give judgment of ſeverance. Bro. Summ. and Sev. pl. 10. 10 Rep. 135. Hard. 317. No judgment of ſeverance can be given in a writ of error, unleſs it is prayed before the defendant has pleaded nullo eſt erratum. Cro. Jac. 117. Blount v. Snedſtone. But ſuch judgment may be after joinder in the aſſignment of error. 2 Lil. Pr. Reg. 663.

Summons to parliament, According to Blackſtone, in the main the conſtitution of parliament, as it now ſtands, was marked out ſo long ago as the ſeventeenth year of King John, A. D. 1215, in the great charter granted by that prince, wherein he promiſes to ſummons all archbiſhops, biſhops, abbots, earls, and greater barons perſonally; and all other tenants in chief under the crown, by the ſheriff and bailiffs; to meet at a certain place, with forty days notice, to aſſeſs aids and ſcutages when neceſſary. Black. Com. 1 V. 149.

Summons ad warrantizandum, Summoneas ad warrantizand', The proceſs whereby the vouchee in a common recovery is called. Co. Lit. 101.

Sumptuary Laws, (Sumptuaria Lex, from Sumptuarius, of or belonging to expences) Are laws made to reſtrain exceſs in apparel, and prohibit coſtly clothes, of which heretofore we had many in England, but they are all repealed by 1 Jac. 1. 3 Inſt. 199. See Black. Com. 4 V. 170.

Sunday, (Dies Dominicus) Is the Lord's Day ſet apart for the ſervice of God, to be kept religiouſly, and not be profaned. Perſons uſing bull-baiting or bear-bating, or ſuch like ſports, on a Sunday, ſhall forfeit 3 s. 4 d. and 5 s. for wreſtling, bowling, &c. Stat. 1 Car. 1. c. 1. And if any butchers ſhall kill or ſell meat on a Sunday, they are liable to a penalty of 6 s. 8 d. Carriers, drovers, &c. travelling on the Lord's Day, incur a forfeiture of 20 s. Stat. 3 Car. 1. c. 2. No perſon ſhall do any worldly labour on a Sunday, (except works of neceſſity and charity) on pain of 5 s. And crying and expoſing to ſale any wares or goods on a Sunday, the goods to be forfeited to the poor, &c. on conviction before a juſtice of peace, who may order the penalties and forfeitures to be levied by diſtreſs: But this is not to extend to dreſſing meat in families, inns, cook-ſhops, or victualling-houſes; nor to crying of milk on a Sunday in the morning or evening. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. An indictment for exerciſing the trade of a butcher muſt be laid to be contra formam ſtatuti; for it was no offence at Common law. 1 Strange 702. Law proceſſes are not to be ſerved on Sunday, unleſs it be in caſes of treaſon or felony; or on an eſcape, by virtue of 5 Ann. c. 9. Sunday is not a day in law for proceedings, contracts, &c. And hence it is, that a ſale of goods on this day in a market overt is not good: And if any part of the proceedings of a ſuit in any court of juſtice, be entered and recorded to be done on a Sunday, it makes it all void. 2 Inſt. 264. 3 Shep. Abr. 181. The ſervice of a citation on a Sunday is good, and not reſtrained by the Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. And by two judges, the delivery of a declaration upon a Sunday may be well enough, it not being a proceſs; but Holt Ch. J. thought it ill, becauſe the act intended to reſtrain all ſorts of legal proceedings. 1 Ld. Raym. 706. A writ of inquiry cannot be executed on a Sunday. 1 Strange 387.

Supercargo, A perſon employed by merchants to go a voyage, and overſee their cargo, and diſpoſe of it to the beſt advantage. Merch. Dict.

Super-inſtitution, (ſuper-inſtitutio) Is one inſtitution upon another; as where A. B. is admitted and inſtituted to a benefice upon one title, and C. D. is admitted and inſtituted on the title or preſentment of another. 2 Cro. 463. See Inſtitution.

Super-jurare, A term uſed in our ancient law, when a criminal endeavoured to excuſe himſelf by his own oath, or the oath of one or two witneſſes, and the crime objected againſt him was ſo plain and notorious, that he was convicted by the oaths of many more witneſſes: This was called ſuper-jurare. Leg. Hen. 1. c. 74. Leg. Athelſtan. c. 15.

Superoneratione Paſturæ, Is a judicial writ that lies againſt him who is impleaded in the county-court for the ſurcharging or overburthening a common with his cattle, in a caſe where he was formerly impleaded for it in the ſame court, and the cauſe is removed into one of the courts at Weſtminſter. Reg. Judic.

Super Prærogativa Regis, A writ which formerly lay againſt the King's tenant's widow for marrying without the King's licence. F. N. B. 174.

Superſedeas, Is a writ that lies in a great many caſes; and ſignifies in general a command to ſtay ſome ordinary proceedings at law, on good cauſe ſhewn, which ought otherwiſe to proceed. F. N. B. 236. A ſuperſedeas is uſed for the ſtaying of an execution, after a writ of error is allowed, and bail put in: but no ſuperſedeas can be made out on bringing writ of error, till bail is given, where there are judgments upon verdicts, or by default, in debt. 3 Jac. 1. c. 8. nor in actions for tithes, promiſe for payment of money, trover, covenant, detinue, and treſpaſs. 13 Car. 2. ſt. 2. c. 9. And execution ſhall not be ſtaid in any judgment after verdict (except in the caſe of executors) by writ of error or ſuperſedeas thereon, unleſs bail be put in. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 8. ſ. 3.

A writ of error is ſaid to be in judgment of law a ſuperſedeas, until the errors are examined, &c. that is to the execution; not to action of debt on the judgment at law: from the time of the allowance, a writ of error is a ſuperſedeas: and if the party had notice of it before the allowance, it is a ſuperſedeas from the time of ſuch notice; but this muſt be where execution is not executed, or begun to be executed. Cro. Jac. 534. Raym. 100. Mod. Ca. 130. 1 Salk. 321.

If, before execution, the defendant bring a writ of error, and the ſheriff will execute a fieri facias and levy the money, the court will award a ſuperſedeas, quia erronice emanavit, and to have reſtitution of the money. Stile 414. After an execution, there was a ſuperſedeas, quia executio improvide emanavit, &c. iſſued; and there being no clauſe of reſtitution in the ſuperſedeas, it was inſiſted that the execution was executed before the ſuperſedeas awarded, and that a faulty ſuperſedeas is no ſuperſedeas; but the court ordered another ſuperſedeas, with a clauſe of reſtitution. Moor 466. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 256.

The ſuperſedeas, quia erronice emanavit, lies to reſtore a poſſeſſion, after an habere facias ſeiſinam, when ſued out erroneouſly; ſo of a ſuperſedeas after execution upon a capias ad ſatisfaciend. if it be immediately delivered to the ſheriff. Jenk. Cent. 58, 92. It appearing upon affidavit, that there were two writs of execution executed upon one judgment: the party moved for a ſuperſedeas, becauſe there cannot be two ſuch executions, but where the plaintiff is hindered either by the death of the defendant, or by ſome act in law, that he can have no benefit of the firſt; and ſo it was adjudged. Stile 255. A ſuperſedeas is grantable to a ſheriff to ſtay the return of an habeas corpora; and if he return it afterwards, and the parties proceed to trial, it is error; and ſo are all the proceedings in an inferior court, after an habeas corpora delivered, unleſs a procedendo is awarded, in which caſe a ſuperſedeas is not to be granted. Cro. Car. 43, 350.

When a certiorari is delivered, it is a ſuperſedeas to inferior courts below; and being allowed, all their proceedings afterwards are erroneous; and they may be puniſhed. The juſtices, &c. to whom a certiorari is ſent, are to iſſue a ſuperſedeas to the ſheriff to ſtop execution of any award, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 293. If a ſheriff holds plea of 40*s.* debt in his county-court, the defendant may ſue forth a ſuperſedeas, that he do not proceed, &c. Or after judgment he may have a ſuperſedeas directed to the ſheriff, requiring him not to award execution upon ſuch judgment; and upon that an alias, a pluries, and an attachment, &c. New Nat. Br. 432.

Superſedeas may be granted by the court for ſetting aſide an erroneous judicial proceſs, &c. Alſo a priſoner may be diſcharged by ſuperſedeas; as a perſon is impriſoned by the King's writ, ſo he is to be ſet at liberty; and a ſuperſedeas is as good a cauſe to diſcharge a perſon, as the firſt proceſs is to arreſt him. Finch 453. Cro. Jac. 379. If a privileged perſon is ſued in any juriſdiction foreign to his privilege, he may bring his ſuperſedeas. Vaugh. 155. But a peer, being arreſted by a bill of Middleſex, was ordered to plead his privilege; and not allowed a ſuperſedeas. Stile 177. Was a peer to be now arreſted, the houſe of Lords would, in all probability, commit the attorney, plaintiff, officer, and all others concerned in ſuch a flagrant breach of privilege, and perhaps compel the plaintiff to diſcontinue his ſuit. It is falſe impriſonment to detain a man in cuſtody after a ſuperſedeas delivered, for the ſuperſedeas is to be obeyed; and in ſuch caſe it is a new caption without any cauſe. 2 Cro. 379. 3 Nelſ. 256. There is a ſuperſedeas where an audita querela is ſued; and out of the Chancery, to ſet a perſon at liberty taken upon an exigent, on giving ſecurity to appear, &c. And in caſes of ſurety of the peace and good behaviour, where a perſon is already bound to the peace in the Chancery, &c. New. Nat. Br. 524, 529, 532. So where a warrant iſſues againſt a man, on an indictment found againſt him, for a miſdemeanor, or other bailable offence, and he having notice of it, does, before caption, duly put in bail, to appear and traverſe the indictment, &c. he is intitled to a ſuperſedeas, to prevent a caption. See farther, 4 New Abr. and 20 Vin. Abr. tit. Superſedeas. And poſt Supplicavit.

Superſeding a commiſſion of bankrupt. If a commiſſion of bankrupt iſſues, and there is ſufficient to pay all the creditors, and the charges, and ſatisfaction is made to all the creditors, the commiſſion may be ſuperſeded. 2 Cha. Ca. 144. A commiſſion is alſo ſometimes ſuperſeded, on the creditors agreeing with the bankrupt, and conſenting to a ſuperſedeas. So, if on an iſſue directed, to try whether the party againſt whom the commiſſion iſſued, is or is not a bankrupt, and a verdict is found in his favour, or upon an action where the bankruptcy comes in queſtion, and a verdict is found in his favour, the chancellor will ſuperſede the commiſſion.

Super ſtatuto 1 Ed. 3. cap. 12, 13. Is a writ that lay againſt the King's tenants holding in chief, who aliened the King's land without his licence. F. N. B. fol. 175.

Super Statuto de Articulis Cleri, Cap. 6. A writ lying againſt the ſheriff or other officer that diſtrains in the King's highway, or in the lands anciently belonging to the church. F. N. B. 173.

Super Statuto facto pour Seneſchal & Marſhal de Roy, &c. Is a writ that lieth againſt the Steward or Marſhal, for holding plea in his court of freehold, or for treſpaſs or contracts not made and ariſing within the King's houſhold. F. N. B. 241

Super Statuto verſus Servantes & Laboratores, A writ againſt him who keeps ſervants departed out of their ſervices contrary to law. F. N. B. 167.

Super Statuto de York, quo nul ſerra viteller, &c. Is a writ lying againſt a perſon that uſes victualling, either in groſs, or by retail, in a city or borough-town, during the time he is mayor, &c. F. N. B. 172.

Superſtitious Uſes, Cauſing forfeiture of lands and goods to the King, by Stat. 1 Edw. 6. c. 14. See Uſes, and Black. Com. 3 V. 428.

Superviſor, (Lat.) A ſurveyor or overſeer: And it was formerly and ſtill is a cuſtom among the better ſort of people, to make a ſuperviſor of a will, to ſuperviſe and overſee the executors that they punctually perform the will of the teſtator; but this office is of late very careleſly executed, ſo as to be little purpoſe or uſe. Superviſor (now ſurveyor) of the highways, is mentioned in the Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 13. And in the late acts relative to the highways. See Poſt, Surveyors of the Highways.

Supplemental bill in equity. If a plaintiff hath replied to a defendant's anſwer whereby the cauſe is at iſſue, and afterwards new matter ariſes, which did not exiſt before, he muſt ſet it forth by a ſupplemental bill. Black. Com. 3 V. 448.

Suppletory oath. The Civil law univerſally requires the teſtimony of two. To extricate itſelf out of this abſurdity, the modern practice of the Civil courts has plunged itſelf into another. Where there is only one witneſs, to make up the neceſſary complement of two, they admit the part himſelf (plaintiff or defendant) to be examined in his own behalf; and adminiſter to him what is called the ſuppletory oath: and, if his evidence happens to be in his own favour, this immediately converts the half proof into a whole one. Black. Com. 3 V. 270, 271.

Supplicavit, Is a writ iſſuing out of Chancery, for taking ſurety of the peace, when one is in danger of being hurt in his body by another; it is directed to the juſtices of peace and ſheriff of the county, and is grounded upon the Stat. 1 Ed. 3. c. 16. which ordains, That certain perſons ſhall be aſſigned by the Chancellor to take care of the peace, &c. F. N. B. 80, 81. When a man hath purchaſed a writ of ſupplicavit, directed to the juſtices of the peace, againſt any perſon, then he, againſt whom the writ is ſued, may come into the Chancery, and there find ſureties that he will not do hurt or damage unto him that ſueth the writ; and upon that he ſhall have a writ of ſuperſedeas directed to the juſtices, &c. reciting his having found ſureties in Chancery, according to the writ of ſupplicavit; and alſo reciting that writ, and the manner of the ſecurity that he hath found, &c. commanding the juſtices, that they ceaſe to arreſt him, or to compel him to find ſureties, &c. And if the party who ought to find ſureties, cannot come into the Chancery to find ſureties, his friend may ſue a ſuperſedeas in Chancery for him; reciting the writ of ſupplicavit, and that ſuch a one and ſuch a one are bound for him in the Chancery in ſuch a ſum, that he ſhall keep the peace according to it; and the writ ſhall be directed to the juſtices, that they take ſurety of the party himſelf according to the ſupplicavit, to keep the peace, &c. and that they do not arreſt him; or if they have arreſted him for that cauſe, that they deliver him. New. Nat. Br. 180.

Sometimes the writ of ſupplicavit is made returnable into the Chancery at a certain day; and if ſo, and the juſtices do not certify the writ, nor the recogniſance, and the ſecurity taken, the party who ſued the ſupplicavit ſhall have a writ of certiorari directed unto the juſtices of peace to certify the writ of ſupplicavit, and what they have done thereupon, and the ſecurity found, &c. Ibid. If a recogniſance of the peace be taken in purſuance of a writ of ſupplicavit, it muſt be wholly governed by the directions of ſuch writ; but if it be taken before a juſtice of peace below, the recogniſance may be at the diſcretion of ſuch juſtice. Lamb. 100. Dalt. c. 70.

To ſue the writ of ſupplicavit, the party that deſires it muſt go before one of the Maſters in Chancery, and make oath that he does not deſire the ſame through any malice, but for his own ſafety; upon which the maſter makes out a warrant, and the writ it made by it by one of the clerks in the ſix clerks office; and when made, the ſupplicavit is to be delivered to the ſheriff to have his warrant thereupon for arreſting the party, &c. and then, having ſued out a certiorari, it is to be delivered to them that took bail thereon; and they are required to certify it, &c. Pract. Solic. 130. See Surety of the Peace, and Black. Com. 4 N. 250.

Supplies. Extraordinary grants to government, by parliament, to ſupply the exigencies of the ſtate. See on this ſubject, Black. Com. 1 V. 307.

Supremacy, Signifies ſovereign dominion, authority and preheminence, the higheſt eſtate. King Hen. 8. was the firſt prince that ſhook off the yoke of Rome here in England, and ſettled the ſupremacy in himſelf, after it had been long held by the Pope. Stat. 25 Hen. 8. c. 12, 20. And by 1 Eliz. c. 1. all eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction was annexed to the crown; and it was ordained that no foreign potentate ſhould exerciſe any power or authority in this kingdom: Alſo the oath of ſupremacy was appointed, &c. By theſe laws the great power of Rome was ſuppreſſed; and the act of 1 Eliz. Sir Edward Coke ſays, was an act of reſtitution of the ancient juriſdiction eccleſiaſtical, which always belonged of right to the crown of England; and that it was not introductory of a new law, but declaratory of the old, and that which was or of right ought to be, by the fundamental laws of this realm, parcel of the King's juriſdiction; by which laws, the King, as ſupream head, had full and intire power in all cauſes eccleſiaſtical as well as temporal: And as in temporal cauſes, the King doth judge by his judges in the courts of juſtice, by the temporal laws of England; ſo in cauſes eccleſiaſtical, they are to be determined by the judges thereof, according to the King's eccleſiaſtical laws. 5 Rep. 9. Cawdrey's caſe. And in this caſe it was reſolved by all the judges, that, by our ancient laws, this kingdom is an abſolute empire and monarchy; conſiſting of one head, which is the King, and of a body politic, made up of many well agreeing members, all which the law divides into two ſeveral parts, the clergy and the laity, both of them immediately under God, ſubject and obedient to the head. And the kingly head of this politick body, is furniſhed with prerogative and juriſdiction, to render juſtice and right to every part and member of this body, of what eſtate or degree ſoever, otherwiſe he would not be at the head of the whole. 5 Co. Rep. 8.

There are ſeveral inſtances of eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction exerciſed by the Kings of England in former ages; and in this reſpect the King is ſaid to be perſona mixta & unita cum ſacerdotibus. The King is the ſupreme ordinary, and by the ancient laws of the land might, without any act of parliament, make ordinances for the government of the clergy; and if there be a controverſy between ſpiritual perſons concerning juriſdiction, the King is arbitrator, and it is a right of his crown to declare their bounds, &c. Moor 755, 1043. Hob. 17. Surcharge, An over-charge, beyond what is juſt and right Merch. Dict.

Surcharge of common. This is a diſturbance of common of paſture, by any one who hath right of common putting more cattle therein than the paſture and herbage will ſuſtain, or the party hath a right to do. This ſurcharging can, properly ſpeaking, only happen where the common is appendant or appurtenant, and of courſe limitable by law; or where, when in groſs, it is expreſsly limited and certain: for where a man hath common in groſs, ſans nombre, or without ſtint, he cannot be a ſurcharger. But even in this caſe there muſt be ſufficient for the lord's own beaſts; for the law will not ſuppoſe that, at the original grant of the common, the lord meant to exclude himſelf. The remedy for ſurcharging common, is by the lord's diſtraining the ſurplus number, or by his bringing treſpaſs, or by action on the caſe, in which any commoner may be plaintiff. Black. Com. 3 V. 237, 238.

Surcharge of the Foreſt, (Superoneratio foreſtæ,) Is when a commoner puts on more beaſts in the foreſt than he has a right to. Manwood, part 2. cap. 14. num. 7. And is taken from the writ De ſecunda ſuperoneratione Paſturæ, in the ſame ſenſe when the commoner ſurchargeth. 3 Inſt. fol. 293.

Sur Cui in vita, Is a writ that lies for the heir of a woman, whoſe huſband hath aliened her land in fee, and ſhe neglected to bring the writ Cui in vita for recovery thereof; in this caſe, her heir may bring this writ againſt the tenant after her deceaſe. F. N. B. 193.

Surety, (Vas Vadas) A bail that undertakes for another man in a criminal caſe, or action of treſpaſs, &c. And there is a ſurety of the peace, ſo called, becauſe the party that was in fear is thereby ſecured, by bond or recognizance of the other, and his bail bound for him. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 2. Vide Good Behaviour, and 20 Vin. Abr. 101. See infra.

Surety of the Peace, (Securitas Pacis, ſo called, becauſe the party that was in fear, is thereby ſecured,) Is an acknowledging of a bond to the King, taken by a competent judge of record, for the keeping of the peace. This peace may a juſtice of the peace command, either as a miniſter, when he is commanded thereto by a higher authority; or as a judge, when he doth it of his own power, derived from his commiſſion. Of both theſe, ſee Lamb. Eiren. lib. 2. cap. 2. p. 77. Cowell.

A juſtice of peace may, according to his diſcretion, bind all thoſe to keep the peace, who, in his preſence, ſhall make any affray, or ſhall threaten to kill or beat any perſon, or ſhall contend together with hot words, and all thoſe who ſhall go about with unuſual weapons or attendance, to the terror of the people; and all ſuch perſons as ſhall be known by him to be common barrators; and all who ſhall be brought before him by a conſtable, for a breach of the peace in the preſence of ſuch conſtable; and all ſuch perſons, who, having been before bound to keep the peace ſhall be convicted of having forfeited their recognizance. Lamb. 77, 78. *Bro. 1. Of granting ſurety of the peace by the court of Chancery.

At the Common law it was ſufficient, in order to obtain proceſs for ſurety of the peace from the court of Chancery, if the party who demanded it made oath, that he was in fear of ſome corporal hurt, and that he did not crave the ſame out of malice, and for the ſafety of his body. F. N. B. 79, 80.

But by the 21 Jac. 1. c. 8. All proceſs of the peace ſhall be void, unleſs granted on motion in open court on affidavit in writing.

When articles of the peace are exhibited in the court of Chancery, and oath is made that the ſurety of the peace is not craved by the party through malice, but for the ſafety of his life, a writ of ſupplicavit iſſues, directed to the juſtices of the peace generally, or to ſome one juſtice of the peace, or to the ſheriff, commanding them or him to take ſecurity in the ſum thereon indorſed, and, if the party refuſes to find ſuch ſecurity, to commit him to the next gaol, until he does find ſuch ſecurity. F. N. B. 80. Vide Bro. Off. pl. 39. F. N. B. 81. Bro. Peace, pl. 9. Lamb. 101, 107. 1 Hawk. 129.

If no return is made to the writ of ſupplicavit, the party who ſued it out may have a certiorari, directed to the perſon who ought to make a return, commanding him to certify the writ of ſupplicavit, and what has been done thereupon. F. N. B. 81. 1 Hawk. 129. Lamb. 109.

When a writ of ſupplicavit has iſſued from the court of Chancery againſt any perſon, he may by himſelf, or ſome friend, come into the court of Chancery, and find ſureties there that he will not do any harm to him who hath ſued out the writ; and thereupon he ſhall have a writ of ſuperſedeas, reciting the writ of ſupplicavit, and the ſecurity given, directed to the juſtice or juſtices of the peace, or to the ſheriff, commanding that they ſurceaſe to arreſt him, or compel him to find ſureties, and if they have arreſted him for that cauſe and no other, that they deliver him. F. N. B. 81, 238.

At the Common law the oath of the party was a ſufficient ground for the court of King's Bench to grant the ſurety of the peace; but this cannot, ſince the ſtatute made in the twenty-firſt year of the reign of King James the Firſt, c. 8. be done, unleſs articles of the peace are exhibited in this court upon motion in open court. F. N. B. 79, 80.

Where articles of the peace are exhibited in the court of King's Bench, and oath is made, that the party does not crave the ſecurity of the peace out of hatred or malice, but merely for the preſervation of his life and perſon from danger, an attachment of the peace iſſues to the ſheriff commanding him to take bond for the appearance of the party at the return of the writ to put in bail to the articles in this court; and, if ſuch bond is not given, to commit the party to the next gaol. Comb. 427. Ruſſel's caſe. F. N. B. 79. Where the party againſt whom articles of the peace are exhibited, comes into court to put in bail, the articles muſt be read to him. 6 Mod. 132. The Queen v. Lane.

Robert Parnel having exhibited articles of the peace againſt Sir Thomas Allen, Bart. and three others, an attachment of the peace iſſued againſt them. Before bail was put in, Parnel, in a petition to the court recited ſome of the facts ſworn to in the articles, and endeavoured to explain them. Hereupon the counſel for the defendants moved for a rule to review the articles, and ſome affidavits were read to contradict the facts therein charged. Upon reading the petition, and theſe affidavits, in which the facts were flatly contradicted by five or ſix perſons, a rule was made to ſhew cauſe, why the articles ſhould not be reviewed, and that Parnel ſhould attend upon the day for ſhewing cauſe. He did attend, and the court was, upon the whole, ſo ſatisfied of his having been guilty of perjury, that he was immediately committed for wilful and corrupt perjury; and a rule was made, that all farther proceedings upon the articles ſhould ſtay. The rule was pronounced in theſe terms, "and not to take the "articles off the file, in order to give the defendants an "opportunity, which could not otherwiſe have been "done, of proſecuting Parnel for perjury." MS. Rep. Rex v. Sir Thomas Allen Bart. and others, Hil. 32 Geo. 2. See Lord Vane's caſe, Stra. 1202.

Articles of the peace having been exhibited, by John Brown, againſt Hanna Bennett, and three others, a rule was made, upon reading the affidavits of the defendants, to ſhew cauſe, why theſe articles ſhould not be reviewed. In theſe affidavits it was ſworn, that the defendants did not know any ſuch perſon as Brown the articulant, and, beſides other ſtrong facts ſworn to, it was ſuggeſted, that this was a contrivance of the defendant Bennet's huſband to oppreſs her. No cauſe being ſhewn, the articles were ordered to be taken off the file. MS. Rep. Rex v. Bennet and others. Eaſt. 32 Geo. 2.

If a defendant, through infirmity of age or ſickneſs, be unable to attend the court, you may move for a mandamus to be directed to the juſtices in the country, to take ſuch ſecurity. See Stra. 835. Comb. 427. 4 New Abr. 691. Vide the next clauſe.

It has not of late years been the practice of the court of King's Bench, to refuſe the receiving of articles of the peace, where the articles contained in them is ſufficient for craving the ſurety of the peace: But it ſeems as if that court is now come to a reſolution of putting a ſtop to this vexation of the ſubject; for in a very late caſe, where a motion was made by Borough, to exhibit articles of the peace againſt Wait, the court, it appearing that Wait lived at the Devizes, and that Borough had not endeavoured to obtain ſurety of the peace in the county, unanimouſly refuſed the motion: and Lord Mansfield, Ch. J. ſaid, Apply to the magiſtrates of the county, and if ſurety of the peace is not granted you, come here again. MS. Rep. Borough's caſe, Eaſt. 32 Geo. 2.

When ſurety of the peace is granted by the court of King's Bench, if a ſuperſedeas comes from the court of Chancery, to the juſtices of that court, their power is at an end; and the party as to them diſcharged. Bro. Peace, pl. 17. Sed qu.

3. Of granting ſurety of the peace, by a juſtice of the peace.

A juſtice of the peace may grant the ſurety of the peace, under the authority of the commiſſion of the peace, by which he is impowered to cauſe to come before him all thoſe, who to any one or more of the King's people, concerning their bodies or the firing of their houſes have uſed threats, to find ſufficient ſecurity for the peace, or their good behaviour, towards the King and his people, and if they ſhall refuſe to find ſuch ſecurity, then them in the King's priſons, until they ſhall find ſuch ſecurity, to cauſe to be ſafely kept. Lamb. 36.

Whenever oath is made before a juſtice of peace by any perſon, that he is actually under fear that another will burn his houſe, or do or procure to be done to him ſome corporal hurt, and that he does not crave the ſurety of the peace through malice, but for the ſafety of his life, the juſtice is bound to grant it. Lamb. 83. F. N. B. 79. 1 Hawk. 127. But if the ſecurity of the peace is deſired againſt a peer, the ſafeſt way is to apply to the court of Chancery or King's Bench. 1 Hawk. 127. Lamb. 81. Stra. 473.

If the perſon againſt whom it is demanded, be preſent, the juſtice of the peace may commit him immediately, unleſs he offers ſureties; and a fortiori he may be commanded to find ſureties, and be committed for not doing it. Bro. Mainp. pl. 39. 1 Hawk. 127. But if he is abſent, a warrant for committing him cannot be granted till a warrant is iſſued commanding him to find ſureties; and this warrant, which muſt be under ſeal, ought to ſhew the cauſe for which it is granted, and at whoſe ſuit. Lamb. 85. 1 Hawk. 128.

The juſtice of the peace, who grants this laſt mentioned warrant, may in this caſe make it ſpecial for bringing the party before himſelf only, for, as he has moſt knowledge of the matter, he is beſt qualified to do juſtice in it. 5 Co. 59. Foſter's caſe. 1 Hawk. 128. But if the warrant be in general terms to carry the party before any juſtice of the peace, the officer, who executes it, has his election to carry him before what juſtice he pleaſes, and may carry him to gaol, by virtue of the ſame warrant, if he refuſes to find ſureties before ſuch juſtice; for the warrant has theſe words in it, if he ſhall refuſe to find ſurety, &c. Bro. Falſ. Impriſ. pl. 11. 1 Hawk. 128. 5 Co. 59.

If one, however, who apprehends that the ſurety of the peace will be demanded againſt him, finds ſureties before any juſtice of the peace of the ſame county, either before or after a warrant is iſſued againſt him, he may have a ſuperſedeas from ſuch juſtice; and this ſhall prevent or diſcharge him from an arreſt, under the warrant of any other juſtice, at the ſuit of the ſame party, for whoſe ſecurity he has found ſuch ſecurities. Lamb. 95, 96. 1 Hawk. 128.

The recognizance for keeping the peace, which a juſtice of the peace takes upon complaint below, is to be regulated, as to the number and ſufficiency of the ſureties, the largeneſs of the ſum, and the time it is to continue in force, by the diſcretion of ſuch juſtice. Lamb. 100. 1 Hawk. 129. It has been ſaid that a recognizance taken by a juſtice of peace, to keep the peace as to A. B. for a year, or for life, or without expreſſing any certain time, which ſhall be intended to be for life, altho' no time or place is fixed for the party's appearance, or he is not bound to keep the peace as to all the King's leige people, is good. 1 Hawk. 129. Lamb. 100. But it ſeems to be the ſafeſt way, to bind the party to appear at the next ſeſſions of the peace, and in the mean time to keep the peace as to the King, and all his liege people, and eſpecially as to the party, who has demanded the ſurety of the peace. Lamb. 105. 1 Hawk. 129.

By the 3 H. 7. c. 1. it is enacted, “That every juſtice of the peace within this realm, that ſhall take any recognizance for keeping of the peace, ſhall certify, ſend, or bring the ſame recognizance at the next ſeſſions of the peace, where he is or hath been juſtice, that the party ſo bound may be called.” If one of the ſureties of a man who is bound to keep the peace dies, he ſhall not be obliged to find a new ſurety; for the executors or adminiſtrators of him who is dead are bound by the recognizance. Lamb. 113. Bro. Peace, pl. 17. 1 Hawk. 129.

4. Of forfeiting a recognizance for keeping the peace, and how ſuch recognizance may be diſcharged.

By the 3 H. 7. c. 1. it is enacted, “That if the party who is called at a ſeſſions of the peace, upon a recognizance for keeping the peace, makes default, his default ſhall be then and there recorded, and the ſame recognizance, with the record of the default, be ſent and certified into the chancery, or before the King in his Bench, or into the King's Exchequer.”

He who is bound to keep the peace, and to appear at the ſeſſions, muſt appear there, and record his appearance, otherwiſe his recognizance is forfeited. And altho' the party who craved the ſurety of the peace, comes not to pray that it may be continued, the juſtices may in their diſcretion order it to be continued till another ſeſſions. Bro. Peace, pl. 17. Lamb. 109.

But if an excuſe, which is judged by the court to be a reaſonable one, is given for the non-appearance of a party, it ſeems that the court is not bound peremptorily to record his default, but may diſcharge the recognizance, or reſpite it till the next ſeſſions. 1 Hawk. 130. A recognizance for keeping the peace may be forfeited by any actual violence to the perſon of another, whether it be done by the party bound, or others by his procurement. Lamb. 115, 127. Bro. Peace. pl. 2. 1 Hawk. 130. In ſupport of a rule to ſtay proceedings in a ſcire facias, upon a recognizance for keeping the peace, it was ſaid, that the aſſault, which had been made was not upon him at whoſe requeſt the ſurety of the peace was granted, but upon another perſon. It was held that this makes no difference; and the rule was diſcharged. MS. Rep. Rex. v. Stanly and his bail, Trin. 27 Geo. 2. But a recognizance for keeping the peace, is not forfeited, where an officer, having a warrant againſt one who will not ſuffer himſelf to be arreſted, beats or wounds him in the attempt to take him. Lamb. 128. 1 Hawk. 130.

So it is not forfeited, if a parent in a reaſonable manner chaſtiſes his child; a maſter his ſervant, being actually in his ſervice at the time; a ſchoolmaſter his ſcholar; a gaoler his priſoner; a huſband his wife. 1 Sid. 176, 177. Lamb. 127, 128. Hetl. 149, 150. 1 Hawk. 130. F. N. B. 80.

And, without enumerating all the actual aſſaults, which a man may make upon the perſon of another, and not forfeit his recognizance for keeping the peace, it may be laid down as a principle, that ſuch a recognizance is not forfeited by any aſſault which could have been juſtified in an action, or upon an indictment, for the aſſault. 4 New Abr. 694.

It has been held that a recognizance for the keeping the peace may be forfeited by any treaſon againſt the perſon of the King, or by an unlawful aſſembly in terrorem populi. Lamb. 115. 1 Hawk. 130. Words which tend directly to a breach of the peace, as challenging a man to fight, or threatning to beat one who is preſent, amount to a forfeiture of ſuch recognizance. Lamb. 115. 1 Hawk. 130. Cro. Eliz. 86. A recognizance is likewiſe forfeited by threatning to beat a perſon who is abſent, if the party, who has ſo threatened, does afterward lie in wait to beat him. Lamb. 115. But it is not forfeited by words of heat or choler, as the calling a man knave, liar, or raſcal: For, although ſuch words may provoke a haſty man to break the peace, they do not directly challenge him to do it; nor does it appear, that the ſpeaker intended to carry his reſentment any farther. Cro. Car. 198. Rex. v. Heyward, and his bail. 1 Hawk. 130. Nay, it has been held, that a recognizance for being of good behaviour ſhall not be forfeited for ſuch words; and a fortiori one for keeping the peace ſhall not. Cro. Eliz. 86. King's caſe. Mo. 249. 1 Hawk. 130.

Such recognizance ſhall not be forfeited by a treſpaſs on the lands or goods of another, unleſs it is with force. Cro. Jac. 598. 1 Hawk. 193. A man ſhall not forfeit a recognizance for keeping the peace, who does a hurt to another in playing at cudgels, or ſuch like ſport, by conſent; for theſe ſports, which tend to promote activity and courage, are lawful. Dalt. 284. 1 Hawk. 131. But he who wounds another in fighting with naked ſwords, forfeits his recognizance, becauſe no conſent, nor even the command of the King, can make ſo dangerous a diverſion lawful. Bro. Car. 229. 1 Hawk. 131. If a ſoldier hurts another ſoldier, by diſcharging his gun in exerciſing without ſufficient caution, it is no forfeiture of a recognizance for keeping the peace: For altho' he would be liable in an action for the damage occaſioned by his negligence, this, it not being a wilful breach of the peace, is not within the purport of the recognizance. 1 Hawk. 131. Hob. 134. 2 Rol. Abr. 548.

A court of quarter-ſeſſions cannot in any caſe proceed againſt the parties, for a forfeiture of a recognizance for keeping the peace; but the recognizance muſt be ſent into ſome of the King's courts in Weſtminſter Hall. 1 Hawk. 130. All proceedings upon a forfeited recognizance muſt be by ſcire facias, and not by indictment; becauſe, where a ſcire facias is brought, the parties have an opportunity of pleading any matter in their diſcharge. 1 Roll. Abr. 900. Perrow's caſe. Cro. Jac. 598. 1 Hawk. 130.

The demiſe of the King is a diſcharge of a recognizance for keeping the peace; for the condition being ſervare pacem noſtram, his ſucceſſor cannot take advantage of a breach thereof. Bro. Peace, pl. 15. 1 Hawk. 129. ſedqu.

After ſuch a recognizance is forfeited, the King may pardon the forfeiture: But he cannot releaſe the condition before it is broken; becauſe the party, at whoſe complaint it was taken, has an intereſt therein. Bro. Recogn. pl. 22. Bro. Chart. de Pard. pl. 24.

If no time for the continuance of a recognizance for keeping the peace is therein mentioned, it is perhaps in the power of the court, in which it was taken, or to whom it has been certified, to diſcharge it at their diſcretion. 4 New. Abr. 695.

The uſual practiſe of a court of quarter-ſeſſions is to continue a recognizance for keeping the peace from ſeſſions to ſeſſions, until the court thinks proper to diſcharge it. It is the conſtant courſe of the court of King's Bench, to take a recognizance for twelve months, and, if no indictment is within that time preferred againſt the party bound to keep the peace, it may at the expiration thereof be diſcharged. 12 Mod. 251. Anon. Str. 835. This ſeems alſo to be the practice of the court of Chancery; for, upon a motion to diſcharge a writ of ſupplicavit, it was refuſed; and by my Lord Macclesfield, Chancellor: This application is too early; let the party ſtay till the year is out, and behave himſelf quietly all that time. 2 Wil. 202. Clavering's caſe. Surpluſage, (Fr. Surplus, Lat. Surpluſagium, Corollarium) Is a ſuperfluity or addition more than needful, which ſometimes is the cauſe that a writ abates; but in pleading many times it is abſolutely void, and the reſidue of the plea ſhall ſtand good. *Broke. As a rejoinder is the defendant's anſwer to the replication of the plaintiff; ſo a ſurrejoinder is the plaintiff's anſwer to the defendant's rejoinder. Wood's Inſt. 586. Where a plaintiff in his ſurrejoinder is to conclude to the country, and not with an averment. See Raym. 94. After rejoinder and ſurrejoinder, and rebutter, &c. there may be a demurrer.

Surrender, (Surſum Redditio) Is a deed or inſtrument teſtifying that the particular tenant for life or years, of lands and tenements, doth yield up his eſtate to him that hath the immediate eſtate in remainder or reverſion, that he may have the preſent poſſeſſion thereof; and wherein the eſtate for life or years may merge or drown by the mutual agreement of the parties. Co Litt. 337.

And of ſurrenders there are three kinds; a ſurrender properly taken at common law; a ſurrender of copyhold or cuſtomary eſtates; and a ſurrender improperly taken, as of a deed, a patent, rent newly created, &c.

The ſurrender at common law is the uſual ſurrender, and is of two ſorts, viz. A ſurrender in deed, or by expreſs words in writing; where the words of the leſſee to the leſſor prove a ſufficient aſſent to give him his eſtate back again: And a ſurrender in law being that which is wrought by operation of law, and not actual; as if a leſſee for life or years, take a new leaſe of the ſame land during the term; this will be a ſurrender in law of the firſt leaſe. 1 Inſt. 338. 5 Rep. 11. Perk. 601. And in ſome caſes a ſurrender in law is of greater force than a ſurrender in deed; for if a man makes a leaſe for years to begin at a day to come, this future intereſt cannot be ſurrendered by deed, becauſe there is no reverſion wherein it may drown; but if the leſſee, before the day, take a new leaſe of the ſame land, it is a good ſurrender in law of the former leaſe: And this ſurrender in law by taking a new leaſe, holds good, though the ſecond leaſe is for a leſs term than the firſt; and 'tis ſaid, though the ſecond leaſe is a voidable leaſe, &c. 5 Rep. 11. 6 Rep. 69. 10 Rep. 67. 1 Inſt. 218 Cro. Eliz. 873.

If leſſee for life do accept of a leaſe for years, this is a ſurrender in law of his leaſe for life; if it ſhould be otherwiſe the leaſe for years would be made to no purpoſe, and both the leaſes cannot ſtand together in one perſon, 2 Lill. Abr. 544. Leſſee for twenty-one years takes a leaſe of the ſame lands for forty years to commence after the death of A. B. it is not any preſent ſurrender of the firſt term; but if A. B. dies within the term it is. 4 Leon. 83. A leſſee for years took a ſecond leaſe to commence at Michaelmas next; adjudged this was an immediate ſurrender in law of the firſt, and that the leſſor might enter and take the profits from the time of the acceptance of the ſecond leaſe, until Michaelmas following. Cro. Eliz. 605. If the leſſor make, and leſſee accept a new leaſe, and it is upon condition; this ſhall be a ſurrender in law: And if an aſſignee of tenant for years take a new leaſe, &c. the firſt leaſe will be by law ſurrendered. 1 Inſt. 218, 338. If a woman leſſee for years marries, and afterwards ſhe takes a new leaſe for life without her huſband, this is a ſurrender and extinguiſhment of the term; but if the huſband diſagree, then 'tis revived: Though if the new leaſe had been made to the huſband and wife, then, by acceptance thereof, the firſt leaſe had been gone. Hutt. 7. A leſſor takes the leſſee to wife, then the term is not drowned or ſurrendered; but he is poſſeſſed of the term in her right, during the coverture. Wood's Inſt. 285.

A ſurrender may be of any thing grantable, either abſolute or conditional; and may be made to an uſe, being a conveyance tied and charged with the limitation of a uſe: But it may not be of an eſtate in fee; nor of rights and titles only to other eſtates for life or years; or for part of ſuch an eſtate; nor may one termor regularly ſurrender to another termor; nor can a tenant at will ſurrender any more than he can grant. Perk. 615. Noy's Max. 73. Cro. Eliz. 688. 1 Leon. 303. Where things will not paſs by ſurrender, the deed may enure to other purpoſes, and take effect by way of grant, having ſufficient words. Perk. 588, 624. And a ſurrender may be made by theſe words. Hath ſurrendered, granted, yielded up, and confirmed, &c.

To the making of a good ſurrender in deed of lands the following things are requiſite; the ſurrenderor is to be a perſon able to grant and make a ſurrender, and the ſurrenderee a perſon able to receive and take it; the ſurrenderor muſt have an eſtate in poſſeſſion of the thing ſurrendered, and not a future right; and the ſurrender is to be made to him that hath the next eſtate in remainder or reverſion, without any eſtate coming between; the ſurrenderee muſt have a higher or greater eſtate in his own right, and not in the right of his wife, &c. in the thing ſurrendered, than the ſurrenderor hath, ſo that the eſtate of the ſurrenderor may be drowned therein; (for if leſſee for life ſurrender to him in remainder for years, &c. it is a void ſurrender) there is to be a privity of eſtate between the ſurrenderor and ſurrenderee; and the ſurrenderee muſt be ſole ſeiſed of his eſtate in remainder or reverſion, and not in jointenancy; and the ſurrenderee agree to the ſurrender, &c. 1 Inſt. 338. Perk. 584. 588. 2 Roll. Abr. 494. Noy's Max. 73.

A man who hath a fee-ſimple eſtate cannot ſurrender it, becauſe it cannot be drowned in another eſtate. 12 H. 4. 21. And if a leaſe be made for life or years to A. the remainder for life to B. remainder in fee-tail to C. and the firſt tenant ſurrenders to C. this will not take effect as a ſurrender, by reaſon of the intervening eſtate. Dyer 112. The leſſee for life or years may ſurrender to him that is next in remainder in fee-ſimple or fee-tail: And if leſſee for life ſurrenders his eſtate to one in remainder, that is tenant for his own life; it is a good ſurrender, for a man's eſtate for his own life in judgment of law, is greater than that for another's. And where an eſtate is ſurrendered for life, there needs no livery and ſeiſin, as in a grant. 1 Inſt. 338. Dyer 251, 280.

Yet in ſome caſes an eſtate, &c. may have continuance, though it be ſurrendered; as where leſſee for life makes a leaſe for years, and after doth ſurrender, the term for years doth continue; and ſo of a rent-charge granted by ſuch leſſee, &c. Bro. 47. 1 Inſt. 338. If the leſſee for years rendring rent, ſurrenders his eſtate to the leſſor, hereby the rent is extinct: But if the rent were granted away before the ſurrender, it would be otherwiſe. 8 Rep. 145. Bro. Surrend. 42. Tenant for life is diſſeiſed, or for years ouſted, and before entry, or poſſeſſion gained, he ſurrenders to him in reverſion; this ſurrender is void: And yet if leſſee for years, after his term is begun, before he enters, and when no-body doth keep from him the profits, ſurrenders, it will be good. Perk. ſect. 600.

If there be leſſee for years, the remainder for life, remainder in fee; the leſſee for years may ſurrender to the leſſee during life, and ſo may he to him in the remainder in fee: But if there is tenant for life, the remainder for life, and ſuch remainder in fee; here the ſecond tenant for life cannot ſurrender to him in remainder. Ibid. 605. Sed qu. See Supra and Infra. May it not operate as a grant, if the Remainder-man for life, ſurvive the tenant for life. See the next clauſe.

In caſe of tenant for life, the remainder for life, reverſion in fee; it was a queſtion formerly, whether the remainder man for life, by and with the conſent of the tenant for life, could ſurrender to him in reverſion without deed, only by coming on the land and ſaying, that he did ſurrender to him in reverſion; the court were divided; but two judges held, that if tenant for life and he in remainder for life, ſurrendered to the reverſioner, it ſhould paſs as ſeveral ſurrenders, viz. Firſt of him in remainder to the tenant for life, and then by the tenant for life to him in reverſion. Poph. 137.

If tenant for life grant his eſtate to him in reverſion, this is a ſurrender; and it muſt be pleaded according to the operation it hath in law, or it will not be good. 4 Mod. 151. Though if leſſees for life or years, grant their eſtates to him in remainder or reverſion and a ſtranger; it ſhall enure as a ſurrender of the one half to him in reverſion, and as a grant of the other moiety to the ſtranger. 1 Inſt. 335.

By ſtatute no eſtates of freehold, or of terms for years, ſhall be granted or ſurrendered but by deed in writing, ſigned by the parties, or unleſs by operation in law, &c. 29 Car. 2. c. 2. See Leaſes, and 4 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſ. 6. By virtue whereof, leaſes may be renewed without ſurrender of under-leaſes. Surrenders of Copyhold-Eſtates, ſee Copyhold.

A ſurrender of a prebendary's leaſe upon condition, that if the then prebendary did not within a week after grant a new leaſe for three lives, the ſurrender ſhall be void: Held to be a good ſurrender within the ſtatute. 2 Strange 1201. By 29 Geo. 2. c. 31. Infants, lunaticks, and femes covert, may ſurrender leaſes, in order to renew them, under the direction of a court of equity. See 20 Vin. Abr. 119—146. And Black. Com. 2 V. 326.

Surrender of a Bankrupt. The bankrupt, at the third meeting of the commiſſioners, at fartheſt, which muſt be on the 42d day after the advertiſement in the Gazette, upon notice perſonally ſerved upon him, or left at his uſual place of abode, muſt ſurrender himſelf perſonally to the commiſſioners, and muſt thenceforth in all reſpects conform to the directions of the ſtatutes of bankruptcy; or, in default thereof, ſhall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy, and ſhall ſuffer death, and his goods and eſtate ſhall be diſtributed among his creditors. See Black. Com. 2 V. 481. and Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30.

Surrender of Copyholds. It is the yielding up of the eſtate by the tenant into the hands of the lord, for ſuch purpoſes as in the ſurrender are expreſſed. This method of conveyance is ſo eſſential to the nature of a copyhold eſtate, that it cannot poſſibly be transferred by any other aſſurance. See Black. Com. 2 V. 365, 367, 8.—N. B. The law will in ſome particular caſes ſupply the want of a ſurrender. See Copyhold.

Surrender of Letters Patent, and Offices. A ſurrender may be made of letters patent to the King, to the end he may grant the eſtate to whom he pleaſes, &c. and a ſecond patent for years, to the ſame perſon for the ſame thing is a ſurrender in law of the firſt patent. 10 Rep. 66. Letters patent for years were delivered into Chancery to be cancelled, and new letters patent made for years; but the firſt were not cancelled: It was held that the ſecond were good, becauſe they were a ſurrender in law of the firſt, and the not cancelling was the fault of the Chancery, which ought to have done it. 10 Rep. 66, 67. 2 Lil. Abr. 545. If an officer for life accepts of another grant of the ſame office, it is in law a ſurrender of the firſt grant: But if ſuch an officer takes another grant of the ſame office to himſelf and another, it may be otherwiſe. 1 Ventr. 297. 3 Cro. 198. See Dyer 167, 198. Godb. 415.

Surrogate, (Surrogatus) Is one that is ſubſtituted or appointed in the room of another; as the biſhop or chancellor's ſurrogate, &c.

Surſiſe, (Superſiſa) A word eſpecially uſed in the caſtle of Dover for penalties and forfeitures laid upon thoſe that pay not the duties or rent of Caſtle-ward, at their days limited. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 40. It probably comes from the Fr. Surſiſt, i. e. forbore or neglected. Brit. 52. And Bracton hath it ſo in a general ſignification. Bract. lib. 5.

Survey, Is to meaſure, lay out, or particularly deſcribe a manor, or eſtate in lands; and to aſcertain not only the bounds and royalties thereof, but the tenure of the reſpective tenants, the rent and value of the ſame, &c. In this laſt ſignification, which is according to our law, it is alſo underſtood to be a court; for on the falling of an eſtate to a new lord, conſiſting of manors, where there are tenants by leaſe, and copyholders, a court of ſurvey is generally held; and ſometimes at other times, to appriſe the lord of the preſent terms and intereſts of the tenants, and as a direction on making further grants, as well as in order to improvements, &c. See Comp. Court-Keep.

Surveyor, (Compounded of two Fr. words, Sur. i. e. Super, & Voir, Cernere) Signifies one that has the overſeeing or care of ſome great perſon's lands or works: And there was a court of ſurveyors erected by 33 H. 8. c. 39.

Surveyor of the King's Exchange, An ancient officer belonging to the mint and coinage, mentioned in the ſtatute 9 H. 5. c. 4.

Surveyor General of the King's Manors and Lands, We read of in Cromp. Juriſd. 106.

Surveyors of the Highways. Every pariſh is bound of common right to keep the high roads that go through it, in good and ſufficient repair; unleſs by reaſon of the tenure of lands, or otherwiſe, this care is conſigned to ſome particular private perſon. As it was not (formerly) incumbent on any particular officer to call the pariſh together, and ſet them upon this work; therefore, by Stat. 2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 8. Surveyors of the highways were ordered to be choſen in every pariſh. According to that ſtatute they were originally appointed by the conſtable and churchwardens, but afterwards by Stat. 3 W. & M. c. 12. They were conſtituted by two neighbouring juſtices out of ſuch ſubſtantial inhabitants as had either 10 l. per ann. of their own, or rented 30 l. a year, or were worth 100 l.——Now by the late highway act (an abſtract of which ſee under highway) a liſt of ten perſons, ſo qualified, is to be made out by the pariſh officers and principal inhabitants, from whence the juſtices in ſeſſions are to take one or more.—See Highways, & Stat. 7 Geo. 3. c. 42.

Surveyor of the Navy, An officer appointed over all ſtores; and to ſurvey hulls and maſts of ſhips, &c. Chamberl.

Surveyor of the King's Ordnance. This officer ſurveys the ordnance and proviſions of war, allows bills of debt, and keeps the checks on labourers works, &c.

Surveyors of the Wards and Liberties, Taken away with the courts of wards and liveries. 12 Car. 2. c. 24.

Survivor, (From the Fr. Survivre, and Lat. Supervivo) Is the longer liver of two jointenants, or of any two perſons joined in the right of a thing: He that remaineth alive, after others be dead, &c. Broke 33. Where there are jointennants in any thing, when one dies, (if but two only) the whole goes to his ſurvivor; but if there be more than two, then the part of him who is dead goes among all the ſurvivors. 2 Lill. Abr. 546. Jointenants take by ſurvivorſhip, unleſs they do any act whereby the jointure is ſevered; for then there can be no ſurvivorſhip. Wood's Inſt. 147. See Jointenant and Black Com. 2 V. 183, 399.

Suſana Terræ, Is ſaid to be land worn out with ploughing. Thorn.

Suſpenſe, (Suſpenſio) Is a temporal ſtop, or hanging up, as it were, of a man's right, for a time; and, in legal underſtanding, is taken to be where a rent, or other profit out of lands, by reaſon of the unity or poſſeſſion of the rent, &c. and the land out of which it iſſues, is not in eſſe for a certain time, Et tunc dormiunt, but may be revived or awaked: And it differs from extinguiſhment, which is when it dies or is gone for ever. Co. Lit. 213 A ſuſpenſion of rent is, when either the rent or land is ſo conveyed, not abſolutely and finally, but for a time, after which the rent will be revived again. Vaugh. 109. A rent may be ſuſpended by unity for a time; and if a leſſor does any thing which amounts to an entry on the land, though he preſently depart, yet the poſſeſſion is in him ſufficient to ſuſpend the rent, until the leſſee do ſome act which amounts to a re-entry. Vaugh. 39. 1 Leon. 110. As rent is not iſſuing out of a common, the leſſor's incloſing the common cannot ſuſpend his rent. Cro. Jac. 679. If part of a condition is ſuſpended, the whole condition, as well for payment of the rent, as doing a collateral act, is ſuſpended. 4 Rep. 52. And a thing or action perſonal once ſuſpended, is for ever ſuſpended, &c. Cro. Car. 373. See Extinguiſhment.

Suſpenſion, A cenſure whereby eccleſiaſtical perſons are forbidden to exerciſe their office, or take the profits of their benefices: or where they are prohibited for a certain time in both of them in the whole or in part: Hence is ſuſpenſio ab officio or ſuſpenſio à beneficio, and ab officio & beneficio. Wood's Inſt. 510. There is likewiſe a ſuſpenſion which relates to the laity, i. e. ſuſpenſu ab ingreſſu eccleſiæ, or from the hearing of divine ſervice, &c. In which caſe it is uſed, as in the Canon law, pro minore excommunicatione. Stat. 24 Hen. 8. cap. 12.

Suſpenſion of the Habeas Corpus Act. This is a meaſure that hath been thought neceſſary—But, (as obſerved by Blackſtone 1 V. 136.) The happineſs of our conſtitution is, that it is not left to the executive power to determine when the danger of the ſtate is ſo great, as to render this meaſure expedient. For the parliament only, or legiſlative power, can authorize the crown, by ſuſpending the habeas corpus act for a ſhort and limited time, to impriſon ſuſpected perſons without giving any reaſon for ſo doing. This ought to be done, only in caſes of great emergency.

See what the great Monteſquieu ſaith, alluding to the habeas corpus act, and a temporary ſuſpenſion of it. "If the legiſlature leaves the executive power in poſſeſſion of a right to impriſon thoſe ſubjects who can give ſecurity for their good behaviour, there is an end of liberty; unleſs they are taken up in order to anſwer without delay to a capital crime; in this caſe they are really free, being ſubject only to the power of the law."

But ſhould the legiſlature think itſelf in danger by ſome ſecret conſpiracy againſt the ſtate, or by a correſpondence with a foreign enemy, it might authorize the executive power, for a ſhort and limited time, to impriſon ſuſpected perſons, who in that caſe would loſe their liberty only for a while, to preſerve it for ever." L. 11. c. 6. 1 V. 210, 211. 4to Ed. a Londres.

In L. 12. c. 19. fo. 273. The author ſays, "I acknowledge that the practice of the freeſt nation that ever exiſted, induces me to think that there are caſes in which a veil ſhould be drawn for a while over liberty, as it was cuſtomary to veil the ſtatues of the gods."

Suſ per Coll. On the trial of criminals, the uſage now is for the judge to ſign the calendar, or liſt of all the priſoner's names, with their ſeparate judgments in the margin, which is left with the ſheriff. As for a capital felony, it is written oppoſite to the priſoner's name, "Hanged by the neck;" formerly in the days of Latin. and abbreviation, "Suſ. per coll." for "ſuſpendatur per collum." N. B. This is at the aſſizes. Black. Com. 4 V. 396.

Suſpicion, A perſon may be taken up on ſuſpicion, where a felony is done, &c. but thoſe who are impriſoned for a light ſuſpicion of larceny or robbery, are bailable by ſtatute. 2 Hawk. P. C. 101. And the party being a private perſon, that takes up one on ſuſpicion of felony, muſt do it of his own ſuſpicion, not upon that of another; and he muſt have reaſonable cauſe of it, &c. Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 78.

Suſpiral, (From the Lat. Suſpirare, i. e. ducere Suſpiria) Is uſed for a ſpring of water, paſſing under ground towards a conduit or ciſtern. 35 H. 8. cap. 10.

Suſſex, Its ſhire court, where to be held. 19 H. 7. cap. 24.

Suthdure, (Sax.) i. e. The ſouth door of a church; it was the place where canonical purgation was performed, that is, where the fact charged upon a perſon could not be proved by ſufficient evidence, and the party accuſed came to the ſouth door of the church, and there in the preſence of the people made oath, that he was innocent: And plaints, &c. where heard and determined at the ſuthdure; for which reaſon large porches were anciently built at the ſouth doors of churches. Gervaſ. Dorob. de Reparation. Eccleſiæ Cantuar.'

Swan, (Cygnus) Is a noble bird of game; and a perſon may preſcribe to have game of ſwans within his manor, as well as a warren or park. 7 Rep. 17, 18. A ſwan is a bird royal; and all white ſwans not marked, which have gained their natural liberty, and are ſwimming in an open and common river, may be ſeized to the uſe of the king, by his prerogative: But a ſubject may have a property in white ſwans not marked; as any man may have ſuch ſwans in his private waters, and the property of them belongs to him, and not to the King; and if they eſcape out of his private waters, into an open and common river, he may retake them; though it is otherwiſe if they have gained their natural liberty, and ſwim in open rivers without ſuch purſuit. Game Law, par. 2. p. 152. Stealing ſwans marked and pinioned, or unmarked, if kept in a mote, pond, or private river, and reduced to tameneſs, is felony. H. P. C. 68. And he that ſteals the eggs of ſwans out of their neſts, ſhall be impriſoned a year and a day, and be fined at the King's pleaſure. 11 Hen. 7. c. 17. No fowl can be a ſtray, but a ſwan. 4 Inſt. 280. See Black. Com. 4 V. 235.

Swanherd. The King's ſwanherd, magiſter deductus cygnorum. Pat. 16 R. 2. See King's Swanherd.

Swanimote, or Swainmote, (ſwainmotus, from the Sax. ſwang, i. e. a country ſwain, and gemote, i. e. conventus) ſignifies a court touching matters of the foreſt, held by the charter of the foreſt thrice in the year, before the verderors as judges. Cromp. Juriſd. 108. 3 Hen. 8. c. 18. The ſwainmote is a court unto which all the freeholders in the foreſt do owe ſuit and ſervice; and all the officers of the foreſt are to appear at every ſwainmote, alſo out of every town and village in the foreſt four men and a reeve; or on default ſhall be amerced and diſtrained. Game Law, par. 2. 19, 20. A court of ſwainmote is incident to a foreſt, as the court of pie-powder to a fair, &c. Chart. Foreſt. Hen. 3 See Foreſt, and Sweinmote.

Swan-mark. No perſon may have a ſwan-mark, except he have lands of the yearly value of five marks, and unleſs it be by grant of the King, or his officers lawfully authoriſed, or by preſcription. Stat. 22 E. 4. c. 6. See Game.

Swarf-Money, Is mentioned among cuſtoms and ſervices: And this ſwarf-money is one penny half-penny, paid before the riſing the ſun; the party muſt go three times about the croſs, and ſay the ſwarf-money, and then take witneſs and lay it in the hole; and he is to look well that his witneſs do not deceive him; for if it be not ſo paid, he ſhall pay a great forfeiture, viz. xxx s. and a white bull. This account was found in an old MS. containing the rents due to the Cateſbys in Lodbroke, and other places in Warwickſhire. See Warth Money.

Swath, (Sax. ſwatha) A ſwathe, or as in Kent a ſweath, and in ſome parts a ſworth, is a ſtrait row of cut graſs or corn, as it lies after the ſcithe at the firſt mowing of it. Paroch. Antiq. 399.

Swearing (Imprecatio) Is an offence againſt God and religion, and a ſin of all others the moſt extravagant and unaccountable, as having no benefit or advantage attending it. There are ſeveral good laws and ſtatutes for puniſhing this crime: The 21 Jac. 1. c. 20. enacts, That if any perſon ſhall profanely ſwear or curſe in the preſence of a juſtice of peace, or the ſame ſhall be proved before a juſtice, he ſhall forfeit 1 s. for every offence, to the uſe of the poor, to be levied by diſtreſs; and for want of a diſtreſs, the offender to be ſet in the ſtocks, &c. By the ſtat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 21. If any perſon ſhall profanely curſe or ſwear, and be convicted by the oath of any one witneſs before any juſtice of peace, &c. he ſhall forfeit as follows, viz. Every day-labourer, common ſoldier, common ſailor, and common ſeaman 1 s. Every other perſon under the degree of a gentleman 2 s. Every perſon of or above the degree of a gentleman 5 s. a ſecond offence double, and every other offence treble. If the offence be committed in the hearing of a magiſtrate, he may convict without further proof. If the offence be committed in the hearing of a conſtable, if the offender be unknown to him he ſhall ſecure him and carry him before a juſtice of peace; but if the offender be known to the conſtable, he ſhall make information againſt him before a juſtice of peace.

On information a juſtice is to order the offender to appear, and if on conviction he do not pay or give ſecurity for the penalty, he ſhall be ſent to the houſe of correction for ten days; or being a common ſoldier or ſailor, be ſet in the ſtocks. On default of duty, juſtices to forfeit 5 l. and conſtables 40 s. All convictions are to be written on parchment, and returned to the next ſeſſions. Taſtare, for confirmare. Fleta, lib. 2: c. 61.

Tail, (Fr. taille, from tailler, to cut or limit, Lat. feodom talliatum) Is a limited fee, oppoſed to fee-ſimple: It is that inheritance whereof a man is ſeiſed to him and the heirs of his body begotten or to be begotten: And he that giveth the lands in tail, is called the donor, and he to whom the gift is made, the donee. Litt. 18. All eſtates of inheritance were originally fee-ſimple by the common law; but by the ſtatute de donis condionalibus (St. Weſtminſter, 2. 13 Ed. 1. ſt. 1.) the inheritance was divided, and a particular eſtate created by ſtatute in the donee, which is, what is called an Eſtate-tail, i. e. an eſtate cut and divided from the fee-ſimple; which eſtate is to return to the donor or his heirs after the determination of the tail. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 266.

Before the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. If lands were given to a man and the heirs of his body, it was interpreted to be a fee-ſimple preſently by the gift upon condition that he had iſſue; and if he had iſſue, the condition was ſuppoſed to be performed for three purpoſes, viz. to alien and diſinherit the iſſue; and by the alienation to bar the donor or his heirs of all poſſibility of the reverſion; to forfeit the eſtate for treaſon or felony; and to charge it with rent, &c. But, by this ſtatute, the will and intention of the donor is to be obſerved; as that the tenant in tail ſhall not alien after iſſue had or before, or forfeit or charge the lands longer than for his own life, &c. and the eſtate ſhall remain to the iſſue of the donee, or to the donor or his heirs where there is no iſſue; ſo that whereas the donee had a fee-ſimple before, now he has but an eſtate-tail, and the donor a reverſion in fee expectant upon that eſtate-tail. Co. Lit. 19. In this manner it continued ſome time, though daily experience ſhewed that much miſchief had crept into the law by intailed inheritances, as frauds to creditors, &c. and ſons became diſobedient when they found they could not be diſinherited; wherefore the judges found out a way to bar an eſtate-tail, with remainders over, by a feigned recovery. Ann. 12 Ed. 4. And ſince by a fine to bar the iſſue, by 4 Hen. 7. cap. 20. and 32 Hen. 8. cap. 33. And for that owners of land held in tail were leſs fearful to commit treaſon on account of the eaſy forfeiture; therefore the ſtat. 26 Hen. 8. cap. 13. was made; and men that had intailed lands, could not make improvements, their eſtates being only for life; for this reaſon the ſtat. 32 H. 8. cap. 18. gave them power to make leaſes for twenty-one years, or three lives, &c.

The ſtatute de donis creates no intail, but of ſuch an eſtate which was fee-ſimple at the common law; and deſcendible as a fee-ſimple. 1 Inſt. 19. Lands of inheritance, and all inheritances ſavouring of the realty may be intailed; ſo rents, profits, offices, dignities, &c. which concern lands, or certain places: But if the grant of an inheritance be merely perſonal, or exerciſed with chattels only; it cannot be intailed. 4 Inſt. 87. 7 Rep. A grant of an annuity, to a man and the heirs of his body, is void; and a leaſe for years to a perſon and the heirs of his body is alſo void; though an aſſignment may be made of a leaſe for years, in truſt to permit the iſſue in tail to receive the profits; which is in effect an eſtate tail. 10 Rep. 87.

Eſtates-tail of lands, are general or ſpecial: General tail is where lands or tenements are given to a man and the heirs of his body begotten; or to a woman and the heirs of her body begotten: In this caſe, it is called a general tail, becauſe, whatever woman the man taketh to wife, the iſſue may inherit the lands; and whatſoever man the woman takes to huſband, the iſſue may inherit; or if ſhe have divers huſbands, and have iſſue by every of them, they ſhall inherit one after another, as heirs of her body.

Special tail is when lands and tenements are given to a man and his wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies begotten; in which caſe, no other perſons can inherit but the iſſue that are begotten by him on that particular wife; and it is called ſpecial tail, for that if the wife die, and the huſband marries a ſecond wife, by whom he hath iſſue, ſuch iſſue has no benefit, as they have by the general tail. Lit. 14, 16. Co. Litt. 19, 20.

If lands are given to the huſband and wife, and to the heirs of their bodies, both of them have an eſtate in ſpecial tail; by reaſon of the word heirs, for the inheritance is not limited to one more than the other; Where lands and tenements are given to a man and his wife, and to the heirs of the body of the man, the huſband hath an eſtate in general tail, and the wife an eſtate for life; as the word heirs relates generally to the body of the huſband: And if the eſtate is made to the huſband and wife; and to the heirs of the body of the wife by the huſband begotten; there the wife hath an eſtate in ſpecial tail, and the huſband for term of life only; becauſe the word heirs hath relation to the body of the wife, to be begotten by that particular huſband: If an eſtate be limited to a man's heirs which he ſhall beget on his wife, it creates a ſpecial tail in the huſband; but the wife will be intitled to nothing, &c. Lit. 26, 28. Co. Lit. 22, 26.

Lands given to a man and woman unmarried, and to the heirs of their bodies, will be an eſtate in ſpecial tail; for they may marry. 1 Inſt. 25. 10 Rep. 50. And though lands are given to a married man and another man's wife, and the heirs of their two bodies, it may be a good eſtate-tail, for the poſſibility of their intermarrying. 15 Hen. 7.

A general tail, and a ſpecial tail, may not be created at one and the ſame time; if they are, the general, which is greater, will fruſtrate the ſpecial. 1 Inſt. 28. There are other eſtates-tail within the equity of the ſtatute; as if lands are given to a man and his heirs males or females, of his body begotten, the iſſue male or female ſhall only inherit according to the limitation: By virtue of the ſtatute, here the daughter may be heir by deſcent, though there be a ſon: But in the caſe of a purchaſe, there cannot be an heir female where there is a ſon, who is right heir at law 1 Inſt 24, 164. And whoever will make claim, as heir per formam doni to an eſtate-tail, muſt make his deſcent by ſuch heirs to whom it is limited; if it is to heirs males of the body, there the pedigree is to be derived by heirs males; and, if it be to heirs female, he muſt derive it by heirs female one after another, 1 Inſt. 376. If a gift is to one, and the heirs males of his body, and he hath iſſue a daughter, who hath a ſon, and dies; in this caſe the ſon ſhall not inherit the eſtate-tail, for he cannot make his deſcent by heirs male. Ibid. And where there is no heir to take according to the gift; as when iſſue fails, the land ſhall revert to the donor or deſcend to him that is to have it after the eſtate-tail is ſpent. 1 Inſt. 25.

It is the word body, or other words amounting to it, make the entail: And a gift to the heirs male, or heirs female without any thing further, is a fee-ſimple eſtate, becauſe it is not limited of what body: And hence a corporation cannot be ſeiſed in tail. 1 Inſt. 13, 20, 27.

In a deviſe or laſt will, an eſtate-tail may be created without the word body; alſo begotten ſhall be ſupplied and neceſſarily intended. Ney's Max. 101. 1 Inſt. 26. If one gives lands to a man and his iſſue, or children of his body, without the words, his heirs, to convey the inheritance, he has but an eſtate for life: Though ſuch words may be good enough to convey the inheritance in a will; as eſtates-tail by deviſe are always more favoured in law, than eſtates-tail created by deeds. 1 Inſt 20.

It has been held that if the word iſſue is a limitation, it is an intail; but if it is by way of deſcription who ſhall take, it is only an eſtate for life. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 263. The word heirs is neceſſary to create an eſtate-tail and inheritance by deed; and where an uſe was limited to A. B. and to his heirs males, lawfully to be begotten; theſe laſt words imply that it muſt be heirs males of his body, becauſe no other heir male can inherit by virtue of his grant, but ſuch who are lawfully begotten by the grantor. 7 Rep. 41. If a man makes a feoffment to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to the heirs males of his body, this is an eſtate tail executed in him; and ſo it is if he covenanted to ſtand ſeiſed in the ſame manner. 1 Mod. 159.

By a marriage ſettlement and fine levied, &c. to the uſe of the husband and wife, for their joint lives; remainder to the heirs of the body of the wife by the husband to be begotten, remainder (the wife ſurviving the huſband) to her for life, remainder to the right heirs of the husband: this was held to be an eſtate-tail, executed in the wife. Raym. 127. 3 Salk. 338. Land is conveyed to the uſe of a man and his wife for their lives, and after to their next iſſue male in tail, then to the uſe of the husband and wife, and of the heirs of their bodies begotten, they having no male iſſue; by this huſband and wife are tenants in ſpecial tail executed, and when they have iſſue male, they will be tenants for life, remainder to their ſon in tail, the remainder to them in ſpecial tail. 1 Inſt. 28.

Where a perſon having an eſtate in fee, conveys it by leaſe and releaſe to the uſe of himſelf for life, with remainder to truſtees for their lives, and remainder to the heirs of his body; he hath an eſtate-tail in him; but he is only tenant for life in poſſeſſion: It would be otherwiſe if there had been no intermediate eſtate in the truſtees for their lives. 2 Ld. Raym. 855. A man ſeiſed of land in fee, makes a gift of it in tail, or leaſe for life, remainder to the right heirs male of the body of the donor, this remainder, it is ſaid, will be a fee-ſimple, and not an eſtate-tail. Dyer 156. If the gift or grant of the land be to J. S. and his heirs, to hold to him and the heirs of his body, &c here he will have an eſtate in tail, and a fee-ſimple upon it. Lit. ch. 2. 1 Inſt. 21. Lands are given to two brothers, &c. and to the heirs of their bodies begotten; during their lives they ſhall have joint eſtates, ſo that the ſurvivor will have all for his life; and after their deaths, their heirs have eſtates in general tail, by moieties in common one with another. 1 Inſt 25. 1 Rep. 140.

When a remainder is limited to two, and the heirs male of their bodies, they have not joint but ſeveral eſtates-tail: And between baron and feme, it is ſaid, ſeveral moieties may be of an eſtate-tail, as well as of a fee-ſimple. Cro. Eliz. 220. Moor 228. 2 Lil. Abr. 551. A feoffment was made to the uſe of the feoffor for life, remainder to W. R. his ſon and his heirs; and for want of iſſue of him, remainder to the right heirs of the feoffor; adjudged W. R. hath only an eſtate in tail; for though the firſt words of the ſentence, viz. to his ſon and heirs, make a fee ſimple, the ſubſequent words in the ſame ſentence, i. e. and for want of iſſue of him, make an eſtate-tail, by qualifying and abridging the ſame. 5 Mod. 266. 3 Salk. 337. See Hetl. 57. Dyer 334.

If a perſon gives land to A. for life, and, after his death without iſſue, then to another perſon; though here is an expreſs eſtate for life given to A. the ſubſequent words make an eſtate-tail: But where lands are deviſed to A. during life, the remainder to truſtees, remainder to his firſt ſon, &c and if A. dies without iſſue, then, &c. The limitation upon the deviſe's death, it is ſaid, will not give an eſtate in tail to A. but it ſhall be here intended, that if he died without having a ſon. 1 P. Williams, 605. A father having two ſons, deviſed his lands to his youngeſt ſon, and if he died without heirs, then to his eldeſt ſon and his heirs; the youngeſt ſon had an eſtate-tail, becauſe the deviſe to him, and if he died without heirs, is the ſame as if the teſtator had deviſed it in theſe words, viz. If he die without heirs of his body; for otherwiſe the remainder limited to the eldeſt ſon had been void, as the youngeſt ſon cannot die without heirs, ſo long as the eldeſt is living. 1 Rol. Abr. 836.

In ejectment the caſe was, the father, having three ſons, deviſed his lands to his ſecond ſon, and his heirs for ever; and for want of ſuch heirs, then to the right heirs of the father; then the father died, and his ſecond ſon entered, and died without iſſue, living the eldeſt ſon: It was reſolved, that the ſecond ſon had but an eſtate-tail, and that the deviſe over by theſe words, and for want of ſuch heirs, is void in point of limitation, for the teſtator's intent was that the lands ſhould deſcend from himſelf, and not from his ſecond ſon; and the words, want of ſuch heirs, could import no other than want of iſſue, &c. ſo that the eldeſt ſon takes by deſcent in this caſe, and not by the will. 1 Salk. 233.

A perſon deviſed land to his wife for life, remainder to his ſon, and his heirs for ever; and, if he died without heirs, the ſame to remain to his two daughters: In this caſe it was held in equity, that the rule is, where a remainder over is to one, who may be the deviſee's heir at law, ſuch limitation will be good, and the firſt conſtrued an eſtate-tail; for the generality of the word heirs, ſhall be reſtrained to heirs of the body, ſince the teſtator could not but know that the deviſee would not die without an heir, while the remainder-man, or any of his iſſue, continued: But where the ſecond limitation is to a ſtranger, it is merely void, and the firſt is a fee-ſimple. Talbot's Chan. Ca. 2.

An eſtate tail cannot merge by the acceſſion of the fee-ſimple to it: But it has been adjudged, that two fees immediately expectant upon one another, (as where a man is tenant in tail, and remainder in fee to the tenant in tail) cannot ſubſiſt in the ſame perſon; and the ſtatute of Weſtm. having made eſtates-tail a kind of particular eſtates, they muſt, like all other ſuch eſtates, be ſubject to merger and extinguiſhment, when united with the abſolute fee. 8 Rep. 74. 1 Salk. 338. If there be tenant in tail, remainder in tail, and tenant in tail enfeoffs the reverſioner in fee; it is a diſcontinuance: And tenants in tail can make no greater eſtate than for their own lives unleſs it be by leaſe, &c. according to the ſtat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. 1 Rep. 140.

If tenant in tail bargain and ſell lands to another and his heirs, or make a leaſe and releaſe to the uſe of himſelf for life, with remainder over to another, &c. Theſe eſtates may be avoided by entry of the iſſue in tail. Farreſt. Mo. Ca. 23, 28. Eſtates-tail are uſually created upon ſettlements: Though an agreement to intail, is no intail; for no agreement ſhall bind the iſſue in tail, where there is a firſt intail, without a fine, Chanc. Rep. 236. It is incident to an eſtate-tail, to be diſpuniſhable of Waſte; that the wife of the donee ſhall be endowed; the huſband of a feme donee, be tenant by the courteſy; and that the tenant in tail may ſuffer a common recovery, &c. and therefore conditions to reſtrain any of theſe, are void. 1 Inſt. 224. 10 Rep. 38.

As by ſtatute it is incident to eſtates-tail to make leaſes; ſo by cuſtom, it is to grant lands by copy of court roll, &c. Tenant in tail of a truſt may bind his heir by articles in equity. See Eſtate, Recovery, 20 Vin. Abr. tit. Tayle, and Black. Com. 2 V. 112, 113, 114.

Tail after Poſſibility of Iſſue extinct, Is where lands and tenements are given to a man and his wife in ſpecial tail, and either of them dies without iſſue had between them; the ſurvivor hath an eſtate in tail after poſſibility of iſſue, &c. Alſo if they have iſſue, and the iſſue dies without iſſue, whereby there is none left who may inherit by force of the intail, the ſurvivor of the donees hath an eſtate-tail after poſſibility. Litt. 32. The eſtate of this tenant muſt be created by the act of God, viz. by the death of either party without iſſue; none can have this eſtate but one of the donees, or a donee in ſpecial tail; for a donee in general tail may by poſſibility have iſſue. Litt. 32. 1 Inſt. 28. 11 Rep. 80. And if one gives lands to a man and his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies in ſpecial tail, and they live till each of them are one hundred years old, and have no iſſue; yet doth the law ſee no impoſſibility of having children, and they continue tenants in tail: But if the wife die without iſſue, there the law ſeeth an apparent impoſſibility. 1 Inſt. 28.

Tenants in tail after poſſibility of iſſue extinct, are not puniſhable for waſte; as are tenants for life: but ſuch tenants, or tenants by the curteſy, &c. may not ſuffer a recovery. And though they have more privileges than tenant for life hath; as if they alien the land, he in reverſion cannot have a writ of entry in caſu conſimili; and they need not require aid, &c. yet as to the quantity of their eſtates, they have no privilege above eſtates for life: For if ſuch tenant in tail, after ſuch poſſibility, make a feoffment of his land, he in reverſion may enter for the forfeiture, &c. 1 Inſt. 27, 28. 9 Rep. 139. Lit. Sect. 34. A tenant in tail cannot be ſeiſed to any uſe expreſſed; for his eſtate is ſo fixed, that none can execute the uſe: And where tenants in tail general or ſpecial, &c. die without iſſue, the donor or his heirs may enter. Jenk. Cent. 195. Litt. 18. If tenant in tail in remainder, be attainted of treaſon, &c. the King ſhall have the land; for it may not be in abeyance, nor in any other, he not being dead, but in law: The chief lord cannot have it, by reaſon the tenant for life is alive; ſo neither he that is in reverſion, &c. and it cannot revert, before the tenant in tail die without iſſue. 2 Leon. 123. See Black. Com. 3 V. 124.

Taint, (Fr. teinct. i. e. infectus, tinctus) Is taken ſubſtantively for a conviction; or adjectively for a perſon convicted of treaſon or felony. See Attaint.

Taking, felonious. A felonious taking muſt be done, animo furandi: Or, as the civil law expreſſes it, lucri cauſa, i. e. with an intent to ſteal. The circumſtances muſt be left to the due and attentive conſideration of the court and jury. Black. Com. 4 V. 230, 232.

Taking, unlawful. When I once have gained a rightful poſſeſſion of any goods or chattels, either by a juſt occupancy, or by a legal transfer, whoever, either by fraud or force, diſpoſſeſſes me of them is guilty of a tranſgreſſion againſt the laws of ſociety, which is a kind of ſecondary law of nature, *Black. Tale, or count. The firſt of pleadings, or mutual altercations between the plaintiff and defendant, is the declaration, narratio, or count, anciently called the Tale; in which the plaintiff ſets forth the cauſe of his complaint at length. Black. Com. 3 V. 293.

Tales, (Lat.) Is uſed in the law for a ſupply of men impanelled on a jury and not appearing, or on their appearance challenged as not indifferent; when the judge upon motion orders a ſupply to be made by the ſheriff, &c. of one or more ſuch perſons preſent in court, equal in reputation to thoſe that were impanelled, to make up a full jury, which he could do by the common law; and this is by the ſtatutes 35 H. 8. c. 6. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 32. 14 Eliz. c. 9. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 32, &c.

Tales are of two ſorts, i. e. tales de circumſtantibus, and a decem tales; a tales de circumſtantibus is where a full jury do not appear at the niſi prius, or ſo many are challenged that there is not a full jury; then, on the prayer of the plaintiff's counſel or attorney, the judge will grant this Tales, which the ſheriff returns immediately in court: A decem Tales is when a full jury doth not appear at a trial at bar, and is a writ to the ſheriff apponere decem Tales. 10 Rep. 102. Finch. 414. 2 Roll. Abr. 67.

Upon a trial at bar, if the jury do not appear full, the court cannot grant a Tales de circumſtantibus, but will grant a decem Tales, returnable in ſome convenient time the ſame term, to try the cauſe. 2 Lill. Abr. 552. And a Tales de circumſtantibus ought not to be in an aſſiſe, only at niſi prius; the decem Tales muſt be awarded in an aſſiſe. Cro. Car. 341. A plaintiff or defendant may have a Tales de circumſtantibus; and the ſtatutes which authoriſe juſtices of niſi prius to award a Tales de circumſtantibus, extend as well to capital caſes as to others; but ſuch a Tales cannot be prayed for the King upon an indictment, or criminal information, without a warrant from the attorney general, or an expreſs aſſignment from the court before which the inqueſt is taken; though it may be awarded on an information qui tam, &c. becauſe of the intereſt which the proſecutor hath in ſuch proſecutions. 2 Hawk. P. C. 409. 3 Salk. 339. A Tales is not to be granted where the whole jury is challenged, &c. but the whole panel, if the challenge be made good, is to be quaſhed, and a new jury returned; for a Tales conſiſts but of ſome perſons to ſupply the places of ſuch of the jurors as were wanting of the number of twelve, and is not to make a new jury. 2 Lil. Abr. 252.

If but one juror appears on the principal panel, the court may order a tales by the ſtatute 35 H. 8. c. 6. 10 Rep. 102. And if upon a habeas corpora, or a diſtringas jur. none of the jury appear, it is ſaid a decem tales ſhall be awarded: But it ſhall not be had upon a venire fac'. Cro. Eliz. 502. Moor 528. See Dyer 245. 2 Roll. Rep. 75. At the aſſiſes, one of the principal panel appeared, and no more, and a tales was awarded, the title whereof was Nomina decem talium, and under it eleven were returned; this was notwithſtanding held good; for it is only a miſpriſion of the clerk, and decem was ſtruck out, and then the title was Nomina talium, &c. And it was adjudged, that if, after a tales granted, the principal panel ſhould be quaſhed, the tales ſhould ſtand good, and more be added, &c. 4 Rep. 103. 2 Cro. 316. 3 *Nelſ. And by this act the qualification of taleſmen is to be 5 l. per annum freehold eſtate, &c. The tales de circumſtantibus, is in ſome meaſure taken away, or rendered uſeleſs, by the late ſtatute for regulating of juries. 3 Geo. 2. c. 25. ſ. 8. Talionis Lex. The law of Retaliation. This can never be in all caſes (indeed but in few) an adequate or permanent rule of puniſhment. In the caſe of murder, the puniſhment is death—But as to the ſubject, it is too prolix to treat here, fully. We muſt therefore refer to *Black. The other are tallies of reward or allowance, being made to ſheriffs of counties as a recompence for ſuch matters as they have performed to their charge, or ſuch money as is caſt upon them in their accounts of courſe, but not leviable, &c. 27 Hen. 8. c. 11. 33 & 34 H. 8. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 4. In the Exchequer there is a talley court, where the two deputy chamberlains of the Exchequer attend, and the talley cutter: And a talley is generally the king's acquittance for money paid or lent, and has written on it words proper to expreſs on what occaſion the money is received, Lex Conſtitut. 205.

Tam Quam, Is in nature of a qui tam, being where a man proſecutes as well for the king as for himſelf, on an information for breach of ſome penal law, whereby any penalty is given, one part to the king, the other, or another part, to the party that ſues. In every caſe where the ſtatute prohibits a thing, and doth not annex a penalty to the committing thereof, the party offending may be indicted for a contempt againſt the ſtatute; or action lies againſt him for breach of it, which muſt be brought tam pro domino rege, quam pro ſeipſo, as there is a fine to be paid to the king. 2 Inſt. 118. *Cro. Tax, (Taxa, from the Gr. Τάξις, i. e. Ordo, Tributum) A tribute or impoſition laid upon the ſubject, which being certainly and orderly rated, was wont to be yearly paid into the King's Exchequer: And it differs from what is commonly called a ſubſidy, in this, That it is always certain as it is ſet down in the Exchequer-book, and levied in general of every town, and not particularly of every man, &c. See Subſidy, and Raſtall's Abridgment, tit. Taxes, Tenths, Fifteenths, Subſidies, &c. and 4 Inſt. 26, 33.

It is ſaid that in ancient times, taxes were impoſed by the King at his pleaſure; but King Edw. 1. bound himſelf and his ſucceſſors, in the 25th year of his reign, that from that time forward no tax ſhould be laid upon the ſubject, without the aſſent of the lords and commons in parliament. Stat. 25 Ed. 1. c. 5. But although taxes, which are for the defence of the realm, cannot be impoſed but by act of parliament; yet the crown has a right to aſk them upon any emergency, and therefore it is held they have a virtual exiſtence always, though no actual one. In the 14th year of Ed. 3. an aid was granted to the King by the parliament; and anno 5 R. 2. a royal aid for keeping the ſea, and preſerving of rights: And alſo a ſubſidy of 1 s. in 20 s. on goods, and aliens to pay 2 s. &c. was granted by 3 & 4 Ed. 6. Beſides fifteenths and tenths, payable by the temporality and clergy in two or three years, &c. And the way of taxing was formerly by tenths and fifteenths; then by ſubſidies, afterwards by royal aids, and at laſt by a pound rate; the former were all upon the perſon and perſonal eſtate, and were much the ſame; but the pound-rate was upon lands and rents. Anno 18 Ed. 3. a valuation was made of all the towns in England; and returned into the Exchequer, and this became the ſtanding rule for taxing every town (viz.) When a tax was given the officers of the Exchequer preſently knew to how much it amounted for every town, and the inhabitants taxed the landlords, and occupiers of lands, and they were charged and paid their proportion, &c.

A ſubſidy was granted anno 32 H. 8. and this was a tax upon the perſon, both for lands and goods, and payable where the perſons lived; and this continued till the 15 Car. 1. and about two years afterwards the firſt aſſeſſment was made upon lands and rents, according to a pound-rate. 2 Inſt. 76, 77. 3 Salk. 340. In the 16 & 17 Car. 1. Taxes were granted for relief of, and diſbanding the army, &c. And 13 Car. 2. c. 3 & 4. The ſum of 1,260,000 l. was granted for eighteen months at 70,000 l. per month, charged on the ſeveral counties by lieutenants, for ammunition for the militia, and ſeveral aids were granted, one of 2,477,000 l. for fitting out a navy and maintenance of wars, &c. in the years 16, 17, 18, 19 & 25 Car. 2. Alſo a free and voluntary preſent was granted to King Charles 2. but it was ordained that the ſame ſhould not be drawn into example.

King James 2. had aids and taxes granted him by parliament; and, after the Revolution, heavy taxes were neceſſarily laid on lands and perſonal eſtate, in the reigns of King William 3. and Queen Anne, to defend the crown and kingdom againſt the efforts of the King of France, in favour of the pretended Prince of Wales, and ſecure the proteſtant ſucceſſion in the line of his majeſty King George. Since this neceſſity joined to others, land taxes have been annually granted of 1 s. 2 s. 3 s. and 4 s. in the pound, as the preſent exigences have required; enacted to be levied by commiſſioners on the ſeveral counties, cities, towns, &c. And in reſpect of this tax, it is not the quantity but the yearly value of lands that muſt be obſerved; the farmers or occupiers of the land are to be charged, and deduct it out of their rents to the landlords; and a man may be rated for goods as well as lands, but not for both; and in caſe of a rate on goods, the charge muſt be on the perſon: The commiſſioners are to aſcertain the ſeveral proportions of the tax, to be charged on every hundred or diviſion; and appoint fit perſons to be aſſeſſors and collectors in every pariſh to aſſeſs and levy the money, which when received is to be paid to Receivers general, and by them returned to the Exchequer, &c.

If any perſon refuſe to pay the tax, the collectors may levy it by diſtreſs and ſale of their goods; but if they are over-rated, they ſhall be relieved on appeal to the commiſſioners, who have power to charge the ſame on others, as they ſhall ſee cauſe, and in caſe of deficiency to make a re-aſſeſſment: aſſeſſors, neglecting their duty, are to be fined not exceeding 40 l. And collectors detaining the money, ſhall be impriſoned, and their eſtates ſeized and ſold, &c. If a general receiver neglects to return the money by him received, he is liable to the penalty of 500 l. And where there is any failure in raiſing and paying the ſums of money charged on any county, proceſs may iſſue againſt the commiſſioners for their neglect, &c. By other later ſtatutes, when lands, &c. are aſſeſſed at more than an equal pound-rate, the commiſſioners, upon complaint made in twenty days, ſhall abate it; and re-aſſeſs ſuch abatements within the whole hundred, &c. or on perſons under-rated, ſo as the ſum charged be fully paid. And where aſſeſſors have omitted to charge themſelves to the land-tax for their own eſtates, commiſſioners by ſtatute have been empowered to ſummon and examine them or others on oath, and, upon diſcovery thereof, to award ſatisfaction to be made to the collectors. If lands or houſes are unoccupied, whereby the pariſh is obliged to make good the tax, the collectors at any time after, may enter and diſtrain, and ſell the diſtreſs in four days, and the money ſhall be diſtributed proportionably to the parties who paid for ſuch lands, &c

In caſe any perſons, by changing their reſidence, eſcape the taxation, on proof before two of the commiſſioners, or a juſtice of peace, within one year, they are to be charged at treble the value, to be levied by diſtreſs, &c. And in the taking theſe diſtreſſes, collectors may break open houſes, cheſts, &c. in the day-time, upon a warrant under the hands of two commiſſioners, and calling conſtables to their aſſiſtance: Alſo if any perſon refuſe to pay the tax, by the ſpace of ten days after demand, or convey away his goods, &c. the commiſſioners may commit him to the common gaol, till payment. Papiſts are doubly taxed; but the colleges in the univerſities are exempted from paying any thing to this tax: There is a poundage fee for collecting the tax, of 3 d. per pound to the collectors, 2 d. per pound to the general receiver, and 1 d. half-penny per pound to the commiſſioners clerks. Stat. 1 Geo. 1, &c. See 12, 13, & 15 Geo. 2. The above ſtatutes, or land-tax acts, where 2 s. in the pound is granted, have generally clauſes of loan of one million, and when the tax is 4 s. a pound, two millions for public uſes; likewiſe in the malt-tax acts, there is ſuch clauſe of loan for 750,000 l. at 3 or 4 per cent. intereſt, the loans to be allowed by the commiſſioners of the treaſury, &c.

Although an exciſeman exerciſe his office in two counties, yet he ſhall be taxed for his ſalary in that county where he lives. 1 Strange 417. Lands were let at 120 l. per annum, but by improvements were worth 150 l. per annum, and taxed accordingly; the tenant ſhall not deduct the whole land-tax, but only in proportion, as 120 l. bears to 150 l. 2 Strange 1191. See Black. Com. 1 V. 139, 169, 307. 1 V. 331. 4 V. 419, 432.

The juſtices are impowered to call witneſſes before them on ſuſpicion that the regulation is broken through, and on conviction to commit the offenders. Alſo the quarter-ſeſſions in London, are enabled to make new regulations, if requiſite, as to wages and hours of work. Maſters within the limits employing men out of the limits, to evade the act, are to forfeit 500 l. a moiety to the King, the other to the informer. See the Act.

Tea, Is a pleaſant ſort of liquor, of late much uſed in England, and introduced from China and the Eaſt-Indies, being made of the product of a ſhrub growing in thoſe parts: It is mentioned in the Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 15. And perſons mixing, with tea leaves, the leaves of other trees and ſhrubs, are liable to a penalty of 10 l. &c. by 4 Geo. 2. c. 14. The Eaſt-India company are to have allowance and drawback, on exporting tea. Stat. 6 Geo. 2. c. 38. By the Stat. 18 Geo. 2. c. 26. Glanvil, lib.* 5. c. 2.

Technical words in indictments. In ſome caſes particular words of art muſt be uſed, which are ſo appropriated by the law to expreſs the preciſe idea which it entertains of the offence, that no other words, however ſynonymous they may ſeem, are capable of doing it. Thus, in treaſon, the facts muſt be laid to be done "treaſonably, and againſt his allegiance," elſe the indictment is void. In indictments for murder, it is neceſſary to ſay, that the party indicted "murdered," not "killed" or "ſlew" the other. In all indictments for felonies, the adverb "feloniouſly" muſt be uſed; and for burglaries, "burglariouſly:" and all theſe to aſcertain the intent. In rapes, the word "raviſhed" is neceſſary, and muſt not be expreſſed by any periphraſis; in order to render the crime certain. So in larcenies alſo, the words "feloniouſly took and carried away," are neceſſary to every indictment; for theſe only can expreſs the very offence. Black. Com. 4 V. 302.

Templars, or Knights of the Temple, (Templarii) Was a religious order of knighthood, inſtituted about the year 1119, and ſo called becauſe they dwelt in part of the buildings belonging to the Temple at Jeruſalem, and not far from the ſepulchre of our Lord. They entertained chriſtian ſtrangers and pilgrims charitably, and in their armour led them through the Holy-Land, to view the ſacred monuments of Chriſtianity, without fear of infidels; for at firſt their profeſſion was to defend travellers from highwaymen and robbers. This order continuing and increaſing for near two hundred years, was far ſpread in Chriſtendom, and particularly here in England. But at length ſome of them at Jeruſalem, falling away (as ſome authors report) to the Saracens from Chriſtianity, or rather becauſe they grew too potent and rich, the whole order was ſuppreſſed by Clement Quintus, anno 1307, by the council of Vienna 1312, and their ſubſtance given partly to the knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, and partly to other religious. Caſſan. de gloria mundi, par. 9. Conſid. 4. And ſee Anno 1 Edw. 1. cap. 24. Theſe flouriſhed here in England from the time of Henry the ſecond, till they were ſuppreſſed. Of theſe knights read Mr. Dugdale's Antiquities of Warwickſhire, fol. 706. In ancient records they were alſo called Fratres Militiæ Templi Solomonis. Mon. Angl. 2. par. fol. 554. b. About nine years after their inſtitution, they were ordered by a council held at Triers, to wear a white garment, and afterwards, in the pontificate of pope Eugenius, they wore a red croſs on their garments. Temporalties of Biſhops, Are the revenues, lands, tenements, and lay-fees, belonging to biſhops, as they are barons and lords of parliament; all things which a biſhop hath by livery from the King, as manors, lands, tithes, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 881. It was a cuſtom formerly, that when biſhops received from the King their temporalties, they did by a ſolemn form in writing renounce all right to the ſame by virtue of any proviſion from the Pope, and acknowledged the receipt of them only from the King; which cuſtom continued from the reign of Edw. 1. to the time of the reformation: And this practice began by occaſion of a Bull of Pope Gregory 8. wherein he conferred the ſee of Worceſter on a certain biſhop, and committed to him adminiſtrationem ſpiritualium & temperalium epiſcopatus prædict'. Anno 31 Edw. 1. Tenancies, Are houſes or places for habitation, held of another. 23 Eliz. c. 4.

Tenant, (Tenens, from the Latin tenere, to hold,) Signifies one that holds or poſſeſſes lands or tenements by any kind of right, either in fee, for life, years, or at will. The word in law is uſed with divers additions, as tenant in dower, which is ſhe that poſſeſſes land by virtue of her dower. Kitchin. fol. 160. Tenant per ſtatute-merchant, that holds land by virtue of a ſtatute forfeited to him. Ibid. fol. 172. Tenant in frank marriage. Ib. fol. 158. He that holds lands or tenements by virtue of a gift thereof made to him upon marriage between him and his wife. Tenant by the curteſy. Id. fol. 195. He that holds for his life, by reaſon of a child begotten by him of his wife, being an inheritrix, and born alive. Tenant by elegit, that holds by virtue of the writ called an elegit. Tenant in mortgage, that holds by means of a mortgage. Tenant by the verge in ancient demeſne (Id. fol. 81.) is he that is admitted by the rod in the court of ancient demeſne. Tenant by copy of court-roll is one admitted tenant of any lands, &c. within a manor, which time out of mind have been demiſable, according to the cuſtom of the manor. Weſt. Symbol. part. 1. lib. 2. ſect. 646. Tenant by charter is he that holdeth by feoffment in writing, or other deed. Kitchin, fol. 57. Tenants in common, Are ſuch as hold lands for life or years, by ſeveral titles, or by one title and ſeveral rights; and as jointenants have one joint freehold, ſo tenants in common have divers freeholds. 1 Inſt. 188. If a conveyance is made to two perſons, habendum the one moiety to one and his heirs, and the other moiety to the other, &c. it is a tenancy in common and the heirs and executors of tenants in common ſhall have their parts or ſhares; and not the ſurvivors, as in caſe of jointenants. 2 Lill. Abr. 559. Tenants in common know not their own part, but take the profits in common: One tenant in common cannot bring action of treſpaſs againſt another tenant in common; but one ſuch tenant may bring waſte againſt his partner, &c. 3 Leon. 307. 2 Lill. 561. At Common law tenants in common were not compellable to make partition; though they are by the Stat. 31 H. 8. c. 1. See Jointenant.

Tenant to the præcipe, Is he againſt whom the writ of præcipe is to be brought in ſuing out a recovery. 3 Kep.

Tende Seems to ſignify as much as tender, or offer; it is mentioned in our old books, as to tend a traverſe, an averment, &c. Britton, c. 76. Staundf. Prærog. 16.

Tender, (Fr. Tendre) Is the offering of money, or any other thing in ſatisfaction, or circumſpectly to endeavour the performance of a thing; as a tender of rent is to offer it at the time and place when and where it ought to be paid: Alſo it is an act done to ſave the penalty of a bond before action brought, &c. Terms de Ley 557. Tender of rent on any part of the land, or at any time of the laſt day of payment, will ſave the condition for that time, though the landlord refuſe it: But when rent is tendered, the leſſor may after bring debt; though he cannot recover any damages; the leſſee's being ready to pay excuſes the damages, but doth not debar the other of his rent. 1 Inſt. 200. Lit. Rep. 33, 34. 3 Salk. 344. A tender of rent to ſave the forfeiture muſt be of the whole rent due, without any deduction of taxes or other payments; unleſs it be ſo agreed, &c. ſtoppage being no payment. 1 Inſt. 202.

Tender of money on a bond, is to be made to the perſon of the obligee at the day appointed, to ſave the penalty and forfeiture of the bond, and it ought to be done before witneſſes; though, if the obligor be ſued afterwards, he muſt ſtill pay it: But if the obligor be to do any collateral thing, or which is not part of the obligation, as to deliver a horſe, &c. and the obligor offer to do his part, and the obligee refuſeth it, the condition is performed and the obligation diſcharged for ever. 1 Inſt. 207, 208. A ſum awarded by an award, was loſt by the tender; it being a collateral thing. 3 Lev. 277. On award, that the defendant ſhould pay money on ſuch a day, and at ſuch place; the defendant pleaded, that he tendered the money at the day and place, and becauſe he did not ſet forth that he continued there ready to pay it at the laſt inſtant of the day till after ſun-ſetting, &c. it was held ill. 2 Cro. 243.

Where time and place of doing an act is made certain by agreement of the parties, and they both meet accordingly; he who pleads a tender, muſt alſo plead a refuſal of the other party to accept; otherwiſe ſuch plea will be ill upon a demurrer, but not after verdict; and if the plaintiff be abſent, that is to be ſet forth, and that the defendant was at the time and place, & obtulit ſolvere, &c. 2 Salk. 623.

On a tender being pleaded, and the money paid into court, plaintiff replied a ſubſequent demand and refuſal, whereupon iſſue being joined and tried, a verdict was found for defendant. Whereupon he moved to have the money paid into court, returned, in part of his coſts, but the court was of opinion it could not be done. Rep. Temp. Hardw per Annaly, 206.

Tender and refuſal ſaid to be conſidered in ſome caſes as payment. See Wilſon. par. 1. fo. 117.

There is a difference in pleading a tender in action of debt, and in action on the caſe; in debt, the damages are but acceſſary, ſo that, in pleading a tender to ſuch action, the defendant muſt pray judgment de damnis; but in aſſumpſit, the damages are principal, and he is to plead ſemper paratus, with a profert hic in curia, and pray judgment de ulterioribus damnis. Salk. 622. 3 Salk. 344, 345.

Tender may be of money in bags, without ſhewing or telling it, if it can be proved there was the ſum to be tendered; it being the duty of him that is to receive the money, to put out and tell it. 5 Rep. 115. Though where a perſon held the money on his arm in a bag, at the time of offering; this was adjudged no good tender, for it might be counters or baſe money. Noy. 74. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 281. If a tender is made of more than is due, it is good; and the party to whom tendered ought to take out what belongs to him. 5 Rep. 114. Tender of the money is requiſite on contracts for goods ſold, &c. to intitle action of trover: And a tender of ſtock ſold for ſo much money, if it be well made though not accepted, will intitle the party to the ſum agreed to be paid. 3 Salk. 343. See Bond, &c. 5 New Abr. and 20 Vin. Abr. tit. Tender, and Black. Com. 3 V. 16, 303.

Tenement, (Tenementum,) Signifies properly a houſe or home-ſtall; but more largely it comprehends not only houſe, but all corporeal inheritances which are holden of another, and all inheritances iſſuing out of or exerciſeable with the ſame. Co. Litt. 6, 19, 154. A tenement may be ſaid to be any houſe, land, rent, or other ſuch like thing, that is any way held, or poſſeſſed; but being a word of a large and ambiguous meaning, and not ſo certain as meſſuage, therefore it is not fit to be uſed to expreſs any thing which requires a particular deſcription. 2 Lill. Abr. 566.

The word tenement is joined with the adjective frank, to denote an eſtate in lands, offices, &c. for life or in fee. Kitch. 41. See Black, Com. 2 V. 16, 59.

Tenementary Land, Was the outland of manors granted out to tenants by the Saxon Thanes, under arbitrary rents and ſervices. Spelm.

Tenementis legatis, An ancient writ lying to the city of London, or any other corporation; (where the old cuſtom was, that men might deviſe, by will, lands and tenements as well as goods and chattels) for the hearing and determining any controverſy touching the ſame. Reg. Orig. 244.

Tenendum, Is a clauſe in a deed wherein the tenure of the land is created and limited: The office of a tenendum in a deed, is to limit and appoint the tenure of the land which is held, and how, and of whom it is to be held. Before the ſtatute called Quia emptores terrarum, (18 Ed. 1.) the tenendum was uſually from the feoffor and his heirs, and not of the chief lord of the fee, whereby lords loſt their eſcheats, forfeitures, &c. But ſince the ſaid ſtatute the tenendum, where the fee-ſimple paſſes, muſt be of the chief lord of the fee, by the cuſtoms and ſervices, whereby the feoffor held; yet this ſtatute does not extend to a gift in tail; for the donee ſhall hold of the donor. Co. Lit. 6. a. 2 Inſt. 66, 67, 500, 501, 502, 505.

The tenendum moſt commonly and properly ſucceeds the habendum, and was uſually in theſe words, tenendum per ſervitium, &c. By the ſtat. of Quia emptores terrarum, when the fee-ſimple doth paſs, the tenure is always of the chief lord, and is thus ſet forth, Tenendum de capitalibus dominis, &c. But this clauſe at this day is for the moſt part left out of deeds, and altogether omitted. Shep. Com. Aſſ. 391. The tenendum ſeems now to be incorporated with the habendum, for we ſay, To have and to hold, in which clauſe the eſtate is limited, &c. See Black. Com. 2 V. 298.

Tenentibus in Aſſiſa non Onerandis, Is a writ that lies for him to whom a diſſeiſor hath alienated the land whereof he diſſeiſed another, that he be not moleſted in aſſiſe for the damages, if the diſſeiſor have wherewith to ſatisfy them. Reg. Orig. 214.

Tenor, (Lat.) Of writs, records, &c. is the ſubſtance or purport of them; or a tranſcript or copy. Tenor of a libel hath been held to be a tranſcript, which it cannot be if it differs from the libel; and juxta tenorem imports it, but not ad effectum, &c. for that may import an identity in ſenſe, but not in words. 2 Salk. 417. In action of debt brought upon a judgment in an inferior court, if the defendant pleads Nul tiel record, a tenorem recordi only ſhall be certified; and by Hale Chief Juſtice it may be the ſame on certiorari's. 3 Salk. 296. A return of the tenor of an indictment from London, on a certiorari to remove the indictment, is good by the city charter; but in other caſes it is uſual to certify the record itſelf. 2 Hawk. P. C. 295.

Tenore indictamenti mittendo, Is a writ whereby the record of an indictment, and the proceſs thereupon, is called out of another court into the King's Bench. Reg. Orig. 69.

Tenore præſentium, The tenor of theſe preſents, is the matter contained therein, or rather the intent and meaning thereof; as to do ſuch a thing according to the tenor, is to do the ſame according to the true intent of the deed or writing.

Tenths, (Decimæ) Are the tenth part of the annual value of every ſpiritual benefice, being that yearly portion or tribute which all eccleſiaſtical livings pay to the King. They were anciently claimed by the Pope, to be due to him Jure divino, as High Prieſt, by the example of the High Prieſt among the Jews, who had tenths from the Levites: But they have been often granted to the King by the Pope upon divers occaſions, ſometimes for one year, and ſometimes for more; and were annexed perpetually to the crown by Stat. 26 H. 8. c. 3. 1 Eliz. c. 4. And at laſt granted with the firſt fruits, towards the augmentation of the maintenance of poor clergymen. 1 Ann. c. 11. Collectors of this revenue are to be appointed by the King by letters patent, inſtead of the biſhops; and an office is to be kept for management of the ſame, in ſome part of London or Weſtminſter, &c. 3 Geo. 1. c. 10. Tenths ſignify likewiſe a tax on the temporality, See the ſtatutes of King Edw. 6. Tents, Robbing of, in fairs and markets, is felony, and puniſhed as burglary. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 9.

Tenure, (Tenura, from the Lat. Tenere) Is the manner whereby lands or tenements are holden; or the ſervice that the tenant owes to his lord: And there can be no tenure without ſome ſervice, becauſe the ſervice makes the tenure. 1 Inſt. 1, 93. A tenure may be of houſes, and land or tenements; but not of a rent, common, &c. All lands in the hands of a ſubject are held of ſome lord or landlord, by tenure or ſervice: And all the lands and tenements in England are ſaid to be holden either mediately or immediately of the King; and therefore he is ſummus dominus ſupra omnes. 2 Inſt. 531.

Under the word tenure is included every holding of an inheritance; but the ſignification of this word, which is a very extenſive one, is uſually reſtrained by coupling other words with it; this is, ſometimes, done by words which denote the duration of the tenant's eſtate: As if a man holds to himſelf and his heirs, it is called tenure in fee-ſimple. At other times the tenure is coupled with words pointing out the inſtrument by which an inheritance is held; thus, if the holding is by copy of court-roll, it is called tenure by copy of court-roll. At other times, this word is coupled with words that ſhew the principal ſervice by which an inheritance is held: As where a man holds by knight's ſervice, it is called tenure by knight's ſervice. 5 New Abr. 34.

Tenure ſignifies the eſtate in the land; and tenures were anciently divided into the following, viz. Eſcuage, which was land held by the ſervice of the ſhield, and by which the tenant was obliged to follow his lord into the wars at his own charge. Knight's ſervice and chivalry, where lands were held of the King or meſne lord, to perform ſervice in war, and which drew after it homage, eſcuage, wardſhip, &c. Burgage tenure, where land was holden of the lord of the borough, at a certain rent. Villenage a baſe tenure of lands, whereby the tenant was bound to do all inferior villanous ſervices commanded by the lord. Grand ſerjeanty, a tenure of lands by honourary ſervices at the King's coronation, &c. And petit ſerjeanty, where lands were held of the King to contribute yearly ſome ſmall thing towards his wars. Frankalmoigne, a tenure by which land is held by eccleſiaſtical perſons in free and perpetual alms. And ſocage tenure, where lands are holden by tenants to plough the land of their lord, and do other ſervices of husbandry at their own expence; but this hath been turned into an yearly rent, for all manner of ſervices, when it is called free ſocage.

Of theſe general ancient tenures, knight ſervice, chivalry, eſcuage, petit-ſerjeanty, villenage, &c. are taken away by ſtat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. The common tenures at this day, are fee-ſimple, which is an abſolute tenure of lands, to a man and his heirs for ever. Fee-tail, a limited fee to a perſon and the heirs of his body begotten, &c. By the Curteſy, where a man marries a woman ſeiſed of lands in fee-ſimple, &c. and hath iſſue by her born alive, after her death he ſhall hold the land during life. In dower, where a widow holds for her life the third part of her husband's land, whereof he was ſeiſed in fee. For life and years, where lands are held by tenants for thoſe terms, on rents reſerved. And copyhold tenure, a holding for lives or in fee, at the will of the lord, according to the cuſtom of the manor, under divers ſervices, &c. Vide the Heads, and ſee Fee and Socage. See farther as to ancient tenures, Black. Com. 2 V. 59. and as to modern tenures, id. 78. and as to the feudal tenures, ſee Craig, Dalrymple, and Lord *Lytt. Hiſt. Term, (Terminus) Signifies commonly the limitation of time or eſtate; as a leaſe for term of life, or years, &c. Bract. lib. 2. Term is alſo a ſpace of time, wherein the ſuperior courts at Weſtminſter ſit. See Terms.

Terminum qui Preteriit, Writ of Entry ad. This is a writ for the reverſioner, when the poſſeſſion is withheld by the leſſee or a ſtranger, after the determination of a leaſe for years. F. N. B. 201. Black. Com. 3 V. 183. This writ is now diſuſed, ſince the invention of ejectments.

Termor, (Tenens ex Termino) Is he that holds lands or tenements for term of years or life. Litt. 100. A termor for years cannot plead in aſſiſe like tenant of the freehold; but the ſpecial matter, viz. his leaſe for years, the reverſion in the plaintiff, and that he is in poſſeſſion, &c. Dyer 246. Jenk. Cent. 142. See Black. Com. 2 V. 142.

Terms, Are thoſe ſpaces of time, wherein the courts of juſtice are open, for all that complain of wrongs or injuries, and ſeek their rights by courſe of law or action, in order to their redreſs; and during which, the courts in Weſtminſter-hall ſit and give judgments, &c. But the high court of parliament, the Chancery, and inferior courts, do not obſerve the terms; only the courts of King's Bench, the Common Pleas, and Exchequer, the higheſt courts at Common law. Of theſe terms there are four in every year, viz. Hilary Term, which begins the 23d of January, and ends the 12th of February; Eaſter-Term, that begins the Wedneſday fortnight after Eaſter-day, and ends the Monday next after Aſcenſion-Day; Trinity-Term which begins the Friday after Trinity Sunday, and ends the Wedneſday fortnight after; and Michaelmas-Term, that begins the 6th of Nov. (if a week day) and ends the 28th of Nov. Each term has certain returns; as Hilary-Term has four, Eaſter hath five, Trinity four, and Michaelmas four: And by ſtatute, Trinity Term was abridged four returns; and Michaelmas-Term two returns; for thoſe terms were formerly longer than now, till contracted by the ſtatutes 32 H. 8. c. 21. and 16 Car. 1. c. 16. See Poſt.

There are four days in term, called the Eſſoin-Day; the day of exceptions; the day of returns of writs; and the day of appearance, called the Quarto die poſt: The term is ſaid to begin on the Eſſoin Day, when one judge ſits in each court of law at Weſtminſter, to take and enter eſſoins; but the third day afterwards is the firſt day of the term, at which time the judges in all the courts ſit to do the buſineſs of the term. 2 Lill. Abr. 569. All the term in conſtruction of law is accounted but as one day to many purpoſes; for a plea that is put in the laſt day of a term, is a plea of the firſt day of the term; and a judgment on the laſt day of term is as effectual as on the firſt day. Trin. 23 Car. B. R. See Wilſon, Par. 1, fo. 37. And for this reaſon the judges may alter and amend their judgments in the ſame term, &c. It has been held, that the courts ſit not but in term, as to the giving of judgments: And the judges of B. R. and C. B. before Trinity Term 1651, did not ſit longer in court than till one a clock upon the laſt day of term; becauſe they would not encourage attornies to neglect their client's buſineſs till the laſt day of term, as too commonly they do, to the toil of the court, and too much hurry in diſpatch. Mich. 22 Car. 2. Lill. 91.

Terms have been adjourned, and returns of writs and proceſſes confirmed. 1 W. & M. Seſſ. 1. c. 4. Where there is a term intervening between the teſte and return of a writ of Capias, &c. or when the term to which a ſuit is continued is adjourned, and the ſuit is not adjourned, it is a diſcontinuance, &c. 2 Hawk. 298.

The iſſuable terms are Hilary and Trinity-terms only; ſo called, becauſe in them the iſſues are joined and records made up of cauſes, to be tried at the Lent and ſummer aſſiſes, which immediately follow. 2 Lill. Abr. 568. By the Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 48. After Michaelmas day 1752, there ſhall only be four returns in Michaelmas-term, viz. The morrow of All ſouls, the morrow of St. Martin, in eight days of St. Martin, and in fifteen days of St. Martin. And Michaelmas-term ſhall begin on the ſaid morrow of All Souls, (except it be Sunday, and then on the morrow next after) for the keeping of eſſoins, &c. And full term ſhall begin on the fourth day of the ſaid morrow of All Souls, (except it be Sunday, and then on the morrow next after.) And that for the more ſpeedy proceedings in writs of dower unde nihil habet, and by writs of entry for common recoveries to be ſued and proſecuted by writs of entry, or by writs of right of advowſon, and in all other real actions, after Michaelmas 1752.

If any writ in any ſuch action come in and be returnable in the Common Pleas on the morrow of All-Souls, then day ſhall be given in fifteen days of St. Martin; if on the morrow of St. Martin, then in eight days of St. Hilary; if in eight days of St. Martin, then fifteen days of St. Hilary; if in fifteen days of St. Martin, then on the morrow of the Purification; if in eight days of St. Hilary, then in eight days of the Purification; if in fifteen days of St. Hilary, then in fifteen days of Eaſter; if on the morrow of the Purification, then in three weeks from the day of Eaſter; if in eight days of the Purification, then in one month from the day of Eaſter; if in fifteen days of Eaſter, then in five weeks from the day of Eaſter; if in three weeks from the day of Eaſter, then on the morrow of the Aſcenſion; if in one month from the day of Eaſter, then on the morrow of the Holy Trinity; if in five weeks from the day of Eaſter, then in eight days of the Holy Trinity; if on the morrow of the Aſcenſion, then in fifteen days of the Holy Trinity; if on the morrow of the Holy Trinity, then in three weeks from the day of the Holy Trinity; if in eight days of the Holy Trinity, then on the morrow of All Souls; if in fifteen days of the Holy Trinity, then on the morrow of St. Martin; if in three weeks of the Holy Trinity, then in eight days of St. Martin.

In writs of dower unde nihil habet after iſſue joined, fifteen days between the teſte and return of the venire facias, and any other proceſs for the trial ſhall be ſufficient. And all writs having day from the fourth day of the morrow of the Aſcenſion, to the morrow of the Holy Trinity ſhall be good, though there be no fifteen days between the teſte and return. Special days and returns may be appointed by the judges in ſuch caſes as have been uſual. The days of aſſiſe in darrein preſentment, and in a plea of quare impedit appointed by the Stat. of Marlebridge; and the days to be given in attaint by Stat. 5 E. 3. and alſo in Stat. 23 H. 8. not being contrary to this act, ſhall be in force. Day for ſwearing the mayor of London ninth November, unleſs it be Sunday, and then the next day. The morrow of St. Martin yearly, appointed for nominating ſheriffs in the Exchequer.

The terms in Scotland are Martinmas, Candlemas, Whitſuntide and Lammas, at which times the court of Exchequer, &c. there is to be kept. Stat. 6 Ann. c. 6. And the terms of our univerſities for ſtudents, are different in time from the terms of the courts of law. See farther as to the original of our law terms, Black. Com. 3 V. 275. As to the eſſoign-day, id. 278. As to the firſt day of the term, Id. ibid. And as to the returns. Id. 277.

Of teſtaments there are two ſorts, viz. a teſtament in writing, and a teſtament in words, called a Nuncupative teſtament, which is, when a man being ſick, and for fear, leſt death, want of memory, or ſpeech, ſhould come ſo ſuddenly upon him, that he ſhould be prevented if he ſtaid the writing of his teſtament, deſires his neighbours and friends to bear witneſs of his laſt will, and then declares the ſame before them by words, which after his deceaſe is proved by witneſſes, and put in writing by the ordinary, and then ſtands in as good force as if it had at the firſt, into the life of the teſtator, been put into writing, except only for lands, (which are only deviſeable by a teſtament put into writing in the life of the teſtator. They were originally cognizable in the King's courts of Common law, viz. the county courts; and afterwards transferred to the juriſdiction of the church by the favor of the crown, as a natural conſequence of granting to the biſhops the adminiſtration of inteſtates effects.

As incident to accounts, they take a concurrent cognizance of the adminiſtration of the perſonal aſſets, conſequently of debts, legacies, the diſtribution of the reſidue, and the conduct of executors and adminiſtrators. *Black. Thanage of the King, (Thanagium Regis,) Signified a certain part of the King's land or property, whereof the ruler or governor was called Thane. Cowell.

Thane, (From the Sax. Thenian, miniſtrare,) Was the title of thoſe who attended the Engliſh Saxon Kings in their courts, and who held their lands immediately of thoſe Kings, and therefore, in Domeſday, they were promiſcuouſly called thani et ſervientes Regis, though not long after the conqueſt the word was diſuſed, and, inſtead thereof, thoſe men were called Barones Regis, who, as to their dignity, were inferior to earls, and took place next after Biſhops, Abbots, Barons and Knights. There were alſo thani minores, and thoſe were likewiſe called barons: They were lords of manors, and had a particular juriſdiction within their limits, and over their own tenants in their courts, which to this day are called court-barons: But the word ſignifies ſometimes a nobleman, ſometimes a freeman, ſometimes a magiſtrate, but more properly an officer or miniſter of the King. Edward King grete mine Biſceops, and mine Eorles, and all mine Thegnes on that ſhiren, wher mine Preſtes in Paulus miniſter habband land. Charta Edw. Conf. Pat. 18. H. 6. m. 9. per Inſpect. Lamb. in his Expoſition of Saxon words, verb. Thanus. And Skene de verbor. ſignif. ſaith, That it is a name of dignity, equal with the ſon of an earl.

This appellation was in uſe among us after the Norman conqueſt, as appears by Domeſday, and by a certain writ of William the Firſt. Willielmus Rex ſalutat Hermannum epiſcopum, & Stewinum, & Britwi, & omnes Thanos meos in Dorſeſtrenſi pago amicabiliter. MSS. de Abbatsbury. Camden ſays, They were ennobled only by the office which they adminiſtred. Thanus Regis is taken for a baron. 1 Inſt. fol. 5. 1. And in Domeſday tenens, qui eſt caput manerii. See Mills de Nobilitate, fol. 132. The Saxon Thane was ſo called from Thenian, ſervice; and in Latin miniſter, a miniſtrando. So that a Thane at firſt (in like manner as an earl) was not properly a title of dignity, but of ſervice. But according to the degrees of ſervice, ſome of greater eſtimation, ſome of leſs, So thoſe that ſerved the King in places of eminence, either in court, or commonwealth, were called Thani majores and Thani Regis. Thoſe that ſerved under them as they did under the King were called Thani minores, or the leſſer Thanes. Cowell. See Spelman of Feuds, cap. 7.

Thane-Lands, Such lands as were granted by charter of the Saxon Kings to their Thanes; which were held with all immunities, except the threefold neceſſity of expeditions, repairs of caſtles, and mending of bridges.——— Thanæ ſignified alſo land under the government of a Thane. Skene.

1. Of the origin of tithes.

Biſhop Barlow, Selden, father Paul, and others, have obſerved, that neither tithes nor eccleſiaſtical benefices, (which are correlative in their nature) were ever heard of for many ages in the chriſtian church, or pretended to be due to the chriſtian prieſthood; and, as that biſhop affirms, no mention is made of tithes in the grand codex of canons, ending in the year 451, which, next to the Bible, is the moſt authentic book in the world; and that it thereby appears, during all that time, both churches and churchmen were maintained by free gifts and oblations only. Barlow's Remains, p. 169. Selden of Tithes 82. See Watſon's Compleat incumbent. p. 3, 4, &c.

And Mr. Selden has ſhewn us, that tithes were not introduced here into England, till towards the end of the eighth Century, i. e. about the year 786, when pariſhes and eccleſiaſtical benefices came to be ſettled, for, it is ſaid, tithes and eccleſiaſtical benefices being correlative, the one could not exiſt without the other; for whenever any eccleſiaſtical perſon had any portion of tithes granted to him out of certain lands, this naturally conſtituted the benefice; the granting of the tithes of ſuch a manor or pariſh, being in fact, a grant of the benefice; as a grant of the benefice did imply a grant of the tithes: And thus the relation between patrons and incumbents was analogous to that of lord and tenant by the feudal law. Selden of Tithes, 86, &c.

About the year, 794, Offa, King of Mercia, (the moſt potent of all the Saxon Kings of his time in this iſland,) made a law, whereby he gave unto the church the tithes of all his kingdom, which the hiſtorians tell us was done to expiate for the death of Ethelbert, King of the Eaſt Angles, whom in the year preceding he had cauſed baſely to be murdered. But that tithes were before paid in England by way of offerings, according to the ancient uſage and decrees of the church, appears from the canons of Egbert, archbiſhop of York, about the year 750. And from an epiſtle of Boniface, archbiſhop of Mentz, which he wrote to Cuthbert, archbiſhop of Canterbury about the ſame time; and from the ſeventeenth canon of the general council held for the whole kingdom at Chalcuth, in the year 787. But this law of Offa was that which firſt gave the church a civil right in them in this land, by way of property and inheritance, and enabled the clergy to gather and recover them as their legal due, by the coercion of the civil power. Yet this eſtabliſhment of Offa reached no further than the kingdom of Mercia, over which Offa reigned, until Ethelwulph, about ſixty years after, enlarged it for the whole realm of England. Prideaux on Tithes 166, 167.

It is ſaid, tithes, oblations, &c. were orginally the voluntary gifts of chriſtians, and that there was not any canon before that of the fourth council of Lateran, anno Dom. 1215. that even ſuppoſed tithes to be due of common right. Wilſon, par. 2. fo. 182.

2. Of what tithes are in general due; and where perſonal tithes are due.

Tithes are due either de jure, or by cuſtom: All tithes, which are due de jure, ariſe from ſuch fruits of the earth as renew annually; or from the profit that accrues from the labour of a man. Hence it follows, that ſuch tithes can never be part of, but muſt always be collateral to, the land from which they ariſe. 11 Rep. 13, 14. Priddle v. Napier.

Nay, tithes due de jure are ſo collateral to every kind of land, that if a leaſe is made of the glebe belonging to a rectory, with all the profits and advantages thereof; and there is beſides a covenant, that the rent to be paid ſhall be in full ſatisfaction of every kind of exaction, and demand, belonging to the rectory; yet, as the glebe is not expreſly diſcharged of tithes, the leſſee ſhall be liable to the payment thereof. 11 Rep. 13, 14. Priddle v. Napier. 1 Roll. Abr. 655. pl. 1. Cro. Eliz. 162, 261. Cro. Car. 362.

No tithe is de jure of the produce of a mine or of a quarry; becauſe this is not a fruit of the earth renewing annually; but is the ſubſtance of the earth, and has perhaps been ſo for a great number of years. *F. No tithes are due de jure of houſes; for tithes are only due de jure of ſuch things as renew from year to year. 11 Rep. 16. Graunt's caſe. But houſes in London are, by decree, which was confirmed by an act of parliament, made liable to the payment of tithes, 2 Inſt. 659. 37 H. 8. c. 2. And, before this decree, houſes in London were by cuſtom liable to pay tithes; the quantum to be paid being thereby only ſettled, as to ſuch houſes for which there was no cuſtomary payment. 2 Inſt. 659. Hard. 116. Gilb. Eq. Rep. 193, 194. It was held by three barons of the Exchequer, Price, Montague, and Page, contrary to the opinion of Bury Chief Baron, that two tithes may be due of the ſame thing, one de jure the other by cuſtom. Bunb. 43. Earl of Scarborough v. Hunter.

Tithes are of three kinds, PERSONAL, PREDIAL, and MIXT. Such tithes as ariſe from the profit of the perſonal labour of a man, in the exerciſe of any art, trade or employment, are called perſonal tithes. 2 Inſt. 649.

By the ſtat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 13. par. 7. Common day labourers are exempted from the payment of perſonal tithes. No perſonal tithes are due from ſervants in huſbandry; for by their labour the tithes of many other things are increaſed. 1 Rol. Abr. 646. pl. 1. It is now ſettled, by a decree of the houſe of Lords, upon an appeal from a decree of the court of Exchequer, that only perſonal tithes are due from the occupier of a corn mill. 1 Eq. Caſ. Abr. 366. Mewt. v. Chamberlain, 2 Will. Rep. 463.

The ſtat. 9 Ed. 2. ſt. 1. c. 5. (as to occupiers of mills, paying tithes,) provides, that new erected mills ſhall be liable to the payment of tithes: But, as nothing therein is ſaid concerning ancient mills there can be no doubt, that ſuch ancient mills as before the making of this ſtatute were liable to pay tithes, continued afterwards to be liable. 12 Mod. 243. Hart v. Hale. 3 Bulſt. 212.

No perſonal tithe is due of the profit which a man receives without perſonal labour, or of the profit which one man receives from the labour of another. 1 Rol. Abr. 656. pl. 1. pl. 2. 2 Inſt. 621, 6, 9. If a man lets a ſhip to a fiſherman, no perſonal tithe is due of the money received for the uſe of ſuch ſhip; becauſe this is a profit without perſonal labour 1 Rol. Abr. 656. n. pl. 2. Vide 1 Rol. Abr. 656. n. pl. 3. 2 Bulſt. 141.

3. Of what PREDIAL tithes are due; and of the tithe of agiſtment, corn, hay, and wood.

Such tithes, as ariſe immediately from the fruits of the earth, as from corn, hay, hemp, hops; and all kinds of fruits, ſeeds and herbs, are called predial tithes. 2 Inſt. 649. They are ſo called becauſe they ariſe immediately from the fruits of the farm, or earth. 2 Inſt. 647. By the eccleſiaſtical law many things are liable to the payment of predial tithes, which by the Common law are not ſo. 2 Inſt. 621. 4 Mod. 344.

The deſign, under this head, is to ſhew what things are liable by the Common law to pay predial tithes.

In doing this, it will appear, that ſome things, which are in the general exempted therefrom, become by cuſtom liable to the payment of predial tithes. 1 Rol. Abr. 637. E. pl. 2. 1 Rol. Abr. 642. S. pl. 7. pl. 8.

It will alſo appear, that divers things, which are in the general liable thereto, are under particular circumſtances exempted from the payment of ſuch tithes. 1 Rol. Abr. 645. pl. 11. Cro. Eliz. 475. Freem. 335. 12 Mod. 235.

But wherever any fraud is uſed, to bring a thing under thoſe circumſtances, by reaſon of which it would, if it had come fairly under them, have been exempted from the payment of predial tithes, it is by ſuch fraud rendered liable thereto. Cro. Eliz. 475. Freem. 335.

As it would be tedious, to enumerate all the things which are liable to predial tithes, only thoſe ſhall be mentioned, concerning the tithes of which ſome queſtion has ariſen; but, from ſuch as will be mentioned, it may be eaſily collected of what other things predial tithes are due.

AGISTMENT. Agiſting, in the ſtrict ſenſe of the word, means the depaſturing of a beaſt the property of a ſtranger: But this word is conſtantly uſed, in the books, for depaſturing the beaſt of an occupier of land, as well as that of a ſtranger. 5 New Abr. 53. An occupier of land is not liable to pay tithe for the paſture of horſes, or other beaſts, which are uſed in huſbandry in the pariſh, in which they are depaſtured: Becauſe the tithe of corn is by their labour increaſed. 1 Rol. Abr. 646. pl. 2. pl. 3. pl. 6. pl. 7. Cro. Eliz. 446. Ld. Raym. 130. But if horſes or other beaſts are uſed in huſbandry out of the pariſh, in which they are depaſtured, an agiſtment tithe is due for them. 7 Mod. 114. Harrow's caſe Ld. Raym. 130.

It ſeems to be the better opinion, that no tithe is due for the paſture of a ſaddle horſe, which an occupier of land keeps for himſelf or ſervants to ride upon. 1 Rol. Abr. 642. pl. 4. Cro. Jac. 430. Bulſt. 171. Bunb. 3. No tithe is due for the paſture of milk cattle, which are milked in the pariſh, in which they are depaſtured; becauſe tithe is paid of the milk of ſuch cattle. 1 Rol. Abr. 646. pl. 2. Ld. Raym. 130. Cro. Eliz. 446.

Milch cattle, which are reſerved for calving, ſhall pay no tithe for their paſture whilſt they are dry: But, if they are afterwards ſold, or milked in another pariſh, an agiſtment is due for the time they were dry. Hetl. 100. Ld. Raym. 130. No tithe is due, from an occupier of land; for the paſture of young cattle, reared to be uſed in huſbandry, or for the pail. Cro. Eliz. 476. Sheringh v. Fleetwood. But, if ſuch young beaſts are ſold, before they come to ſuch perfection as to be fit for huſbandry, or before they give milk, an agiſtment tithe muſt be paid for them. Hetl. 86. Woolmerſton's caſe.

An occupier of land is liable to an agiſtment tithe, for all ſuch cattle as he keeps for ſale. Cro. Eliz. 446, 476. Jenk. 28. pl. 6. Cro. Car. 237. Show. P. C. 192. Vide Cro. Jac. 430. 1 Rol. Abr. 647. pl. 14.

But if any cattle, which have neither been uſed in huſbandry, nor for the pail, are, after being kept ſome time, killed, to be ſpent in the family of the occupier of the land on which they were depaſtured, no tithe is due for their paſture Jenk. 281. pl. 6. Cro. Eliz. 446, 476. Cro. Car. 237. It is in general true, that an agiſtment tithe is due, for depaſturing any ſort of cattle the property of a ſtranger. Cro. Eliz. 276. Cro. Jac. 276.

Bunb. 1. Freem. 329. No tithe is due for the cattle, either of a ſtranger or an occupier, which are depaſtured in grounds, that have in the ſame year paid tithe of hay. Bunb. 10. 79. Popb. 142. 2 Rol. Rep. 191.

No agiſtment tithe is due for ſuch beaſts, either of a ſtranger or an occupier, as are depaſtured on the head lands of ploughed fields: Provided that theſe are not wider than is ſufficient to turn the plough and horſes upon. 1 Rol. Abr. 646. pl. 19. No tithe is due for ſuch cattle as are depaſtured upon land, that has the ſame year paid tithes of corn. Bro. Diſm. 18. 1 Mod. 216. If land, which has paid tithe of corn in one year, is left unſown the next year, no agiſtment is due for ſuch land; becauſe, by this lying freſh, the tithe of the next crop of corn is increaſed. 1 Rol. Abr. 642. pl. 9. But if land, which has paid tithe of corn, is ſuffered to lie fallow longer than by the courſe of huſbandry is uſual, an agiſtment tithe is due for the beaſts depaſtured upon ſuch land. Shep. Abr. 1008.

As the queſtion, whether an agiſtment tithe is due for ſheep, does not ſeem to be quite ſettled, it will not be amiſs to refer to the principal caſes, in which this has been agitated, which are, 1 Rol. Rep. 63. pl. 7. Maſcal v. Price, Mich. 12 Jac. 1. 1 Rol. Abr. 642. pl. 8. Popb. 197. Cro. Car. 207. 1 Rol. Abr. 647. pl. 13. Bunb. 90. Gilb. Rep. in Equity 231. Bunb. 313.

Agiſtment tithe, is a ſmall tithe. Wilſon, par. 1. fo. 170.

CORN. It is laid down in ſome books, that no tithe is due of the rakings of corn involuntarily ſcattered. 1 Rol. Abr. 645. pl. 11. Cro. Eliz 278. Freem. 335. Moor 278. But, if more of any ſort of corn is fraudulently ſcattered, than, if proper care had been taken, would have been ſcattered, tithe is due of the rakings of ſuch corn. Cro. Eliz. 475. Freem. 335. And it has been ſaid by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that tithe is due of the rakings of all corn, except ſuch as is bound up in ſheaves. 12 Mod. 235. No tithes are due of the ſtubbles left in corn fields, after mowing or reaping the corn. 2 Inſt. 261. 1 Rol Abr. 640. pl. 14.

HAY. Tithe of hay is to be paid, although beaſts of the plough or pail, or ſheep are to be foddered with ſuch hay. Cro. Jac. 47. Webb. v. Warner. 1 Rol. Abr. 650. pl. 12. 12 Mod. 497. But no tithe is due of hay grown upon the headlands of ploughed grounds, provided that ſuch headlands are not wider than is ſufficient to turn the plough and horſes upon. 1 Rol. Abr. 646. pl. 19. It is laid down in one old caſe, that if a man cuts down graſs, and, while it is in the ſwathes, carries it away and gives it to his plough cattle, not having ſufficient ſuſtenance for them otherwiſe, no tithe is due thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 645. Crawley v. Wells, Mich. 9 Car. 1. And in a modern caſe, the court of Exchequer ſeemed to be of opinion, that no tithe is due of vetches or clover, cut green, and given to cattle in huſbandry. Bunb. 279. Hayes v. Dowſe, Hil. 3 Geo. 2. But in another caſe, ſome years before this laſt caſe, it was held, that the right to tithe of hay accrues upon mowing the graſs, and that the ſubſequent application of this, while it is in graſs, or when it is made into hay, ſhall not, although beaſts of the plough or pail are fed with it, take away this right. 12 Mod. 498. And the doctrine of this laſt caſe coincides with that of an old caſe; in which it was held, that tares cut green, and given to beaſts of the plough, may by ſpecial cuſtom be exempted from the payment of tithes; from whence it follows, that ſuch tares are not exempted de iure. 12 Mod. 498. Selby v. Bank, Paſch. 13 W. 3.

It is laid down in ſome books, that no tithe is due of aftermowth hay; becauſe tithe can only be due once in the ſame year from the ſame land. F. N. B. 53. Bro. Diſm. pl. 16. 2 Inſt. 262. 11 Rep. 16. Cro. Jac. 42. Ld. Raym. 243. But it is held in other books, that tithe is due of aftermowth hay. 1 Rol. Abr 64. pl. 11. Cro. Eliz. 660. Cro. Jac. 116. Cro. Car. 403. 12 Mod. 498. Bunb. 10. And the principle, upon which the doctrine, that no tithe is due of aftermowth hay is founded, is denied in ſome modern caſes.

In ſome of theſe it is laid down, that tithes ſhall be paid of divers crops grown upon the ſame land in the ſame year, Bunb. 19. Benſon v. Watkins, Hil. 3 Geo. 1. Bunb. 314. Swanſen v. Digby, Hil. 5 Geo. 2.

In others it is held, wherever there is in the ſame year a new increaſe from the ſame thing, tithe is due. Bunb. 9. Baker v. Sweet, Mich. 8 Geo. 1. Gilb. Rep. in Eq. 231. Coleman v. Baker, Paſch. 12 Geo. 1.

WOOD. Tithe of wood is not due of common right, becauſe wood does not renew annually: But it was, in very antient times, paid in many places by cuſtom. 2 Inſt. 642. 12 Mod. 111. Salk. 656. Comb. 404. Bunb. 61.

A conſtitution was made, in the ſeventeenth year of the reign of Edward the Third, by John Stratford, archbiſhop of Canterbury, that tithes ſhall be paid, within this province, of ſilva cædua. 2 Inſt. 642. Palm. 37, 38.

Several petitions having been preſented to the King, complaining of the clergy for taking tithe of groſs wood and underwood, by virtue of this conſtitution; at length, a ſtatute was made in theſe words: "At the complaint of the Great men and Commoners, ſhewing by their petition, that when they ſell their groſs wood, of the age of 20 or 40 years, and of a greater age, to merchants, to their own profit, and to the aid of the King in his wars, the parſons and vicars of Holy church do implead and trouble the ſaid merchants, in court chriſtian, for the tithe of the ſaid wood, under the denomination of ſilva cædua, by the reaſon of which they cannot ſell their wood for the real value, to the great damage of themſelves and the realm; it is ordained and eſtabliſhed, that a prohibition in this caſe ſhall be granted, and upon the ſame an attachment, as it hath hitherto been." 45 Ed. 3. c. 3.

From the petitions and anſwers, from this ſtatute, and from books of the beſt authority, it appears plainly, that no tithe of groſs wood was due de jure at the Common law; and that the demand thereof as ſuch by virtue of the conſtitution made by the archbiſhop, was an incroachment. 2 Inſt. 642. 45 Ed. 3. c. 3. Plowd. 470. Bro. Paroch. pl. 1. Cro. Jac 100.

After the making of this ſtatute, prohibitions were conſtantly granted to ſuits inſtituted in ſpiritual courts for tithes of groſs wood. But two queſtions often aroſe, What is groſs wood? And of what age groſs wood muſt be before it is exempted from the payment of tithe? 2 Inſt. 643, 644, 645.

For the putting an end to theſe, it hath been long ſettled, that by groſs wood is not meant ſmall wood, nor large wood, but ſuch wood as is generally, or by the cuſtom of a particular part of the country, uſed as timber; and that all ſuch wood, if of the age of 20 years, is exempt from the payment of tithe. 2 Inſt. 642, 643. Cro. Eliz. 1. 12 Mod. 524. Bunb. 127. Oaks, aſhes, and elms being univerſally uſed as timber, it has been always held, that ſuch trees, if of the age of 20 years, are groſs wood, 2 Inſt. 642. It hath been held, upon great deliberation, notwithſtanding what is laid down to the contrary in Plowd. 470, that a horn-beam tree, if of the age of 20 years, is groſs wood; becauſe this is uſed in building and repairing. 2 Inſt. 643. It has for the ſame reaſon been held, that an aſpen tree, of the age of 20 years, is groſs wood. Ibid.

Tithes are not in the general due of beach, birch, hazel, willow, ſallow, alder, maple, or white-thorn trees, or of any fruit-trees, of whatſoever age they are: Becauſe theſe are not timber. Plowd. 470. Cro. Eliz. 477. 1 Cro. Jac. 190. 1 Roll. Abr. 640. pl. 5. pl. 6. Brownl. 94. But, if the wood of any of theſe trees is uſed in a particular part of the country, where timber is ſcarce, in building and repairing, no tithe is due of ſuch wood, if of the age of 20 years, in that part of the country. Hob. 289. Brownl. 94. It is laid down in ſeveral old books, that, if a timber-tree, after it is of the age of 20 years, decays ſo as to be unfit to be uſed in building, no tithe is due of the wood of this tree; becauſe it was once privileged, 11 Rep. 48. Cro. Eliz. 477. Cro. Jac. 100. 1 Roll. Abr. 640. pl. 2.

But the contrary is laid down in ſome other books.

In two of theſe it is laid down, that, if the wood of a coppice has been uſually felled for firing, ſuch wood ſhall pay tithe, altho' it ſtand till it be 40 years of age, Sid. 300. 1 Lev. 189. And in another it is laid down, that, if the wood of a timber-tree is ſold for firing, it is, altho' the tree was of the age of 20 years, liable to pay tithe. Bunb. 99. Greenaway v. The Earl of Kent. The reporter of this laſt caſe mentions four others, in which the ſame had been held; and ſays, that it was in one of them laid down, that the wood of timber-trees is only exempted from the payment of tithe, on the account of its being uſed in building, Buckle v. Vanacre.

The doctrine, however, of the old books is confirmed by a very late caſe in the court of Chancery. A bill being brought for tithe of the loppings of timber-trees, which had been ſold for firing, it was inſiſted that this wood, which would otherwiſe have been exempted from the payment of tithes, was liable thereto, becauſe it was ſold to be uſed for firing; and the caſes juſt now cited were relied upon: But the bill was diſmiſſed: and by Hardwicke Chancellor, in the caſe in 1 Lev. 189. and Sid. 300. the wood in queſtion was coppice wood, which had been uſually felled for firing; and ſuch wood, of whatever age it is, is always titheable. The caſe of Greenaway and the earl of Kent, is quite a ſingular one, and is not law; for in the caſe of Bibye and Huxley, Hill. 11 Geo. 1. it was agreed, that no tithe is due of the wood of a timber-tree, which has been once privileged from the payment of tithe, altho' ſuch wood is ſold to be uſed for firing. MS. Rep. Walton v. Tryon, Mich. 25 Geo. 2. See farther Bro. Diſm. pl. 14. 11 Rep. 4. Cro. Eliz. 4. Godb. 175. 1 Roll. Abr. 640. pl. 3. Held in the caſe already cited, by Hardwicke Chancellor, that wherever a tree has been lopped before it was of the age of 20 years, all future loppings, altho' ever ſo old, are liable to pay tithe. MS. Rep. Walton v. Tryon. It has been laid down, that if a tree, which was once privileged from paying tithe, is felled, the germins that ſpring from the root of ſuch tree, are alſo privileged. 11 Rep. 48. Liford's caſe, But, in the caſe already cited, it was ſaid by Hardwicke Chancellor, that all germins, which ſpring from the roots of trees that hath been felled, are titheable. MS. Rep. Walton v. Tryon.

The wood of a coppice, which has uſually been felled for firing, is liable to pay tithe, altho' the ſame is of the age of 40 years. 1 Lev. 189. Sid. 300. And in the caſe ſo often cited, it was ſaid by Hardwicke Chancellor, if, when the wood of coppice is felled, ſome trees growing therein, which are of the age of 20 years, and have never been lopped, are lopped, and theſe loppings are promiſcuouſly bound up in faggots with the coppice wood, tithe muſt be paid of the whole: becauſe it would be very difficult, to ſeparate the titheable wood from that which is not ſo; and the owner ought to ſuffer for his folly in mixing them. MS. Rep. Walton v. Tryon.

4. Of what mixed tithes are due.

Such tithes as ariſe from beaſts or fowls, which are fed with the fruits of the earth, are called mixed tithes. 2 Inſt 649. 1 Roll. Abr. 635. Many things are by the eccleſiaſtical law liable to pay ſuch tithes, which by the Common law are not. 2 Inſt. 621. 4 Mod. 344.

The deſign under this head is to ſhew, of what mixed tithes are due by the Common law.

In doing this it will appear, that ſome things, which are in the general exempted therefrom, become by cuſtom liable to the payment of mixed tithes. 1 Roll. Abr. 635. c. pl. 3. 636. pl. 7. Cro. Car. 339. 1 Ventr. 5. It will alſo appear, that divers things, which are in the general liable thereto, are under particular circumſtances exempted from the payment of mixed tithes. 1 Roll. Abr. 645. pl. 14. pl. 16. But, wherever any fraud is uſed, to bring a thing under theſe circumſtances, by reaſon of which, if it had come fairly under them, it would have been exempted from the payment of a mixed tithe, it is by ſuch fraud rendered liable thereto. 1 Roll. Abr. 645. pl. 15. 646. pl. 17.

As it would be tedious, to enumerate all the things, which are liable to pay mixed tithes, only thoſe ſhall be mentioned concerning the tithe of which ſome queſtion has ariſen: But, from ſuch as will be mentioned, it may be eaſily collected, of what other things mixed tithes are due.

Tythes are in the general due of the young of all beaſts, except ſuch as are feræ naturæ. But none are due of young hounds, apes, or the like, becauſe ſuch beaſts are kept only for pleaſure. Bro. Diſm. pl. 20. No tithe is due of the young deer; for theſe are feræ naturæ. 2 Inſt, 651. And for the ſame reaſon none is due, but by cuſtom, of young conies. 1 Roll. Abr. 635. C. pl. 3. Cro. Car. 339. 1 Ventr. 5.

The young of all birds and fowls, except ſuch as are feræ naturæ, are in the general liable to pay tithes; unleſs the eggs of ſuch birds or fowls have before paid tithes. 1 Roll. Abr. 642. pl. 6. 2 Will. Rep. 463. But no tithes are due either of the eggs or young of any birds or fowls, which are kept only for pleaſure. Bro. Diſm. pl. 20. No tithes are due of the eggs or young of partridges or pheaſants, becauſe theſe are feræ naturæ. Moor 599. 2 Will. Rep. 463. If a man keeps pheaſants. in an incloſed wood, whoſe wings are clipped, and from their eggs hatches and brings up young ones, no tithe is due of theſe young pheaſants, although none was paid for their eggs: Becauſe the old ones are not reclaimed, and would go out of the incloſure, if their wings were not clipped. 1 Roll. Abr. 636. pl. 5.

It was heretofore held, that neither the eggs nor young of turkies are titheable; turkies being feræ naturæ. Moor 599. Hughes v. Price. But it has been held in a modern caſe, that, as turkies are now as tame as hens or other poultry, tithe is due of their eggs or young, 2 Will. Rep. 463. Charleton v. Brightwell. No tithe is due of ſuch young pigeons as are ſpent in the houſe or the perſon who breeds them. 1 Roll. Abr. 644. Z. pl. 4. pl. 6. 1 Ventr. 5. 12 Mod. 77. 12 Mod. 47. But if any young pigeons are ſold, tithe is due to them. 1 Roll. Abr. 644. Z. pl. 5. pl. 6.

If a man pays tithe of young lambs at marks-tide, and at midſummer aſſizes ſhears the other nine parts of the lambs, tithe is due of the wool: For although there are but two months between the time of paying tithe lambs, which were not ſhorn, and the ſhearing of the reſidue, there is in this caſe a new increaſe. 1 Roll. Abr. 642. R. pl. 7. Bunb. 90. If a man ſhears his ſheep about their necks at Michaelmas time, to preſerve their fleeces from the brambles, no tithe is due of this wool: For it appears, that this, which is done before their wool is much grown, can never be for the ſake of the wool. 1 Roll. Abr. 645. pl. 16. If a man, after their wool is well grown, ſhear his ſheep about their necks, to preſerve them from vermin, no tithe is due of the wool. 1 Roll. Abr. 645. pl. 14.

If a man, a little before ſhearing time, cuts dirty locks of wool from his ſheep to preſerve them from vermin, no tithe is due of ſuch wool. 1 Roll. Abr. 646. pl. 17. But in either of theſe caſes, if more wool than ought to have been cut off is fraudulently cut off, tithe muſt be paid of the wool. 1 Roll. Abr. 645. pl. 15. 646. pl. 17. Tithe is due of the wool of ſuch ſheep as are killed to be ſpent in the houſe. 1 Roll. Abr. 646. pl. 18. Dent. v. Salvin. Paſch. 14. Car. Cont. Litt. Rep. 31. Civil v. Scott.

Fiſh taken in a pond, or in any incloſed river, are liable to pay tithe. 1 Roll. Abr. 636. pl. 4. pl. 6. pl. 7. But no tithe is due, except by cuſtom, of fiſh taken in the ſea, or in any open river, although they are taken by a perſon who has a ſeveral fiſhery; becauſe ſuch fiſh are feræ naturæ. Noy 108. 1 Roll. Abr. 636. pl. 4. pl. 6. pl. 7. Cro, Car. 332. 1 Lev. 179. Sid. 278. Honey and bees-wax are both titheable. Fitz. N. B. 51. 1 Roll. Abr. 635. C. pl. 1. Cro. Car. 559. But, where the tithe of their honey and wax has been paid, no tithe is due of the *bees. Cro. 5. Of recovering ſmall tithes in a ſummary way; and of recovering tithes due from quakers.

By the 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 6. ſ. 1. It is, for the more eaſy recovery of ſmall tithes, where the ſame do not amount to above the yearly value of forty ſhillings, from any one perſon, enacted, ‘That if any perſon ſhall fail ‘in payment for twenty days after demand, the parſon ‘may make complaint in writing to two juſtices of ‘the peace, neither being patron, nor intereſted, who, ‘after ſummoning the party, are to hear and determine ‘the complaint, give a reaſonable allowance for the ‘tithes and coſts not exceeding ten ſhillings.’

If the perſon complained againſt inſiſts on any preſcription, compoſition, modus decimandi, or other title, delivers the ſame in writing to the juſtices, and gives to the party complaining ſufficient ſecurity to pay coſts at law, if the title is not allowed, the juſtices not to give judgment. The juſtices have power to give coſts, not exceeding ten ſhillings, to the party proſecuted, if they find the complaint falſe and vexatious. The act not to extend to tithes within the city of London, or in any other place, where the ſame are ſettled by any act of parliament. An appeal is given to the ſeſſions, and no proceedings, or judgment, had by virtue of this act, to be removed, or ſuperſeded, by any writ of certiorari, or other writ whatſoever, unleſs the title of ſuch tithes ſhall be in queſtion.

By the 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 34. par. 4. Where any quaker ſhall refuſe to pay, or compound, for his great or ſmall tithes, it ſhall be lawful for the two next juſtices of the peace of the ſame county, other than ſuch juſtice of the peace as is patron of the church, or chapel, to which the tithes belong, or any ways intereſted, upon the complaint, to convene before them ſuch quaker, and to examine upon oath the truth of the complaint, and to aſcertain what is due from ſuch quaker, and by order under their hands and ſeals to direct the payment thereof, ſo as the ſum ordered do not exceed ten pounds; and upon refuſal of quaker to pay, to levy the money. Any perſon, aggrieved, may appeal to the next general quarter-ſeſſions.

No proceedings, or judgment, had by virtue of this act, ſhall be removed or ſuperſeded by any writ of certiorari, or other writ out of his majeſty's courts at Weſtminſter, or any other court whatſoever, unleſs the title to ſuch tithes ſhall be in queſtion.

By the 1 Geo. 1. ſt 2. cap. 6. par. 2. The like remedy is given for the recovery of all tithes and all other eccleſiaſtical dues from quakers, as by the 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 34. is given for tithes to the value of ten pounds.

And ſuch juſtices of the peace, upon complaint of any parſon, vicar, curate, farmer or proprietor of ſuch tithes, or other perſon who ought to have, receive or collect, any ſuch tithes or dues, may proceed in a ſimilar manner as directed by the former act, touching quakers. Vide the Statutes.

6. Of particular things for which tithes are paid, and for which not, in alphabetical order.

The particular things for which tithes are paid, and for which not, according to our law, are the following, viz.

ACORNS, as they yearly increaſe, are liable to the payment of tithes; but this is where they are gathered and ſold, and reduced to a certain profit; not when they drop, and the hogs eat them. 2 Inſt. 643. Hetl. 27. AFTERMATH, or AFTER-PASTURE pays no tithes, except by cuſtom; being the remains of what was before tithed. 2 Inſt. 652. 2 Danv. Abr. 589. Tit. Diſmes. AGISTMENT of cattle upon paſture-land, which hath paid no other tithes that year, pays tithe for the cattle; and if a man breeds or buys barren unprofitable cattle and ſells them, he ſhall pay for the agiſtment; but if he depaſtures his land with his own ſaddle-horſes, he ſhall pay no tithes. If ground is eat up with unprofitable cattle of a man's own, or others, a tenth part of the yearly value of the rent of the land, i. e. the ſum of 2 s. per pound, is payable by the owner of the land, or his tenant; though the twentieth part is uſually accepted. 1 Roll. Abr. 646. Hard. 184. ALDER trees pay tithes, notwithſtanding they are above twenty years growth, not being timber. ASH is timber, and therefore, if theſe trees are above twenty years growth, they are tithe free. ASP or ASPIN trees are exempted, if beyond that growth, in places where they are uſed for timber. 2 Cro. 199. 2 Inſt. 643.

BARK of trees is not titheable, if the trees whereon produced were timber. 11 Rep. 49. BARREN LAND, which is ſo of its own nature, pays no tithe; where land is barren, and not manurable without ſome extraordinary charge, in reſpect of ſuch charge, and for the advancement of husbandry, ſuch land being converted to tillage, ſhall for the firſt ſeven years after the improvement, be diſcharged from tithes, by the act 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 13. But the barren land during the ſeven years of improvement, ſhall pay ſuch ſmall tithes as have been accuſtomably paid before; and afterwards to pay the full tithe according to the improvement: And if land is over-run with buſhes, or become unprofitable by bad husbandry, it cannot properly be called barren land; for if it be grubbed, or ploughed and ſowed, it immediately pays tithes. 2 Inſt, 656. Cro. Eliz. 475. BEECH-TREES, where timber is ſcarce, and theſe trees are uſed for building, if above twenty years growth to be timber, are privileged from tithes, by the ſtat. 45 Ed. 3. c. 3. though this tree is not naturally timber, for it is neceſſity makes it ſo. 2 Danv. Abr. 589. BEES are titheable for their honey and wax, by the tenth meaſure, and tenth pound: It has been a queſtion whether the tenth ſwarm can be demanded for tithes of bees, becauſe bees are feræ naturæ; but when the bees are gathered into the hives, they are then under cuſtody, and may pay tithe by the hive or ſwarm; but the tithe is generally paid in the tenth part of the honey or wax. 1 Roll. Abr. 651. 3 Cro. 404, 559. BIRCH wood is titheable, though of above twenty years growth. 2 Inſt. 643. BRICKS pay not tithes, for they are made of parcel of the freehold, and are of the ſubſtance of the earth, not an annual increaſe. 1 Cro. 1. BROOM ſhall pay tithe; but it may be diſcharged by cuſtom, if burnt in the owner's houſe, or kept for huſbandry. 2 Danv. Abr. 597.

CALVES are titheable, and the tenth calf is due to the parſon when weaned, and he is not obliged to take it before; but if in one year a perſon hath not the number of ten calves, the parſon is not intitled to tithes in kind for that year, without a ſpecial cuſtom for it, though he may take it in the next year, throwing both years together; and it is a good cuſtom to pay one calf in ſeven, where there hath been no more in one year; and where a man ſells a calf to pay the tenth of the value, or for the parſon to have the right ſhoulder, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 648. Raym. 277. CATTLE ſold pay tithe; but not cattle kept for the plough or pail, which ſhall pay no tithe for their paſture, by reaſon the parſon hath the benefit of the labour of plough cattle in tilling the ground, by the tithe of corn, and tithe milk for thoſe kept for the pail; yet if ſuch cattle bought are ſold before uſed, or if, being paſt their labour, the cows are barren, and afterwards fatted in order to ſell, tithes ſhall be paid for them; though if the owner kill and ſpend the cattle in his own houſe, no tithe is due for them, being for his proviſion to ſupport him in his labour about other affairs, for which the parſon hath tithes. Cattle feeding on large commons, where the bounds of the pariſh are not certainly known, ſhall pay tithes to the parſon of the pariſh where the owner lives; and if fed in ſeveral pariſhes, and they continue above a month in each pariſh, tithes ſhall be paid the two parſons proportionably. 1 Roll. Abr. 635, 646, 647. Hardr. 35. CHALK and chalk-pits, are not titheable; nor is clay or coal, as they are part of the freehold, and not annual, to pay tithes. 2 Inſt. 651. CHEESE pays tithe by cuſtom, where tithe is not paid for the milk; but if the milk pays a tithe, the cheeſe pays none: And it may be a good cuſtom to pay the tenth cheeſe made in ſuch a month, for all tithe milk in that year. 1 Roll. Abr. 651. CHICKENS are not titheable, becauſe tithe is paid for the eggs. 1 Roll. Abr. 642. COLTS pay tithes in the ſame manner as calves. Ibid. CONIES are titheable only by cuſtom, for thoſe that are ſold, not for ſuch as are ſpent in the houſe. 2 Danv. Abr. 583. CORN pays a predial tithe; it is tithed by the tenth cock, heap, or ſheaf, which if the owner do not ſet out, he may be ſued in an action upon the ſtat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 13. And if the pariſhioner will not ſow his land uſually ſown, the parſon may bring his action againſt him. When tithe corn is ſet forth, the law gives the parſon a reaſonable time to carry it away; and if he ſuffer the ſame to lie too long on the land to the prejudice of the owner thereof, he may be liable to an action: But the parſon may not ſet out the tithes himſelf, or take them away without leave. 1 Rol. Abr. 644. 1 Sid. 283. 2 Vent. 48. Ley 70.

Deer are not titheable, for they are feræ naturæ; tho' in parks, &c. they pay tithes by cuſtom. 2 Inſt. 651. Doves kept in a dove-houſe, if they are not ſpent in the owner's houſe, are titheable. 1 Vent. 5.

Eggs pay tithes when tithes are not paid for the young. 1 Rol. Abr. 642. Elm trees being timber are diſcharged from the payment of titees, but not if under twenty years growth. 2 Inſt. 643.

Fallow Ground is not titheable for the paſture in that year in which it lies fallow, unleſs it remain beyond the courſe of huſbandry; becauſe it improves and renders the land more fertile by lying freſh. 1 Rol. Abr. 642. Fenns being drained and made manureable, or converted into paſture, are ſubject to the payment of tithes. 1 Rol. Rep. 354. Fish taken in the ſea or common rivers, are titheable only by cuſtom, and the tithe is to be paid in money, and not the tenth fiſh; but fiſh in ponds and rivers incloſed, ought to be ſet forth as a tithe in kind. 2 Danv. Abr. 583, 584. Flax pays tithe; every acre of flax or hemp ſown ſhall pay yearly 5 s. for tithe, and no more. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 16. Forest lands ſhall pay no tithes while in the hands of the King, though ſuch lands in the hands of a ſubject ſhall pay tithes, and if a foreſt ſhall be diſafforeſted, and within a pariſh, it ſhall pay tithes. 1 Rol. Abr. 655. 3 Cro. 94. Fowls, as hens, geeſe, ducks, are to pay tithes, either in eggs or the young, according to cuſtom, but not in both: As to turkies it is now reſolved, that tithes are due of their eggs or young. 2 Wil. Rep. 463. Charleton v. Brightwell. Fruit, apples, pears, plumbs, cherries, &c. pay tithes in kind when gathered; and ought to be ſet out according to the ſtatute. 2 Inſt. 621. Fruit trees cut down and ſold, are not titheable, if they have paid tithe fruit that year before cut. Ibid. 652. Furzes, if ſold, pay tithe, not if uſed for fuel in the houſe, or to make pens for ſheep, &c. Wood's Inſt. 166.

Gardens are titheable as lands, and therefore tithes in kind are due for all herbs, plants, and ſeeds ſowed in them; but money is generally paid by cuſtom or agreement. Ibid. Grass mowed is titheable by payment of the tenth cock, or according to cuſtom; but for graſs cut in ſwarths for the ſuſtenance of plough cattle only, not made into hay, no tithe is to be paid. Graſs or corn, &c. when ſold ſtanding, the buyer ſhall pay the tithes; and if ſold after cut and ſevered, the ſeller muſt pay it. The parſon is not obliged to take tithe of graſs the day it is cut, but may let it lie long enough to make it into hay. 1 Strange 245. 1 Rol. Abr. 644, 645. Wood's Inſt. 166.

Hazle, Holly, and Maple trees, &c. are regularly titheable, although of twenty years growth. 2 Danv. Abr. 589. Hay pays a predial tithe; the tenth cock is to be ſet out and paid, after made into hay, by the cuſtom of moſt places; and the pariſhioners ſhall make the graſs cocks into hay for the parſon's tithe; but if they are not obliged to make the tithe into hay, they may leave it in cocks, and the parſon muſt make it, for which purpoſe he may come on the ground, &c. A preſcription to meaſure out and pay the tenth acre, or part of graſs ſtanding, in lieu of all tithe hay, may be good; And if meadow ground is ſo rich, that there are two crops of hay in one year, the parſon by ſpecial cuſtom may have tithe of both. 1 Rol. Abr. 643, 647, 950. Headlands are not titheable, if only large enough for turning the plough; but if larger, tithe may be payable. 2 Inſt. 653. Herbage of ground is titheable for barren cattle kept for ſale, which yield no profit to the parſon. Wood's Inſt. 167. Honey pays a tithe, as under Bees. Hops are titheable, and the tenth part may be ſet out after they are picked: There are ſeveral ways of tithing hops, viz. by the hills, pole or pound; in ſome places they ſet forth the tenth pole for tithes; but Lord Chief Juſtice Roll tells us, they ought not to be tithed before dried. 1 Rol. Abr. 644. Horses kept to ſell, and afterwards ſold, tithes ſhall be paid for their paſture; though not where horſes are kept for work and labour. Hut. 77. Houses for dwelling are not properly titheable: A modus may be paid for houſes in lieu of tithes of the land upon which they are built, and a great many cities and boroughs have a cuſtom to pay a modus for their houſes; as it may be reaſonably ſuppoſed that it was uſual to pay ſo much for the land, before the houſes were erected on it. 11 Rep. 16. 2 Inſt. 659.

Kids pay a tithe as calves, the tenth is due to the parſon. Wood 167.

Lambs are titheable in like manner as calves; but if they are yeaned in one pariſh, and do not tarry there thirty days, no tithe is due to the parſon of that place: If there be a cuſtom that the pariſhioners having ſix lambs or under, ſhall pay ſo much for every lamb; and if he have above that number then to pay the ſeventh, it is good. 3 Cro. 403. Lead may pay tithe by cuſtom, as it does in ſome counties; but it doth not without it. 2 Inſt. 651. By cuſtom only, Lime and Lime-kilns are titheable. 1 Rol. Abr. 642.

Mast of Oak and Beach pays tithes as under Acorns. Milk is titheable when no tithes are paid for cheeſe, all the year round, except cuſtom over-rules; and it is payable by every tenth meal, not tenth quart or part of every meal; and it is to be brought to the houſe of the parſon, &c. by cuſtom, in which particular this tithe differs from all others, which muſt be fetched by the receiver. In ſome places they pay tithe cheeſe for milk, and in others ſome ſmall rate according to cuſtom. Cro. Eliz. 609. 2 Danv. Abr. 596. Mills, as there are ſeveral ſorts of them, the tithes are different; the tithes of corn-mills driven by wind or water, are paid in kind, every tenth toll-diſh of corn to the parſon of the pariſh wherein the mills are ſtanding: But ancient corn-mills are tithe-free, being ſuggeſted that they are very ancient, and never paid tithes, &c. And it is queſtioned whether tithe is due for any corn-mills, unleſs by cuſtom, becauſe the corn hath before paid tithe; and it ſeems rather a perſonal tithe where due: The tithes of fulling-mills, paper-mills, powder-mills, &c. are perſonal; charged in reſpect to the labour of men, by cuſtom only; and are regarded more as engines of ſeveral trades than as mills. 1 Rol. Abr. 656. 2 Inſt. 621. Mines pay no tithes but by cuſtom, being of the ſubſtance of the earth, and not annually increaſing. 2 Inſt. 651.

Nurseries of trees ſhall pay tithes, if the owner dig them up and makes profit of them by ſelling. 2 Danv. Abr. 585.

Oak trees are privileged as timber from the payment of tithes by the ſtatute of Silva Cædua, 45 Edw. 3. c. 3. if of or above twenty years growth; and if oaks are under that age, it is the ſame when they are apt for timber. Moor 541. Offerings, &c. are in the nature of perſonal tithes. 2 Inſt. 659, 661. Orchards pay tithes both for the fruit they produce, and the graſs or grain, if any be ſown or cut therein. 2 Inſt. 652.

Parks are titheable by cuſtom, for the deer and the herbage; and when diſparked and converted into tillage they ſhall pay tithes in kind: The tithes of parks may be in part certain, and part caſual; and 2 s. a year, and a ſhoulder of every third deer, hath been paid as tithe for a park. 1 Rol. Rep. 176. Hob. 37, 40. Partridges and Pheasants, &c. as they are feræ naturæ, yield no tithes of eggs or young. 1 Rol. Abr. 636. Pease, if gathered for ſale, or to feed hogs, pay tithes; but not green peaſe ſpent in the houſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 647. Pigeons ought to pay tithes when ſold; and this holds good if they lodge in holes about an houſe, as well as in a dove-houſe; and by cuſtom if ſpent in the houſe, they may be titheable, though not of common right. 2 Danv. Abr. 583, 597. Pigs are titheable, as calves. Ibid. Pollard trees, ſuch as are uſually lopped, and diſtinguiſhed from timber-trees, pay tithes. Plowd. 470.

QUARRIES of ſtone, &c. are not ſubject to pay tithes; becauſe they are part of the inheritance, and tithes ought to be collateral to the land, and diſtinct from it. 1 Roll. 644.

RAKINGS OF CORN are not titheable, for they are left for the poor, and are properly the ſcatterings of the corn whereof the tithes have been paid, left after the cocks ſet out are taken away. Cro. Eliz. 660. See Ante, Div. 3. tit. Corn.

SAFFRON pays a predial and ſmall tithe. 1 Cro. 467. SALT is not titheable, but by cuſtom only. 1 Bunb. 10. SHEEP, a tithe is paid for, of lambs and wool, and therefore they pay no tithe for their feeding. If ſheep are in the pariſh all the year, they are to pay tithe wool to the parſon; but if removed from one pariſh to another, the parſon of each pariſh to have tithe pro rata, where they remain thirty days in a pariſh; and if they are fed in one pariſh, and brought into another to be ſhorn, the ſame tithing is to be obſerved. 1 Rol. Abr. 642, 647. 3 Cro. 237. STUBBLE pays no tithe under aftermath. 2 Inſt. 652.

TARES, vetches, &c. are titheable; but if they are cut down green, and given to the cattle of the plough, where there is not a ſufficient paſture in the pariſh, no tithe ſhall be paid for them. 1 Cro. 139. TILES are no yearly increaſe, and not titheable. 2 Inſt. 651. TIMBER TREES, ſuch as oaks, aſhes, and elms, and in ſome places beech, &c. above the age of twenty years, were diſcharged of tithes by the Common law, before the ſtatute 45 Ed. 3. c. 3. and the reaſon of it is, becauſe ſuch trees are employed to build houſes, and houſes when built are not only fixed to, but part of the freehold; and if thoſe trees ſtand ſo long till they become rotten and fit for firing only, no tithes are due for them, becauſe they were once privileged; and loppings of timber-trees above twenty years growth, pay no tithes, for the branch is privileged as well as the body of the tree; and the roots of ſuch trees are exempted as parcel of the inheritance. Trees cut for plough-boot, cart-boot, &c. ſhall not pay tithes, although they are no timber; but all trees not fit for timber, and not put to thoſe uſes, pay tithes. 1 Roll. Abr. 650. Cro. Eliz. 477, 499. See Ante Div. 3. TURFS uſed for fuel are part of the ſoil, and tithe-free. 2 Inſt. 651.

UNDERWOOD is titheable, though the tithe is not of annual payment; and is ſet out while ſtanding, by the tenth acre, pole, or perch, or when cut down, by tenth faggot or billet, as cuſtom directs; and if he that ſells the wood doth not ſet out the tithe, he is liable to the treble damages by 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 13. But if the underwood is uſed for firing in a houſe of huſbandry, or to burn brick to repair the houſe, or for hedging and fencing the lands in the ſame pariſh, it may be diſcharged from tithe. 2 Inſt. 642, 643, 652. Hob. 250. 2 Danv. Abr. 597.

WARRENS where titheable, ſee Conies. WASTE GROUND, whereon cattle feed, is liable to the payment of tithes. 2 Danv. Abr. WOAD growing in the nature of an herb is a predial and ſmall tithe. 2 Danv. 594. WOOD is generally eſteemed to be a great tithe. If wood grounds have likewiſe timber-trees grown on them, and conſiſt for the moſt part of ſuch trees, the timber-trees ſhall privilege the other wood; but if the wood is the greateſt part, then it muſt pay tithes for the whole. 13 Rep. 13. If wood be cut to make hop-poles, where the parſon hath tithe hops, no tithe ſhall be paid for it. Hughes's Abr. 689. WOOL is a mixed ſmall tithe, paid when clipped; one fleece in ten, or in ſome places one in ſeven, is given to the parſon. If there is under ten pounds of wool at the ſhearing, a reaſonable conſideration ſhall be paid, becauſe the tithes are due of common right; and if leſs than ten fleeces, they ſhall be divided into ten parts, or an allowance be otherwiſe made. All ſheep killed, and ſheep which die, pay tithe wool; and neck wool cut off for the benefit of the wool, but not if it is to preſerve the ſheep from vermin, &c. Alſo the wool of lambs ſhorn at Midſummer, though tithe was paid for the lambs at Mark-tide, is titheable. 1 Roll. Abr. 646, 647. 2 Inſt. 652. Vide tithe of Sheep.

When any thing is titheable only by cuſtom; it may be exempted from tithe by cuſtom; but cuſtom to exempt corn, &c. from tithe will not be allowed, becauſe for that tithes are due de jure. Count. Parſ. Compan. 155. See Modus and Preſcription.

Tithes Extraparochial, which do not lie in any pariſh, belong to the King. 2 Rep. 2, 44.

GREAT TITHES generally belong to the rector; and SMALL TITHES to the vicar. Cro. Car. 20.

GREAT TITHES are corn, hay, and wood; SMALL TITHES comprehend all other predial tithes beſides corn and hay, &c. as alſo thoſe tithes which are perſonal and mixed; ſome things may be great or ſmall tithes, in regard of the place; as hops in gardens are ſmall tithes, and in fields may be great tithes; and it is ſaid the quantity will turn a ſmall tithe into a great one, if the pariſh is generally ſown with it. 1 Roll. Abr. 643. 1 Cro. 578. Wood's Inſt. 162.

Tithing, (Tithinga, from the Sax. Teothunge, i. e. Decuriam) Is in its firſt appointment the number or company of ten men with their families, held together in a ſociety, all being bound for the peaceable behaviour of each other: And of theſe companies there was one chief perſon who was called teothung-man, at this day tithing-man; but the old diſcipline of tithings is long ſince left off. In the Saxon times, for the better conſervation of the peace, and more eaſy adminiſtration of juſtice, every hundred was divided into ten diſtricts or tithings; and, within every tithing, the tithing-men were to examine and determine all leſſer cauſes between villages and neighbours; but to refer greater matters to the then ſuperior courts, which had a juriſdiction over the whole hundred. Paroch. Antiq. 633. See Black. Com. 1 V. 113. 4 V. 404.

Tithing-men, Are now a kind of petty conſtables, elected by pariſhes, and ſworn in their offices in the court-leet, and ſometimes by juſtices of peace, &c. There is frequently a tithing-man in the ſame town with a conſtable, who is as it were a deputy to execute the office in the conſtable's abſence; but there are ſome things which a conſtable has power to do, that tithing-men and headboroughs cannot intermeddle with. Dalt. 3. When there is no conſtable of a pariſh, the office and authority of a tithing-man ſeems to be the ſame under another name. Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. See Conſtable, and Black. Com. 1 V. 114, 406.

Title, (Titulus) Is when a man hath lawful cauſe of entry into lands whereof another is ſeiſed; and it ſignifies alſo the means whereby a man comes to lands or tenements, as by feoffment, fine, laſt will and teſtament, &c. The word title includeth a right; but is the more general word: Every right is a title, though every title is not ſuch a right for which an action lies; ſo that titulus eſt juſta cauſa poſſidendi quod noſtrum eſt, and is the means of holding the lands. Co. Lit. 345.

A man may plead in treſpaſs, &c. without particularly ſetting forth his title, where his juſtification is collateral to the title of the land; ſo if damages are to be recovered, and the title of the land is not in queſtion; and in actions on real contracts, where the plaintiff ſhews enough to entitle him to the action, &c. 2 Mod. 70. 1 *Roll. But in treſpaſs for cutting corn on lands, the party muſt ſet forth the title which he hath to the corn, or on demurrer it will be judged ill; for the ſhewing that he is poſſeſſed thereof, is not ſufficient without a title, becauſe the property ſhall be intended to be in the owner of the ſoil. 2 Sand. 401. 3 Salk. 361.

When a perſon will recover any thing from another, he muſt make out and prove a better title than the other hath; or it will not be enough to deſtroy his title, &c. Hob. 103. It is not allowed for the party to forſake his own title, and fly upon the other's; for he muſt recovers by his own ſtrength, not the other's weakneſs. ibid. 104. Title to the Crown. In the opinion of Blackſtone, the grand fundamental maxim upon which the jus coronæ, or right of ſucceſſion to the throne of theſe kingdoms, depends, is, "That the Crown is, by Common law "and conſtitutional cuſtom, hereditary; and this in a "manner peculiar to itſelf: But that the right of inheritance may from time to time be changed or limited "by act of parliament; under which limitations the "Crown ſtill continues hereditary." *Black. Titles of Clergymen, Signify ſome certain place where they may exerciſe their functions. A title, in this ſenſe, is the church to which a prieſt was ordained and conſtantly to reſide: And there are many reaſons why a church is called titulus; one is becauſe in former days the name of the ſaint to whom the church is dedicated was engraved on the porch, as a ſign that the ſaint had a title to that church; from whence the church itſelf was afterwards denominated titulus. Concil. London, Anno 1125. No perſon ſhall be ordained without a title; and this is required to keep out thoſe from the miniſtry who might otherwiſe for want of maintenance bring diſgrace upon the church. And if a biſhop ſhall admit any perſon into the miniſtry without any title, he ſhall maintain him till he prefers him to ſome eccleſiaſtical living; or if he refuſes ſo to do, he ſhall be ſuſpended from giving orders for one year. Can. 31. Anciently a title of clergy was no more than entering their names in the biſhop's roll, and then they had not only authority to aſſiſt in the miniſterial function, but had a right to the ſhare of the common ſtock or treaſury of the church; but ſince, a title is an aſſurance of being preferred to ſome eccleſiaſtical benefice, a certificate that the clerk is provided of ſome church, or place, &c. or where the biſhop, who ordains him, intends ſhortly afterwards to admit him to a benefice or curacy then void. Count. Parſ. Comp. 2, 3.

Title of Entry, Is when one ſeiſed of land in fee, makes a feoffment thereof on condition, and the condition is broken; after which the feoffor hath title to enter into the land, and may do ſo at his pleaſure, and by his entry the freehold ſhall be ſaid to be in him preſently. And it is called Title of entry, becauſe he cannot have a writ of right againſt his feoffee upon condition, for his right was out of him by the feoffment, which cannot be reduced into entry; and the entry muſt be for the breach of the condition. Cowell.

Toll, or to toll, To bar, defeat, or take away; as to toll the entry, i. e. to deny or take away the right of entry. Stat. 8 Hen. 6. c. 9.

Toll, (Tolnetum, vel Theolonium) Is a Saxon word, and properly a payment in towns, markets, and fairs, for goods and cattle bought and ſold. It is a reaſonable ſum of money due to the owner of the fair or market, upon ſale of things tollable within the ſame. 2 Inſt. 220.

And it is uſed for a liberty as well to take, as to be free from toll; of which freedom from toll the city of Coventry boaſts an ancient charter granted by Leofrick earl of the Mercians, in the time of King Edw. the Conf. who at the importunity of Godeva, his virtuous lady, granted this freedom to that city.

By the ancient law of this land, the buyers of corn or cattle in fairs or markets ought to pay toll to the lord of the market, in teſtimony of the contract there lawfully made; for toll was firſt invented that contracts in markets ſhould be openly made before witneſſes; and privy contracts were held unlawful.

But the King ſhall pay no toll for any of his goods; and a man may be diſcharged from the payment of toll, by the King's grant.

Alſo tenants in ancient demeſne are diſcharged of toll throughout the kingdom, for things which ariſe out of their lands, or bought for manurance thereof, &c. not for merchandizes. Horn's Mir. lib. 1. 2 Inſt. 221. 2 Rol. Abr. 198.

Toll doth not of common right belong to a fair; tho' it hath been held, that ſome toll is due of common right, as appears from the immunities of ſeveral perſons not to pay toll, which proves that, if it was not for thoſe privileges, they ought to pay toll of common right; therefore where the King grants a market, toll is due, although it is not expreſſed in the grant what toll is to be paid; and this, from the neceſſity of it, becauſe the property of things ſold in a market is not altered without paying toll. Palm. 76. 2 Lutw. 1377. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 326. See the laſt caſe under this head. But it is ſaid, if the King grants to a man a fair or market, and grants no toll, the patentee ſhall have no toll; for toll being a matter of private right for the benefit of the lord, is not incident to a fair or market, as a court of piepowder is, which is for the benefit of the public and advancement of juſtice, &c. Such a fair, or market, is free from toll; and, after the grant made, the King cannot grant a toll to ſuch free fair or market, without ſome proportionable benefit to the ſubject: And if the toll granted with the fair or market be outrageous, the grant of the toll is void, and the ſame is a free market, &c. 2 Inſt. 220. Cro. Eliz. 559.

When the King grants a fair, he may likewiſe grant that toll ſhall be paid, though it be a charge upon the ſubjects, but then it muſt be of a very ſmall ſum. Toll is to be reaſonable, for the King cannot grant a burthenſome toll; and one may have toll by preſcription for ſome reaſonable cauſe, but ſuch a preſcription to charge the ſubject with a duty of toll, muſt import a benefit or recompence for it, or ſome reaſon muſt be ſhewn why it is claimed. Cro. Eliz. 559. 3 Lev. 424. 2 Mod. 143. 4 Mod. 323. The toll in fairs is generally taken upon the ſale of cattle, as horſes, &c. but in the markets for grain only; and the lord may ſeize until ſatisfaction is made him: It is always to be paid the buyer, unleſs there be a cuſtom to the contrary; and nothing is tollable before the ſale, except it be by cuſtom time out of mind; which cuſtom none can challenge that claim the fair or market by grant ſince the reign of King Richard 2d; ſo that it is better to have a market or fair by preſcription, than grant. 2 Inſt. 220, 221.

At this day there is not any one certain toll to be taken in markets; but if that which is taken be unreaſonable, it is puniſhable by the ſtat. 3 Ed. 1. c. 31. And what ſhall be deemed reaſonable is to be determined by the judges of the law, when it comes judicially before them: toll may be ſaid to be unreaſonable and outrageous, when a reaſonable toll is due, and exceſſive toll is taken; or when no toll is due, and toll is unjuſtly uſurped, &c. 2 Inſt. 222. If exceſſive toll be taken in a market-town, by the lord's conſent, the franchiſe ſhall be ſeized; and if by other officers, they ſhall pay double damages, and ſuffer impriſonment, &c. Stat. Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1.

Owners of markets and fairs are to appoint toll-takers, where toll is to be taken, under penalties, by the 2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 7. And he that hath the toll, or profit of the market where no toll is, ought to provide a lawful meaſure of braſs, and chain it in the public market-place, or ſhall forfeit 5 l. 22 Car. 2. cap. 8.

Toll is not incident of common right, to a fair. 2 Strange 1171. See Wilſon, par. 1, 109, &c. and tit. Market.

Port-Toll. A preſcription to have port-toll for all goods coming into a man's port may be good; and this it is ſaid without any conſideration. 2 Lev. 96. 2 Lut. 1519. And it hath been adjudged, that the liberty of bringing goods into a port for ſafety, implies a conſideration in itſelf. 3 Lev. 37. Preſcription of toll for goods landed in a manor, or to have port-toll for all goods coming into port, is a good preſcription; but not to have toll of goods brought into a river, &c. 2 Lev. 96, 97. Toll may be appurtenant to a manor. 2 Mod. 144.

Toll-Travers, Is where one claimeth to have toll for every beaſt driven over his ground; for which a man may preſcribe, and diſtrain for it in via Regia. Cro. Eliz. 710. They who claim theſe tolls by grant, ought to aver the certainty of the ſum mentioned in the grant, &c. Palm. 76. Toll-travers being to paſs a nearer way, he that has it is to repair the way, becauſe he receives money for it. 2 Lil. Abr. 585.

Thorough-Toll, Is when a town preſcribes to have toll for ſuch a number of beaſts, or for every beaſt that goeth through their town; or over a bridge or ferry, maintained at their coſt, which is reaſonable, though it be for paſſing through the King's highway, where every man may lawfully go, as it is for the eaſe of travellers that go that way. Terms de Ley 561. 562. Perſons may have this toll by preſcription or grant; but it muſt be for a reaſonable cauſe, which muſt be ſhewn, viz. that they are to repair and maintain a cauſeway, or a bridge, or ſuch like. Cro. Eliz. 711. The King granted to a man, to take ſuch toll of perſons that paſſed over certain bridges with their cattle, as was taken there and elſewhere in England, &c. and it was held void for incertainty. Bridg. 88.

Turn-Toll, A toll paid for beaſts that are driven to market to be ſold, and do return unſold. 6 Rep. 46. There is alſo in-toll; and out-toll, mentioned in ancient charters: But if any one take toll where he ought not, the party grieved ſhall have an action on the caſe, or action of treſpaſs, &c. 3 *Nelſ. Torture. The ſtatute law of England doth very ſeldom, and the Common law doth never, inflict any puniſhment extending to life or limb, unleſs upon the higheſt neceſſity: And the conſtitution is an utter ſtranger to any arbitrary power of killing or maiming the ſubject without the expreſs warrant of law. "Nullus liber homo, ſays the great charter (c. 29.) "aliquo modo deſtruatur, niſi per legale judicium parium "ſuorum aut per legem terræ." Which words, "Aliquo "modo deſtruatur," according to Sir Edward Coke, (2 Inſt. 48.) include a prohibition not only of killing, and maiming, but alſo of torturing (to which our laws are ſtrangers) and of every oppreſſion by colour of an illegal authority.

But note—on an indictment for high treaſon, or for the loweſt ſpecies of felony, viz. petit larceny and in all miſdemeanors, ſtanding mute is equivalent to conviction. Trade, In general ſignification, is traffick or merchandize: Alſo a private art, and way of living. All the King's ſubjects were to have a free trade with France, Spain, &c. Stat. 3 Jac. 1 cap. 6. But by 1 W. & M.

cap. 34. all trade with France was prohibited during the war, and importing goods was declared a common nuſance, and the commodities were to be ſeized and burnt; the veſſels with their furniture, &c. to be forfeited; and landing goods, or aſſiſting therein, incurred a penalty of 500 l. Though the prohibition of trade to France was taken off and repealed by 9 Ann. cap. 8. The King was enabled to prohibit all trade with Sweden, on the intended invaſion of this kingdom, by the late King of Sweden, 3 Geo. 1. cap. 1. All trade with Spain during the late war, was prohibited; and no goods, of the growth or manufacture of Old Spain, to be imported into Great Britain or Ireland, &c. from any place, mixt or unmixed with commodities of any other nation, on pain of forfeiting the goods and treble value; and alſo the ſhip or veſſel, with all her furniture, &c. Stat. 13 Geo. 2. cap. 27.

None of the King's ſubjects may trade to and with a nation of Infidels without the King's leave, becauſe of the danger of relinquiſhing Chriſtianity: And Sir Edward Coke ſaid, That he had ſeen a licence from one of our Kings, reciting, That he, having a ſpecial truſt and confidence that ſuch a one, his ſubject, would not decline his faith and religion, licenſed him to trade with Infidels, &c. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 331.

As to private trades, at Common law, none was prohibited to exerciſe any particular trade, wherein he had any ſkill or knowledge: and if he uſed it unſkilfully, the party grieved might have his remedy againſt him by action on the caſe, &c. By the 5 Eliz. c. 4. ſ. 31. a man muſt ſerve ſeven years apprenticeſhip before he can ſet up any trade; though it hath been reſolved that the ſtatute doth not prohibit the uſe of a trade for a family, but the publick uſe of it in general. If a bond or promiſe reſtrains the exerciſe of a trade, though it be to a particular place only, if there was no conſideration for it; it is void; if there be a conſideration, in ſuch a caſe it may be good: But if the reſtraint be general throughout England, although there be a conſideration, it will be void. 2 Lill. Abr. 179. Lord Raym. 1436. 2 Strange 739. Hence we ſee how the law favours trade, &c. Vide Black. Com. 1 V. 427. 4 V. 154, 160, 167, 412, 417, 421, 424, 427, 432.

Tradeſmen, Actions againſt. There is in law, always, an implied contract with a common taylor, or other workman, that he performs his buſineſs in a workman-like manner: in which, if they fail, an action on the caſe lies to recover damages for ſuch breach of their general undertaking. 11 Rep. 54. 1 Saund. 324. But if I employ a perſon to tranſact any of theſe concerns, whoſe common profeſſion and buſineſs it is not, the law implies no ſuch general undertaking; but, in order to charge him with damages, a ſpecial agreement is required. *Black. Tranſlation, (Tranſlatio) In a common ſenſe of the word, ſignifies a verſion out of one language into another; but, in a more confined acceptation, it denotes the ſetting from one place to another, and the removal of a biſhop to another dioceſe, &c. which is called Tranſlating: And ſuch a biſhop writes not anno conſecrationis, but anno tranſlationis noſtræ, &c. A biſhop tranſlated, is not conſecrated de novo: for a conſecration is like an ordination, 'tis an indelible character, and holds good for ever. 3 Salk. 72. But the biſhop is to be a-new elected, &c. 1 Salk. 137. See Poſtulation.

Tranſportation, Is the baniſhing or ſending away a criminal into another country. And by ſtatute, if any one, convicted of felony, ſhall in open court pray to be tranſported, it may be done if the court thinks fit. 31 Car. 2. cap. 2. The 4 Geo. 1. cap. 11. was made for the more effectual tranſportation of offenders convict of felony, or larceny, within the benefit of clergy, &c. And all charges, in tranſporting felons, are to be borne by the place for which the court was held, &c. Sed qu. as to London and Middleſex, as I believe the expence is borne by Government? Returning from tranſportation, or being ſeen at large in Great Britain before the expiration of the term for which the offender was ſentenced to be tranſported, is a capital offence againſt public juſtice, and is made felony without benefit of clergy, by ſtatutes 4 Geo. 1. c. 11. 6 Geo. 1. c. 23. & 8 Geo. 3. c. 15.

Tranſportation, Of goods and merchandiſe, is allowed and not allowed, in many caſes by ſtatute, for the advantage of trade. See Merchant, &c.

Tranſubſtantiation, (Tranſubſtantiatio) Is a converting into another ſubſtance: To tranſubſtantiate, i. e. Quidpiam in aliam ſubſtantiam converto. Litt. Dict. A declaration againſt the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation uſed in the church of Rome, is required by the Stat. 30 Car 2. cap. 1.

Travellers. Inn-keepers are to receive travellers, and find them lodgings, victuals, &c. And on refuſal, a reaſonable price being tendered, they may be indicted and fined; or action of the caſe lies againſt them. 2 Hawk. 225.

Traverſe, (from the Fr. Traverſer) Is uſed in the law for the denying of ſome matter of fact, alledged to be done in a declaration or pleadings; upon which the other ſide comes and affirms that it was done; and this makes a ſingle and good iſſue for the cauſe to proceed to trial: And the formal words of a traverſe are in our French Sans ceo, in Latin Abſque hoc, and in Engliſh without that, that ſuch a thing was done or not, &c. Kitch. 217. Weſt. Symb. par. 2. A plea will be ill, which neither traverſeth, nor confeſſeth the plaintiff's title, &c. And every matter in fact, alledged by the plaintiff, may be traverſed by the defendant, but not matter of law, or where it is part matter of law and part matter of fact; nor may a record be traverſed which is not to be tried by a jury. And if a matter be expreſly pleaded in the affirmative, which is expreſly anſwered in the negative, no traverſe is neceſſary, there being a ſufficient iſſue joined; alſo where the defendant hath given a particular anſwer in his plea, to all the material matters contained in the declaration, he need not take a traverſe; for when the thing is anſwered, there needs no further denial. Cro. Eliz. 755. Yelv. 173. 193. 195. 2 Mod. 54. If a traverſe contain no more than the party hath pleaded before, it will not be good: No traverſe ought to be taken but where the thing traverſed is iſſuable: And where one will make a traverſe to a declaration, he ought to traverſe that part of it, the doing whereof will make an end of the matter, when the point is determined by the jury. 2 Roll. Rep. 37. 2 Lill. Abr. 587. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 355.

As one traverſe is enough to make a perfect iſſue, a traverſe cannot be regularly taken upon a traverſe, if 'tis well taken to the material point, and goes to the ſubſtance of the action; but where the firſt traverſe is not well taken, nor pertinent to the matter, there, to that which was ſufficiently confeſſed and avoided before, the other party may well take a traverſe after ſuch immaterial traverſe taken before: And if ſpecial matter alledged in a foreign county in the defendant's plea be falſe, the plaintiff may maintain his action, and traverſe that ſpecial matter; and in ſuch a caſe a traverſe on a traverſe hath been adjudged good. 1 Saund. 32. Poph. 101.

Theſe rules are to be obſerved in traverſes: 1. The traverſe of a thing not immediately alledged, vitiates a good bar. 2. Nothing muſt be traverſed but what is expreſly alledged. 3. Surpluſage in a plea doth not inforce a traverſe. 4. It muſt be always made to the ſubſtantial part of the title. 5. Where an act may indifferently be intended to be at one day or another, there the day is not traverſable. 6. In action of treſpaſs generally the day is not material; though, if a matter be to be done upon a particular day, there it is material and traverſable. 2 Roll. Rep. 37. 1 Roll. Rep. 235. Yelv. 122. 2 Lill. Abr. 313. If the parties have agreed on the day for a thing to be done, the traverſe of the day is material; but where they are not agreed on the day, it is otherwiſe; and though 'tis proved to be done on another day, 'tis ſufficient. Palm. 280. Per Holt. Ch. Juſt.

Where a traverſe goes to the matter of a plea, &c. all that went before is waved by the traverſe; and if the traverſe goes to the time only, it is not waved. 2 Salk. 642. In action of treſpaſs, a particular place and time were laid in the declaration, and in the plea there was a traverſe as to the place, but not as to time: On averment that it was eadem tranſgreſſio, the plea was held good. 3 Lev. 227. 2 Lutw. 1452. Where a plea in juſtification of a thing is not local, a traverſe of the place is wrong. 2 Mod. 270. Where a juſtification in treſpaſs, relates to a particular place, different from the Venue laid in the declaration, 'tis proper to add a traverſe at the end of the plea.

The ſubſtance and body of a plea muſt be traverſed. Hob. 232. But a traverſe that a perſon died ſeiſed of land in fee modo & forma as the defendant had declared, was adjudged good. Hutt. 123. A lord and tenant differ in the ſervices, there the tenure and not the ſeiſin ſhall be traverſed; but if they agree in the ſervices, the ſeiſin and not the tenure is traverſable; and it is a general rule, that the tenant ſhall never traverſe the ſeiſin of the ſervices without admitting the tenure. March 116. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 361. That which is not material nor traverſable, is not admitted when it is alledged, and not traverſed. 2 Salk. 361. But the omitting a traverſe where it is neceſſary, is matter of ſubſtance. 2 Mod. 60. And a traverſe of a debt is ill when a promiſe is the ground of the action; which ought to be traverſed, and not the debt. Leon. 252.

A traverſe ſhould have an inducement to make it relate to the foregoing matter. And 'tis no good plea for the plaintiff to reply, that a man is alive who is alledged to be dead, without traverſing that he is not dead. 3 Salk. 357. Qu. It is ſaid that where a traverſe abſque hoc comprizes the whole matter generally, it may conclude & de hoc pon. ſe ſuper patriam; but when it traverſes a particular matter, the concluſion ought to be with an averment, &c. 1 Salk. 4.

Traverſe may be in an anſwer in Chancery, replication, &c. In an action upon a bail-bond the arreſt is not traverſable. 1 Strange 444. Traverſe of a ſeiſin in fee is ill, where a leſs eſtate would be ſufficient. 2 Strange 818. Where the party confeſſes and avoids, he ought not to traverſe: But it may be paſſed over and iſſue taken upon the traverſe. 2 Strange 837. See Chancery, and Black. Com. 3 V. 312.

Traverſe of an indictment or preſentment, Is to take iſſue upon, and contradict or deny ſome chief point of it: As in a preſentment againſt a perſon for a highway overflowed with water, for default of ſcouring a ditch, &c. he may traverſe the matter, that there is no highway, or that the ditch is ſufficiently ſcoured; or otherwiſe traverſe the cauſe, viz. That he hath not the land, or he and they whoſe eſtate, &c. have not uſed to ſcour the ditch. Lamb. Eiren. 521. Book Entr. See Black. Com. 4 V. 345.

Traverſe of an Office, Is to prove that an inquiſition made of lands or goods by the eſcheator, is defective and untruly made. No perſon ſhall traverſe an office, unleſs he can make to himſelf a good right and title: And if one be admitted to traverſe an office, this admiſſion of the party to the traverſe, doth ſuppoſe the title to be in him, or elſe he had no cauſe of traverſe. Vaugh 64. 2 Lill. Abr. 590, 591. The traverſe of an inquiſition for the King is to be conſidered as a debt, and the proſecutor may carry down the record. 2 Strange 1208. See *Black. Treaſon, (From the Fr. Trahir, to betray, and Trahiſon, betraying, contracted into treaſon) is the crime of treachery and infidelity to our lawful ſovereign; the Latin word for which uſed in law is proditio.

Treaſon is divided into

and Petit Treaſon, Proditio parva.

Mention is alſo made, in ſome of our ſtatutes, of accumulative and conſtructive treaſon. High treaſon is defined to be an offence committed againſt the ſecurity of the King and kingdom; and as all treaſons include felony, the word proditorie muſt be uſed in the indictment for treaſon, to diſtinguiſh it. 3 Inſt. 4, 15. The greatneſs of this offence of treaſon and ſeverity of the puniſhment thereof, is upon two reaſons, becauſe the ſafety, peace and tranquillity of the kingdom, is highly concerned in the preſervation of the perſon and government of the King; and therefore the laws have given all poſſible ſecurity thereto, under the ſevereſt penalties: And as the ſubjects have protection from the King and his laws; ſo they are bound by their allegiance to be true and faithful to him. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 59.

At Common law there were different opinions concerning high-treaſon; and before the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. Treaſon was a very uncertain crime; for the killing of the King's brother, or even of his meſſenger, was taken to be included in it; ſo when acts tended to diminiſh the dignity of the crown, and where a man grew popular, this was conſtrued to be incroaching royal power, and held to be treaſon; ſo that, by the exceſs of the times, any crime, by aggravating the circumſtances of it, was heightened into treaſon: Wherefore this ſtatute was made to determine what ſhould be treaſon; and ſince the making thereof there can be no conſtructive treaſon; i. e. Nothing can be conſtrued to be treaſon, which is not literally ſpecified in that act; nor may the ſtatute be conſtrued by equity, becauſe it is a declarative law, and one declaration ought not to be the declaration of another; beſides it was made to ſecure the ſubject in his life, liberty, and eſtate, which, by admitting conſtructions to be made of it, might deſtroy all. 1 Hawk. P. C. 34. 3 Salk. 358.

The ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. cap. 2. (reciting that divers opinions having been, what caſes ſhould amount to high treaſon) enacts and declares, That if a perſon doth compaſs or imagine the death of the King, Queen, or their eldeſt ſon and heir; or if he do violate and deflower the King's wife or companion, or his eldeſt daughter unmarried, or the wife of the King's eldeſt ſon; or if he levy war againſt the King in his realm, or adhere to his enemies, give them aid and comfort in the realm, or elſewhere, and thereof be probably attainted of open deed; and if a man conterfeit the King's Great or Privy Seal, or his money, or bring falſe money into the kingdom, like to the money of England, to make payment therewith in deceit of the King and his people; or if he kill the Chancellor, Treaſurer, or any of the King's Juſtices in either Bench, Juſtices of Aſſiſe, &c. being in their places, doing their offices; theſe caſes are to be adjudged treaſon: And if any other caſe happen before the juſtices, ſuppoſed to be treaſon, they ſhall not proceed to judgment till it be declared by the King and parliament whether it ought to be judged treaſon or not.

But to proceed. It was made high treaſon to wiſh or deſire, by words or writing, or to imagine the death of the King, Queen, or their heir apparent; or to publiſh, that the King was an heretick, ſchiſmatic, infidel, &c. by 26 H. 8. c. 13. And to endeavour to depoſe the King, or affirm by writing, that he is an uſurper, tyrant, &c. was declared treaſon by the 1 Edw. 6. c. 12. But theſe are repealed by 1 Mar. ſt. 1. c. 1. which enacts, That no act, deed or offence, ſhall be deemed or adjudged treaſon, but ſuch as are declared and expreſſed to be ſo by the 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. concerning treaſons. 1 Mar. Seſſ. 1. c. 1. All treaſons were ſettled by the Stat. 25 Edw. 3. c. 2. And by 1 Mar. ſt. 1. c. 1. that act was re inforced and confirmed, and made the only ſtandard of treaſon; the 1 Mar. takes away the power of the King and parliament to adjudge any thing elſe to be treaſon, than what is declared to be ſuch therein: So as no crime is at this day high treaſon, petit treaſon, or miſpriſion of treaſon, unleſs it be declared by 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. or by ſome ſtatute ſince the 1 Mar. cap. 1. All other ſtatutes made between thoſe two acts concerning high treaſon are abrogated; but ſince 1 Mar. ſt. 1. c. 1. many offences are made high treaſon by ſtatute, which were not ſo before; as relating to the Pope, Popiſh Prieſts and Papiſts, the Proteſtant Succeſſion, &c. And to ſay that the King is a Papiſt, or that he intends to introduce Popery; intending death or bodily harm, or a reſtraint of the King's perſon; or to incite an invaſion, &c. and ſuch intentions declared by printing, writing or ſpeaking, the offenders ſhall be adjudged traitors. 13 Car. 2. c. 1.

It was declared treaſon for perſons to ſend any arms, powder, maſts, cordage, &c. to France, during the late war, by 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 13. Correſponding with the pretended Prince of Wales, or remitting him money, is made high treaſon. 13 W. 3. c. 3. And if any one ſhall maliciouſly, by writing or printing, declare that the King is not lawful King, or that the Pretender hath any title to the crown, he ſhall be guilty of treaſon. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 3. Officers or ſoldiers of this realm, holding correſpondence with any rebel, or enemy to the King, or giving them any advice, information by letter, meſſage, &c. is declared treaſon by the 2 & 3 Ann. c. 20. And if a ſubject of Great Britain or Ireland ſhall inliſt himſelf a ſoldier, with intent to go beyond ſea, to ſerve any foreign prince or ſtate, he ſhall ſuffer and forfeit as in treaſon. See 12 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 11. and 9 Geo. 2. c. 30.

Theſe are the chief of our ſtatutes ancient and modern, declaring what offences ſhall be treaſon; and treaſon committed out of the realm may be tried in B. R. as if the offence had been done in the county of Middleſex; alſo they may be inquired of and tried in ſuch county as the King thinks fit, &c. A party, within one year after outlawry for treaſon, may ſurrender himſelf to the Chief Juſtice of England, and traverſe the indictment; and none ſhall be attainted of treaſon but by the teſtimony of two witneſſes, &c. by Stat. 35 H. 8. c. 2. 5 & 6 Edw. 6. c. 11.

All trials for high treaſon ſhall be according to the courſe of the Common law, and not otherwiſe. 1 & 2 Ph. & M. cap. 10. And perſons indicted for treaſon, are to have a copy of the indictment five days before trial, to adviſe with counſel; and ſhall be admitted to make a full defence by counſel learned in the law, and by lawful witneſſes, &c. and there muſt be two witneſſes to the ſame overt-act, or two acts of the ſame treaſon produced face to face, to make out the treaſon againſt them. 7 W. 3. cap. 3.

If one witneſs in high-treaſon be poſitive, and the other is only by hearſay; theſe are not two lawful accuſers within the ſtatutes: But two witneſſes are not required either upon the indictment or trial of treaſon for counterfeiting money, by the proviſo of the ſtatute 1 & 2 P. & M. Offenders guilty of high treaſon by being concerned in the rebellion in the firſt year of K. Geo. 1. were to be tried before ſuch commiſſioners of oyer and terminer and gaol-delivery, and in ſuch county as his Majeſty by any commiſſion under the Great Seal ſhould appoint, by lawful men of the ſame county, as if the fact had been there committed: This extended only to perſons actually in arms. 1 Geo. 1. c. 33. All are principals in high treaſon; and on attainder of treaſon, the blood of the criminal is corrupted; he ſhall be drawn, hang'd and quarter'd; and forfeit his lands and goods to the King, &c.

Treaſon by the Stat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 2. in compaſſing and imagining the death of the King, muſt be manifeſted by ſome overt-act; as by providing arms to do it, conſulting to levy war againſt him, writing letters to excite others to join in it, aſſembling perſons in order to impriſon or depoſe the King, or to get him into their power, &c. theſe acts are ſufficient to prove that one compaſſed or imagined the death of the King, and to make a man guilty of high treaſon. 3 Inſt. 6, 12. It has been a very great queſtion whether words ſpoken can amount to high treaſon: But it was reſolved in the trial of the regicides, that though a man cannot be indicted of high treaſon for words only; yet if he be indicted for compaſſing the King's death, theſe words may be laid as an overt act, to prove that he compaſſed the death of the King; and to ſupport this opinion, the caſe of a perſon was cited who was indicted of treaſon, Anno 9 Car. 1. for that he, being the King's ſubject, at Liſbon, uſed theſe words: I will kill the King, (innuendo King Charles) if I may come to him; and afterwards he came into England for that purpoſe; and two merchants proving that he ſpoke the words, for that his traiterous intent and the wicked imagination of his heart was declared by theſe words, it was held to be high treaſon by the Common law, and within the ſtatute of the 25 Ed. 3. cap. 2. Cro. Car. 242. 1 Lev. 57.

Deliberate words, which ſhew a direct purpoſe againſt the King's life, will amount to an overt act of compaſſing or imagining the King's death; as the compaſſing or imagining the death of the King is the treaſon, words are the moſt natural way of expreſſing the imagination of the heart, and may be good evidence of it: And any external act which may be a manifeſtation of ſuch imagination, is an overt act; but although words may be an overt act of treaſon, they muſt be ſo certain and poſitive, as plainly to denote the intention of the ſpeaker, and be laid with an averment that they were ſpoken de Rege, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 40. 2 Salk. 631. 3 Mod. 52.

The maxim, that no words can amount to treaſon at this day, is not generally true; and notwithſtanding the objection made againſt words being high treaſon, from the ſtat. 1 M. c. 1. wherein it is ſaid, that many honourable perſons, and others of good reputation, had then of late for words only ſuffered ſhameful death, that the ſeverity of ſuch like dangerous and painful laws ſhould be aboliſhed: It was enacted, That no offence made treaſon by words, writing, cyphering, &c. ſhould be adjudged treaſon. It appears from the next part of the preamble of the ſaid ſtatute, that it is applicable only to the ſtatutes in the time of King Hen. 8. which made bare words high treaſon. And in the firſt edition of Hale's Pleas of the Crown it is twice ſaid, that it hath been adjudged that words are an overt act; though in the latter edition it is ſaid, that compaſſing by bare words is not an overt act, &c. 1 Hawk. 41.

Ever ſince the revolution it has been the conſtant practice, where a perſon, by treaſonable diſcourſes, has manifeſted a deſign to murder or depoſe the King, to convict him upon ſuch evidence: And chief Juſtice Holt was of opinion, That expreſs words were not neceſſary to convict a man of high treaſon; but if, from the tenor of his diſcourſe, the jury were ſatisfied he was engaged in a deſign againſt the King's life; this was ſufficient to convict the priſoner. State Trials, Vol. 4. p. 172.

Words of perſuaſion to kill the King, are overt acts of compaſſing his death; and it hath been adjudged, that he who intended by force to preſcribe laws to the King, and to reſtrain him of his power, doth intend to deprive him of his crown and life; that if a man be ignorant of the intention of thoſe who take up arms againſt the King, if he join in any action with them, he is guilty of treaſon; and that the law conſtrueth every rebellion to be a plot againſt the King's life, and a depoſing him, becauſe a rebel would not ſuffer that King to reign and live, who will puniſh him for rebellion. Moor 620. 2 Salk. 63. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 365.

It is ſaid that words ſpoken to draw away the affection of the people from the King, and to ſtir them up againſt him, tend to his death and deſtruction, and are treaſon: But the imagination in high treaſon, without act or word, is not puniſhable. Dyer 128. 1 Rep. Jenk. Cent. 88. If words are ſet down in writing, and kept privately in one's cloſet, they are not an overt act of treaſon, except the words are publiſhed. Kel. 20. But it hath been held, that treaſonable matter put into writing, ſcribere eſt agere; and though it was not publiſhed, but ſent in a box to the King, it ſhewed the intent of the party to be high treaſon. 2 Rol. Rep. 88.

Under the head of compaſſing and imagining the King's death, intention of treaſon, proved by circumſtances, is high treaſon: The law takes notice of intentions to commit treaſon, and mens actions are governed by their intentions, &c. 1 Inſt. 140. 5 Mod. 206. For a man to ſay that he will be King after the King's death, hath been adjudged treaſon: And ſo to propheſy when the King ſhall die; for this may imply a knowledge of a conſpiracy. Rol. Rep. 88.

There muſt be a compaſſing, intent or imagination, to kill the King, to make the offence treaſon; the killing him per infortunium, as Sir Wa. Tyrrel killed King Wil. 2. by the glance of an arrow in New Foreſt, is not treaſon: And though by the ancient law, if a madman killed, or offered to kill, the King, it was held to be treaſon; by the 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. by force of the words compaſs or imagine, he that is non compos mentis, and totally deprived of all compaſſings and imaginations, cannot commit high treaſon; but it muſt be an abſolute madneſs, and total deprivation of memory. 3 Inſt. 6.

If the huſband of a Queen Regent conſpire her death; or a Queen Conſort ſhall conſpire the King's death, either of theſe acts are treaſon: And though the compaſſing the death of the Queen Conſort be treaſon, by the 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. this muſt be intended during the marriage; and it doth not extend to a Queen Dowager. 3 Inſt. 8. And the eldeſt ſon and heir of the King, that is living, is intended by the ſaid act, though he was not the firſt ſon; but if the heir apparent to the Crown be a collateral heir, he is not within the ſtatute; nor is a conſpiracy againſt ſuch collateral heir, treaſon by this act. Ibid.

Alſo violating the Queen Conſort is high treaſon, and her yielding and conſenting to it is treaſon; but this doth not affect a dowager Queen: So likewiſe violating the Wife of the Prince is treaſon only during the coverture, 3 Inſt. 9. And the eldeſt daughter of the King is ſuch a daughter as is eldeſt not married at the time of the violation, which will be treaſon, although there was an elder daughter than her, who died without iſſue: for now the elder alive has a right to the inheritance of the Crown, upon failure of iſſue male: And violating the Queen's perſon, &c. was high treaſon at Common law, by reaſon it deſtroyed the certainty of the King's iſſue, and conſequently raiſed contention about the ſucceſſion. H. P. C. 16.

A Queen Dowager after the death of her huſband, is not a Queen within the ſtatute; for though ſhe bears the title, and hath many prerogatives anſwering the dignity of her perſon, yet ſhe is not the King's wife or companion: And a Queen divorced from the King a vinculo matrimonii, is no Queen within this act, although the King be living; which was the caſe of Queen Katharine, who, after twenty years marriage with King Hen. 8. was divorced cauſa affinitatis. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 124.

At Common law compaſſing the death of any of the King's children, and declaring it by overt act, was taken to be treaſon; though by this ſtatute it is reſtrained to the eldeſt ſon and heir. Ibid. 125.

By the Common law, levying war againſt the King was treaſon: But as, in caſes of high treaſon, there muſt be an overt act; a conſpiracy or compaſſing to levy war is no overt act, unleſs a war is actually levied; though if a war is actually levied, then the conſpirators are all traitors, although they are not in arms: And a conſpiracy to levy war will be evidence of an overt act to maintain an indictment for compaſſing the King's death; but if the indictment be for levying war only, proof muſt be made that a war was levied, to bring the offender under this clauſe of the 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. 3 Inſt. 8, 9. H. P. C. 14. If two or more conſpire to levy war, and one of them alone raiſes forces; this ſhall be adjudged treaſon in all. Dyer 98.

Perſons raiſing forces for any public end or purpoſe, and putting themſelves in a poſture of war, by chuſing leaders, and oppoſing conſtables or guards, &c. is high treaſon: Formerly there was a great riot in London by the apprentices there, ſome whereof being impriſoned, the reſt conſpired to kill the Lord Mayor, and releaſe their comrades; and, in order to it, to provide themſelves with armour, by breaking open two houſes near the Tower; they marched with a cloke on a pole, inſtead of an enſign, towards the Lord Mayor's houſe; and in the way meeting with oppoſition from the ſheriffs, reſiſted them; this was held levying of war, and treaſon. Trin. 37 Eliz. Sid. 358.

Thoſe who make an inſurrection in order to redreſs a public grievance, whether it be a real or pretended one, are ſaid to levy war againſt the King, although they have no direct deſign againſt his perſon; as they are for doing that by private authority, which he by public juſtice ought to do, which manifeſtly tends to a rebellion: For example; where great numbers by force endeavour to remove certain perſons from the King, or to lay violent hands on a privy counſellor, or revenge themſelves againſt a magiſtrate for executing his office, or to deliver men out of priſon, expel foreigners, or to reform the law of religion, to pull down all bawdy-houſes, to throw down all incloſures in general, &c. But where a number of men riſe to remove a grievance to their private intereſt, as to pull down a particular incloſure, they are only rioters; for there is a difference between a pretence that is public and general, and one that is private or particular. 3 Inſt. 9. H. P. C. 14. Kel. 75. 1 Hawk. P. C. 37.

It was reſolved by all the judges of England in the reign of King Hen. 8. that an inſurrection againſt the ſtatute of labourers, for raiſing their wages, was a levying of war againſt the King; becauſe it was generally againſt the King's law, and the offenders took upon them the reformation thereof. Read. Statutes Vol. 5. p. 150. Not only ſuch as directly rebel and take up arms againſt the King; but alſo thoſe who in a violent manner withſtand his lawful authority, or attempt to reform his government, do levy war againſt him; and therefore to hold a fort or caſtle againſt the King's forces, or keep together armed men in great numbers againſt the King's expreſs command, have been adjudged a levying of war, and treaſon: But thoſe who join themſelves to rebels, &c. for fear of death, and return the firſt opportunity, are not guilty of this offence. 3 Inſt. 10. Kel. 76.

A perſon in arms was ſent for by ſome of the council from the King, and to give in the names of thoſe that were armed with him; but he refuſed, and continued in arms in his houſe, and it was held treaſon: Alſo where he went with a troop of captains and others into London, to pray help of the city to ſave his life, and bring him to court to the Queen, though there was no intent of hurt to her, was adjudged treaſon; and in them who joined with him, though they knew nothing but only a difference between him and ſome courtiers: So if any man ſhall attempt to ſtrengthen himſelf ſo far, that the Prince cannot reſiſt him. Earl of Eſſex's Caſe. Moor 620.

To ſuccour or adhere to the King's enemies, give them comfort or relief, or for any perſon to be in council with others to levy any ſeditious wars, are high treaſon: And the delivery or ſurrender of the King's caſtles or forts, by the captains thereof, to the King's enemy, within the realm or without, for reward, &c. is an adhering to the King's enemies, and treaſon by 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. A lieutenant of Ireland let ſeveral rebels out of Dublin Caſtle, and diſcharged ſome Iriſh hoſtages which had been given for ſecuring the peace; and for this he was attainted of high treaſon in adhering to the King's enemies. 33 H. 8. Adhering to the King's enemies out of the realm is treaſon, and one who was beyond ſea, having ſolicited a foreign Prince to invade the kingdom, was held guilty of high treaſon, and triable by the ſtatute 35 Hen. 8. cap. 2. But adherence out of the realm muſt be alledged in ſome places in England. 3 Inſt. 10. H. P. C. 14. Dyer 298, 310. If there be war between the King of England and France, thoſe Engliſhmen that live in France before the war, and continue there after, are not meerly upon that account adherents to the King's enemies, to be guilty of treaſon, unleſs they actually aſſiſt in ſuch war; or at leaſt refuſe to return into England upon a privy ſeal, or on proclamation and notice thereof; and this refuſal is but evidence of an adherence, and not ſo in itſelf. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 165. It has been adjudged, that adhering to the King's enemies is an adhering againſt him; and that the Engliſh ſubjects joining with rebel ſubjects of the King's allies, and fighting with them under the command of an alien enemy prince, is treaſon, in adhering to the King's enemies; and cruiſing in a ſhip with intent to deſtroy the King's ſhips, without doing any act of hoſtility, is an overt act of adhering, comforting and aiding; for where an Engliſhman liſts himſelf and marches, this is treaſon without coming to battle, or actual fighting. 2 Salk. 634.

An indictment for levying of war, or adhering to the King's enemies generally, without ſhewing ſome particular inſtance, is not good; becauſe of theſe words, viz. And thereof ſhall be proveably attainted by overt deed, which follow and are not connected to the treaſons of compaſſing the King's death, levying war, and adhering to the King's enemies; and as theſe treaſons are ſeveral and diſtinct treaſons, one of them cannot be made an overt-act of another. Ibid. There is no neceſſity expreſly to alledge that adherence was againſt the King; but the ſpecial manner of adherence muſt be ſet forth: And it is ſaid, that the ſuccouring a rebel fled into another realm, is not within the ſtatute; for a rebel is not properly an enemy, and the ſtatute is ſtrictly taken. 1 Hawk. 38.

Subjects of the King in open war or rebellion, are not the King's enemies, but traitors; and if a ſubject join with a foreign enemy, and come into England with him, if he be taken priſoner, he ſhall not be ranſomed or proceeded againſt as enemy, but as a traitor to the King: On the other hand, an enemy coming in open hoſtility into England, and taken, ſhall be either executed by martial law, or ranſomed: for he cannot be indicted of treaſon, becauſe he never was within the ligeance of the King. 3 Inſt. 11.

By the word proveably, a perſon ought to be convicted of the treaſon on direct and manifeſt proofs, and not upon preſumptions or inferences; and the word attainted neceſſarily implies, that the priſoner be proceeded againſt and attainted according to due courſe of law; wherefore if a man be killed in open war againſt the King, or be put to death arbitrarily, or by Martial law, and be not attainted of treaſon according to the Common law, he forfeits nothing; for which cauſe ſome perſons killed in open rebellion againſt the King, have been attainted by act of parliament. Ibid. 12.

If a perſon be indicted of treaſon, and will not anſwer, or if he anſwers impertinently, judgment ſhall be given againſt him as taken pro confeſſo that he is guilty. Style 104. On a judgment for high treaſon, error was brought, for that the indictment did not conclude contra ligeantiam, &c. Now though all the particular facts of the treaſon were fully expreſſed, ſo that it appeared that it muſt be contra ligeantiæ ſuæ debitum, yet the judgment was reverſed. 3 Lev. 396. Upon a writ of error to reverſe an attainder in treaſon, becauſe the party convicted was not aſked what he had to ſay why judgment ſhould not be given againſt him, the attainder was reverſed; for he might have a pardon, or ſome matter to move in arreſt of judgment. 2 Salk. 630. 3 Mod. 265. And the omiſſion of any neceſſary part of the judgment for treaſon, is error ſufficient to reverſe an attainder, as it is more ſevere and formidable in treaſon than for any other crime. 2 Salk. 632.

As to the counterfeiting the King's ſeal, this was treaſon by the Common law; and the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. mentions only the great ſeal and privy ſeal; for the counterfeiting of the ſign manual or privy ſignet, is not treaſon within that act, but by 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 6. Thoſe who aid and conſent to the counterfeiting of the King's ſeal are equally guilty with the actors: But an intent or compaſſing to counterfeit the great ſeal, if it be not actually done, is not treaſon; there muſt be an actual counterfeiting, and it is to be like the King's great ſeal. 3 Inſt. 15. S. P. C. 3. H. P. C. 18. And this branch of the ſtatute does not extend to the affixing the great ſeal to a patent, without a warrant for ſo doing; nor to the raſing any thing out of a patent, and adding new matter therein; or to the taking off the wax impreſſed by the great ſeal from one patent, and fixing it to another; yet this, though it be not a counterfeiting, has been adjudged a miſpriſion of the higheſt degree: And a perſon guilty of an act of this nature, with relation to a commiſſion for levying money, &c. had judgment to be drawn and hang'd. 2 H. 4. 3 Inſt. 16. Kel. 80. 'Till a new great ſeal is made, the old one of a late King, being uſed and employed as ſuch, is the King's ſeal within the ſtatute; notwithſtanding its variance in the inſcription, portraiture, and other ſubſtantials: And when an old great ſeal is broken, the counterfeiting of that ſeal, and applying it to an inſtrument of that date wherein it ſtood, or to any patent, &c. without date, is treaſon. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 177. The adding a crown in a counterfeit privy ſignet, which was not in the true; and omitting ſome words of the inſcription, and inſerting others, done purpoſely to make a little difference, alters not the caſe, but 'tis high treaſon; being publiſhed on a feigned patent to be true, &c. Ibid. 184.

At Common law forging of the King's money was treaſon, as counterfeiting it is by the 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. Forging or counterfeiting foreign money made current here by proclamation, is likewiſe high treaſon, by 1 Mar. c. 6. And if not current here, it is miſpriſion of treaſon. Counterfeiting the King's coin, or impairing or lightening it by clipping, &c. is treaſon; but it ſhall work no corruption of blood. 18 El. cap. 1. And as thoſe who coin money without the King's authority are guilty of treaſon; ſo are thoſe that have authority to do it, if they make it of greater alloy, or leſs weight than they ought. 3 Inſt. 17. 2 Inſt. 577. H. P. C. 20. If A. counterfeit money, and another vent the ſame for his own benefit, he is not guilty of treaſon; for it is only a cheat and miſdemeanor in him, puniſhable by fine and impriſonment: But if one counterfeits the King's money, though he never vents it, this is a counterfeiting and treaſon within the ſtatute. And if any man doth counterfeit the lawful coin of this kingdom in a great meaſure, but with ſome variation in the impreſſion, &c. yet it is counterfeiting of the King's money; and ſhall not evade the ſtatute. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 214, 215. Treaſon in making ſtamps, dyes, &c. for coining and colouring metal, &c. ſee 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 26. and Coin.

Bringing falſe money into this kingdom, counterfeited like the money of England, knowing it to be falſe, is treaſon by the 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 5. c. 2. In this caſe it muſt be counterfeited, according to the likeneſs of Engliſh money, and is to be knowingly brought over from ſome foreign nation, not from any place ſubject to the Crown of England; and muſt be uttered in payment. 3 Inſt. 18.

The killing of the King's chancellor, treaſurer, juſtices of either bench, &c. declared to be treaſon, relates to no other officers of ſtate beſides thoſe expreſly named; and to them only when they are in actual execution of their offices, repreſenting the perſon of the King, and it doth not extend to any attempt to kill, or wounding them, &c. 3 Inſt. 18, 38. H. P. C. 17. The places for the juſtices to do their offices, are the courts themſelves, where they uſually, or by adjournment, ſit for diſpatch of the buſineſs of their courts. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 232.

By the ſtat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 39. it is made high treaſon to hold correſpondence with the Pretender's ſons: And if they land or attempt to land in his majeſty's dominions, they are to be deemed attainted of high treaſon. By the ſtat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 30. any perſon impeached by the Commons of high treaſon, whereby any corruption of blood, may make his defence by council, not exceeding two, to be aſſigned him on application at any time after articles exhibited. Aſſiſting tranſported rebels to return, or correſponding with them, if they go into France or Spain, is felony without clergy, by 20 Geo. 2. c. 46. ſ. 2, 3.

High-Treaſon, Appeal of. It was antiently permitted, that any ſubject might appeal another ſubject of high treaſon, either in the courts of Common law (Britt. c. 22.) or in parliament, or (for treaſons committed beyond the ſeas) in the court of the high conſtable and marſhal. The cognizance of appeals in the latter ſtill continues in force; and ſo late as 1631 there was a trial by battle awarded in the court of chivalry, on ſuch an appeal of treaſon; (By Donald Lord Rea againſt David Ramſey. Ruſhw. Vol. 2. part 2. pag. 112.) But the firſt was virtually aboliſhed by the ſtatutes 5 Ed. 3. c. 9. & 25 Ed. 3. c. 24. (1 Hal. P. C. 349.) and the ſecond (i. e. appeals in parliament) expreſly by ſtat. 1 Hen. 4. c. 14. Petit Treaſon, Is where one, out of malice, takes away the life of a ſubject, to whom he owes ſpecial obedience: And it is called petit treaſon in reſpect to high treaſon, which is againſt the King. 3 Inſt. 20. It may be committed where a ſervant kills his maſter, a wife her huſband, or a ſecular or religious perſon killeth his prelate or ſuperior. 25 Ed. 3. c. 2. And aiders, abettors, and procurers, are within the act; but if the killing is upon a ſudden falling out, or ſe defendendo, &c. it is not petit treaſon; for perſons accuſed of petit treaſon ſhall be adjudged Not guilty, or principal and acceſſary, according to the rules of law in other caſes. H. P. C. 24.

Petit treaſon is committed againſt the head, though not againſt the ſupreme head; and if a ſervant kills his miſtreſs, or the wife of his maſter, ſhe is maſter within the letter of the ſtatute, and it is petit treaſon: But this ſtatute is ſo ſtrictly conſtrued, that no caſe which cannot be brought within the meaning of the words of it, ſhall be puniſhed by it; and therefore if a ſon kills his father, he ſhall not be tried for petit treaſon, except he ſerved his father for wages, &c. in which caſe he ſhall be indicted by the name of a ſervant; and yet the offence is more heinous by far in a child than a ſervant. 3 Inſt. 20. H. P. C. 23. 11 Rep. 34. A ſervant procured another to kill his maſter, who killed him in the ſervant's preſence; this was petit treaſon, in the ſervant, and murder in the other; if the ſervant had been abſent, the crime would not have been petit treaſon, but murder, to which he would have been acceſſary. 3 Inſt. 20. Moor 91. v. infra. Where a ſervant intended to kill his maſter, and laid in wait for that purpoſe while he was his ſervant, but did not do it till he had been a year out of his ſervice; it was adjudged petit treaſon. H. P. C. 23. A maid ſervant and a ſtranger conſpired to rob the miſtreſs, and in the night the ſervant opened the door and let in the ſtranger into the houſe, who killed her miſtreſs, ſhe lighting him to her bed, but neither ſaying nor doing any thing, only holding the candle; and this was held murder in the ſtranger, and petit treaſon in the ſervant. Dyer 128.

If a wiſe and a ſtranger kill the huſband, it is petit treaſon in the wiſe, and murder in the ſtranger: And ſo it is of an eccleſiaſtick perſon, killing his prelate, &c. Dalt. 337. If a wiſe and her ſervant conſpire to kill the huſband, and appoint time and place for it, but the ſervant alone in the abſence of the wiſe killeth him; it ſhall be petit treaſon in both: And if the wife procure a ſervant to kill the huſband, both are guilty of petit treaſon; alſo if a ſtranger procures a wife or ſervant to kill the huſband or maſter, he may be indicted as acceſſary to petit treaſon, Dyer 128, 332. Crompt. 41.

Where the wife, and another who was not her ſervant, conſpired the death of the huſband, the indictment was that the wiſe proditorie, and the other perſon felonice gave him poiſon, &c. whereof he died; and the wiſe being acquitted on the indictment, ſhe brought an action againſt her ſon-in-law for a malicious proſecution, and recovered damages; but afterwards he brought an appeal of murder againſt her, upon which ſhe was convicted in B. R. and carried down into the county where the fact was done, and there executed. Cro. Car. 331, 382. Mod. Ca. 217. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 372. On divorce from the huſband for adultery, a woman is a wife within the ſtatute to be guilty of petit treaſon againſt her huſband; for they may cohabit again. But where a man marries a ſecond wiſe, the former being alive, ſhe is not within this law. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 381.

If a clergyman be ordained by the biſhop of A. and he kills that biſhop, it is petit treaſon, for he hath profeſſed canonical obedience to him: And where a parſon hath benefices in two dioceſes, if he kill the biſhop of either it is petit treaſon; but in caſe he kill a biſhop out of the dioceſe where he is beneficed, it is only murder. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 381. A parſon kills the metropolitan of his province, this will be petit treaſon, though he be not his immediate ſuperior. Ibid. In petit treaſon, it is ſaid that there muſt be two witneſſes to the indictment; and need not be to the trial of it, for it is not within the ſtatute 7 W. 3. c. 3. 2 Hawk. P. C. 258. All petit treaſon implies murder, and it is the higheſt degree thereof: And an attempt by a wife to kill her huſband; piracy by a ſubject, &c. were petit treaſon by the Common law. 1 Hawk. 87, 88.

This kind of treaſon gives forfeiture of lands by eſcheat to the lord of the fee, &c. and a man is drawn and hanged for it; and a woman burned. 1 Inſt. 37.

Treaſure, (Theſaurus) Signifies riches and wealth; and as the King's treaſure is the honour and ſafety of the King, for this reaſon mines of gold and ſilver belong to the King.

Treaſurer, (Theſaurarius) Is an officer to whom the treaſure of another is committed to be kept, and truly diſpoſed of: The chief of theſe with us is the Lord Treaſurer of England, who is a lord by his office, and one of the greateſt men of the kingdom. This great officer holds his place durante bene-placito, and is inſtituted by the delivery of a white ſtaff to him by the King; and in former times he received his office by delivery of the golden keys of the treaſury: He is alſo treaſurer of the Exchequer, by letters patent. And by 31 Edw. 3. Stat. 1. c. 12. In writs of error the lord chancellor and lord treaſurer ſhall cauſe the record and proceſs of the Exchequer to be brought before them, who are judges; but the writ is to be directed to the treaſurer and barons, who have the keeping of the records. Under the charge and government of the lord treaſurer, is all the King's wealth contained in the Exchequer; he has the check of all the officers employed in collecting the cuſtoms and royal revenues; all the offices of the cuſtoms in all ports of England are in his gift and diſpoſition; eſcheators in every county are nominated by him; and he makes leaſes of all the lands belonging to the crown, &c.

But the high and important poſt of lord treaſurer has of late years, like ſome other great offices, been eſteemed too great a taſk for one perſon, and been generally executed by commiſſioners. Treaſurer in Cathedral Churches, An officer whoſe charge was to take care of the veſtments, plate, jewels, relicks, and other treaſure belonging to the ſaid churches; and, at the time of the reformation, the office was extinguiſhed as needleſs in moſt cathedral churches; but it is ſtill remaining in thoſe of Saliſbury, London, &c.

Treaſurer of the County, Is he that keeps the county ſtock: There are two of them in each county, choſen by the major part of the juſtices of the peace, &c. at Eaſter ſeſſions; they muſt have 10 l. a year in land, or 150 l. in perſonal eſtate, and ſhall not continue in their office above a year; and they are to account yearly at Eaſter ſeſſions; or within ten days after to their ſucceſſors, under penalties; The county ſtock, of which this officer hath the keeping, is raiſed by rating every pariſh yearly; and is diſpoſed to charitable uſes, for the relief of maimed ſoldiers and mariners, priſoners in the county goals, paying the ſalaries of governors of houſes of correction, and relieving poor alms-houſes, &c. And the duty of thoſe treaſurers, with the manner of raiſing the ſtock, &c. is particularly ſpecified in the ſtatutes of 43 El. c. 2 7 Jac. 1. c. 4. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 18. 5 Ann. c. 32. 6 Geo. 1. c. 23.

Treaſure-Trove (Theſaurus inventus) Is where any money is found hid in the earth, but not lying upon the ground, and no man knows to whom it belongs; then the property thereof belongs to the King, or the lord of the manor by ſpecial grant or preſcription: But if the owner may any ways be known, it doth not belong to the King or lord of the liberty, but ſuch owner: By the civil law, treaſure-trove is given to the finder; but the law of England gives it to the King by his prerogative, or ſome other claiming under him, &c Bract. lib. 3. 3 Inſt. 132. Kitch. 80. Nothing is ſaid to be treaſure-trove, but gold and ſilver; and it is every ſubject's part, as ſoon as he has found any treaſure in the earth, to make it known to the coroners of the county, &c. and concealing treaſure found is puniſhed by fine and impriſonment. Briton. cap. 17. S. P. C. 25. Coroners ought to enquire of treaſure-trove, being certified thereof by the King's bailiffs or others, and of who were the finders, &c. 4 Edw. 1. ſt. 2. And ſeizures of treaſure-trove may be enquired of in the ſheriff's turn. 2 Haw. P. C. 67. See Black. Com. 1 V. 295, 296. 4 V. 121.

Treaſury, Signifies ſometimes the place where the King's treaſure is depoſited; and at other times the office of treaſurer. Cowell.

Treaties, Leagues and Alliances. It is the King's prerogative to make treaties, leagues, and alliances with foreign ſtates and princes. For it is by the law of nations eſſential to the goodneſs of a league, that it be made by the ſovereign power; and then it is binding upon the whole community: And in England the ſovereign power, quoad hoc, is veſted in the perſon of the King. Whatever contracts therefore he engages in, no other power in the kingdom can legally delay, reſiſt, or annul. And yet, leſt this plenitude of authority ſhould be abuſed to the detriment of the public, the conſtitution hath here interpoſed a check, by the means of parliamentary impeachment, for the puniſhment of ſuch miniſters as from criminal motives adviſe or conclude any treaty, which ſhall afterwards be judged to derogate from the honour and intereſt of the nation. Black. Com. 1 V. 257.

Treſpaſs, (Tranſgreſſio) Is any tranſgreſſion of the law under treaſon, felony, or miſpriſion of either: But it is moſt conſtantly uſed for that wrong or damage, which is done by one private man to another; or to the King in his foreſt, &c. In which ſignification it is of two ſorts: Treſpaſs general, otherwiſe called treſpaſs vi & armis, and treſpaſs ſpecial, or upon the caſe. Bro. Treſpaſs. Bract. lib. 4.

Treſpaſs ſuppoſes a wrong to be done with force; and treſpaſſes againſt the perſon of man are of ſeveral kinds, viz. By menacing or threatening to hurt him; aſſaulting or ſetting upon one, to beat him; battery being the actual beating of another; maiming of a perſon ſo that he loſes the uſe of his limbs; by impriſonment, or reſtraining him of his lawful liberty, &c. Treſpaſſes againſt a man's property may be committed in divers caſes; as againſt his wiſe, children, or ſervants, or his houſe and goods, &c. and againſt his land, by carrying away deeds and evidences concerning it, cutting the trees, or ſpoiling the graſs therein, &c. F. N. B. 86, 87. Finch 198, 201. 2 Rol. Abr. 545.

Action of treſpaſs lies where a man makes an entry on the lands of another, and does damage: And treſpaſs vi & armis, may be brought by him that hath the poſſeſſion of goods, or of a houſe, or land, if he be diſturbed in his poſſeſſion; for the diſturbance, beſides the private damage, is alſo a breach of the public peace. 1 Inſt. 57. 2 Rol. Abr. 572. 2 Lil. Abr. 596.

There is this difference between an action of treſpaſs vi & armis, and treſpaſs on the caſe: The one lies where the original act was a wrong in itſelf, and the other where an injury is conſequential to a lawful act; as for inſtance, it is lawful for a man to make a dam on his own ground; but if, by making it, the water overflows his neighbour's land, an action on the caſe lies againſt him. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 275. 1 Strange 634. Entry into a houſe againſt a man's will is treſpaſs; but a man may lawfully come into the houſe of another perſon, to demand or pay money; and if treſpaſs be brought he may plead it ſpecially. 2 Lil. Abr. Treſpaſs lies generally for breaking a man's cloſe; for chaſing cattle, whereby they die or are injured; taking away pales, and breaking of fences, or of doors or windows of a houſe; for driving a cart and horſes over the ground of another, where there is no way for it: Fiſhing in another perſon's pond, and for breaking the pond; for eating the corn of another with cattle, and digging in any man's coal mines, and carrying away coals; for taking away ſo much of the plaintiff's money; tearing a bond, &c. 1 Bro. 338. 1 Saund. 220. 2 Cro. 463. Latch 144. And where a perſon has only the crop and veſture, or paſture of land, he may maintain treſpaſs. Moor 456.

Treſpaſs lies for an accidental hurt, as if whilſt a man is uncocking a gun it goes off and wounds another. 1 Strange 596. But a man ſhall not be anſwerable criminally, by way of indictment, for a caſual damage done to another. 1 Strange 190. Treſpaſs lies for ſetting the end of a bridge on another man's ſoil, though it be a highway. 2 Strange 1004. And for erecting a ſtall in a market, without agreeing for ſtallage. Ibid. 1238. And againſt an officer of the cuſtoms for a wrongful ſeizure, though upon probable cauſe. Ibid. 820. Laying hold of a horſe is no treſpaſs, without particular damage. Ibid. 872.

In treſpaſs for taking goods, the plaintiff muſt alledge a property in himſelf; becauſe in ſuch caſe there may be two intendments, one that they were the defendant's own goods, and then the taking is lawful; and the other that they were the goods of the plaintiff, when the taking will be wrongful; but wherever the conſtruction is indifferent, it ſhall always be moſt ſtrong againſt the plaintiff. 2 Lev. 20. Yelv. 36.

If the defendant makes the place where the treſpaſs was done material by his plea, he muſt ſhew it with great certainty; but if it be a treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit in B. and the defendant pleads that the place where is his freehold, which is the common bar in this caſe, ſo juſtifies as in his freehold, &c. if iſſue be taken thereon, the defendant may give in evidence any cloſe in which he hath a freehold; though if the plaintiff had replied and given the cloſe a name, defendant muſt have a freehold in that very cloſe. 2 Salk. 453. Carthew's Rep. 176.

A plaintiff may make a new aſſignment of the place where, &c. and then the defendant may vary from his firſt juſtification: As for inſtance; an action of treſpaſs aſſigned to be done generally in D. the defendant juſtified the taking damage feaſant; and the plaintiff in his replication made a new aſſignment, upon which the defendant juſtified for a heriot; and it was adjudged good. Moor 540. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 381. The defendant in his plea may put the plaintiff to the new aſſignment; and every new aſſignment is a new declaration, to which the defendant is to give a new anſwer, and he may not traverſe it, but muſt either plead or demur; yet where treſpaſſes are alledged to be done in ſeveral places, and the defendant pleads to ſome, and agrees to the places wherein the plaintiff alledged the treſpaſſes to be done, there the plaintiff may anſwer that part of the plea by a traverſe, and ſhew a new aſſignment as to the reſt. Cro. Eliz. 492, 812.

One action of treſpaſs may be brought for a treſpaſs committed in lands which lie in ſeveral towns or vills, if they are in one and the ſame county; for elſe they cannot receive one trial, as they are local cauſes of action triable in the county where done. 2 Lil. Abr. 595. A man may have one action of treſpaſs for ſeveral treſpaſſes: And if divers actions of treſpaſs are brought for one and the ſame cauſe, the defendant may get them joined into one, if brought to vex him; but the treſpaſſes muſt not be of ſeveral natures, which may not be tried in one action. Mich. 24 Car. B. R. All perſons that are acceſſary to any treſpaſs, may be charged as principals; and treſpaſſes continued may be laid with a continuando diverſis diebus & vicibus; But things muſt lie in continuance, and not terminate in themſelves, or it will not be good: And where a treſpaſs is alledged with a continuance, that cannot be continued, the evidence ought only to be to the firſt act. 2 Salk. 638, 639.

The beſt way to declare for ſuch treſpaſſes which lie in continuance, is for the plaintiff to ſet forth in his declaration that the defendant, between ſuch a day and ſuch a day, cut ſeveral trees, &c. and not lay a continuando tranſgreſſionis from ſuch a day to ſuch a day; and upon ſuch declaration, the plaintiff may give in evidence a cutting on any day within thoſe days. 3 Salk. 360. When a treſpaſs is done before the day mentioned in the declaration, it is good enough; becauſe, being once a treſpaſs, it is always a treſpaſs. Cro. Eliz. 32.

The day is not material, whether laid before or after the time when the treſpaſs was committed, if it is laid before the action brought.

In all treſpaſſes there ought to be a voluntary act, and alſo a damage; and in detinue and trover, where the thing itſelf is in demand, it ſhould be particularly named; if treſpaſs be laid in a declaration for the taking of goods, without expreſſing the quantity and quality of them, or the value, &c. it is bad upon a general demurrer; tho', as to the omiſſion of the value, it hath been held to be good after verdict. Latch. 13. Style 170. 230. Lutw. 1384. Sid. 39.

If the defendant in treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, diſclaim any title to the land, and the treſpaſs is involuntary or by negligence, he may be admitted to plead a diſclaimer and tender of amends before the action brought, &c. And if it be found for the defendant, the plaintiff ſhall be barred. 21 Jac. c. 16.

Where a defendant juſtifies for a treſpaſs, he muſt confeſs it, or it will be ill; And the defendant ſhall never be excuſed in treſpaſs, unleſs upon an inevitable neceſſity, &c. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 379. In a treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, where there is only a force in law: as if one enters into the ground of another, the party muſt be required to go out before hands may be laid on him; for every impoſition of hands is an aſſault which cannot be juſtified upon the account of a force or breaking a cloſe in law, without a requeſt to be gone; but it is otherwiſe where there is an actual force. 2 Salk. 644.

For any the leaſt beating of a man's wife the huſband and wife together may bring action of treſpaſs: And if it be ſuch a beating as he thereby loſes her company, or ſervice, he alone may have this action. 3 Rep. 113. 10 Rep. 130.

But he muſt declare per quod ſervitium amiſit, i. e. that he thereby loſt her ſervice, or company, &c.

Treſpaſs for breaking the plaintiff's cloſe, and beating his ſervant; the plaintiff had a verdict, but could never get judgment, becauſe he did not declare per quod ſervitium amiſit: The ſervant himſelf may have an action of treſpaſs for the beating, tho' his maſter cannot, unleſs it be ſo great that he loſes his ſervice; without which, it is no damage to the maſter. 5 Rep. 10. 9 Rep. 111. Action of treſpaſs may be brought for taking away a man's ſervant; but not for the taking away of a man generally. 5 Mod. 191.

Treſpaſs quod cepit & abduxit lies not for the father for taking and carrying away any of his children, except for taking of a ſon or daughter who is heir. Cro. Eliz. 769. A man committed adultery with a woman in Southwark, where they both dwelt, and the woman went to Ratcliff in Middleſex, from whence the man brought her to Richmond in Surrey; the huſband brought an action of treſpaſs de uxore rapta & abducta cum bonis viri; and it was a doubt whether, upon the matter given in evidence, the defendant could be found guilty in London; but the jury found him guilty generally, and gave the plaintiff 300*l.* damages. Dyer 256.

Executors may bring treſpaſs for goods taken out of their poſſeſſion, or for goods and chattels taken in the life of the teſtator; alſo adminiſtrators ſhall have it for goods of inteſtates; and an ordinary may bring action of treſpaſs for goods in his own poſſeſſion to adminiſter as ordinary, &c. If a man voluntarily take away my goods or cattle, and keep them till I pay him money, on pretence that they are his heriot, &c. when they are not ſo, I may have action of treſpaſs. Bro. Treſ. 354. And if the ſheriff have a writ againſt the lands and goods of one man, and he by miſtake execute it upon my lands or goods; this action lies againſt him, and it will be no excuſe that the plaintiff or any other informed him they were the goods, &c. of the defendant. Dyer 295. Keilw. 119, 129.

He that is poſſeſſed of lands, though he hath no good title, ſhall have this action for a treſpaſs againſt one who hath no right to the lands; but not againſt him that hath right: And yet a man, having right or title to land only by deſcent, leaſe, &c. may not bring treſpaſs, before entry made thereon. Plowd. 431, 546. Keilw. 163. The leſſee for years, after his leaſe is expired, may have action for a treſpaſs on the land before his leaſe was ended. Bro. Treſp 456. An action of treſpaſs was brought by the lord of a manor, for treſpaſs done in the highway, by a tenant's beaſts breaking out of his cloſe into the waſte; and it was adjudged it would not lie. 1 Bulſt. 157. The reaſon of this determination ſeems to be, that the locus was a highway and the cattle had not eaten therein; but that treſpaſs by the lord of a manor, as owner of the ſoil, will lie, is indiſputable. See 3 Bur. 1824.

If A. is bound to fence his cloſe againſt B. and he againſt C. a neighbour; and neither of them incloſe againſt one another, ſo that the beaſts of C. for want of incloſure go out of the ground to that of B. and thence to A.'s ground: In this caſe A. ſhall have treſpaſs againſt C. for he is bound only to fence againſt B. and every one ought to keep his cattle as well in open grounds, not incloſed, as in ſeveral grounds where there is incloſure. Dyer 366. Jenk. Cent. 161.

One drives my cattle into another man's land, I may go on the land and fetch them out; yet by this I am a treſpaſſer to the owner of the ground, and he may have his action againſt me for it, and I muſt take my counter-remedy againſt him that drove them in. 21 H. 7. 27. 1 Rep. 54. If another man have a horſe, or other goods in my houſe or ground, and he enter to take it away, without my leave, action of treſpaſs lies againſt him: But if I drive the cattle or carry the goods of another into my land, he may come upon the land and take them, and no action lieth. 4 Shep. Abr. 135, 136.

If a man hunt my beaſts, in ground belonging to me, or ſome other perſon; he is liable to this action: Though the owner of the land wherein cattle are doing this treſpaſs, may gently by himſelf, or his dogs, chaſe them out, and juſtify the ſame. Hil. 16 Jac. B. R. Bro. Treſp. 421. 8 Rep. 67. If any perſon ſhall maliciouſly maim or hurt any cattle, or deſtroy any plantation of trees, or throw down incloſures, he ſhall forfeit treble damages in action of treſpaſs. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 7. But in action of treſpaſs, if the jury give not 40*s.* damages, the plaintiff ſhall have no more coſts than damages, except the freehold or title of land come in queſtion, or ſomething of the plaintiff's be carried away, &c. Stat. 23 Car. 2. cap. 9. Though the plaintiff, where the treſpaſs is wilful and malicious, upon certificate thereof by the judge on the back of the record, ſhall recover damages and full coſts, by 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11.

In treſpaſs for putting diſeaſed cattle into a cloſe, the plaintiff ſhall have full coſts, though the damages found be under 40*s.* 1 Strange 192. Of the difference between a poſitive abuſe of an authority or licence in fact, and of an authority or licence in law.

The reaſon of the difference, between the caſe of a poſitive abuſe of an authority or licence in fact, and that of a poſitive abuſe of an authority or licence in law, is in one book ſaid to be, that the abuſe in the latter caſe is deemed a treſpaſs with force ab initio: Becauſe the law intends from the ſubſequent tortious act, that there was from the beginning a deſign to be guilty thereof. 8 Rep. 146. The ſix carpenters caſe.

But this reaſon, which equally applies to both caſes, is by no means concluſive: For it may be as well intended in the former caſe, from the ſubſequent tortious act, that there was from the beginning a deſign of being guilty thereof. Perhaps the difference between the two caſes may be better accounted for in the following manner. In the one, where the law has given an authority or licence, it ſeems reaſonable, that the ſame law ſhould, in order to ſecure the perſons, who are without their direct aſſent made the objects thereof, from all poſitive abuſes of ſuch authority or licence, whenever either of theſe is poſitively abuſed, make the ſame void from the beginning; and leave the abuſer thereof in the ſame ſituation, as if he had acted without any authority or licence. And this agrees perfectly with the maxim Actus legis nemini facit injuriam. But in the other caſe where a man, who was under no neceſſity of giving an authority or licence to any perſon, has thought proper to give one of theſe to a certain perſon, who is afterwards guilty of a poſitive abuſe thereof, there is no reaſon that the law ſhould interpoſe; and make all that has been done, under the authority or licence by him ſo voluntarily given, void from the beginning: Becauſe it was his own folly to place a confidence in a man, who was not fit to be truſted. 5 New Abr. 156.

The interpoſition of the law in ſuch caſe would, moreover, be quite contrary to the maxim, Vigilantibus non dormientibus ſervit lex. 5 New Abr. 156. For more learning on this ſubject, ſee 20 Vin. Trial, (Triatio) Is the examination of a cauſe, civil or criminal, before a judge who has juriſdiction of it, according to the laws of the land; it is the trial and examination of the point in iſſue, and of the queſtion between the parties, whereupon judgment may be given. 1 Inſt. 124. Finch. 36.

Alſo it is taken for the manner and order of proceeding, in the hearing and determining of matters in difference, being diverſly uſed, according to the nature of the thing to be tried. Ibid.

And there are many kinds of trials; as of matters of fact, which ſhall be tried by a jury; matters of law that are triable by the court; and matters of record tried by the records themſelves (as whether the defendant be an attorney, or not. 1 Strange 76, 532.)

Alſo ſome things ſhall be tried by the biſhop's certificate; and ſome by inſpection, &c. 2 Lill. Abr. 602.

A lord of parliament upon an indictment of treaſon or felony ſhall be tried without any oath by his peers upon their honour and allegiance; but in appeal at the ſuit of any ſubject, they ſhall be tried per bonos & legales homines. If ancient demeſne be pleaded of a manor, and denied, this ſhall be tried by the record of domeſday. Baſtardy, excommengement, lawfulneſs of marriage, and other eccleſiaſtical matters, ſhall be tried by the biſhop's certificate. Of the ancient manner of trial by combat and great aſſize, ſee Combat and Aſſize. See alſo Staundf. Pl. Cor. cap. 1, 2, 3. and tit. Twelve men.

Nothing that is triable by an iſſue, can be directed to be tried otherwiſe: Irregularities in ſuing out a judgment or execution, are tried by reference, &c. But other matters ſubſequent to the judgment, by an audita querela. Comber. 8, 14.

In criminal caſes, it is uſual to aſk the criminal how he will be tried; which was formerly a very ſignificant queſtion, though it is not ſo now, becauſe anciently there were trials by battle, by ordeal, and by jury; and when the offender anſwered the queſtion, By God and his country, it ſhewed that he made choice to be tried by a jury: But now there is no other way of trial of criminals. Blount's Dict.

It is ordained by Magna Charta, that no perſon ſhall be condemned on any accuſation without trial by lawful judgment of his peers, or by the law. 9 Hen. 3. cap. 29. And the moſt general rule has been, that every trial ſhall be out of that town, precinct, &c. within which the matter of fact triable is alledged, or the neareſt thereunto, for the better cogniſance of the fact committed; and not to have things tried in foreign counties, where the jury are ſtrangers to the parties, to the witneſſes, and the point in iſſue. 1 Inſt. 125. But when an indictment is found againſt a perſon in the proper county, it may be heard and determined in another county by ſpecial commiſſion, etc. 3 Inſt. 27.

Appeals of things done out of the realm ſhall be tried by the conſtable and marſhal of England for the time being; 1 H. 4. c. 14. If any man die here in one county, of a wound received in another; he ſhall be tried by a jury of the county where his death was; In appeal in ſuch caſe, it is to be there brought, and trial be by both counties. Stat. 3 Ed. 6. cap. 24. 3 H. 7. c. 12. And if one be wounded on the ſea, or out of England, and die of the ſame here; or ſhall be wounded in England, and die on the ſea, or at any place abroad; an indictment may be found by jurors of the county in which the death or ſtroke, &c. happened, and the judges proceed in the trial againſt the offenders, as if the felony were there done, &c. by Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 21.

An iſſue being joined in B. R. of a matter triable in Ireland; this ſhall be ſent into Ireland to be tried, and after trial be remanded: Qu Though if an iſſue be thus joined of a thing in Wales, the record ſhall not be ſent there to be tried; but it ſhall be tried in the next county of England adjoining thereto. 1 Danv. Abr. 248.

If a foreign iſſue which is local, ſhould happen, it may be tried where the action is laid; and for that purpoſe the plaintiff may enter a ſuggeſtion on the roll, that ſuch a place in ſuch a county is next adjacent; and it may be tried in B. R. by a jury from that place, according to the laws of that country, which may be given in evidence: Adjudged in action of debt for rent, upon a leaſe made in London of lands in Jamaica; and it was held, that where the leſſor declares upon the privity of eſtate, the action muſt be brought where the lands are; but it is otherwiſe when the action is founded on the privity of contract, the one being local, and the other tranſitory, as in this caſe. 2 Salk. 651.

Seiſin of a houſe in the Eaſt-Indies is not triable here. 1 Strange 646. In covenant the action was laid in London, and iſſue joined upon a feoffment in Oxfordſhire, of lands in that county, and the cauſe was tried in London; after verdict it was objected that the trial ought to have been in Oxfordſhire, but reſolved that by the Stat. 17 Car. 2. it was well tried in the county where the action was brought: But though the words of that ſtatute are, that it ſhall be good, if tried by the county where the action is laid, it hath been adjudged, that muſt be underſtood of a trial by the county where the matter in iſſue doth ariſe; for otherwiſe it would deſtroy the whole law concerning trials by juries. 3 Salk. 364.

In ejectment the venue ought to come always from the place where the lands lie, and not from the place where the demiſe is laid to be made: But that fault is helped after a verdict. Mod. Ca. 265. And by the ſtatute 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. the venire for the trial of any iſſue in a civil cauſe, ſhall be awarded of the body of the county where the iſſue is. Abr.* 609, 613. 23 Hen. 8. cap. 15.

A late ſtatute ordains, that where any iſſue is joined in the courts at Weſtminſter, &c. if the plaintiff neglects bringing it to be tried, according to the uſual practice, the judges on motion made, and due notice given, ſhall paſs the like judgment for the defendant in the action, as in caſe of a nonſuit, and award him coſts; unleſs a judge find cauſe to allow further time for the trial: And no cauſe ſhall be tried before any juſtice of aſſiſe or niſi prius, or at the ſittings in London or Weſtminſter, without ten days notice at leaſt, if the defendant lives above forty miles from the ſaid cities; and when any party gives ſuch notice of trial, if he does not countermand it in writing ſix days before, he ſhall pay coſts to the defendant, &c. Stat. 14 Geo. 2. c. 17.

If a cauſe to be tried, be not entered in the judge's book, two days before the time of trial, a ne recipiatur may be entered, that it be not ſet down to be tried that time. Hil. 22 Car. B. R.

To proceed to trial, in the courts at Weſtminſter, when the declaration is drawn, and the appearance of the defendant made, it muſt be delivered to the defendant's attorney; then it is to be entered upon the roll and docquetted; then a rule muſt be given for the defendant to plead by ſuch a day, or the plaintiff to have judgment: The defendant having pleaded, a copy of the iſſue is to be made out and delivered to the defendant's attorney, giving him notice of trial; in order to which, the venire facias muſt be had and returned by the ſheriff, and then is ſued out the habeas corpora, to bring in the jury, the record is made up, and the parties go to trial: But if the defendant neglects to plead, and lets judgment go by default, a writ of enquiry of damages, unleſs in debt, is to be awarded, of the execution whereof the defendant's attorney ſhall have notice; which being executed, and the damage inſerted in a ſchedule annexed to the writ returned by the ſheriff, a rule is to be given upon it, and coſts are taxed; laſtly, it is carried to the clerk of the judgments, who on giving him the number, roll, and term, when the judgment was entered, he will make out a writ of execution, either a capias ad ſatisfaciend. or fieri facias, &c. for the damages and coſts, &c. Practiſ. Attorn. Edit. 1. p. 99. The attornies now make out thoſe proceſſes, and get them ſigned, &c.

At the aſſiſes, when a cauſe comes on to trial, firſt a diſtringas of the jury is to be returned by the ſheriff, and then the record muſt be delivered to the judge's marſhal; and the record being put into the hands of the marſhal, briefs prepared for the counſel, and all parties ready, the marſhal delivers the record to the judge, and the crier calls over the jury: The jury are now to be ballotted and ſworn, after which, the junior counſel for the plaintiff, (if the iſſue lies on him, otherwiſe the defendant's counſel) opens the pleadings, the ſenior counſel ſtates the caſe. The evidence is given. If plaintiff begins, the defendant's counſel ſtates his caſe, and if he has any evidence to produce, the ſame is given; the plaintiff's counſel then replies, making obſervations on the defendant's evidence, &c. The judge then ſums up the whole of the evidence, and gives it in charge to the jury to act impartially. If the jury cannot immediately agree on their verdict, and are deſirous of going out of court, to conſult privately among themſelves, a bailiff being ſworn to keep them without meat, drink, &c. till they are agreed, they depart from the bar; and when they are all agreed, they return to give in their verdict: Then the plaintiff is called, and if he do not appear, (or his attorney or counſel for him) a nonſuit ſhall be recorded; but if he appears, the clerk aſks the jury who they find for, and what damages, if they find for the plaintiff. The jury naming the ſum, and what coſts, the aſſociate enters it on the back of the panel, and repeats it to the jury, which finiſhes the trial: And after the trial is over, the aſſociate delivers to the party recovering the record with the diſtringas, and the names of the jury annexed, on the back of which he indorſes the ſubſtance of the verdict, and the coſts given by the jury; and then upon the back of the record is ingroſſed the poſtea, which is delivered to the clerk of the rules, and he makes out a four days rule for judgment; and when the rule is out, if judgment be not arreſted, further coſts are taxed, and the judgment is fit to be entered.

But in trials at the aſſiſes, the record and diſtringas are uſually kept by the aſſociate till the next term, when he is to be called upon for the poſtea, and you proceed to have it marked, make out a rule, and ſign judgment; and judgment being entered, execution is thereupon awarded, and writs of Ca. ſa. Fieri fac. Elegit, &c.

If a trial be had at the ſittings after the term, or the aſſiſes, judgment cannot be given thereon, till the 4th day of the next term. The 4th day excluſive, and Sunday not to be reckoned one of the days.

When a defendant is not prepared to try his cauſe, upon petition and affidavit of the reaſons, the judge will order the cauſe to be ſtayed till another day the ſame aſſiſes; or in London till the next term, on payment of coſts: And in caſe, at a trial, the court ſees that one of the parties is ſurpriſed, through ſome caſualty, and not by any fault of his own, they may, in their diſcretion, put off the trial to another time, until ſuch party is better prepared. 2 Lil. 609, 610.

If the matters conteſted are of great value, or the title in queſtion is difficult or intricate, on motion the judges will order a trial at bar, for the better ſatisfaction of the parties; though it is not uſual to grant trials at bar the ſame term moved for: And theſe trials are appointed by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. where the cauſe requires magnam examinationem; alſo officers of the court, and barriſters at law, may inſiſt upon a trial at bar; after which a new trial is not to be granted. 2 Salk. 648, 651, 653. The court will grant a trial at bar for the importance of the conſequence. 1 Strange 52. And where the whole eſtate is of value, though againſt ſeveral defendants. Ibid. 479. And in caſe of a great miſdemeanor. Ibid. 644. No rule for a trial at bar before iſſue is joined. Ibid. 696. It hath been laid down as a rule, that, after a trial at bar, no new trial ſhall be had in any caſe, except it appear that there hath been ſome corruption in the jury. Carthew 507. Sed vide 1 Strange 584. 2 Strange 1105 contra.

New trials may be granted generally in ſeveral caſes, viz. where the defendant had not ſufficient notice given him of the former trial; if exceſſive damages are given; a verdict is againſt evidence; there was any fraud, &c. But a new trial ought not to be allowed for want of evidence at the former trial, which the party might then have produced: And it hath been denied, where the defendant forgot to bring a ſettlement at the trial; ſo likewiſe where very large damages were given, on the report and opinion of the judge who tried the cauſe, that he believed the jury gave a verdict according to their conſciences: And no new trial ſhall be granted for too ſmall damages; unleſs where action of covenant is brought for a ſum certain, and the jury give damages under the ſame, &c.

The reaſon of granting new trials upon verdicts againſt evidence at the aſſiſes is, becauſe the trials are ſubordinate to the courts; and ſuch new trials have been anciently granted, as appears from this; that it is a good challenge to a juryman to ſay that he hath been a juror before in the ſame cauſe.

Adjudged that a new trial cannot be granted in an inferior court. 2 Salk. 647, 648, 649, 650. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 414, 417. 1 Strange 113. After a motion in arreſt of judgment, the party ſhall not move for a new trial; but after motion for a new trial he may move in arreſt of judgment. 2 Salk. 647. A new trial is never granted in criminal caſes, where the defendant is acquitted, if ſome fraud or trick be not proved in the caſe. Ibid. But, on conviction, a new trial may be granted upon cauſe; ſo if a trial on indictment be by a wrong venue; and in caſes where appeal may be brought. 2 Lil. 606, 613.

If the iſſue tried in any cauſe is not joined, it is not a good trial; except it be an iſſue in Chancery in the petit bag ſide, which is to be ſent from thence to be tried in *B. R. Trials in criminal caſes. Firſt the bill of indictment againſt an offender is prepared; and the party proſecutor and others bound over to give evidence, being ordered to attend, the grand jury conſider of the bill; and on examination of the witneſſes, either they find the bill of indictment, or bring it in ignoramus: If the jury find the bill, the priſoner is brought to the bar of the court; and the crier, or clerk of the arraigns, ſays to him, A. B. hold up thy hand, Thou ſtandeſt indicted by the name of A. B. for ſuch a felony, &c. (reciting the crime laid in the indictment) How ſayeſt thou, art thou Guilty of this felony, &c. whereof thou ſtandeſt indicted, or Not Guilty? To which the priſoner anſwers, Not Guilty; whereupon the clerk of the peace ſays, Culprit, How wilt thou be tried? And the offender anſwers by God and my country: when the priſoner has pleaded Not Guilty, (which is the common plea) it is to be recorded; and then the petty jury are called upon the panel, and a full jury appearing, the priſoner is told they are to paſs upon his life and death, and that he may challenge any of them before they are ſworn; for not being indifferent, but partial, or other defect, &c. Then the jury are ſworn well and truly to try the priſoner, and to bring in a true verdict, this being done, the indictment is recited, and the jury are acquainted with the particular crimes of which the priſoner ſtands indicted; and the clerk of the peace ſays, To which indictment he hath pleaded Not Guilty, and for his trial hath put himſelf upon God and his country, which country you are: ſo that you (the jury) are to inquire whether he be guilty of the felony, &c. whereof he ſtands indicted, or not? If you find him Guilty, you are to make enquiry into what goods and chattels he had at the time that the ſaid felony, &c. was committed, or at any time ſince: And if you find him not Guilty, you ſhall inquire whether he did fly for it; and if he fled for it, what goods, &c. he had at the time of his flight; but if you find him Not Guilty, and that he did not fly, you ſhall then ſay no more. Then the clerk of the peace ſwears the witneſſes to give true evidence; to ſpeak the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and when the evidence is given to the jury concerning the priſoner, the jury (if they go out of the court to conſider of their verdict) are to be kept in a room, by a ſworn bailiff appointed, without meat, drink, fire or candle; and without any perſons ſpeaking to them, till they bring in their verdict. All things being given in charge, the jury go to their room, and conſider of the matter; when they are all agreed, and returned within or near the bar, the priſoner is brought forth, and the jury are called over; who all appearing, and the priſoner being ſet to the bar, the clerk of the peace ſays to them, Look upon the priſoner, you gentlemen of the jury; How ſay you, Is A. B. Guilty of the felony, &c. of which he ſtands indicted, or Not guilty? If the jury ſay Not guilty, it is recorded, and the priſoner taken away; if they ſay Guilty, the clerk of the peace, ſays Gentlemen of the jury, hearken to your verdict as the court hath recorded it; You ſay A. B. is guilty of the felony, &c. whereof he ſtands indicted: To which they anſwer Yes: Then proclamation is made for all perſons to keep ſilence, on which the priſoner is ſet to the bar, and ſentence paſſed upon him; after which an order or warrant is made for his execution.

This is the manner of proceeding againſt common criminals; the court is to be of counſel with the priſoner, and ought to adviſe him for his good, not taking advantage too ſtrictly againſt him. *Mod. Triors, Triours, or Triers, Are ſuch as are choſen by the court to examine whether a challenge made to the panel of jurors, or any of them, be juſt or not. Broke 122.

Triors, Lords. On the trial of a peer, in parliament, a precept was formerly iſſued to ſummon only eighteen or twenty, ſelected from the body of the peers: then the number came to be indefinite; and the cuſtom was, for the Lord High Steward to ſummon as many as he thought proper (but of late years, preceding the following Stat. not leſs than twenty-three) and that thoſe lords only ſhould ſit upon the trial, which threw a monſtrous weight of power into the hands of the crown, and this it's great officer; of ſelecting only ſuch peers as the then predominant party ſhould moſt approve of. But now by ſtat. 7 W. 3. c. 3. upon all trials of peers for treaſon or miſpriſion; all the peers who have a right to ſit and vote in parliament ſhall be ſummoned at leaſt twenty days before ſuch trial, to appear and vote therein; and every lord appearing ſhall vote in the trial of ſuch peer, firſt taking the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy, and ſubſcribing the declaration againſt popery. See Black. Com. 4 V. 259, 260.

Triors of Jurors. Jurors may be challenged propter affectum, for ſuſpicion of biaſs or partiality. This may be either a principal challenge or to the favour.

A principal challenge is ſuch, where the cauſe aſſigned carries with it, prima facie, evident marks of ſuſpicion, either of malice or favour: as, that a juror is of kin to either party within the ninth degree; that he has been arbitrator, has an intereſt in the cauſe, &c. See Challenge.

Challenges to the favour, are where the party hath no principal challenge; but objects only ſome probable circumſtances of ſuſpicion, as acquaintance and the like; the validity of which muſt be left to the determination of triors, whoſe office it is to decide whether the juror be favourable or unfavourable.

The triors, in caſe the firſt man called be challenged, are two indifferent perſons, named by the court; and, if they try one man and find him indifferent, he ſhall be ſworn; and then he and the two triors ſhall try the next; and when another is found indifferent and ſworn, the two triors ſhall be ſuperſeded, and the two firſt ſworn on the jury ſhall try the next. *Co. Tronage, (Tronagium) Is a cuſtomary duty or toll for weighing of wool: According to Fleta, trona is a beam to weigh with, mentioned in the ſtat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 25. And tronage was uſed for the weighing of wool in a ſtaple or publick mart, by a common trona or beam; which for the tronage of wool in London, was fixed at Leaden-Hall. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 12. The mayor and commonalty of London, are ordained keepers of the beams and weights for weighing merchants commodities, with power to aſſign clerks, and porters, &c. of the great beam and balance; which weighing of goods and wares is called Tronage; And no ſtranger ſhall buy any goods in London, before they are weighed at the King's beam, on pain of forfeiture. Trover, (From the Fr. Trouver, i. e. invenire) Is an action which a man hath againſt one, that, having found any of his goods, refuſeth to deliver them upon demand: Or if another hath in his poſſeſſion my goods, by delivery to him, or otherwiſe, and he ſells or makes uſe of them without my conſent, this is a converſion for which trover lies; ſo if he doth not actually convert them, but doth not deliver them to me on demand. 2 Lill. Abr. 618. The refuſal to deliver, on demand, is only evidence of a converſion.

It is called Trover and Converſion, and is a ſpecial action of the caſe, brought to recover damages to the value of the goods, &c. In this action, the plaintiff ſurmiſeth that he loſt ſuch and ſuch goods, and that the defendant hath found them, and converted them to his own uſe at ſuch a place; but the loſing is but a mere ſuggeſtion, and not material: For if the plaintiff delivered the goods to the defendant; or if the defendant take the goods in his preſence, &c. this action lies againſt him, if there be a converſion; which is the point of the action, and therefore muſt be particularly alledged: If a man finds goods, he may take poſſeſſion of them, and no action lies; but he ought not to abuſe or uſe them, for therein lies the offence: And where a man finds my goods, and refuſeth to deliver them upon demand, it is a converſion in law; but if he anſwers that he knows not whether I am the true owner or not, and therefore denies to deliver them; this is no converſion if he keeps them from me. 1 Danv. Abr. 21, 22. 23. A perſon finds the goods of another, and uſes or wilfully abuſes them; as if it be paper, and he put it into water, or the like, this action of trover lies againſt him: But not for any negligence in the keeping of them; as where one finds another's garment, and ſuffers it to be moth-eaten, &c. here no action will lie. 1 Cro. 219.

If in trover, an actual converſion cannot be proved, then proof is to be had of a demand made, before the action brought, of the thing for which the action is commenced, and that the thing demanded was not delivered: in this caſe, though an actual converſion may not be proved, a demand, and refuſing to deliver the things demanded, is a ſufficient evidence to the jury that he converted the ſame, till it appears to the contrary. 10 Rep. 56, 491. 2 Lill. 619. Such evidence will intitle the plaintiff to a verdict, unleſs the defendant can ſhew a legal cauſe of detention, as, a lien, &c.

Where a defendant comes to the poſſeſſion by finding, denial is a converſion; but if he had the goods, &c. by delivery, there denial is no converſion, but evidence of a converſion: And in both caſes, the defendant hath a lawful poſſeſſion, either by finding or by delivery; and where the poſſeſſion is lawful, the plaintiff muſt ſhew a demand and a refuſal, to make a converſion: Though if the poſſeſſion was tortious, as if the defendant takes away the plaintiff's hat, the very taking is a ſufficient proof of the converſion, without proving a demand and refuſal. Sid. 264. 3 Salk. 365.

By Holt, Chief Juſtice, the denial of goods to him, who hath a right to demand them, is a converſion; and after a demand and refuſal, if the defendant tender the goods, and the plaintiff refuſe to receive them, that will go only in mitigation of damages; not to the right of the action of trover, for the plaintiff may have that ſtill. Mod. Caſ. 212. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 424, 425. An action of trover and converſion may be brought for goods, although the goods come into poſſeſſion of the plaintiff before the action is brought; which doth not purge the wrong, or make ſatisfaction for that which was done to the plaintiff by detaining the goods: If a man takes my horſe and rides him, and afterwards delivers him to me, trover lies againſt him; for this is a converſion, and the re-delivery is no bar to the action. 1 Danv. Abr. 21. 2 Lill. 618.

If goods are delivered to one to deliver over to another, and he to whom they were firſt delivered do afterwards refuſe to deliver them over, and converts them to his own uſe; he is liable to action of trover not only by him who firſt delivered them, but alſo by him to whom they were to be delivered: And a plaintiff may chuſe to have his action of trover againſt the firſt finder of goods; or any other who gets them afterwards by ſale, &c. 1 Bulſt. 68. 1 Leon. 183 If a common carrier has goods delivered to him to carry to a certain place, and a ſtranger takes them out of his poſſeſſion, and converts the goods to his own uſe; action of trover and converſion lies for the carrier againſt him. 1 Mod. 31.

Trover doth lie againſt a common carrier for negligence in loſing goods; though it doth not for an actual wrong: And if goods are ſtolen from a carrier, he may not be charged in trover and converſion; but action upon the caſe on the cuſtom of the realm, &c. 2 Salk. 655. It has been held, that where goods are ſtolen, and before proſecution of the offender by indictment the party robbed brings action of trover, it lies not; for ſo felonies might be compounded: but where A. ſteals the goods or money of B. and is convicted, and hath his clergy, upon the proſecution of B. If he brings trover and converſion for the money, and on not guilty pleaded this ſpecial matter is found, the plaintiff ſhall recover. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 546.

If upon a fieri facias the ſheriff takes goods in execution, and, before the ſale of them, a ſtranger takes them away and converts them to his own uſe; the ſheriff may have an action of trover and converſion, as he had a lawful poſſeſſion, and is anſwerable for them. 2 Saund 47. And an executor may have trover for the goods of the teſtator; the law gives him a property, which draweth the poſſeſſion to it, though there be not an actual poſſeſſion. Latch. 214. There muſt be a right or property in the goods, or a lawful poſſeſſion, &c. which is to be proved by the plaintiff in trover, before the goods came to the defendant's hands: And if a man finds his goods loſt in the hands of another, if he bought them in open fair or market; this alters the property, and he cannot recover them. 1 Inſt. 498. 1 Danv. 23. Adjudged that trover lay for the finder of a jewel, againſt a goldſmith who defrauded him of it. Ibid 505. Drawing out part of a veſſel, and filling it up with water, is converſion of all the liquor. Ibid. 576. A recovery in trover veſts the property of the goods in the defendant. 2 Strange 1078. In trover, the plaintiff may declare upon a devenerunt ad manus generally; or ſpecially per inventionem devenerunt: And the plea on the defendant's part is commonly not guilty, on which the ſpecial matter may be given in evidence, to prove the plaintiff hath no cauſe of action; or to intitle the defendant to the thing in controverſy. 2 Bulſt. 313. Wood's Inſt. 540. Vide alſo, 2 Salk. 654. Yelv. 198. Cro. Car. 27. 2 Lill. 622.

In trover for a bond, the plaintiff need not ſhew the date; for the bond being loſt or converted, he may not know the date: and if he ſhould ſet out the date, and miſtake it, he would fail in his action. Cro. Car. 262. If the defendant find the bond, and receive the money, action of account lieth againſt the receiver, and not trover. Cro. Eliz. 723.

The place of converſion muſt be generally mentioned in trover, or it will be naught. Cro. Eliz. 78, 79. And yet where the trover of goods is in one county, and the converſion in another county, the action brought for theſe goods may be laid in the county where the converſion was, or in any other county, as it is only a tranſitory action; and neither the place of trover, nor converſion, are traverſable. Paſch. 23 Car. B. R. If there be trover, before the marriage of a female plaintiff, and converſion afterwards; the huſband and wife may join, and it will be good. 2 Lev. 107.

Trover lies againſt baron and feme, ſetting forth that they converted the goods to the uſe of the huſband; for the feme may be a treſpaſſer, and convert them to the huſband's uſe, or the uſe of the ſtranger, but not to her own uſe; and if the converſion be laid ad uſum of herſelf and huſband, or ad uſum proprium, &c. it will not be good. Cro. Car. 494. In trover the plaintiff may lay a converſion here, and prove it in Ireland; it is otherwiſe in treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, for there the party cannot prove the treſpaſs but where it lies, nor lay it in any other place than where it is. Stile 331. 1 Mod. Entr. Engl. 393.

Action of trover or detinue, at the plaintiff's election, may be brought for goods detained; for it is but juſtice that the party ſhould have his goods detained if they may be had, or elſe damages to the value for the detaining and converſion of them. 2 Lil. Abr. 618. And treſpaſs or trover, lies for the ſame thing; though they cannot be brought in one declaration: And the allegation of the converſion of the goods in treſpaſs, is for aggravation of the damages, &c. Bro. Jac. 50. Lutw. 1526.

Detinue doth not lie for money numbered; but trover and converſion lies for it: For though, in the finding and converting generally, the money of one perſon cannot be diſtinguiſhed from that of another, all money being alike; yet the proof that the plaintiff loſt, and defendant converted ſo much, maintains the action, if the verdict finds it. Jenk. Cent. 208. Where money is given to a perſon to keep, though it be not in bags, action of trover will lie; becauſe this action is not to recover the money, but damages. Poph. 91. 3 Salk. 365. In caſe a maſter delivers corn to his ſervant to ſell, who does ſo and converts the money, the maſter may bring trover againſt the ſervant. 2 Bulſt. 307 1 Roll's Rep. 59. Money had and received would be better.

There is no proper plea in action of trover, where it lies, but the general iſſue not guilty; on which the defendant may give in evidence that the goods and money were not the plaintiff's. Bro. 109. Trover lieth not for any part of a freehold; but if doors fixed are removed and converted, it will lie. Wood's Inſt. 540. In trover, the defendant may not wage his law, as he may in detinue; wherefore it often takes place of that action. See Detinue and Black. Com. 3 V. 151. 4 V. 356.

Truſſa, A truſs or bundle of corn; mentioned among the cuſtomary ſervices done by tenants. Cartular S. Edmund MS.

Truſt, (Fiducia, confidentia,) Is a confidence which one man repoſes in another—but, as generally uſed in law, it is a right to receive the profits of land, and to diſpoſe of the land itſelf (in many caſes) for particular purpoſes, as directed by the lawful owner, or pointed out by ſettlement, &c. or that deed of conveyance which created the truſt. A truſt is but a new name given to an uſe.—If a perſon in whom a truſt is repoſed, breaks or doth not perform the ſame, the remedy is by bill in Chancery, the Common law generally taking no notice of truſts. 2 Lill. Abr. 624. A truſt and uſe were all one at Common law, till the Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. which diſtinguiſhes them: The method of making conveyances by way of truſt, was invented to evade the ſtatute of uſes; and theſe conveyances are not ſo much favoured in law, as plain and direct conveyances of eſtates. Paſch. 23 Car. B. R.

Truſts and legal eſtates are to be governed by the ſame rules; and this is a maxim which has univerſally prevailed. It is ſo in the rules of deſcent, as in gavelkind, and borough Engliſh lands; there is a poſſeſſio fratris of a truſt, as well as of a legal eſtate. The like rules in limitations, and alſo of barring entails of truſts, as of legal eſtates; per the maſter of the rolls, who ſaid he thought there was no exception out of this general rule, nor is there any reaſon that there ſhould; and that it would be impoſſible to fix boundaries, and ſhew how far, and no farther, it ought to go; and that perhaps in early times the neceſſity of keeping thereto was not ſeen, or thoroughly conſidered. 2 P. Wms's Rep. 645. Sutton v. Sutton.

Declarations and creations of truſt, of lands, tenements or hereditaments, are to be in writing, ſigned by the party empowered to declare ſuch truſt, &c. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. In the explanation of this ſtatute, it is provided, that this ſhall not extend to reſulting truſts, or truſts ariſing by implication or conſtruction of law: which ſhall be of like force as before that act. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. And there is a ſtatute by which infants ſeiſed of eſtates in fee in truſt, may make conveyances of ſuch eſtates, by order of the Chancery. 7 Ann. c. 19. If a man buys land in another perſon's name, and pays the money for the land, this will be a truſt for him that paid the money, though there be no deed declaring the truſt; becauſe the ſtatute of fraud extends not to truſts raiſed by the implication of law: And a bare declaration by parol; on a deed aſſigned, may prevent any reſulting truſt to the aſſignor. 2 Vent. Rep. 361. 2 Vern. 294. Where there has been fraud in gaining a conveyance from another, that is a reaſon of making the grantee conſidered as a truſtee: But the Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. relates only to equitable truſts and intereſt, and not an uſe, which is a legal eſtate. 1 P. Williams 113.

There are only two kinds of truſts by operation of law; either where the deed or conveyance has been taken in the name of one man, and the purchaſe-money paid by another; or where the owner of an eſtate has made a voluntary conveyance of it, and declared the truſt with regard to one part to be for another perſon, but hath been ſilent as to the other part: in which caſe he himſelf ought to have the benefit of that, it being plainly his intent. Barnardiſt. 388.

There ſhall be a tenancy by the curteſy, &c. of a truſt eſtate; but of ſuch an eſtate a woman ſhall not be endowed. 1 P. Williams 109. Talbot's Caſ. 139. See 2 P. Williams 147. A fine and recovery of Ceſtui que truſt ſhall bar and transfer a truſt, as it ſhould an eſtate at law, if it were upon a conſideration. Chanc. Rep. 49.

In equity truſts are ſo regarded, that no act of a truſtee will prejudice the ceſtui que truſt; for though a purchaſer, for valuable conſideration, without notice, ſhall not have his title any ways impeached, yet the truſtee muſt make good the truſt: But if he purchaſes, having notice, then he is the truſtee himſelf, and ſhall be accountable. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 384. Where truſtees in a ſettlement, join with tenant for life in any conveyance, to defeat a remainder, before it comes in eſſe; this is a plain breach of truſt; and thoſe who claim under ſuch deed, having notice of the truſt, will be liable to make good the eſtates. 2 Salk. 680. Yet in caſe a truſtee joins with ceſtui que truſt in tail, in a deed to bar the entail; as it is no more than what he may be compelled to, it is no breach of his truſt. 1 Chan. Caſ. 49, 213.

It has been decreed, that a truſt for a ſon, &c. ſhall paſs with the lands into whoſe hands ſoever they come, and cannot be defeated by any act of the father or truſtees. And though a huſband and wife have no children in many years, and they and the truſtees agree to ſell the land ſettled, &c. it will not be permitted in Chancery. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 391. 1 Vern. 181. A termor grants his lands in truſt for himſelf for life, and to his wife for life, and after to his children for their lives, and then to A. B. This truſt to A. B. is good; though, if it had been to the heirs of their bodies, it would be otherwiſe: And a remote truſt of a term, which tends to a perpetuity, has been decreed a void limitation. Chanc. Rep. 230, 239.

If a huſband makes a leaſe for years, in truſt for his wife, he may ſell it, and it will bind her: But when a truſt is firſt created for a wife bona fide, he cannot ſell it, unleſs ſhe join in a fine. Ibid. 307, 308. It has been adjudged, where a term is ſettled in truſt for a jointure on a wife, or in purſuance of marriage articles, or if the term of the wife be aſſigned by her before marriage; the huſband can neither charge nor ſell it, &c. though if the aſſignment is made after marriage in truſt for the wife, it is then voluntary and fraudulent. Ibid. 225.

A truſt to pay portions, legacies, &c. out of the rents and profits of the lands, at the day prefixed, gives the truſtees power to ſell; if the annual profits will not do it within that time, then they may ſell the land, being within the intention of the truſt: And they cannot ſell to raiſe the money, except it be to be paid at a certain time. Ibid. 176. A truſtee for ſale of lands for payment of debts, paying debts to the value of the land, thereby becomes a purchaſer himſelf. Ibid. 199. Where a truſtee for paying portions, pays one child his full ſhare, and the truſt eſtate decays, he ſhall not be allowed ſuch payment. 2 Chan. Ca. 132. If one deviſes land to truſtees until his debts are paid, with remainder over, and the truſtees miſapply the profits, they ſhall hold the land only till they might have paid the debts, if the rents had been duly applied; and after that the land is to be diſcharged, and the truſtees are only anſwerable. 1 P. Williams 519. And a perſon having granted a leaſe of land to truſtees, in truſt to pay all the debts which he ſhould owe at his death, in a juſt proportion, without any preference; it was here declared, that the ſimple contract debts became as debts due by mortgage, and ſhould carry intereſt. Ibid. 229.

Truſt of a fee-ſimple eſtate, or fee-tail, is forfeited by treaſon, but not by felony; for ſuch forfeiture is by way of eſcheat, and an eſcheat cannot be but where there is a defect of a tenant; and here is a tenant. Hard 495. See Jenk: Cent. 245. A truſt for a term is forfeited to the King in caſe of treaſon or felony; and the truſtees in equity ſhall be compelled to aſſign to the King. Cro. Jac. 513. If a bond be taken in another's name, or a leaſe be made to another in truſt for a perſon, who is afterwards convicted of treaſon or felony, they are as much liable to be forfeited as a bond or leaſe made in his own name, or in his poſſeſſion. 2 Hawk. 450. Execution may be ſued, and lands held in truſt delivered, where any perſon is ſeiſed or poſſeſſed in truſt for another; by the ſtatute of frauds, 29 Car. 2. c. 3.

Truſtees being obliged to join in receipts, one is not chargeable for money received by the other: In the caſe of executors it is otherwiſe. 1 Salk. 318. 2 Vern. Rep. 515. A truſtee robbed by his own ſervant, ſhall be diſcharged of it on account; though great negligence may charge him with more than he hath received, in the truſt. 2 Chan. Ca. 2. 1 Vern. 144.

There is a breach of truſt in ſervants, going away with their maſter's goods delivered them, &c.

Of a reſulting truſt, or truſt by implication of law.

It was ruled by lord chancellor Cowper, that the ſtatute of frauds, 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſ. 8. which ſays, 'That all conveyances, where truſts and confidences ſhall ariſe or reſult by implication of law, ſhall be as if that act had never been made,' muſt relate to truſts and equitable intereſts, and cannot relate to any uſe which is a legal eſtate. Mich. 1709. in the caſe of Lamplugh. v. Lamplugh, 1 P. Wms. 112.

No rule is more certain than that if a man makes a conveyance in truſt for ſuch perſons, and ſuch eſtates as he ſhall appoint, and makes no appointment, the reſulting truſt muſt be to him and his heirs. The truſt in equity muſt follow the rules of law in the caſe of an uſe, and that it would be ſo in the caſe of an uſe is undoubtedly true, and that was Sir Edward Cleer's caſe in 6 Rep. per Lord Chancellor. Fitz. Gib. 223. Fitſgerald v. Ld. Faulconbridge.

Wherever there is a conſideration there can be no reſulting truſt. But if a leaſe be made for years without a conſideration, there will be a reſulting truſt to the leſſor.

Where a daughter's portion was charged upon the father's land, ſhe, at the requeſt of her father, had releaſed her intereſt in the land, to the intent that he might be enabled to make a clear ſettlement thereof upon the ſon. It was declared by the lord keeper, that if this was done by the daughter without any conſideration, there would be a reſulting truſt in the father, whereby he ſhould be chargeable to the daughter for ſo much money. Freem. 305. Lady Tyrell's caſe.

But where a truſtee purchaſes lands out of the profits of the truſt eſtate, and takes the conveyance in his own name; tho' probably, if he cannot make other ſatisfaction for the miſapplication, theſe lands may be ſequeſtered, yet they cannot be declared to be a truſt for ceſtui que uſe, no more than if A. borrows money of B. for it is not a truſt in writing; and a reſulting truſt it cannot be, becauſe that would be to contradict the deed by parol proof, directly againſt the ſtatute of frauds. But if this purchaſe had been recited to have been made with the profits of the truſt eſtate, this appearing in writing might ground a reſulting truſt. On appeal to the houſe of lords, this decree was affirmed. Chan. Prec. 84. pl. 77. Kirk v. Webb.

So where a teſtator impowered the executor to lay out the perſonal eſtate in land, and ſettled it on A. and his heirs: And the executor being about to purchaſe told A.'s mother of it, and aſked her conſent, but took the conveyance in his own name, and no truſt in writing was declared, but it was proved that he at ſeveral times declared it muſt be ſold to make A. ſatisfaction; yet the court (though inclined to decree a conveyance to A. the executor being dead inſolvent) declared it could not, becauſe there was no expreſs proof of the application of the truſt money. *Ch. Turn, or Tourn, Is the King's leet through all the county; of which the ſheriff is judge, and this court is incident to his office; wherefore it is called the ſheriff's tourn: And it had its name originally from the ſheriff's taking a turn or circuit about his ſhire, and holding this court in ſeveral places; for the word turn, properly taken, doth not ſignify the court of the ſheriff, but his perambulation. Crompt. Juriſd. 230. 4 Inſt. 260. 2 Hawk. P. C. 55.

The turn is a court of record; and, by the Common law, every ſheriff ought to make his turn or circuit throughout all the hundreds in his county, in order to hold a court in every hundred for redreſſing common grievances, and preſervation of the peace; and this court might be holden at any place within the hundred, and as often as the ſheriff thought fit: But this having been found to give the ſheriff too great power of oppreſſing the people, by holding his court at ſuch times and places at which they could not conveniently attend, and thereby increaſe the number of his amercements; by the Stat. of Magna Charta, cap. 35. it was enacted, That no ſheriff ſhall make his turn through a hundred but twice in a year, viz. once after Eaſter, and once after the feaſt of St. Michael; and at the place accuſtomed: Alſo a ſubſequent ſtatute ordained, That every ſheriff ſhall make his turn yearly, one time within the month after Eaſter, and another time within the month after Michaelmas; and if they hold them in any other manner, they ſhall loſe their turn for that time. 37 Ed. 3. cap. 15.

Since theſe ſtatutes, the ſheriff is indictable for holding this court at another time, than what is therein limited, or at an unuſual place: And it has been held, that an indictment found at a ſheriff's turn, appearing to have been holden at another time, is void. Dalt. Sher. 390, 391. Dyer 151. 38 Hen. 6.

At Common law the ſheriff might proceed to hear and determine any offence within his juriſdiction, being indicted before him, and requiring a trial, till ſheriffs were reſtrained from holding pleas of the crown by Magna Charta, cap. 17. But that ſtatute doth not reſtrain the ſheriff's turn, from taking indictments or preſentments, or awarding proceſs thereon; though the power of awarding ſuch proceſs being abuſed, was taken from all the ſheriffs (except thoſe of London) by the 1 Ed. 4. c. 2. and lodged in the juſtices of peace at their ſeſſions, who are to award proceſs on ſuch indictments delivered to them by the ſheriff, as if they had been taken before themſelves, &c. 2 Hawk. 57, 70, 71.

The ſheriff's power in this court is ſtill the ſame as anciently it was, in all caſes not within the ſtatutes abovementioned; he continues a judge of record, and may inquire in his turn of treaſons and felonies, by the Common law; as well as the loweſt offences againſt the King, ſuch as purpreſtures, ſeizure of treaſure trove, of waifs, eſtrays, goods wrecked, &c. All common nuſances and annoyances, and other ſuch like offences; as ſelling corrupt victuals, breaking the aſſiſe of beer and ale, or keeping falſe weights or meaſures, are here indictable; alſo all common diſturbers of the peace, barretors, and common oppreſſors; and all dangerous and ſuſpicious perſons, &c.

And the ſheriff in his turn may impoſe a fine on all ſuch as are guilty of contempts in the face of the court; and upon a ſuitor to the court making default, or refuſing to be ſworn on the jury; or on a bailiff not making a panel; on a tithingman neglecting to make his preſentment; or a perſon choſe conſtable refuſing to be ſworn, &c. And he may amerce for offences; which fines and amerciaments are leviable and recoverable by diſtreſs, &c. Ibid 58, 60, 67. But notwithſtanding this it has been obſerved, that great part of the buſineſs of the turn and leet hath, for ſeveral years paſt, through the negligence of ſheriffs and ſtewards, devolved on the quarter ſeſſions. Wood's Inſt. See County Court, and Court Leet.

Turnips. Penalties on ſtealing turnips, 23 Geo. 2. c. 26. ſ. 13.

Turno Vicecomitum, Is a writ that lieth for thoſe that are called to the ſheriff's turn out of their own hundred. Reg. Orig. 173.

Turnpikes. There are ſtatutes continually made for erecting turnpikes for repairing ways; empowering juſtices of peace and other commiſſioners to appoint ſurveyors of the roads to amend the ſame; and alſo collectors of the toll at the places where the turnpikes are ſet up.

Now by the ſtat. 7 Geo. 3. c. 40. all the laws relative to the turnpike roads are reduced into one law. The ſubſtance of that act is as follows:

By Sect. 1. Five or more truſtees for turnpike roads, at a general meeting, are impowered to erect weighing engines, for weighing carriages; and to take 20*s.* (additional tolls) for every hundred weight which every narrow four wheeled carriage, with the loading, ſhall weigh above ſixty hundred weight. So for all broad four wheeled carriages weighing above ſix tuns; and alſo for all carts, or two wheeled carriages, with broad wheels, weighing above three tons;—to be levied as the other tolls, and applied in repair of the road.

2. Not to extend to waggons, &c. having axletrees of ſuch different lengths, that the diſtance from wheel to wheel (of the narrower pair) be not more than four feet two inches; and that the diſtance from wheel to wheel of the other pair be ſuch that the fore and hind wheels roll only one ſingle path of ſixteen inches wide at the leaſt, on each ſide, and having the fellies of the breadth of nine inches at the bottom; but that the ſame ſhall paſs on any turnpike road, and through any toll-gate within 100 miles from London, on paying only ſo much of the tolls as ſhall not exceed one half of the full toll payable for waggons, &c. having the fellies of the breadth of nine inches from ſide to ſide, or for the beaſts of draught drawing the ſame, and not rolling a path of ſixteen inches.

3. Nor to extend to carriages employed in huſbandry.

4. Truſtees are impowered to order the fellies of carriages to be gaged.

5. No compoſition for tolls to be made in reſpect of narrow wheeled carriages.

6. Penalty of 5 l. on fraudulently unloading goods at or before the ſame come to any gate or weighing engine or laying on goods after having paſſed the ſame;—the driver to be committed for one month: And collectors neglecting their duty are to be diſcharged, or forfeit 5 l. at the option of truſtees.

7. No waggon, &c. ſhall paſs along any turnpike road, above twenty miles from London or Weſtminſter, having the fellies of the breadth of nine inches at the bottom, unleſs the ſame be made in ſuch manner, that no pair of wheels (except ſuch as roll a ſurface of ſixteen inches) be wider than four feet ſix inches from inſide to inſide; and that the diſtance from the centre of the fore to the centre of the hind wheel of ſuch waggon, &c. (not being uſed for carriage of timber only) be not above nine feet; on forfeiture of 5 l. by the owners.——Officers are required to meaſure ſuch carriages:——5 l. penalty on obſtructing them, &c.

8 No broad wheeled waggon, &c. to be drawn with more than eight horſes; nor two wheeled carriages with more than five;—in pairs. Narrow four wheeled carriages not to be drawn with more than four horſes, &c. nor two wheeled carriages with more than three;—on forfeiture of 20*s.* and the ſupernumerary horſes. v. ſect. 13.

9. Five pounds penalty on fraudulently taking off any horſe, or altering the diſtance of the wheels, before coming to any gate, &c.

10. And a driver travelling with more horſes the ſame day, than he ſhall have paſſed through any gate with, ſhall be deemed guilty of a fraud.

11. Provided that, where it is neceſſary, truſtees may allow waggons, &c. with broad wheels to be drawn up hills by ten horſes; and narrow wheeled carriages by ſix. —The extent of the hills to be ſpecified in the order of allowance, which is to be certified to the general quarter ſeſſions: And the order, if approved, is to be confirmed, and filed; otherwiſe to be vacated; and after ſuch confirmation and filing, no perſon ſhall be liable to any penalty for uſing ſuch number of horſes, as ſhall be allowed.

12. Provided alſo, that if it appear, that any waggon, &c. could not, by reaſon of deep ſnow or ice, be drawn with the reſpective weights, and by the number of horſes allowed; then it ſhall be lawful to ſtop all proceedings for recovery of any penalty which may have been incurred by drawing with more horſes than allowed.

13. Narrow wheeled carriages not to be drawn by horſes in pairs; except four wheeled carriages loaden with fiſh, rabbits, poultry, calves alive or ſlaughtered, or lambs only.

14. No carriage to be fraudulently turned out of a turnpike road, to avoid the tolls, on forfeiture of one of the horſes, (not being the ſhaft horſe) with all his gears and accoutrements, to the uſe of any perſon who ſhall ſeize and diſtrain the ſame.

16. Driver of any waggon, &c. with wheels not duly conſtructed; or drawn by more horſes than authorized; may be apprehended by any perſon, taken before a juſtice; and on conviction forfeits 5 l.

17. Drag-irons to be flat at the ſole, and of the breadth of the fellies, on forfeiture of 40 s.

18. The owner's real name and place of abode to be painted on the tilt, or moſt conſpicuous part of each waggon, &c. alſo the words Common Stage Waggon or Cart, as the caſe may be. Travelling without the owner's name and place of abode, or with a fictitious name thereon, forfeits 5 l. And without the WORDS required, 40 s.

23. The act not to extend to "any chaiſe marine, "coach, landau, berlin, chariot, chaiſe, calaſh, or "hearſe; or to any caravan, or covered carriage, of any "nobleman or gentleman for his private uſe; or to ſuch "ammunition or artillery as ſhall be for his Majeſty's "ſervice; or to any cart or——carriage drawn by one "horſe, or two oxen, and no more; or to any carriage, "having the ſole or bottom of the fellies of the wheels "thereof of the breadth of nine inches, which ſhall be "laden with one ſtone, block of marble, one piece of "metal, or one piece of timber."

24. But perſons fraudulently taking the benefit of any exemption, forfeit not exceeding 5 l. nor leſs than 40 s.

28. Forty ſhillings penalty on ſurveyors ſuffering any obſtruction to remain on the roads.

30. Direction poſts to be ſet up where ſeveral highways meet; and where the highways are ſubject to deep or dangerous floods; and for guiding travellers in the ſafeſt tract. Mile-ſtones alſo to be ſet up:—Expences to be defrayed out of the tolls.—Surveyors neglecting their duty herein, forfeit 20 s.

31. Penalty not exceeding 5 l. nor leſs than 10 s. on pulling up or deſtroying poſts or banks to be ſet up on the ſides of the roads, for ſecurity thereof, or the parapets of bridges; or defacing mile-ſtones, or direction-poſts; or the offender may be committed and kept to hard labour, not exceeding a month, nor leſs than ſeven days, and whipt.

37. Nuſances on the road may be proſecuted at the expence of the revenues of the turnpike: But proſecutions are reſtrained, unleſs on offender's confeſſion, or proof by witneſſes.

48. Any ſeizure or diſtreſs made for any forfeiture incurred, unleſs by warrant, is to be delivered over to the conſtable till proof made of the offence before ſome juſtice; and if not made within ſix days after ſuch delivery, the diſtreſs to be returned to the owner; and the ſeizer to pay expences of keeping; but on conviction, an order to be made for delivering the diſtreſs to the ſeiſer. Seizer not duly proſecuting ſuch ſeizure forfeits 40 s.

49. All convictions to be on confeſſion; or oath of one or more witneſſes:—Inhabitants competent witneſſes:—Any juſtice (though a truſtee) may act.

51. Penalties, &c. (not otherwiſe directed) are to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale; one half to the informer, the other to the ſurveyor, towards repairs: For want of diſtreſs, &c. offender to be committed, not exceeding three months; unleſs the penalty, &c. be ſooner paid.

53. Proſecutors or informers at liberty to ſue, either as the act directs; or by action of debt for pecuniary penalties: or by action of trover for any beaſt of draught, or other goods, in which the forfeiture ſhall be ſufficient evidence of property to plaintiff, he need not prove any ſeizure or demand; and ſhall have full coſts:—But ten days notice in writing, to be given to the party offending, previous to the commencement of ſuch action:—The ſame to be brought within one month after the offence.

54. Diſtreſs for money to be levied by virtue of the act, ſhall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making it be deemed a treſpaſſer, for default of form in the proceedings; nor ſhall the party diſtraining be deemed a treſpaſſer ab initio, on account of any ſubſequent irregularity.

55. But no plaintiff ſhall recover in any action for ſuch irregularity, if tender of ſufficient amends has been made before action brought: And if no tender has been made, defendant may pay money into court before iſſue joined.

56. Appeal to the General Quarter Seſſions, given.

60. Action againſt any perſon for any thing done in purſuance of the act, to be commenced within three months after the fact committed:—To be local. Defendant may plead the general iſſue, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence:—If the action is brought after the time limited, or made tranſitory, the jury ſhall find for defendant; who in all caſes ſhall have treble coſts.

Vagabond, (Vagabundus) One that wanders about, and has no certain dwelling; an idle fellow: And rogues, vagabonds, and ſturdy beggars, are mentioned in divers ſtatutes. See Vagrants, and Black. Com. 4 V. 170.

Vagrants,)Vagrantes) By the ſtatute 17 Geo. 2. c. 5. They, who threaten to run away and leave their wives or children to the pariſh; or unlawfully return to a pariſh from whence they have been legally removed; or, not having wherewith to maintain themſelves, live idle, and refuſe to work for the uſual wages; and all perſons going from door to door, or placing themſelves in ſtreets, &c. to beg in the pariſhes where they dwell, ſhall be deemed idle and diſorderly perſons. All perſons going about as patent gatherers, or gatherers of alms, under pretence of loſſes by fire, &c. or as collectors for priſons, &c. all fencers and bearwards; all common players of interludes, and perſons who for hire, gain, or reward, act, repreſent, or perform, or cauſe to be acted, &c. any interlude, tragedy, comedy, opera, play, farce, or other entertainment of the ſtage, or any part therein, not being authoriſed by law; all minſtrels, jugglers; all perſons pretending to be gypſies, or wandering in the habit or form of Egyptians, or pretending to have ſkill in phyſiognomy, palmeſtry, or other crafty ſcience, or to tell fortunes, or uſing any ſubtle craft to deceive and impoſe on a perſon; or playing or betting at any unlawful games or plays; and all perſons, who run away and leave their wives and children, whereby they become chargeable to any pariſh; all pedlars not duly licenſed; all perſons wandering abroad and lodging in ale-houſes, barns, outhouſes or in the open air, not giving a good account of themſelves; and all perſons wandering abroad, and begging, pretending to be ſoldiers, mariners, or pretending to go to work in harveſt, not having proper certificates; and all other perſons wandering abroad and begging; and all perſons going from door to door, or placing themſelves in ſtreets, &c. to beg in the pariſhes where they dwell, and being apprehended for the ſame, ſhall reſiſt or eſcape, ſhall be deemed rogues and vagabonds.

All end-gatherers offending againſt the Stat. 31 Geo. 1. c. 23. being convicted; all perſons apprehended as rogues and vagabonds, and eſcaping, or refuſing to go before a juſtice, or to be examined upon oath before ſuch juſtice, or refuſing to be conveyed by paſs; or giving a falſe account of themſelves after warning of the puniſhment; and all rogues or vagabonds breaking or eſcaping out of any houſe of correction; and all perſons who having been puniſhed as rogues and vagabonds ſhall again commit any of the ſaid offences, and offenders againſt this act having children with them, (and ſuch children being put out apprentices or ſervants purſuant to this act) being again found with the ſame children, ſhall be deemed incorrigible rogues.

The puniſhment of idle and diſorderly perſons is commitment to the houſe of correction, there to be kept to hard labour, not exceeding a month. Rogues and vagabonds are to be publicly whipt or ſent to the houſe of correction until the next ſeſſions, or any leſs time, and after ſuch whipping or commitment may be paſſed to their laſt legal ſettlement or place of birth, or if under fourteen, and have a father or mother living, to the place of abode of ſuch father and mother. And if committed until the next ſeſſions and adjudged a rogue or vagabond, the juſtices may order him to be kept in the houſe of correction to hard labour not exceeding ſix months.

A perſon adjudged at the ſeſſions an incorrigible rogue, may be kept in the houſe of correction to hard labour, not exceeding two years, nor leſs than ſix months, and during the confinement be corrected by whipping, at ſuch times and places as the juſtices ſhall think fit, and may then be paſſed as aforeſaid: And if a male, and above the age of twelve years, the juſtices before his diſcharge may ſend him to be employed in the King's ſervice, either by ſea or land. If before the expiration of his confinement he ſhall eſcape from the houſe of correction, or offend again in the like manner, he ſhall be deemed to be guilty of felony, and tranſported for any time not exceeding ſeven years.

Any perſon may apprehend and carry before a juſtice any perſons going about from door to door, or placing themſelves in ſtreets, highways or paſſages to beg alms in the pariſhes where they dwell, and the juſtices may order the overſeers of the poor to pay ſuch perſon 5*s.* for every offender, which on refuſal of payment may be levied on the overſeers goods. Any perſon may apprehend an offender againſt this act, and carry him before a juſtice.

A conſtable refuſing or neglecting to uſe his endeavour to apprehend any offender ſhall forfeit not exceeding 5*l.* nor leſs than 10*s.* to the uſe of the poor, to be levied by diſtreſs. And any other perſon charged by a juſtice of peace to apprehend ſuch offender, refuſing ſo to do, ſhall forfeit 10*s.* A juſtice may order the high conſtable to pay to any perſon, whether a conſtable or not, who ſhall apprehend any ſuch offender, 10*s.* for every offender. The juſtices are four times in the year at leaſt, to cauſe a general privy ſearch to be made in one night, for the apprehending rogues and vagabonds.

To prevent expences in paſſing rogues, vagabonds, and incorrigible rogues, the juſtice is to deliver to the officer a note directing how they are to be conveyed, whether in a cart, by horſe, or on foot. The conſtable is to convey ſuch perſon in ſuch manner and time as by the paſs is directed, the next direct way to the place where ſuch perſon is ordered to be ſent, if in the ſame county, &c. but if in another county, &c. he ſhall deliver the perſon to the proper officer of the firſt town in the next county, &c. in the direct way to the place where ſuch perſon is to be conveyed, together with the paſs and duplicate of examination, taking his receipt for the ſame; and ſuch officer is immediately to apply to a juſtice of peace in the ſame county, who is to make a like note, and deliver it to the officer, who is to convey the perſon to the firſt pariſh, &c. in the next county, and ſo in like manner from one county to another, till they come to the place where ſuch perſon is ſent: And if the officer who ſhall receive ſuch perſon there, ſhall think the examination to be falſe, he may carry the perſon before a juſtice of peace, who, if he ſee cauſe, may commit ſuch perſon to the houſe of correction, till the next ſeſſions, where the juſtices, if they ſee cauſe, may deal with ſuch perſon as an incorrigible rogue, but he ſhall not be removed but by order of two juſtices.

If the vagrant upon ſearch be found to have effects ſufficient to pay all or part of the expence of paſſing him, the juſtice may order the ſame to be ſold and employed for that purpoſe. The juſtices at ſeſſions may direct what rates and allowances ſhall be made for paſſing ſuch rogues, vagabonds, &c. and make orders for the more regular proceeding therein. The high conſtable is to pay to the petty conſtable or other officer the rates ſo allowed, on penalty of forfeiting double the ſum, to be levied by diſtreſs.

When a vagrant is to be paſſed to Ireland, the Iſle of Man, Jerſey, Guernſey, or Scilly, the maſter of any ſhip bound to thoſe places ſhall, on a warrant from a juſtice of peace, and being paid ſuch allowance as the juſtice ſhall think proper, receive ſuch vagrant and convey him to ſuch place, and give a receipt for the vagrant and money on the back of the warrant, on penalty of 5 l to the poor, to be levied by diſtreſs; but not to be obliged to take above one vagrant for every twenty tons burthen of his ſhip. The pariſh to which any vagrant ſhall be paſſed may employ him in work till he ſhall betake himſelf to ſome ſervice, and if he ſhall refuſe to work or go to ſervice, he may be ſent to the houſe of correction.

By the Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 36. it ſhall be lawful for any two or more juſtices, in caſe any perſon apprehended, upon any general privy ſearch, or by virtue of any ſpecial warrant, ſhall be charged before them with being a rogue and vagabond, or an idle and diſorderly perſon, or with ſuſpicion of felony (although no direct proof be then made thereof) to examine ſuch perſon upon oath, not only to the pariſh or place where he was laſt legally ſettled, but alſo as to his means of livelihood, the ſubſtance of which examination ſhall be put into writing, and be ſubſcribed by the perſons ſo examined, and the ſaid juſtice ſhall likewiſe ſign the ſame, and tranſmit it to the next ſeſſions of the peace to be there filed and kept on record: And if ſuch perſon ſhall not make it appear to ſuch juſtices, that he has a lawful way of getting his livelihood, or ſhall not procure ſome reſponſible houſekeeper to appear to his character, and to give ſecurity for his appearance before ſuch juſtices, at ſome day to be fixed (if the ſame ſhall be required) to commit ſuch perſon to ſome priſon or houſe of correction, for any time not exceeding ſix days, and in the mean time to order the overſeers of the poor where ſuch perſon ſhall be apprehended, to inſert an advertiſement in ſome public paper, deſcribing ſuch ſuſpicious perſon, and any things which ſhall be found upon him, and which he ſhall be ſuſpected not to have honeſtly come by, and mentioning the place to which he is committed, and the time and place when and where ſuch perſon is to be again brought before them to be re-examined; and if no accuſation ſhall then be laid againſt him, then ſuch perſon ſhall be diſcharged. See Rogue, Lunatic. For the method of conveying vagrants, ſee 26 Geo. 2. c. 34. See alſo Black. Com 4 V. 170.

Valet, Valect, or Vadelet, (Valettus vel Valecta) Was anciently a name ſpecially denoting young gentlemen, though of great deſcent or quality; but afterwards attributed to thoſe of lower rank, and now a ſervitor, or gentleman of the chamber. Cam. Selden's Tit Hon. Bract. lib. 3. In the accounts of the Inner Temple, it is uſed for a bencher's clerk or ſervant; and the butlers of the houſe corruptly call them Varlets.

Valentia, The value or price of any thing. See Value.

Valeſheria, Signifies the kindred of the ſlain, one on the father's ſide, and another on the ſide of the mother, to prove that a man was a Welſhman. It is mentioned in Stat. Walliæ, 12 Ed. 1. c. 4.

Valor Maritagii. Under the ancient tenures, while an infant was in ward, the guardian had the power of tendering him or her a ſuitable match without diſparagement or inequality: Which if the infants refuſed, they forfeited the value of the marriage, valorem maritagii, to their guardian; that is, ſo much as a jury would aſſeſs, or any one would bona fide give to the guardian for ſuch an alliance: And if the infants married themſelves without the guardian's conſent, they forfeited double the value, duplicem valorem maritagii. This was one of the greateſt hardſhips of our ancient tenures—But, the tenures being taken away, the law is aboliſhed. See Black. Com. 2 V. 70. and Value of Marriage

Valuable Conſideration. Is, in a deed, &c. money, marriage, labor, &c. See Black. Com. 2 V. 297.

Valvaſors. The firſt name of dignity, next beneath a peer, was anciently that of vidames, vice domini, or valvaſors, who are mentioned by our ancient lawyers, as viri magnæ dignitatis; and Sir Edward Coke ſpeaks highly of them. Yet they are now quite out of uſe; and our legal antiquarians are not agreed upon even their original or ancient office. See Black. Com. 1 V. 403. and Vavaſor.

Value, (Valentia, Valor) Is a known word; and the value of thoſe things as to which offences are committed, is uſually compriſed in indictments; which ſeems neceſſary in theft to make a difference from petit larceny, and in treſpaſs to aggravate the fault, &c. But in other caſes a diſtinction has been made between value and price. If a plaintiff declares in an action of treſpaſs for the taking away of live cattle, or one particular thing, he ought to ſay that the defendant took them away, pretii ſo much; if the declaration be for taking of things without life, it muſt be alledged ad valentiam, &c. ſo that live cattle are to be prized at ſuch a price, as the owner of them did eſteem them to be worth; and dead things to be reckoned at the value of the market which may be certainly known. Of coin not current it ſhall be pretii; but of common coin current, it ſhall be neither ſaid pretii nor ad valentiam, for the value and price thereof is certain: The difference between pretii and ad valentiam may proceed from the rule in the regiſter of writs, which ſhews it to be according to the ancient forms uſed in the law. Weſt. Symb. par. 2. 2 Lil. Abr 629. A jewel it is ſaid is not valuable in law, but only according to the valuation of the owner of it, and is very uncertain: But there ſeems to be a certain value for diamonds among the merchant jewellers, according to their weight and luſtre, &c. Hil. 21 Car. B. R. 2 Lil. 628. A man cannot ſay that another owes him ſo much, when the value of the thing owing is uncertain; for which reaſon actions in theſe caſes are always brought in the detinet, and the declaration ad valentiam, &c. 1 Lutw. 484. See Money.

Value of Land, May be intended ſuch as it was anciently, and not adjudged according to its improved value 2 Leon 117. Lutw. 1304. Vide Purchaſe.

Value of Marriage, (Valore maritagii) Was a writ that lay for the lord, having offered marriage to an infant without diſparagement, if the man refuſed to take the lord's offer, and married another woman, to recover the value of the marriage. Reg. Orig. 164. This is alſo colled forfeiture of marriage, forisfactura maritagii. See the ſtatute 12 Car. 2. c. 24. And Valor Maritagii.

Variance, (Variantia, from the Fr. Varier, i.e. Alterare) Signifies any alteration of a thing formerly laid in a plea, or where the declaration in a cauſe differs from the writ, or from the deed upon which it is grounded, &c. 2 Lil. Abr. 629. If there is a variance between the declaration and the writ, it is error; and the writ ſhall abate. And if there appear to be a material variance between the matter pleaded and the manner of the pleading it, this is not a good plea; for the manner and matter of pleading ought to agree in ſubſtance, or there will be no certainty in it. Cro. Jac. 479. 2 Lil. 629.

But when the pleading is good in ſubſtance, a ſmall variance ſhall not hurt. 3 Mod. 227. If the record of Niſi Prius agrees with the declaration delivered, a variation from the iſſue is not material. 2 Strange 1131. Where the original writ varies from the declaration, it is not remedied by any ſtatute of Jeofails. 5 Rep. 37. Though verdict in ejectment was for a meſſuage next the meſſage of A. B. and the judgment for a meſſuage next another meſſuage in the occupation of A. B. This is no material variance, but is amendable by the Stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. which enacts, That all omiſſions, variances, &c. not being againſt the right of the matter of the ſuit, ſhall be amended. Raym. 398. 3 Salk. 368. The original writ in C. B. concluded ad damnum 40 l. and the declaration was ad damnum 100 l. The jury gave 12 l. damages; and on a writ of error brought, this variance was aſſigned; it was held that this had been a good objection in the original action; but it is not ſo after verdict; not being matter in point of judgment, eſpecially as the jury found only 12 l. damages; but if the verdict had found more damages than what was mentioned in the writ, though leſs than what was ſet forth in the declaration, it had been ill, becauſe there was no writ to warrant ſuch damages. 2 Cro. 629. 1 Bulſt. 49.

If a defendant pleads a variance between the writ and declaration, he is to crave oyer of the writ before he ſhall have any advantage of the variance, becauſe the writ and declaration are not upon the ſame roll; and therefore if the defendant plead to it without demanding oyer, on demurrer judgment may be for him to anſwer over, &c. 2 Salk. 658. If in the imparlance roll the declaration is in debt, and in the plea-roll it is in treſpaſs; this is ſuch a variance, that if the plaintiff hath judgment it ſhall be reverſed. 3 Bulſt. 229. When a contract is intire, an action of debt cannot be brought for part of the money, without ſhewing how the other is ſatisfied; if it be, this variance from the true debt will make it ill. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 440.

In writ of error in the Exchequer chamber to remove a record out of B. R. of a certain treſpaſs the huſband and wife hath done, the record certified was of a treſpaſs done by the woman alone; and for this variance the writ was abated, and the record judged not removed. Sid. 269. 3 Salk. 369.

On variance in the perſons or number of acres, &c. between a fine and an indenture to lead the uſes; if the party avers, there was not any other conſideration, or new agreement, but that the fine was levied according to the uſes and intents mentioned in the indenture, it is good. 5 Rep. 25.

Variance of the ſum in a judgment, not cured by a remittit. 2 Strange 1171. A ſlight variance fatal in the name of a corporation. 2 Strange 787. Variance in the chriſtian name of an earl immaterial. 1 Strange 316. Segrave and Seagrave no material variance upon an iſſue of nul tiel record. 2 Strange 889. Variance in names, &c. how ſupplied by averment, that a man is the ſame perſon, and inqueſt of office, &c. ſee Averment, and Pardon. Vide Amendment and Com. Dig. tit. Verdict.

Vaſſal, (Vaſſalus) In our ancient cuſtoms ſignified a tenant or feudatory; or perſon who vowed fidelity and homage to a lord, on account of ſome land, &c. held of him in fee; alſo a ſlave or ſervant, and eſpecially a domeſtick of a prince. Du Cange. Vaſſalus is ſaid to be quaſi inferior ſocius, as the vaſſal is inferior to his maſter, and muſt ſerve him; and yet he is in a manner his companion, becauſe each of them is obliged to the other. Skene. See Black Com. 2 V. 53.

Vaſſalage, Signifies the ſtate of a vaſſal, or ſervitude and dependency on a ſuperior lord: Liege vaſſalage belonged only to the King.

Vaſſeleria, Was the tenure of holding of vaſſals. Cowel.

Vaſto, Is a writ that lies againſt tenants for term of life or years, committing Waſte. F. N. B. 55. Reg. Orig 72. See Waſte.

Vaſtum, A Waſte or common lying open to the cattle of all tenants who have a right of commoning. Paroch. Antiq. 171.

Vaſtum Foreſtae vel Boſci, That part of a foreſt or wood, wherein the trees and underwood were ſo deſtroyed, that it lay in a manner waſte and barren. Paroch Antiq. p. 351.

Vavaſor, Is one who was in dignity next to a baron, Camd. Brit. 109.——Sunt & alii Potentes Regni, qui dicuntur Barones hoc eſt, robur belli: et alii ſunt qui dicuntur Vavaſores, Viri Magnæ Dignitatis, &c. Bract. lib. 1. cap. 8. Spelm. Gloſſ. See Vavaſors.

Vavaſory, (Vavaſoria) The lands that a Vavaſor held. Bract. lib. 2.

Ubiquity of the King. The legal ubiquity of the King is a conſequence of his prerogative. His Majeſty, in the eye of the law, is always preſent in all his courts, though he cannot perſonally diſtribute juſtice. His judges are the mirror by which the King's image is reflected. It is the regal office, and not the royal perſon, that is always preſent in court, always ready to undertake proſecutions, or pronounce judgment, for the benefit and protection of the ſubject. And from this ubiquity it follows, that the King can never be nonſuit; for a nonſuit is the deſertion of the ſuit or action by the non-appearance of the plaintiff in court. For the ſame reaſon alſo, in the forms of legal proceedings, the King is not ſaid to appear by his attorney, as other men do; for he always appears in contemplation of law in his own proper perſon. Black. Com. 1 V. 270.

Veal Money, The tenants within the manor of Bradford, in the county of Wilts, pay a yearly rent by this name to their lord, in lieu of veal paid formerly in kind. Blount's Ten'.

Vectigal Judiciarium, Is applied to money or fines paid to the King, to defray the charge he is at in maintaining the courts of juſtice, and protection of the people. 3 Salk 33.

Vejours, (Viſores, from the Fr. Veior, i. e. Cernere) Are ſuch perſons as are ſent by the court, to take a view of any place in queſtion, for the better deciſion of the right thereto. And it is uſed for thoſe that are appointed to view an offence; as a man murdered, a woman raviſhed, &c. Old Nat. Br. 112. Bract. lib. 5.

Venaria, Are thoſe beaſts which are caught in the woods by hunting. Leg. Canut. c. 108.

Venatio, In the ſtatute of Charta de Foreſta ſignifies Veniſon, in Fr. Venaiſon: It is called Venaiſon, of the means whereby the beaſts are taken, quoniam ex venatione capiuntur, and being hunted are moſt wholeſome: And they are termed beaſts of venary (not venery) becauſe they are gotten in hunting. 4 Inſt. 316.

It is ſometimes taken for the exerciſe of hunting.

Venditioni exponas, Is a judicial writ, directed to the ſheriff, commanding him to ſell goods which he hath formerly taken into his hands, for the ſatisfying a judgment given in the King's court. Reg. Judic. 33. Stat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 21. The ſheriff upon a fieri facias takes goods in execution, and returns that he hath ſo done, and cannot find buyers; or if he delay to deliver them to the party, &c. then the writ, Venditioni exponas ſhall iſſue to the ſheriff, to make ſale of the goods, and bring in the money. 13 H. 7. 1. Dyer 363. If a Superſedeas be not delivered to the ſheriff till he hath in part executed a writ of execution, he may afterwards be authoriſed to go through with it by a Venditioni exponas; as he may alſo in the like caſe after a writ of error. Dyer 98. *Cro. Venditor Regis, The King's ſaleſman; being the perſon who expoſed to ſale goods and chattels ſeized or diſtrained to anſwer any debt due to the King: This office was granted by King Edw. 1. to Philip de Lardiner, in the county of York: Ita quod ipſe vel certus ſuus attornatus ibit ad mandatum vice-comitis de loco in locum infra com. præd. ſumptibus ſuis ad prædict' venditiones faciendas, &

Venia, Is uſed for a kneeling or low proſtration on the ground, by penitents. Walſing. 196.

Venire facias, A writ judicial awarded to the ſheriff to cauſe a jury of the neighbourhood to appear, when a cauſe is brought to iſſue, to try the ſame; and if the jury come not at the day of this writ, then there ſhall go a habeas corpora, and after a diſtreſs until they appear. Old Nat. Br. 157. But where a venire omits part of the iſſue to be tried, or any of the parties; if a juror is named in the habeas corpora, by a name different from that in the venire; or a juror returned on ſuch a pannel is omitted in the habeas corpora; or a venire or diſtringas are iſſued without any award on the roll to warrant them; it will be ill, and it is ſaid to be a diſcontinuance. 2 Hawk. P. C. 298, 299 Formerly many queſtions aroſe concerning the place, or places, from whence a jury ſhould come, vide 2 Lill. Abr. 633. 636. Cro. Eliz. 260. 3 Salk. 381. Yelv. 104. Moor 357, 412. 5 Rep. 36. Lutw. 213. But now by the ſtatute 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. A venire facias may be from the body of the county, &c. In an information againſt a county for not repairing a bridge, it was held, that the attorney general might take a venire to any adjacent county; and that it might be de corpore of the whole, or de vicineto of ſome particular place therein next adjoining. Trin. 3 Ann. 3 Salk. 381.

One venire facias is ſufficient to try ſeveral iſſues, between the ſame parties, and in the ſame county. 2 Cro. 550. And where an action was brought againſt two, they both joined iſſue, and one died; and after the venire facias was awarded to try the iſſue between both, which was done; and held to be no error, though it iſſued againſt a dead perſon, becauſe one of the defendants was living. Cro. Car. 308. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 444. In caſe of the death of one defendant, where the action ſurvives againſt the other, the death ſhould be ſuggeſted on the roll by 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. ſ. 7. If a venire facias is returned by the coroner for defect of the ſheriff, &c. when it ought to be returned by the ſheriff, the trial is wrong, and not remedied by any ſtatute of jeofails. 5 Rep. 36. In all caſes, where there is to be a ſpecial jury, the venire muſt be ſpecial: If the matter to be tried be within divers places, and one and the ſame county, the venire facias ſhall be general; and if in ſeveral counties, it ſhall be ſpecial. 2 Lill. Abr. 635.

If a matter of law be depending in court undetermined, and an iſſue alſo joined in the cauſe, there is to be a ſpecial venire awarded, tam ad triandum exitum, quam ad inquirendum de dampnis, &c. as well to try the iſſue, as to find the damages both upon the iſſue and the matter put in judgment of the court. 2 Lill. Abr. 636. At a trial at niſi prius, the plaintiff changed the venire facias and panels, and had a jury the defendant knew not of; and ruled, that the defendant cannot be aided, if the firſt venire was not filed: And a difference was taken when the firſt venire was not filed, that he cannot be aided, becauſe he may reſort to the ſheriff, and have a view of the panel, to be prepared for his challenges; but if the firſt venire was filed, then the defendant ſhall have a new trial. Raym. 79.

A venire facias after filed, cannot be altered without conſent of parties: Though where a verdict in a cauſe is imperfect, ſo that judgment cannot be given upon it, there ſhall be a new venire facias to try the cauſe, and find a new verdict. 2 Lill. 634, 635. And if a plaintiff be nonſuit on a miſtake in the niſi prius record, and the paper book and roll are right; the nonſuit may be ſet aſide, and a venire facias de novo awarded, and the iſſue tried, &c. Cro. Jac. 669. A venire facias may be amended by the iſſue roll, when that is right, in ſome caſes. 3 Nelſ. 446. Venire is now little more than form; unleſs in caſe of a trial at bar.

Venire facias, Is the common proceſs upon any preſentment, being in nature of a ſummons for the party to appear; and is a proper proceſs to be firſt awarded on an indictment for any crime, under the degree of treaſon, felony, or maihem, except in ſuch caſes wherein other proceſs is directed by ſtatute: And if it appears by the return to ſuch venire, that the party has lands in the county whereby he may be diſtrained, the diſtreſs infinite ſhall be awarded till he do appear; and he ſhall forfeit, on every default, ſo much as the ſheriff returns upon him in iſſues: But if a nihil be returned, a capias, alias, and pluries, ſhall iſſue, &c. 2 Hawk. 283. The venire facias ad reſpondendum may be without a day certain, becauſe by an appearance the fault in this proceſs is cured; but a venire facias ad triand. exitum muſt be returnable on a day certain, &c. 3 Salk. 371.

Venitare, Is the book of Eccleſiaſticus; ſo called becauſe of the Venite exultemus Domino, Jubilate Deo, &c. written in the hymn-book or pſalter as it is appointed to be ſung, &c. It often occurs in the hiſtory of our Engliſh ſynods; and is called Venitarium. Mon. Ang. Tom. 3. pag. 432.

Venter, Signifies the belly; but it is alſo uſed for the children by a woman of one marriage: There is in law a firſt and ſecond venter, &c. where a man hath children by ſeveral wives; and how they ſhall take in diſcents of lands, vide Diſcent.

Ventre inſpiciendo, Is a writ to ſearch a woman that ſaith ſhe is with child, and thereby with-holdeth lands from the next heir: The trial whereof is by a jury of women. Reg. Orig. 227. The law hath provided this writ for the benefit of right heirs, contra partus ſuppoſitus, and it is ſued out of Chancery, and returnable in the Common pleas, &c. And if a man having lands in fee-ſimple, or fee tail, dieth, and his wife ſoon after marries again, and feigns herſelf with child by her former huſband, in this caſe, though ſhe be married, the writ de ventre inſpiciendo doth lie for the heir againſt her. 2 Lill. Abr. 631. Thomas de Aldham of Surry, brother of Adam de Aldham, Anno 4 Hen. 3. claimed his brother's eſtate: But Joan, widow of the ſaid Adam, pleaded ſhe was with child; whereupon the ſaid Thomas obtained the writ ventre inſpiciendo directed to the ſheriff——Quod aſſumptis tecum diſcretis & legalibus militibus & diſcretis & legalibus mulieribus de comitatu tuo in propria perſona accedas ad ipſam Joannam & ipſam a prædictis mulieribus coram præfatis militibus videri facias & diligenter tractari per ubera & ventrem, & inquiſitionem factam certificari facias ſub ſigillo tuo & ſigillo duorum militum juſticiariis noſtris apud Weſtm. &c. And in Eaſter term 39 Eliz. this writ was ſued out of the Chancery into C. B. at the proſecution of Percival Willoughby, who had married the eldeſt of the five daughters of Sir Francis Willoughby, who died without any ſon, but left a wife named Dorothy, that at the time of his death pretended herſelf to be with child by Sir Francis; which if it were a ſon, all the five ſiſters would thereby loſe the inheritance deſcended unto them; which writ was directed to the ſheriffs of London, and they were commanded to cauſe the ſaid Dorothy to be viewed by 12 knights, and ſearched by 12 women, in the preſence of the 12 knights, et ad tractandum per ubera & ad ventrem inſpiciendum, whether ſhe were with child, and to certify the ſame to the court of Common pleas; and if ſhe were with child, to certify for how long in their jugments, et quando ſit paritura; upon which the ſheriffs accordingly cauſed her to be ſearched, and returned that ſhe was twenty weeks gone with child, and that within twenty weeks more fuit paritura: Thereupon another writ iſſued out of C. B. requiring the ſheriffs ſafely to keep her in ſuch a houſe, and that the doors ſhould be well guarded; and that every day they ſhould cauſe her to be viewed by ſome of the women named in the writ, and when ſhe ſhould be delivered, that ſome of them ſhould be with her to view her birth, whether it be male or female, to the intent that there ſhould be no falſity: And upon this writ the ſheriffs return'd, That they had cauſed her accordingly to be kept and view'd, and that ſuch a day ſhe was delivered of a daughter. Cro. Eliz. 566.

In Moor 523. pl. 692. it is ſaid the ſheriffs of London, with a jury of women, whereof two were midwives, came to the lady's houſe, and into her chamber, and ſent to her the women, ſworn by the ſheriffs before, to ſearch, try, and ſpeak the truth whether ſhe was with child or not. The men all went out, and the women ſearched the lady, and gave their verdict that ſhe was with child; whereupon the ſheriffs returned the writ accordingly.

In the 22d year of K. James 1. the widow of one Duncomb married within a week after the death of her firſt huſband, and his couſin and heir brought the writ ventre inſpiciendo directed to the ſheriff of L. who returned that he had cauſed her to be ſearched by ſuch matrons who found her with child, et quod paritura fuit within ſuch a time; and thereon it was prayed, that the ſheriff might take her into his cuſtody, and keep her till ſhe was delivered, but becauſe ſhe ought to live with her huſband, they would not take her from him; but he was ordered to enter into a recognizance not to remove her from his dwelling-houſe, and a writ was awarded to the ſheriff to cauſe her to be inſpected every day by two of the women which he had returned had ſearched her, and that three of them ſhould be preſent at her delivery, &c. Cro. Jac. 685. Theſe two laſt caſes are notable precedents of the form of proſecuting theſe writs: And where women condemn'd for crimes, who plead their bellies, pretending to be with child, are to be viewed, and tried by a jury of matrons, ſee Reprieve, and 1 Black. Com. 456.

Venue, (Vicinetum, or Viſnetum) Is taken for a neighbouring place, locus quem vicini habitant: It is the place from whence a jury are to come for trial of cauſes. F. N. B. 115. In actions of treſpaſs and ejectment, the venue is to be from the vill or hamlet where the lands in queſtion do lie: And in all real actions, the venue muſt be laid in that county where the thing is for which the action is brought. 2 Lill. Abr. 634, 635. The jury now come from the body of the County, in all caſes, by virtue of the ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. But the judges may, in all tranſitory actions, alter the venue from the place where by the law it otherwiſe ſhould be, if they believe, through any juſt cauſe, there cannot be an indifferent trial in the county where the venue was firſt laid; though if a defendant will move to change the venue, he muſt make affidavit that the cauſe of action (if any be) did ariſe in the county where he would have the venue to be, and not in the county where the plaintiff hath laid his action or elſewhere: And if upon a motion the court orders the venue to be altered, the plaintiff is to alter his declaration, and lay his action in the other county, &c. Mich. 22 Car. B. R. Motion to change a venue muſt be within eight days after the declaration delivered; but this rule is not ſtrictly obſerved: It is never granted after the rules for pleading are out; and it is a rule not to change a venue where neceſſary evidence ariſes in two counties to ſupport the action, if the plaintiff will be bound to give ſome material evidence in the county where he laid his action. 2 Salk. 668, 669. If the defendant is a barriſter or attorney, on motion the venue ſhall be changed into Middleſex, and where an attorney is plaintiff, and lays his action in Middleſex, there the venue ſhall continue. Ibid. Where an attorney is defendant he may change the venue into Middleſex. 2 Strange 1049. But not where there is another defendant joined with him. 1 Strange 610. A barriſter may lay the venue in Middleſex. 2 Strange 822. The want of a venue is only curable by ſuch a plea which admits the fact, for the trial whereof it was required to lay a venue. 3 Salk. 381. Vide Venire facias.

It is a general rule that the county in the margin of a declaration will help the venue laid in the body of it, but will not hurt it. See 1 Barnes's Notes, 345.

It is to be obſerved however, that in all real actions the venue ought to be laid in that county where the thing is for which the action is brought; for, being local, it is only triable there; whereas matters which are tranſitory may be tried in any county. 2 Lil. Abr. 782.

With reſpect to criminal caſes it is ordained by the ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. cap. 4. that all informations on penal ſtatutes ſhall be laid in the counties where the offences were committed. See the ſtatute 21 Jac. cap. 4. and ſee 5 New Abr. 327, 329. See Black. Com. 3 V. 294, 484.

Verderor, (Viridarius, from the Fr. Verdeur, i. e. Cuſtos Nemoris) Is an officer in the King's foreſt, whoſe office is properly to look to the vert, and ſee it well maintained; and he is ſworn to keep the aſſiſes of the foreſt, and view, receive, and inrol the attachments, and preſentments of treſpaſſes of vert and veniſon, &c. Manwood, par. 1. p. 332.

Verdict, (Veridictum, quaſi dictum Veritatis) Is the anſwer of a jury given to the court, concerning the matter of fact in any cauſe committed to their trial; wherein every one of the twelve jurors muſt agree, or it cannot be a verdict: And the jurors are to try the fact, and the judges to adjudge according to the law that ariſeth upon it. 1 Inſt. 226.

Verdicts are either general or ſpecial. A general verdict is that which is brought into the court in like general terms to the general iſſue; as if a defendant pleads Not guilty, or nul tort, then the iſſue is general, whether he be guilty, or the fact be wrong or not; which being committed to the jury, they, upon conſideration of the evidence, ſay for the plaintiff, that the defendant is guilty of the treſpaſs, or the premiſſes, according as the nature of the caſe requires; or for the defendant, that he is not guilty of the treſpaſs, or of the premiſſes, &c.

A ſpecial verdict is where they find the matter at large, according to the evidence given, that ſuch a thing is done by the defendant, &c. and declaring the courſe of the fact, as in their opinions it is proved, pray the judgment of the court as to what the law is in ſuch a caſe. S. P. C. 1 Inſt. 227. And a fact may be found ſpecially, viz. Where a perſon is indicted of murder; the jury may bring him in guilty of manſlaughter, &c. Or they may leave the matter to the judges, in which caſes ſometimes it is referred to the Lord Chief Juſtice of B. R. and all the judges, to determine it; wherein it is ſaid a recorder of London who tried a priſoner hath given his opinion; and the King himſelf, to whom the matter was reported. (Sed qu.) 3 Lev. 255. 2 Nelſ. Abr. 97.

There are likewiſe public and privy verdicts: Public, when given in open court; and privy, when given out of the court, before any of the judges thereof; and is called privy, being to be kept ſecret from the parties until affirmed in court. 1 Inſt. 227. But a privy verdict is in ſtrictneſs no verdict; for it is only a favour which is allowed by the court to the jury for their eaſe: The jury may vary from it, and when come into court give a contrary verdict; but this muſt be before the privy verdict is recorded. 5 Mod. 351. No privy verdict can be given in criminal matters, which concern life, as felony, &c. but it muſt be openly in court; becauſe the jury are commanded to look upon the priſoner, when they give their verdict, and ſo the priſoner is to be there preſent: But in criminal cauſes, where the defendant is not to be perſonally preſent at the time of the verdict, and in informations, a privy verdict may be given. Raym. 191. 1 Ventr. 97.

A ſpecial verdict may be given in criminal or civil caſes; and where the court directs the jury to find a ſpecial verdict in a civil cauſe, one of the counſel on each ſide agree upon notes for it, and draw them up and ſet their hands to them; and then they are to be delivered to the jury in convenient time, or the court will take a general verdict: If, at the prayer of the plaintiff or defendant, a ſpecial verdict is ordered to be found, the party praying it is to proſecute the ſpecial verdict, that the matter in law may be determined; and if either party delay to join in drawing it up, and pay his part of the charges, or if the counſel for the defendant refuſes to ſubſcribe the ſpecial verdict, the party deſiring it ſhall draw it up and enter it ex parte. 2 Lil. Abr. 645, 653. Where the parties diſagree, or the ſpecial verdict is drawn contrary to the notes agreed upon, the court on motion will rectify it; and the court may amend a ſpecial verdict, to bring the ſpecial matter in queſtion. Ibid. 646.

The plaintiff and defendant are both of them to appear in court to hear a ſpecial verdict, and the jury is to be called and to have a ſpecial verdict read unto them by the ſecondary or aſſociate; and upon the reading of it, if there be any miſtake in the drawing of it up, the counſel on either ſide may except againſt it; and when the counſel are agreed, then the ſecondary demands of the jury, whether they agree to find it ſo; and if they anſwer they do, the verdict is found; and it is to be afterwards entered, &c. Paſch. 23 Car. B. R. 2 Lil. 646. A ſpecial verdict, though agreed to by the counſel, &c. is not a ſpecial verdict until allowed by the court. Ibid.

In all caſes and all actions, the jury may give a general or ſpecial verdict; and the court is bound to receive it, if pertinent to the point in iſſue; and if the jury doubt, they may refer themſelves to the court, but are not bound ſo to do. 3 Salk. 373. Though the plaintiff and defendant in a cauſe conſent to have the jury find a ſpecial verdict, yet they may find a general verdict; but this is not uſual: And if the jury will take upon them to find, againſt the directions of the court, any thing in matter of law, the court will receive the verdict; but if they give a falſe verdict, they are liable to attaint. Paſch. 23 Car.

The ancient courſe of laying a fine on jurors, barely for giving a verdict contrary to the directions of the court, is condemned as illegal, and diſuſed: And it is the ſame if the verdict be given againſt evidence: for the jury may give it againſt evidence, if they know the facts themſelves. Kel. 50, 58. If jurors eat or drink any thing at the charge of him for whom they give their verdict, before they are agreed; or if by caſting of lots they find for the plaintiff or defendant; if any writing, letter, &c. be delivered by the plaintiff, or in his behalf to the jury, concerning the matter in iſſue, after the jury are gone from the bar, and the verdict is found for the plaintiff; or either of the parties, their attornies or ſolicitors, ſpeak any thing to the jury before agreed on their verdict, which relates to the cauſe; as that it is a clear cauſe, or I hope you will find for ſuch a perſon; or if any witneſs be ſent for by the jury, after gone from the bar, and he repeats his evidence again, &c. In theſe caſes the verdict ſhall be void and ſet aſide: But though where the jury eat and drink at the charge of the plaintiff, and the verdict being found for him, it is void; it is not ſo if given for the defendant: And if the plaintiff, after the jury are gone from the bar, deliver any writing to any of the jurors, although the verdict ſhall be void if given for the plaintiff; it is otherwiſe if given for the defendant, and ſic e converſo, &c. Alſo if the jury have eat or drank after they went from the bar, and before they gave their verdict, this ought to be ſhewn before the verdict is given. 1 Inſt. 227. 1 Ventr. 125. 2 Lev. 140. Moor 17. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 454.

A juryman withdrawing from his fellows, or keeping them from giving their verdict, without giving good reaſon for it ſhall be fined; but if he differ from them in judgment, he ſhall not: And although jurymen are puniſhable for miſdemeanors, every miſdemeanor of the jury before they give their verdict, is not a ſufficient cauſe to make void the verdict. Dyer 53. 2 Lil. Abr. 647. If one of the jury that found a verdict, were outlawed at the time of the verdict, it is not good: And where a verdict is given by thirteen jurors, it is ſaid to be a void verdict; becauſe no attaint will lie. 2 Lil. 644, 650. If there be eleven jurors agreed, and but one diſſenting, the verdict ſhall not be taken, nor the refuſer fined, &c. Though it is ſaid anciently it was not neceſſary, that all the twelve ſhould agree in civil cauſes. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 297.

In capital caſes, a verdict muſt be actually given; and if the jury do not all agree upon it, they may be carried in carts after the judges, round the circuit till they agree; and in ſuch caſe they may give their verdict in another county. 1 Inſt. 227, 281. 1 Vent. 97. The court may ſet aſide a verdict that convicts a man contrary to evidence in a criminal cauſe; but they cannot ſet aſide a verdict which acquits him. Wood's Inſt. 648. If the jury acquit a perſon of an indictment of felony againſt evidence, the court, before the verdict is recorded, may order them to go out again and re-conſider the matter; but this hath been thought hard, and of late years is not ſo frequently practiſed as formerly: There are inſtances where defendants, acquitted of crimes contrary to evidence, have been bound to the good behaviour. 2 Hawk. P. C. 442.

In caſe a jury acquits a man upon trial againſt full evidence, and being ſent back to conſider better of it, are peremptory in and ſtand to their verdict, the court muſt take it, but may reſpite judgment upon the acquittal: And here the King may have an attaint. And if the jury will by verdict convict a perſon againſt or without evidence, and againſt the opinion of the court; they may reprieve him before judgment, and certify for his pardon. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 310.

When a verdict in a civil action is given againſt evidence, it ſhall be ſet aſide, and a new trial had, &c. If the fact upon which the court was to judge, be not found by the verdict, a new venire facias may be granted. 1 Rol. Abr. 693. A verdict being given where no iſſue is joined, there can be no judgment upon it; but a repleader is to be had. Mod. Ca. 4. And if a verdict be ambiguous, inſufficient, repugnant, imperfect, or uncertain, judgment ſhall not paſs upon it. 1 Saund. 154, 155.

Verdicts muſt in all things directly anſwer the iſſue, or they will not be good; and if a verdict finds only part of the iſſue, it may be ill for the whole. 3 Salk. 374. But there is a difference between actions founded on a wrong, and on a contract: for where it is founded on a wrong, as on a treſpaſs, or eſcape, &c. it is maintainable if any part of it is found: So in debt for rent, a leſs ſum than demanded may be found by the verdict, becauſe it may be apportioned; but where an action is founded on a contract, there it is intire, and otherwiſe. 2 Cro. 380. If ſeveral perſons are indicted, or jointly charged in an information, a verdict may find ſome of the defendants guilty, and not others. And if the ſubſtance of an iſſue be found, or ſo much as will ſerve the plaintiff's turn, although not directly according to the iſſue, the verdict is good. 1 Lev. 142. Hob. 73. 1 Mod. 4. According to Glyn, Ch. Juſt. if an action be brought for 500*l.* the jury may find part paid againſt the plaintiff, and part unpaid againſt the defendant, and ſo divide the verdict. Trin. 1658. 2 Lil. Abr. 649. If the jury find the iſſue and more, it is good for the iſſue, and void for the reſidue: And where a jury find a point in iſſue, and a ſuperfluous matter over and above, that ſhall not vitiate the verdict. 2 Lev. 253. Yet if a man brings an action of debt, and declares for 20*l.* and the jury, upon nil debet pleaded, find that the defendant owed 40*l.* this verdict is ill; for the plaintiff cannot recover more than he demands; and in this caſe he may not recover what he demands, becauſe the court cannot ſever their judgment from the verdict. 3 Salk. 376.

A plaintiff failing to prove his iſſue, the verdict ought to be found for the defendant, and the court will give judgment for the defendant, where it appears that the plaintiff hath recovered by verdict without cauſe of action. 2 Lil. 644, 651. A verdict found againſt a record, which is of a higher nature than any verdict, is not good: But where a verdict may be any ways conſtrued to make it good, it ſhall be ſo taken, and not to make it void. Ibid. Upon a general iſſue, a verdict which is contrary to another record, may be allowed; but not where the verdict found is againſt the ſame record upon which it is given. Dyer 300. A verdict againſt the confeſſion of the party, is void: But it has been held, that the verdict may be good in the disjunctive, though it be not formal; but if it find a thing merely out of the iſſue, it is not good. Jenk. Cent. 257. Hob. 53, 54. And where the jury begin with a direct verdict, and end with ſpecial matter, &c. that ſhall make the verdict: Alſo if they begin with any ſpecial matter, and after make a general concluſion upon it, contrary to law; the judges will judge of the verdict, according to the ſpecial matter. Ibid. 53.

No verdict will make that good, which is not ſo by law, of which the court is to judge; judgment is to be given on verdicts, that ſtand with law; and what both parties have agreed in the pleading, muſt be admitted ſo to be, though the jury find it otherwiſe, it being a rule in law. Hob. 112. 2 Cro. 678. 2 Mod. 4. The ſtatute of jeofails helps after verdict; as it ſuppoſes the matter left out was given in evidence, and that the judge directed accordingly. 1 Mod. 292. If there be no original writ, it is helped by a verdict by the ſtatute of jeofails; but not if there be a bad writ: A declaration that is not good, is in many caſes helped after verdict; but not where the declaration doth not make it appear that the plaintiff had ſome cauſe of action, to warrant his declaration, &c.

A verdict may make an ill plea good, by intendment, &c. But a verdict will not help, where there is no iſſue; and what is good after verdict, would be ill on demurrer; alſo in criminal caſes, real actions, or actions qui tam, if there be any errors in the proceedings, they are not helped after verdict, by the Stat. of jeofails. 2 Lill. Abr. 644, 647. 2 Bulſt. 41. 2 Salk. 664. 3 Mod. 161. Where a verdict is found for the plaintiff, and he will not enter it, the defendant may compel him to do it, on motion; or the defendant may enter it himſelf. 2 Lill. After a verdict is returned into court, it cannot be altered, but if there be any miſpriſion, it is to be ſuggeſted before: And a miſtake of the clerk of the aſſiſes appearing to the court, was ordered to be amended. Cro. Eliz. 112, 150.

On return of verdicts, in civil cauſes, given at the aſſiſes, to the courts at Weſtminſter, judgment is had thereon; and generally, if the judgment differ from the verdict, it may be reverſed, &c. In debt on a covenant to pay money, the verdict muſt go to every part of the demand, and find as to the whole of the demand. 2 Strange 1089. A ſpecial verdict finding nothing as to one of the offences, is an acquittal of that offence. Ibid. 845. Where the plaintiff's cauſe of action is confeſſed by the defendant's plea, and thereupon, notwithſtanding the parties go to iſſue, and a verdict is found for the defendant, yet the verdict ſhall be ſet aſide, and a writ of inquiry awarded. Ibid. 873. Aſſets on a ſpecial verdict may be ſevered by the court. Ibid. 1036. Intire damages ſevered by the court. Ibid. 1038. Verdict amended by the judges notes. Ibid. 1197. Veſtry, A place adjoining to a church, where the veſtments of the minſter are kept; alſo a meeting at ſuch place: And ſometimes the biſhop and prieſts ſat together in veſtries, to conſult of the affairs of the church; in reſemblance of which ancient cuſtom, the miniſters, churchwardens, and chief men of moſt pariſhes, do at this day make a pariſh veſtry. By cuſtom there may be ſelect veſtries, or a certain number of perſons choſen to have the government of the pariſh, make rates, and take the accounts of churchwardens, &c. 2 Strange 728. And when rates are made, the pariſhioners muſt have notice of a veſtry held for that purpoſe; and then all that are abſent ſhall be concluded by a majority of thoſe that are preſent, who in conſtruction of law are the whole pariſh. Wood's Inſt. 90. And if a pariſhioner be ſhut out of the veſtry room by the clerk of the veſtry; and he makes it appear that he hath a right to come into the room, and to be preſent and vote in the veſtry, &c. action of the caſe lies, as a remedy. Mod. Ca. in L. & E. 52, 354.

Veſtrymen in London are a ſelect number of the chief pariſhioners in every pariſh within the city and ſuburbs, who yearly chooſe officers for the pariſh, and take care of its concerns, &c. by ſtatute 15 Car. 2. c. 5. On erecting pariſhes for the new churches to be built in or near London and Weſtminſter, the commiſſioners for building the churches are impowered to name a ſufficient number of the inhabitants of each new pariſh to be veſtry men; and, on their deaths or removal, the majority of the pariſhioners to chooſe others, &c. And the pariſh officers, with the veſtry or principal inhabitants of the new pariſhes, are in Eaſter week to aſſeſs the rates for the poor, &c. 9 Ann. c. 22. Veſtries of pariſhes are to be conſulted by pariſh officers, and to give their aſſent on hiring of houſes for the better employing and maintaining of the poor. 9 Geo. 1. c. 7. The right of adjourning a veſtry is in the pariſh at large. 2 Strange 1045.

A veſtry was called to conſider about building a work-houſe, where it was agreed to, and to borrow money for that purpoſe: and that whoever ſhould be bound for it ſhould be indemnified by the pariſh. This order was confirmed by another, and both ſigned by the vicar and ſeveral of the inhabitants. 300 l. being the ſum agreed upon, was borrowed of A. to whom B. gave bond for it. An order of veſtry was made for raiſing the money, but upon appeal to the quarter-ſeſſions by ſome new pariſhioners was quaſhed. B. was ſued on the bond, and paid the money, and then brought a bill for relief. And the Maſter of the Rolls decreed him his principal, intereſt, and coſts at law, and in this court; and that the defendants the vicar, churchwardens, and overſeers of the poor, call a veſtry to make a rate for payment; and if the inhabitants refuſe payment, the plaintiff to be at liberty to apply to the court: And ſaid that he did not ſee why the court might not as well compel thoſe who are not parties to pay the rate, as order tenants though not parties to pay the rates; and becauſe the defendants had put in a fair anſwer, their coſts were decreed to be raiſed by the ſame rate; but ſaid, that if thoſe who had appealed to the quarter-ſeſſions had been before the court, they ſhould have paid all the coſts. 2 *Wm. Veſtura, A crop of graſs or corn; and mention is made of prima veſtura, and ſecunda veſtura, &c. Cartular. Abb. St. Edmund, MS. fol. 182. The word was often uſed for a veſt, veſture, livery, delivery, i. e. an allowance of ſome ſet portion of the products of the earth, as corn, graſs, wood, &c. for part of the ſalary or wages to ſome officer, ſervant or labourer, for their livery or veſt. So foreſters had a certain allowance of timber and underwood yearly out of the foreſt for their own uſe. Paroch. Antiq. p. 620.

Veſture, (Veſtura) Signifies a garment; but in the law it is metaphorically applied to a poſſeſſion or ſeiſin. Stat. Weſt. 2. cap. 5. And in this ſignification it is borrowed of the Feudiſts, with whom inveſtitura imports a delivery of poſſeſſion, and veſtura poſſeſſion itſelf. Hotom. Veſture of an acre of land is the profit of it; and it ſhall be enquired how much the veſture of an acre of ground is worth, and how much the land, &c. 4 Ed. 1. 14 Ed. 3. Vicar, (Vicarius, quaſi vice fungens rectoris) The prieſt of every pariſh is called Rector, unleſs the predial tithes are appropriated, and then he is ſtiled vicar; and when rectories are appropriated, vicars are to ſupply the rectors places. At firſt a vicar was a mere curate to the impropriator of the church, temporary, and removeable at pleaſure; as thoſe who are now pariſh prieſts, in ancient times when there were no particular pariſhes, were only curates to the biſhops; but by degrees the vicars got a ſettled maintenance of glebe, and ſome kind of tithes, and now claim their dues either by endowment or preſcription: And where the vicar is endowed, and comes in by inſtitution and induction, he hath curam animarum actualiter; and is not to be removed at the pleaſure of the rector, who in this caſe hath only curam animarum habitualiter; but where the vicar is not endowed, nor comes in by inſtitution and induction, the rector hath curam animarum actualiter, and may remove the vicar. 1 Vent. 15. 3 Salk. 378. In every church appropriated, one is to be ordained perpetual vicar, and to be canonically inſtituted and inducted, and alſo endowed at the diſcretion of the ordinary; which endowment is a part of the rectory, ſet out by the patron, parſon, and ordinary, for maintaining the vicar: The inſtitution and induction, &c. of vicars is done in the ſame manner as that of rectors; and over and above they are to take an oath of perpetual reſidence, but this the biſhop may diſpenſe with; the ſtatutes concerning pluralities, dilapidations, &c. relate to them as well as to parſons. 4 H. 4. 2 Roll. Abr. 337.

Upon endowment, the vicar hath an equal, though not ſo great an intereſt in the church as a rector; the freehold of the church, church-yard and glebe is in him; and as he hath the free hold of the glebe, he may preſcribe to have all the tithes in the pariſh, except thoſe of corn, &c. Many vicars have a good part of the great tithes; and ſome benefices, that were formerly ſevered by impropriation, have, by being united, had all the glebe and tithes given to the vicars: But tithes can no other way belong to the vicar than by gift, compoſition or preſcription; for all tithes de jure appertain to the parſon; and yet generally vicars are endowed with glebe and tithes, eſpecially ſmall tithes, &c. If a vicar be endowed of ſmall tithes by preſcription, and afterwards land, which had been arable time out of mind, is altered, and there are growing ſmall tithes thereon, the vicar ſhall have them; for his endowment goes to ſuch tithes, in any place within the pariſh. Cro. Eliz. 467. Hob. 39. But where the vicar is endowed out of the parſonage, he ſhall not have tithes of the parſon's glebe, or of land that was part thereof at the time of the endowment, but now ſevered from it: Yet it ſeems to be otherwiſe, if the glebe lands are in the hands of the parſon's leſſee. Cro. Eliz. 479. Mallor. Q. Imped. 4. The endowment of vicarages hath been always favoured in law, the vicars for the moſt part having the cure of ſouls. 2 Roll. 335. Comp. Incumb. 347. March Rep. 11. See Black. Com. 1 V. 387.

Vicarage, (Vicaria) Of places did originally belong to the parſonage or rectory, being derived out of it: The rector of common right is patron of the vicarage; but it may be ſettled otherwiſe; for if he makes a leaſe of his parſonage, the patronage of the vicarage paſſes as incident to it. 2 Roll. Abr. 59. And if a vicarage become void, during the vacancy of the parſonage, the patron of the parſonage ſhall preſent to ſuch vicarage. 19 Edw. 2. 41. If the profits of the parſonage or vicarage fall into decay, that either of them by itſelf is not ſufficient to maintain a parſon and vicar, they ought again to be re-united: Alſo if the vicarage be not ſufficient to maintain a vicar, the biſhop may compel the rector to augment the vicarage. 2 Roll. 337. Parſ. Counſell. 195, 196. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 8. Upon the appropriation of a church, and endowment of a vicar out of the ſame, the parſonage and vicarage are two diſtinct eccleſiaſtical benefices: And it hath been held, that where there is a parſonage and vicarage endowed, that the biſhop in the vacation may diſſolve the vicarage; but if the parſonage be impropriated, he cannot do it; for on a diſſolution the cure muſt revert, which it cannot into lay hands. Comp. Incumb. 2 Cro. 518. Palm. 219.

For the moſt part vicarages were endowed upon appropriations; but ſometimes vicarages have been endowed without any appropriation of the parſonage; and there are ſeveral churches, where the tithes are wholly impropriated, and no vicarage endowed; and there the impropriators are bound to maintain curates to perform divine ſervice, &c. The parſon, patron and ordinary, may create a vicarage, and endow it: And in time of vacancy of the church, the patron and ordinary may do it; but the ordinary alone cannot create a vicarage, without the patron's aſſent. 17 Edw. 3, 51. Cro. Jac. 516. Where there is a vicarage and parſonage, and both are vacant, and in one perſon's patronage; if he preſents his clerk as parſon, who is thereupon inducted, this ſhall unite the parſonage and vicarage again. 11 Hen 6. 32. Vicarage or not, is to be tried in the Spiritual court, becauſe it could not begin to be created but by the ordinary, 3 Salk. 378. From thoſe courts appeals may be brought before the courts of admiralty in England, as being a branch of the admiral's juriſdiction, though they may alſo be brought before the King in council. But in caſe of prize veſſels, taken in time of war, in any part of the world, and condemned in any courts of admiralty, or vice-admiralty, as lawful prize, the appeal lies to certain commiſſioners of appeals conſiſting chiefly of the privy council and not to judges delegates. There is common becauſe of vicinage, or neighbourhood, where the inhabitants of two townſhips which lie contiguous, have uſually intercommoned with one another; the beaſts of the one ſtraying mutually into the other's fields, without any moleſtation from either, See Black. Com. 2 V. 33.

Vicis & Venellis mundandis, Is a writ which lieth againſt a mayor or bailiff of a town, &c. for the clean keeping of their ſtreets. Reg. Orig. 267.

Vicount, or Viſcount, (Vicecomes) Signifies as much as ſheriff: Between which two words, there ſeems to be no other difference, but that the one comes from the Normans, the other from our anceſtors the Saxons, of which, ſee more in Sheriff. Viſcount alſo ſignifies a degree of nobility next to an earl, which Cambd. (Briton. pag. 170.) ſays, is an old name of office, but a new one of dignity, never heard of amongſt us, till Henry the ſixth's days, who in his eighteenth year in parliament created John lord Beaumout, viſcount Beaumont, but far more ancient in other countries. Caſſan. de gloria mundi, par. 5. conſider 55. Vicountiel, or Vicontiel, Is an adjective from viſcount, and ſignifieth any thing that belongeth to the ſheriff; as writs vicontiel are ſuch writs as are triable in the county or ſheriff's court, of which kind there are divers writs of nuſance, &c. mentioned by Fitzherbert. Vicontiels are certain farms, for which the ſheriff pays a rent to the King, and he makes what profit he can of them: And vicontiel rents uſually come under the title of firma comitatus; and the ſheriff hath a particular roll of them given in to him, which he delivers back with his accounts. 33 & 34 H. 8. c. 16. 3 Ed. 6. 4. 22 Car. 2. c. 6.

No perſon during the time that he is a mayor, or in office in any town, ſhall ſell victuals, on pain of forfeiture, &c. But if a victualler be choſen mayor, whereby he is to keep the aſſiſe by ſtatute, two diſcreet perſons of the ſame place who are not victuallers, are to be ſworn to aſſiſe bread, wine, and victuals, during the time that he is in office; and then, after the price aſſeſſed by ſuch perſons, it ſhall be lawful for the mayor to ſell victuals, &c. 6 R. 2. c. 9. 3 Hen. 8. c. 8. If any one offend againſt theſe ſtatutes, the party grieved may ſue a writ directed to the juſtices of aſſiſe, commanding them to ſend for the parties, and to do right; or an attachment may be had againſt the mayor, officer, &c. to appear in *B. View, (Fr. Veue, i. e. Viſus) Is generally where a real action is brought, and the tenant doth not know certainly what is in demand; in ſuch caſe he may pray that the jury may view it. Briton, cap. 45. F. N. B. 178. This view is for a jury to ſee the land or thing claimed, and in controverſy; and lies in ejectment, waſte, aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, where at leaſt ſix of the recognitors muſt have the view before the aſſiſes. 2 Lil. Abr. 655. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. c. 48. 12 Ed. 2. And tho' formerly there could not have been a view in a perſonal action, but upon withdrawing of a juror after they were ſworn, and conſent of the parties by a rule of court; now by the act for the amendment of the law, it may be granted in any action brought in the courts at Weſtminſter, where neceſſary the better to underſtand the evidence upon the trial; in which caſe the courts may order ſpecial writs of diſtringas or habeas corpora to the ſheriff, requiring him to have ſix of the jurors, or a greater number of them, at the place in queſtion, ſome convenient time before the trial; who ſhall have the matter ſhewn to them by two perſons named in the writ of diſtringas, and appointed by the court; and the ſaid ſheriff executing the writ is ſpecially to return the view made accordingly, &c. 4 & 5 Ann cap. 16. Upon a view, the thing in queſtion is only to be ſhewn to the jury; and no evidence can be given on either ſide. 2 Lil. 656. But where, in action of waſte, ſeveral places are aſſigned, and the jury hath not the view of ſome of them, they may find no waſte done in that part which they did not view: In waſte for waſting of wood, if the jury view the wood without entering into it, it is good; alſo waſte being aſſigned in every room of an houſe, the view of an houſe generally is ſufficient. 1 Leon. 259, 267. If a rent or common is demanded, the land out of which it iſſues muſt be put in view. 1 Leon. 56. And if a view be denied, where it ought to be granted, or granted where it ought not to be, &c. it is error. 2 Lev. 217. So a view may be on indictment for a nuiſance.

By ſtat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 25. (the ballotting act) ſ. 14. it is provided, ' That where a view ſhall be allowed, ſix of the jurors named in the panel, or more ſhall have the view, and ſhall be the firſt ſworn, (or ſuch of them as appear) before any drawing.' But as the having a view was not, by either of theſe ſtatutes, made a matter of courſe, though ſuch a practice had prevailed, and had been abuſed to the purpoſes of delay, the court thought it their duty to take care that their ordering a view ſhould not obſtruct juſtice, and prevent the cauſe from being tried: And they reſolved not to order one any more, without a full examination into the propriety and neceſſity of it. For they were all clearly of opinion that the act of parliament meant that a view ſhould not be granted, unleſs the court was ſatisfied that it was proper and neceſſary: And they thought it better that a cauſe ſhould be tried upon a view had by any ſix, or by fewer than ſix, or even without any view, than be delayed for a greater length of time: Accordingly they added a clauſe to the uſual rules for views, purporting that the party praying a view conſented, ' That in caſe no view ſhould be had; or if a view ſhould be had by any of the jurors whomſoever, (though not being ſix of the firſt twelve) yet the trial ſhould proceed, and no objection be made on account thereof, or for want of a proper return.' Since which, motions for views are become motions of courſe, with ſuch additional conſent annexed to them. Bur. Rep. 256.

See the form of the uſual rule, and alſo of the modern addition, both in cauſes to be tried by ſpecial juries and thoſe to be tried by common juries, reſpectively, recited verbatum, in Bur. Rep. 257, 258. See Aſſiſe, Vejours or Viewers, &c. and Black. Com. 3 V. 298, 358.

View of Frank-pledge, (Viſus Franci plegii) Signifies the office which the ſheriff in his county court performs in looking to the King's peace, and ſeeing that every man be in ſome pledge, &c. Or it is a power of holding a court-leet, in which court formerly all perſons at the age of fourteen were bound with their ſureties or pledges for their truth to the King, and the ſteward was to certify on view. Bract. lib. 2. And there is a writ to exempt a perſon from coming to the view of frankpledge, who is not reſident within the hundred; as men are bound to this view by reaſon of their habitation only, and not of lands held where they dwell not; which writ is called Viſus Franci Plegii. Reg. Vill, or Village, (Villa) Is ſometimes taken for a Manor, and ſometimes for a pariſh or part of it; But a vill is moſt commonly the out-part of a pariſh, conſiſting of a few houſes, as it were ſeparate from it.—— Villa eſt ex pluribus manſionibus, vicinata, & collata ex pluribus vicinis. 1 Inſt. 115. Fleta mentions the difference between a manſion, a village, and a manor, viz. a manſion may be of one or more houſes, but it muſt be but one dwelling place, and none near it; for if other houſes are contiguous, it is a village; and a manor may conſiſt of ſeveral villages, or one alone. Fleta, lib. 6. cap. 51. And, according to Forteſcue, the boundaries of villages, are not by houſes or ſtreets; but by a circuit of ground, within which there may be hamlets, woods, and waſte ground, &c. Forteſc. de Laud. Leg. Ang. cap. 24.

When a place is named generally, in legal proceedings, it is intended to be a vill, becauſe as to civil purpoſes the kingdom was firſt divided into vills; and it is never intended a pariſh, that being an eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the kingdom to ſpiritual purpoſes, tho' in many caſes, the law takes notice of pariſhes as to civil purpoſes. 1 Mod. 250. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 57. If no vill, &c. is alledged, where a meſſuage and lands lie, no trial can be had concerning it: But ſome counties in the north of England, and in Wales, have no vills but pariſhes. Jenk. Cent. 33, 328. A vill and a pariſh by intendment ſhall be all one; and in proceſs of appeal, a pariſh may be intended a vill. Cro. Jac. 263. 3 Salk. 380. If a venue be laid in Gray's Inn, which is no pariſh or vill; the defendant muſt plead there is no ſuch vill as Gray's Inn, or it ſhall be intended a vill after verdict, &c. 3 Salk. 381. Two houſes in an extraparochial place are not enough to denominate a vill. 2 Strange 1004, 1071. See Pariſh, and Venire facias. See Black. Com. 1 V. 114.

Villa Regia, A title given to thoſe country villages, where the King's of England had a royal ſeat, and held the manor in their own demeſne, having there commonly a free chapel, not ſubject to eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction. Paroch. Antiq. 53.

Villain, Villein, (Villanus, Fr. Vilain, i. e. Vilis) Signifies a man of baſe or ſervile condition, a bondman, or ſervant. Of thoſe bondmen or villains there were two ſorts in England; one termed a villain in groſs, who was immediately bound to the perſon of the lord, and his heirs: The other, a villain regardant to a manor, being bound to his lord as a member belonging and annexed to a manor, whereof the lord was owner. And he was properly a pure villain, of whom the lord took redemption to marry his daughter, and to make him free; and whom the lord might put out of his lands and tenements, goods and chattels at his will, and chaſtiſe, but not maim him: For if he maimed his villain, he might have appeal of maihem againſt the lord; as he could bring appeal of the death of an anceſtor againſt his lord, or appeal of rape done to his wiſe. Bract. lib. 1. cap. 6. Old Nat. Br. 8. Terms de Ley.

Some were villains by title or preſcription, that is to ſay, that all their blood had been villains regardant to the manor of the lord time out of mind: And ſome were made villains by their confeſſion in a court of record, &c. Though the lord might make a manumiſſion to his villain, and thereby infranchiſe him: And if the villain brought any action againſt his lord, other than an appeal of maihem, &c. and the lord, without proteſtation, made anſwer to it; by this the villain was made free. Terms de Ley 576.

Villain eſtate was contradiſtinguiſhed to free eſtate, by the ſtatute 8 Hen. 6. c. 11 And the villani were ſuch as dwelt in villages, and of that ſervile condition, that they were uſually ſold with the farm to which they reſpectively belonged; ſo that they were a kind of ſlaves, and uſed as ſuch: And villenage or bondage, it is ſaid, had beginning among the Hebrews. Ibid. 455.

Villenage cometh of villain, and was a baſe tenure of lands or tenements, whereby the tenant was bound to do all ſuch ſervices as the lord commanded, or were fit for a villain to perform: The diviſion of villenage, by Bracton, was into purum villenagium a quo præſtatur ſervitium incertum & indeterminatum, & villenagium ſocagium; which was to carry the lord's dung into his fields, to plough his ground at certain days, ſow and reap his corn, &c. and even to empty his jakes, as the inhabitants of ſome places were bound to do, though afterwards turned into a rent, and that villanous ſervice excuſed. Every one that held in vilenage, was not a villain or bondman; for tenure in vilenage could make no freeman villain, unleſs it were continued time out of mind; nor could free land make a villain free. Bract. lib. 2. c. 8.

Copyhold tenures ſeem to be ſprung from villenage. F. N. B. 28. The ſlavery of this cuſtom hath been long ago taken off; for we have hardly heard of any caſe in villenage ſince Crouche's caſe in Dyer's Rep. There are not properly any villains now; and the title and tenure of villenage are aboliſhed by the ſtat. of 12 Car. 2. c. 24.

Villain eſtate or condition, Contradiſtinguiſhed to free eſtate. Stat. 8 H. 6. 11. They were called villains from villa, becauſe they dwelt in villages; they were alſo called pagenſis and ruſtici, a ruribus quæ excoluerunt; and they were of that ſervile condition, that they were uſually ſold with the farm to which they reſpectively belonged; ſo that they were ſlaves and uſed as ſuch, and kinder uſage made them inſolent. Cowell.

Villanous Judgment, (Villanum Judicium) Is that which caſts the reproach of villany and ſhame upon him againſt whom it is given, as a conſpirator, &c. And the judgment in ſuch a caſe ſhall be like the ancient judgment in attaint, viz. That the offender ſhall not be of any credit afterwards; nor ſhall it be lawful for him to approach the King's court; and his lands and goods ſhall be ſeized into the King's hands, his trees rooted up, and body impriſoned, &c. Staundf. P. C. 157. Lamb Eiren. 63. Stat. 4 H. 5. And the puniſhment at this day appointed for perjury, may partake of the name of villanous judgment; as it hath ſomewhat more in it than corporal, or pecuniary pain, i. e. the diſcrediting the teſtimony of the offender for ever. See Black. Com. 4 V. 136.

Villenage, (Villenagium) from villain, Signifies a ſervile kind of tenure belonging to land or tenements, whereby the tenant was bound to do all ſuch ſervices as the lord commanded, or were fit for a villain to do. Ubi ſciri non poterit veſpere quale ſervitium fieri debet mane. For every one that held in villenage, was not a villain or bondman: Villenagium vel ſervitium nihil detrahit libertatis, habita tamen diſtinctione utrum tales ſunt villani & tenuerint in villano ſocagio de dominico domini regis. Bract. lib. 1. cap. 6. num. 1.

The diviſion of villenage was into villenage by blood, and villenage by tenure. Tenure in villenage could make no freeman villain unleſs it were continued, time out of mind, nor even free land make a villain free. Bracton, lib. 2. cap. 8. num. 3. divides it into purum villenagium, a quo præſtatur ſervitium incertum & indeterminatum, ubi ſciri non poterit veſpere, quale ſervitium fieri debet mane, viz. ubi quis facere tenetur quicquid ei præceptum fuerit; the other he calls villanum ſoccagium, and was tied to the performance of certain ſervices agreed upon between the lord and tenant, and was to carry the lord's dung into his field, to plough his ground at certain days, to reap his corn, plaſh his hedges, &c. as the inhabitants of Bickton were bound to do for thoſe of Cluncaſtle in Shropſhire, which was afterwards turned into a rent, now called Bickton ſilver, and the ſervice excuſed. There were likewiſe villani ſockmanni, which were thoſe who held their land in ſoccage, and there were villani adventitii, who were thoſe who held land by performing certain ſervices expreſſed in their deeds. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 8. See Socage tenure, and Black. Com. 2 V. 90, 92, 98.

Uncertainty of the Law. On this ſubject we will ſtate what is ſaid, by one of our beſt authors, in his own words.

" The uncertainty of legal proceedings is a notion ſo generally adopted, and has ſo long been the ſtanding theme of wit and good humour, that he who ſhould attempt to refute it would be looked upon as a man, who was either incapable of diſcernment himſelf, or elſe meant to impoſe upon others——yet it may not be amiſs, before we enter into the ſeveral modes whereby certainty is meant to be obtained in our courts of juſtice, to inquire a little wherein the uncertainty, ſo frequently complained of, conſiſts, and to what cauſes it owes its original.——It has ſometimes been ſaid to owe its original to the number of our municipal conſtitutions, and the multitude of our judicial deciſions; which occaſion, it is alledged, abundance of rules, that militate and thwart with each other, as the ſentiments or caprice of ſucceſſive legiſlatures and judges have happened to vary. ——The fact of multiplicity is allowed, and that thereby the reſearches of the ſtudent are rendered more difficult and laborious: But that, with proper induſtry, the reſult of thoſe inquires will be doubt, and indeciſion, is a conſequence that cannot be admitted. People are apt to be angry at the want of ſimplicity in our laws: They miſtake variety for confuſion, and complicated caſes for contradictory.—They bring us the examples of arbitrary governments, of Denmark, Muſcovy, and Pruſſia; of wild and uncultivated nations, the ſavages of Africa and America; or of narrow domeſtic republics in ancient Greece and modern Switzerland; and unreaſonably require the ſame paucity of laws, the ſame conciſeneſs of practice, in a nation of freemen, a polite and commercial people, and a populous extent of territory.—In an arbitrary, deſpotic government, where the lands are at the diſpoſal of the prince, the rules of ſucceſſion, or the mode of enjoyment, muſt depend upon his will and pleaſure.—Hence there can be but few legal determinations relating to the property, the deſcent, or the conveyance of real eſtates; and the ſame holds in a ſtronger degree with regard to goods and chattels, and the contracts relating thereto. Under a tyrannical ſway trade muſt be continually in jeopardy, and of conſequence can never be extenſive: This therefore puts an end to the neceſſity of an infinite number of rules, which the Engliſh merchant daily recurs to for adjuſting commercial differences.—Marriages are there uſually contracted with ſlaves; or at leaſt women are treated as ſuch: No laws can be therefore expected to regulate the rights of dower, jointures and marriage ſettlements. Few alſo are the perſons, who can claim the privileges of any laws; the bulk of thoſe nations, viz. the commonalty, boors or peaſants, being merely villeins and bondmen.—Thoſe are therefore left to the private coercion of their laws, are eſteemed (in the contemplation of theſe boaſted legiſlators) incapable of either right or injury, and of conſequence are intitled to no redreſs. We may ſee in theſe arbitrary ſtates how large a field of legal conteſt is already rooted up and deſtroyed.—Again, were we a poor and naked people, as the ſavages of America are, ſtrangers to ſcience, to commerce, and the arts, as well of convenience as of luxury, we might perhaps be content, as ſome of them are ſaid to be, to refer all diſputes to the next man we met upon the road, and ſo put a ſhort end to every controverſy. For in a ſtate of nature there is no room for municipal laws; and the nearer any nation approaches to that ſtate, the fewer they will have occaſion for. When the people of Rome were little better than ſturdy ſhepherds, or herdſmen, all their laws were contained in ten or twelve tables; but as luxury, politeneſs, and dominion increaſed, the civil law increaſed in the ſame proportion, and ſwelled to that amazing bulk which it now occupies, though ſucceſſively pruned and retrenched by the emperors Theodocius and Juſtinian.

"In like manner we may laſtly obſerve, that in petty ſtates, and narrow territories, much fewer laws will ſuffice than in large ones, becauſe there are fewer objects upon which the laws can operate. The regulations of a private family are ſhort and well known; thoſe of a prince's houſhold are neceſſarily more various and diffuſe.—The cauſes therefore of the multiplicity of the Engliſh laws are the extent of the country which they govern; the commerce and refinement of its inhabitants; but above all, the LIBERTY and PROPERTY of the ſubject. Theſe will naturally produce an infinite fund of diſputes; which muſt be terminated in a judicial way: And it is eſſential to a FREE PEOPLE, that theſe determinations be publiſhed and adhered to; that their property may be as certain and fixed as the very conſtitution of their ſtate. For though in many other countries every thing is left in the breaſt of the judge to determine, yet with us he is only to declare and pronounce, not to make or new model, the law. Hence a multitude of deciſions, or caſes adjudged, will ariſe; for ſeldom will it happen that any one rule will exactly ſuit with many caſes.—And in proportion as the deciſions of the courts of judicature are multiplied, the law will be loaded with decrees, that may ſometimes (though rarely) interfere with each other: Either becauſe ſucceeding judges may not be apprized of the prior adjudication; or becauſe they may think differently from their predeceſſors; or becauſe the ſame arguments did not occur formerly as at preſent; or, in fine, becauſe of the natural imbecillity and imperfection that attends all human proceedings. But, wherever this happens to be the caſe in any material point, the legiſlature is ready, and, from time to time, both may, and frequently does, intervene to remove the doubt; and, upon due deliberation had, determines by a declaratory ſtatute how the law ſhall be held for the future.

"Whatever inſtances therefore of contradiction or uncertainty, may have been gleaned from our records, or reports, muſt be imputed to the defects of human laws in general, and are not owing to any particular ill conſtruſtion of the Engliſh ſyſtem. Indeed the reverſe is moſt ſtrictly true. The Engliſh law is leſs embarraſſed with inconſiſtent reſolutions and doubtful queſtions, than any other known ſyſtem of the ſame extent and the ſame duration. I may inſtance in the civil law: The texts whereof, as collected by Juſtinian and his agents, is extremely voluminous and diffuſe; but the idle comments, obſcure gloſſes, and jaring interpretations grafted thereupon by the learned juriſts, are literally without number. And theſe gloſſes, which are mere private opinions of ſcholaſtic doctors, (and not, like our books of reports, judicial determinations of the court) are all of authority ſufficient to be vouched and relied on; which muſt needs breed great diſtraction and confuſion in their tribunals. The ſame may be ſaid of the Canon law; though the text thereof is not of half the antiquity with the Common law of England; and though the more ancient any ſyſtem of laws is, the more it is liable to be perplexed with the multitude of judicial decrees. When therefore a body of laws, of ſo high antiquity as the Engliſh, is in general ſo clear and perſpicuous, it argues deep wiſdom and foreſight in ſuch as laid the foundations, and great care and circumſpection in ſuch as have built the ſuperſtructure.

"But is not (it will be aſked) the multitude of law-ſuits, which we daily ſee and experience, an argument againſt the clearneſs and certainty of the law itſelf? by no means: For, among the various diſputes and controverſies which are daily to be met with in the courſe of legal proceedings, it is obvious to obſerve how very few ariſe from obſcurity in the rules or maxims of law. An action ſhall ſeldom be heard of to determine a queſtion of inheritance, unleſs the fact of the deſcent be controverted. But the dubious points, which are uſually agitated in our courts, ariſe chiefly from the difficulty there is of aſcertaining the intentions of individuals, in their ſolemn diſpoſitions of property; in their contracts, conveyances, and teſtaments. It is an object indeed of the utmoſt importance in this free and commercial country, to lay as few reſtraints as poſſible upon the transfer of poſſeſſions from hand to hand, or their various deſignations, marked out by the prudence, convenience, or neceſſities, or even by the caprice of their owners: Yet to inveſtigate the intention of the owner is frequently matter of difficulty among heaps of entangled conveyances or wills of a various obſcurity. The law rarely heſitates in declaring its own meaning: But the judges are frequently puzzled to find out the meaning of others. Thus the powers, the intereſt, the privileges, and properties of a tenant for life, and a tenant in tail, are clearly diſtinguiſhed and preciſely ſettled by law: But, what words in a will ſhall conſtitute this or that eſtate, has occaſionally been diſputed for more than two centuries paſt; and will continue to be diſputed as long as the careleſſneſs, the ignorance, or ſingularity of teſtators ſhall continue to cloath their intentions in dark or new fangled expreſſions."

"But, notwithſtanding ſo vaſt an acceſſion of legal controverſies, ariſing from ſo fertile a fund as the ignorance and wilfulneſs of individuals, theſe will bear no compariſon in point of number to thoſe which are founded upon the diſhoneſty and diſingenuity of the parties: By either their ſuggeſting complaints that are falſe in fact, and thereupon bringing groundleſs actions; or by their denying ſuch facts as are true, in ſetting up unwarrantable defences, ex facto oritur jus: If therefore, the fact be perverted or miſrepreſented, the law which ariſes from thence will unavoidably be unjuſt or partial. And, in order to prevent this, it is neceſſary to ſet right the fact, and eſtabliſh the truth contended for, by appealing to ſome mode of probation or trial, which the law of the country has ordained for a criterion of truth and falſehood."

"These modes of probation or trial form, in every civilized country, the great object of judicial deciſions. And experience will abundantly ſhew, that above a hundred of our law-ſuits ariſe from diſputed facts, for one where the law is doubted of. About twenty days in the year are ſufficient, in Weſtminſter-Hall, to ſettle (upon ſolemn argument) every demurrer or other ſpecial point of law that ariſes throughout the nation: But two months are annually ſpent in deciding the truth of facts, before ſix diſtinct tribunals, in the ſeveral circuits of England; excluſive of Middleſex and London, which afford a ſupply of cauſes much more than equivalent to any two of the largeſt circuits." Blackſtone's Com. 3 V. 325, &c.

We may here with Blackſtone obſerve, that trial is the examination of the matter of fact in iſſue; of which there are many different ſpecies, according to the difference of the ſubject, or thing to be tried. For the law of England ſo induſtriouſly endeavours to inveſtigate truth at any rate, that it will not confine itſelf to one, or to a few manners of trial; but varies its examination of facts according to the nature of the facts themſelves: This being the one invariable principle purſued, that as well the beſt method of trial, as the beſt evidence upon that trial, which the nature of the caſe affords, and no other, ſhall be admitted in the Engliſh courts of juſtice.

Uncore priſt, Is a plea of a defendant in nature of a plea in bar, where being ſued for a debt due on bond at a day paſt, to ſave the forfeiture of the bond, he ſays that he tendered the money at the day and place, and that there was none there to receive it; and that he is alſo ſtill ready to pay the ſame. This will ſave the defendant from the penalty of his obligation; and if the plaintiff now refuſeth to receive the money, but takes iſſue upon the tender, and it is found againſt him, he loſeth his money for ever. 7 Ed. 6. 6. 9 Rep. 70. *Pract. Under Treaſurer of England. (Vice Theſaurarius Angliæ) An officer firſt created in the time of King Hen. 7th, but ſome think he was of a more ancient original: His buſineſs was to cheſt up the King's treaſure at the end of every term, to note the content of money in each cheſt, and ſee it carried into the King's treaſury for the eaſe of the lord treaſurer, as being a thing beneath him, but fit to be performed by a man of great truſt and ſecrecy: And, in the vacancy of the lord treaſurer's office, he did all things in the receipt, &c. This officer is mentioned in ſeveral ſtatutes; and named treaſurer of the exchequer till the reign of Queen Eliz. when he was termed under-treaſurer of England. 39 Eliz. cap. 7.

Uniformity, (Uniformitas) One form of public prayers and adminiſtration of ſacraments, and other rites and ceremonies of the church of England, preſcribed by ſtatutes, to which all muſt ſubmit. 1 Eliz. c. 2. 14 Car. 2. c. 4. But ſee Diſſenters.

Union, (Unio) Is a combining and conſolidating of two churches into one: Alſo it is when one church is made ſubject to another, and one man is rector of both; and where a conventual church is made a cathedral. Lyndewode. In the firſt ſignification, if two churches were ſo mean, that the tithes would not afford a competent proviſion for each incumbent, the ordinary, patron, and incumbents might unite them at Common law, before any ſtatute was made for that purpoſe; and in ſuch caſe it was agreed which patron ſhould preſent firſt, &c. for though, by the union, the incumbency of one church was loſt, yet the patronage remained, and each patron might have a quare impedit upon a diſturbance to preſent in his turn. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 480. The biſhop, patron, and incumbent may unite churches, without licence from the King, by the ſtatute of 37 H. 8. c. 21. The licence of the King is not neceſſary to an union, as it is to the appropriation of advowſons; for an appropriation cannot be made by them without the King's licence; becauſe that is a mortmain, and the patronage of the advowſon is loſt, and by conſequence all tenths for firſt fruits. Dyer 259. Moor 409, 661.

By aſſent of the ordinary, patron, and incumbent, two churches lying not above a mile diſtant one from the other, and whereof the value of the one is not above ſix pounds a year in the King's books of firſt fruits, may be united into one. Stat. 37 H. 8. c. 21. And by another ſtatute, in cities and corporation towns, it ſhall be lawful for the biſhop, patrons and mayors, or chief magiſtrates of the place, &c. to unite churches therein; but where the income of the churches united exceeds 100*l.* a year, the major part of the pariſhioners are to conſent to the ſame; and, after the union made, the patrons of the churches united ſhall preſent, by turns, to that church only which ſhall be preſentative, in ſuch order as agreed; and notwithſtanding the union, and each of the pariſhes united ſhall continue diſtinct as to rates, charges, &c. though the tithes are to be paid to the incumbent of the united church. 17 Car. 2. c. 3. A union where made of churches of greater yearly value than mentioned in the ſtatute 37 H. 8. was held good at Common law; and, by the Canon law, the ordinary, with conſent of the patron, might make an union of churches, of what value ſoever.

So by ſtatute, with the aſſent of the King. Dyer 295. 2 Rol. Abr. 778. And when two parochial churches were thus united, the reparations continued ſeveral as before; and therefore the inhabitants of the pariſh where any ſuch church was demoliſhed, were not obliged to contribute to the repairs of the remaining church to which it was united. Hob. 67. And this occaſioned the ſtatute 4 & 5 W. & M. by which it is ordained, That where any churches have been united, by virtue of the ſtatute 17 Car. 2. c. 3. and one of them is demoliſhed; when the other church ſhall be out of repair, the pariſhioners of the pariſh whoſe church is down ſhall pay in proportion towards the charge of ſuch repairs, &c. Stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 12.

Unity of Poſſeſſion, (Unitas Poſſeſſionis) Is where a man hath a right to two eſtates, and holds them together jointly in his own hands; as if a man take a leaſe of lands from another at a certain rent, and after he buys the fee-ſimple, this is an unity of poſſeſſion, by which the leaſe is extinguiſhed, becauſe that he who had before the occupation only for his rent, is now become lord and owner of the land. Terms de Ley. A leſſee for years of an advowſon, on the church becoming void, was preſented by the leſſor, and inſtituted and inducted; and it was held, that this was a ſurrender of his leaſe; for they cannot ſtand together in one perſon, and by the unity of poſſeſſion one of them is extinguiſhed. Hut. 105. No unity will extinguiſh or ſuſpend tithes; but notwithſtanding any unity they remain, &c. 11 Rep. 14. 2 Lill. 658. Unity of poſſeſſion extinguiſheth all privileges not expreſly neceſſary; but not a way to a cloſe, or water to a mill, &c. becauſe they are thus neceſſary. A way of eaſe is deſtroyed by unity of poſſeſſion; and a rent, or eaſement, do not exiſt during the unity, wherefore they are gone. Latch. 153, 154. 1 Vent. 95. Trin. 7 W. See *Black. Univerſity, (Univerſitas) Is a place where all kinds of literature are univerſally taught: It is likewiſe uſed by civilians for any corporation, or body politick. The univerſities with us are taken for theſe two bodies which are the nurſeries of learning and liberal ſcience in this kingdom, viz. Oxford and Cambridge; endowed with great privileges. And by the 13 Eliz. c. 27. it is enacted, That each of the univerſities ſhall be incorporated by a certain name, though they were ancient corporations before; and that all letters patent and charters granted to the univerſities, ſhall be good and effectual in law: That the chancellor, maſters, and ſcholars of either of the ſaid univerſities, ſhall enjoy all manors, lands, liberties, franchiſes, and privileges, and all other things which the ſaid corporated bodies have enjoyed, or of right ought to enjoy, according to the intent of the ſaid letters patent; and all letters patent, and liberties, franchiſes, &c. ſhall be eſtabliſhed and confirmed, any law, uſage &c. to the contrary notwithſtanding.

The univerſities have the keeping of the aſſiſe of bread and beer, and are to puniſh offences concerning it: Alſo they have the aſſiſe of wine and ale, &c. And the chancellor, his commiſſary, and deputy, are juſtices of peace for the vill of Oxon, county of Oxon, and Berks, by virtue of their offices; ſee the Stat. 51 H. 3. 31 Ed. 1. 7 Ed. 6. 2 & 3 P. & M. and the Chart. 29 Ed. 3. 14 H. 8. &c. By letters patent, Anno 11 Car. 1. granted to the univerſity of Oxford, the old privileges are explained, and larger granted: And the privilege of the univerſity is allowed to ſcholars, and ſervants, &c. 14 Car. 2. c. 4. Perſons acting theatrical performances within the precincts of either univerſity, or five miles thereof, ſhall be deemed vagrants; and the chancellor, &c. may commit them to the houſe of correction, or common gaol for one month. Stat. 10 Geo. 2. c. 19.

Their courts are called the chancellor's courts. The chancellors are uſually peers of the realm, and are appointed over the whole univerſity. But the courts are kept by their vice-chancellors their aſſiſtants or deputies; the cauſes are managed by advocates or proctors. Id. ibid. By charter of 14 H. 8.

Theſe courts have juriſdiction in all cauſes eccleſiaſtical and civil (except mayhem, felony and freehold,) where a ſcholar, ſervant or miniſter of the univerſity is one of the parties in ſuit. Id. ibid. and Cro. Car. 73. Wilcocks v. Bradnell. But ſee the petition againſt the grant of H. 4. in Prynn's Animad. p. 368, 369.

Their proceedings are in a ſummary way according to the practice of the civil law; and in their ſentences they follow the juſtice and equity of the civil law, or the laws, ſtatutes, privileges, liberties and cuſtoms of the univerſities, or the laws of the land at the diſcretion of the chancellor. Cro. Car. 73. Wilcocks v. Bradnell. Hetley 25. Thomas Wilcocks's caſe. Hard. 508. Caſtle v. Litchfield.

If there is an erroneous ſentence in the chancellor's court of the univerſity of Oxford, an appeal lies to the congregation, thence to the convocation, and from thence to the King in chancery, who nominates judges delegates to hear the appeal; the appeal is of the ſame nature in Cambridge. Wood's Inſt. 549. 2 Ld. Raym. 1346. The King v. The chancellor, &c. of Cambridge.

As by charter confirmed, as abovementioned, by act of parliament, cognizance is granted to the univerſity of all ſuits ariſing any where in law or equity againſt a ſcholar, ſervant or miniſter of the univerſity, depending before the juſtices of the King's bench, Common pleas and others there mentioned, and before any other judge, tho' the matter concern the King: If an indebitatus aſſumpſit is brought by quo minus in the exchequer againſt a ſcholar or other privileged perſon, the univerſity ſhall have conuſance, for the court of exchequer is included in the general words. Cro. Car. 73. Wilcocks v. Bradnell. Hard. 505. Caſtle v. Litchfield.

If a debtor and accountant to the King ſues a ſcholar by bill in equity in the exchequer, or if an attorney ſues a ſcholar by writ of privilege, it is ſaid that the univerſities ſhall not have conuſance, for a general grant ſhall not take away the ſpecial privilege of any court. Hard. 189. Wilkins v. Shalcroft. Lit. Rep. 304. Oxford Letter patent. S. P. 3 Leon. 149. The lord Anderſon's caſe. 2 Danv. Abr. 164.

But in the caſes where privilege is allowable, a ſcholar, &c. cannot waive his privilege, and have a prohibition in the courts of Weſtminſter, for the univerſity by right has the conuſance of the plea, where one is a privileged perſon; and a ſtranger is forced to ſue a privileged perſon in their courts by reaſon of that right veſted in them. Cro. Car. 73. Wilcocks v. Bradnell. Hetl. 28. Thomas Wilcocks's caſe.

But a ſcholar ought to be reſident in the univerſity at the time of the ſuit commenced; and no other ought to be joined in the action with him, for in ſuch caſe he ſhall not have privilege. Hetl. 28. Thomas Wilcocks's caſe. Tho' it is ſaid that ſervants of the univerſity are privileged, yet it has been held, that a bailiff of a college was not capable of privilege. Brownl. 74. Carrel. v. Paſk. Neither is a townſman intitled to privilege, to exempt him from an office in the town, if he keeps a ſhop and follows a trade, tho' he is matriculated as ſervant to a ſcholar. 2 Ven. 106. The city of Oxford's caſe.

It is to be obſerved, that tho' mayhem, felony and freehold appear, as above, to be the only cauſes excepted in their charter; yet it has been held that in actions for the recovery of the poſſeſſion of a term, without claiming title to the freehold, they ſhall have no privilege, becauſe the freehold may come in queſtion. Cro. Car. 87. 88. Hayley's caſe. Litt. Rep. 252. Cripp's and Webb's caſe.

It hath been diſputed how far the words of the grant intitled them to privilege in matters of equity. And the general principle of conſtruction ſeems to be, that where chattels only are concerned, or where damages only are to be given, there their privilege is allowable, but where the ſuit is for the thing itſelf, there their privilege cannot be allowed. Vide 2 Vent. 362.

Void and voidable. In the law ſome things are abſolutely void and ſome are voidable. A thing is void which is done againſt law at the very time of the doing of it, and it ſhall bind no perſon: But a thing which is only voidable, and not void, although it be what he that did it ought not to have done, yet, when it is done, the doer cannot avoid the ſame; though by ſome act in law it may be made void by his heir, &c. 2 Lil. Abr. 653. But ſee poſt. Where a grant is void at the commencement, no act afterwards can make it good: If a leaſe is abſolutely void, acceptance of rent will not affirm it; it is otherwiſe when a leaſe is only voidable, there it will make it good. 3 Rep. 64. A leaſe for life which is voidable only, muſt be made void by re-entry, &c. Ibid. This poſition is very general, and perhaps wrong—— If an ejectment is brought, the want of entry is cured by the defendant's entering into the rule to confeſs leaſe, entry, and ouſter, in all caſes, except where a fine is to be avoided. It is generally held that covenants made in a void leaſe or deed, are alſo void, Yelv. 18. See Owen 136.

A deed of exchange, entered into by an infant, or one non ſanæ memoriæ, is not void; but may be avoided by the infant, when arrived at age, or by the heir of him who is non ſanæ memoriæ. Perk. 281. But it hath been adjudged, that a bond of an infant, or of one non compos, is void, becauſe the law hath not appointed any thing to be done to avoid ſuch bonds; for the party cannot plead non eſt factum, as the cauſe of nullity doth not appear upon the face of the deed. 2 Salk. 675. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 486. Where the condition of a bond is void, in part by ſtatute, it may be void totally; though it is otherwiſe if void in part by the Common law, for there it ſhall be good for the reſidue. Moor 856. 1 Brownl. 64. A deed being voidable, is to be avoided by ſpecial pleading; and where an act of parliament ſays, that a deed, &c. ſhall be void, it is intended that it ſhall be by pleading, ſo as it is voidable, but not actually vacated. 5 Rep. 119. A judgment given by perſons who had no good commiſſion to do it, is void, without writ of error: But an erroneous attainder is not void, but voidable by writ of error, &c. 2 *Hawk. P. Voire, A French word ſignifying truly. Law Fr. Dict.

Voire dire, (Fr. Veritatem dicere) Is when it is prayed upon a trial at law, that a witneſs may be ſworn upon a voire dire; which is, that he ſhall on his oath ſpeak the truth, whether he ſhall get or loſe by the matter in controverſy; and if it appears that he is unconcerned, his teſtimony is allowed, otherwiſe not. Blount. On a voire dire, a witneſs may be examined by the court, if he be not a party intereſted in the cauſe, as well as the perſon for whom he is a witneſs; and this has been often done, where a buſy evidence, not otherwiſe to be excepted againſt, is ſuſpected of partiality. Terms de Ley. 581.

Voluntary, As applied to a deed, is where any conveyance is made without a conſideration, either of money, or marriage, &c. And remainders limited in ſettlements, to a man's right heirs, &c. are deemed voluntary in equity, and the perſons claiming under them called volunteers. *Abr. Voluntas, Is when a tenant by leaſe holds lands at the will of the leſſor; or a copyholder holdeth his lands at the will of the lord, by copy of court-roll, according to the cuſtom of the manor, &c. But the will of the lord is bound and governed by the cuſtom of the manor, and he cannot turn out the tenant, or deprive him of his eſtate unleſs for a forfeiture, and then only according to due courſe of law.

Votum, A vow or promiſe, uſed by Fleta for nuptiæ; ſo dies votorum, is the wedding day. Fleta, lib. 4.

Vouchee. The perſon who is vouched, in a writ of right, ſee Voucher, and Black. Com. 2 V. 358. xviii.

Voucher, Is a word of art, when the tenant in a writ of right calls another into the court, who is bound to him to warranty; and is either to defend the right againſt the demandant, or yield him other lands to the value, &c. (but that is only form.) And it extends to lands or tenements of freehold or inheritance, and not to any chattel real, perſonal, or mixed: He that voucheth is called the voucher, (vocans) and he that is vouched, is called the vouchee, (warrantatus) and the proceſs whereby the vouchee is called, is a ſummoneas ad warrantizandum; on which writ if the ſheriff return that the party hath nothing whereby he may be ſummoned, then goes out another writ called ſequator ſub ſuo periculo, &c. Co. Litt. 101.

There is alſo a foreign voucher, when the tenant being impleaded within a particular juriſdiction, as in London, voucheth one to warranty in ſome other county out of the juriſdiction of that court, and prays that he may be ſummoned, &c. 2 Rep. 50 On a ſuit in England, a voucher doth not lie in Ireland: But it lies in Wales, and the tenant ſhall be ſummoned in the next county to it. A vouchee by entering into warranty, becomes tenant in law of the lands; and when the demandant counts againſt him, he may plead a releaſe, &c. Jenk. Cent. 41, 100. In a writ of entry in the degrees, none ſhall vouch out of the line: And in writs of right and poſſeſſion, it is a good counterplea, that neither the vouchee nor his anceſtors had ever ſeiſin of the land. Stat. 3 Ed. 1. c. 40.

And the demandant may aver a vouchee to be dead, and that there is no ſuch perſon, where the tenant voucheth a perſon deceaſed, to warranty. 14 Ed. 3. c. 18. Single, double, and treble voucher. See Recovery, where this doctrine is fully explained. See alſo Warranty.

Voucher, Is alſo uſed for a leiger-book, or book of accounts, wherein are entered the acquittances or warrants for the accountant's diſcharge. Stat. 19 Car. 2. cap. 1. Voucher ſignifies alſo, any acquittance or receipt, diſcharging a perſon, or being evidence of a payment.

Vox, Vocem non habere, A phraſe made uſe of by Bracton, ſignifying an infamous perſon, one who is not to be admitted to be a witneſs. Bract. lib. 3.

Upholſters, None ſhall put to ſale any beds, bolſters, &c. except ſuch as are ſtuffed with one ſort of dry pulled feathers, or clean down; and not mixed with ſcalded feathers, fen-down, thiſtle-down, ſand, &c. on pain to forfeit the ſame, or the value: And they are to ſtuff quilts, mattraſſes, and cuſhions, with clean wool, and flocks; without uſing horſe-hair, &c. therein, under the like forfeiture. Stat. 11 H. 7. c. 19. and 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 23.

Upland, High ground, or terra firma, as it is called by ſome, contrary to marſhy and low ground. Ingulph.

Uſa, Is the river Iſis; which river was termed Iſis from the goddeſs of that name; for it was cuſtomary among the Pagans to dedicate hills, woods, and rivers, to favourite goddeſſes, and to call them after ther names; and the Britons having the greateſt reverence for Ceres and Proſerpina, who was alſo called Iſis, did for that reaſon name the river Iſis: And ſhe being the goddeſs of the Night, from thence they computed days by nights; as Seven Night, &c. Blount.

Uſage, Differs from cuſtom, and preſcription: No man may claim a rent, common, or other inheritance by uſage; though he may by preſcription. 6 Rep. 65. See Preſcription.

Uſance, A calendar month, as from May 20, to June 20, and double uſance, is two ſuch months; words uſed in Bills of Exchange. Merch. Dict.

Uſe, (Uſus) Is, in application of law, the profit or benefit of lands and tenements; or a truſt and confidence repoſed in a man for the holding of lands, That he to whoſe uſe the truſt is made ſhall take the profits thereof. Weſt. Symb. par. 1. 1 Inſt. 272.

An uſe is only a truſt or confidence which one man puts in another; and therefore it is not a thing iſſuing out of the land, but collateral to it, and annexed to the privity of eſtate between them, (viz.) That he to whom the uſe is made ſhall have the profits; and that the tenant of the land ſhall make an eſtate as he ſhall direct: But the ceſtui que uſe hath neither jus in re or ad rem, his only remedy being in Chancery to compel the ceſtui que truſt to execute the uſe. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 487. But ſee infra.

The limitation of an uſe, was at the Common law but a matter of equity: But now feoffments to uſes, &c. have the ſame acceptation as deeds at Common law; and uſes limited by any conveyance, are governed and directed according to the rules of law. 2 Lill. Abr. 664. There were two inventors of uſes; fear in the time of trouble and civil war, for the ſaving of inheritances from forfeiture; and fraud in time of peace, to defeat debts, eſcheats, &c. And it is ſaid the original of uſes was the ſtatute of Mortmain, which cramped the clergy ſo much that they were forced to take ſhelter under the laity, and make uſe of them to purchaſe lands in truſt for them and to their uſe: Afterwards the wars between the houſes of York and Lancaſter coming on, truſts and uſes increaſed more than ever; and although the Common law could take no cogniſance of them, yet there were always, until King Henry 8th's reign, clergymen chancellors, who were ready upon all occaſions to decree the performance of the truſt and uſe. 2 Lill. 662, 663.

It hath been obſerved by ſome writers, that there were no ſuch things as uſes at Common law; the reaſon was, becauſe the feoffee was always taken as the owner of the land; and it was very inconvenient and abſurd that there ſhould be two ſeveral fees, and the owners of the ſame land ſimul & ſemel; therefore by the Common law the feoffees to uſes were the very tenants, &c. But the ſtatute of uſes hath united the eſtate to the uſe, ſo that now the feoffees to uſes have no eſtate or intereſt at all, but in reſpect of the contingent eſtate and uſes limited in the deed. 3 Salk. 386. Becauſe in time many deceits were invented, by ſettling the poſſeſſion in one man, and the uſe in another, inſomuch that the poſſeſſion and the uſe were divided, which opened a gap for frauds: To avoid theſe inconveniencies, the ſtatute of 27 H. 8. c. 10. gives the poſſeſſion to him who has the uſe, and as before the ſtatute the poſſeſſion ruled the uſe, ſo now the uſe governs the poſſeſſion; for this reaſon in conveyances, it is ſet down in the habendum to whoſe uſe the lands are conveyed, and whatever eſtate a man hath in the uſe, the ſame he hath in the poſſeſſion at this day. 1 Rep. 121. 2 Leon. cap. 25.

The Stat. 27 H. 8. cap. 10. enacts, That where any are or ſhall be ſeiſed of lands, to the uſe of any other, by reaſon of any bargain and ſale, feoffment, fine, recovery, contract, agreement or will, &c. he to whoſe uſe the lands are ſettled in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life, or otherwiſe, ſhall be eſteemed in poſſeſſion of the land to all intents and purpoſes: And where one is ſeiſed of lands to the uſe or intent that another ſhall have an yearly rent out of the ſame, ceſtui que uſe ſhall be deemed in poſſeſſion and ſeiſin of the ſaid rent, and of like eſtate as in the uſe, &c. And if there are any uſes limited in a new manner, they are void. 1 Rep. 129, 138.

But there are uſes that are not executed by this ſtatute; as if lands are granted to others in truſt, that the feoffees ſhall take the profits, and deliver them to the feoffor and his heirs; alſo leaſes for years of lands in uſe, (which leaſes had their being before, and are granted over in uſe and truſt) where the leſſee is poſſeſſed only of his term, and not ſeiſed of any freehold, &c. and there ſtill remains an uſe of goods and chattels perſonal, which is properly a Chancery truſt, wherein the uſe and poſſeſſion are divided; though in other caſes the ſtatute executes agreements as the Chancery would have done before. Wood's Inſt. 256, 257.

All lands of inheritance, liberties, franchiſes, viſible or local, may be conveyed by way of uſe; But inheritances perſonal, which have no relation to lands or local hereditaments, cannot be conveyed by way of uſe. And ſome queſtions having been made, out of what an uſe ſhall ariſe, it hath been held, That uſes ſhall be raiſed only out of a freehold; that they cannot be raiſed out of a chattel, nor out of an uſe, or a bare right or power, nor out of an intended purpoſe, &c. Moor 509. 1 Leon. 148. 3 Salk. 386.

In uſes there ought to be privity of eſtate to erect the uſe upon: And there are four things required to the execution of a uſe within the ſtatute, viz. There muſt be a perſon ſeiſed; but the King or a corporation, an alien, &c. cannot be ſeiſed to the uſe of another: There is to be a ceſtui que uſe in being; for the words of the act are, Stand and be ſeiſed to the uſe of any perſon or perſons: There muſt be an uſe in eſſe, in poſſeſſion, remainder, or reverſion; and the eſtate of the feoffees, &c. out of which the uſes ariſe, is to be veſted or transferred to ceſtui que uſe; and if any of theſe fail, the uſe will not be executed. 1 Rep. 126. 1 Inſt. 19. 2 Cro. 50, 401.

Uſes are in eſſe, either in poſſeſſion, remainder, or reverſion; or in contingency, which by poſſibility may fall into poſſeſſion, or in reverſion, &c. Contingent uſes in poſſe, may be created though they are not executed by the ſtatute, but remain at Common law: But when they come in eſſe, then the ſtatute executes them; and before that, they may be deſtroyed, diſcontinued, or ſuſpended. 1 Rep. 135.

An uſe is alſo expreſs, or implied; expreſs, as when a feoffment is made of land to A. B. and his heirs, to the uſe of C. D. and the heirs of his body, &c. Implied, where the uſe is not declared between the parties, but is left to the conſtruction of the law: And if a man ſeiſed of lands makes a feoffment in fee without any conſideration, and it is not declared to whoſe uſe, by implication of law it ſhall be to the uſe of the feoffor, &c.

It hath been adjudged, that if by feoffment, or leaſe and releaſe, a man conveys any particular eſtate mediate or immediate to another perſon, there the reſidue of the eſtate ſhall by implication remain to the uſe of the party himſelf: But where no eſtate is limited to another, the whole conveyance is to no purpoſe, if the party be conſtrued to have the reſulting uſe in him; indeed upon a fine or recovery perſons may have their particular eſtates in other reſpects, as barring upon nonclaims, &c. 1 Rep. 121. 2 Roll. Abr. 781, 782. 2 Salk. 678. 3 Salk. 387.

An uſe may be raiſed two manner of ways, 1ſt, By tranſmutation, or departing with the poſſeſſion of the eſtate. 2dly, Without tranſmutation of the eſtate, by keeping the land in a man's own hands, and making the poſſeſſion be to the uſe of another: Thoſe uſes that ariſe by tranſmutation of eſtate, are by feoffment, fine, recovery, &c. And thoſe which ariſe without tranſmutation, being by bargain and ſale inrolled, and covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to uſes. 1 Plowd. 301. 1 Inſt. 271.

Conveyances to uſes are of three ſorts; a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed; a feoffment, fine, or recovery to uſes; and a bargain and ſale; by which laſt a contingent uſe cannot be ſupported, though by the two firſt it may; and there is a difference between a feoffment to uſes, and a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, becauſe the feoffor departs with his whole eſtate, but the covenantor departs with no more than what is actually veſted in the ceſtui que uſe. 2 Sid. 64, 129. In bargains and ſales, and covenants to ſtand ſeiſed, ſome conſideration is neceſſary to make thoſe deeds operate to uſes; the conſideration of money in a bargain and ſale, and natural affection, blood, affinity, marriage, &c. in the covenant to ſtand ſeiſed: And they may be good to a man's wife or family without any conſideration; but not to others. Plowd. 301. Dyer 169. 3 Lev. 306. The conſideration, or a reſervation of 12 d. a penny, or a pepper-corn, are ſufficient conſiderations to raiſe an uſe. 2 Mod. 251. 3 Salk. 387.

If a man covenants in conſideration of marriage, or of a ſum of money paid to him, that the covenantee ſhall have ſuch lands; the ſame ſhall change the uſe immediately, for theſe are good conſiderations either to change or raiſe uſes. Dyer 6. But if a perſon covenants to make an eſtate to certain perſons to certain uſes, in conſideration of marriage; no uſe ariſes by ſuch bare covenant, unleſs the eſtate be made accordingly: So where upon marriage there is a covenant to levy a fine, except the fine be levied; but if a fine be levied, it ſhall be to the uſes. Daliſ. 112. 3 Lev. 306. Cro. Eliz. 401.

An uſe ariſes when declared by eſtate executed, which needs no conſideration: A fine itſelf, without any conſideration, doth raiſe uſes, where a marriage is intended; but in other conveyances, the conſideration of marriage will not raiſe an uſe, if the marriage take not effect; becauſe the conſideration muſt be executed before the uſe ſhall ariſe. 1 Leon. 138.

A conſideration of money given by one, may extend to all the eſtates; but if it be of blood, &c. it is ſingular, and will raiſe the uſe of that only to which it goeth: Though if I covenant with B. in conſideration of the marriage of my ſon with his daughter, to be ſeiſed to the uſe of a ſtranger for life, and after to my ſon and his wife in tail; here the uſe ſhall ariſe to the ſtranger, to bear up the remainder, which is not good without a particular eſtate. Plowd. 307. Dyer 174. 11 Rep. 24. Yet if ſuch covenant be to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of myſelf for life, and after to C. a ſtranger for the term of twenty years, and after that to my ſon in tail; in this caſe the uſe limited to C. is void, and my ſon after my death ſhall have the land. 1 Rep. 155.

A. covenanted for natural affection, to be ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, and after his death that the land ſhould deſcend or remain to his couſin B. in fee; reſolved by all the judges that no uſe is raiſed to B. by reaſon of the disjunctive, deſcend or remain. Jenk. Cent. 267. An uſe cannot be raiſed by any covenant, proviſo, or bargain and ſale, upon a general conſideration, without ſpecial averment: And although he that hath the fee-ſimple of land, may make what uſes he will of it in fee, for life or years; yet tenant in tail may not. 4 Shep. Abr. 180. 2 Cro. 400, 401. On a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed in conſideration of natural love and affection, one named in the deed may aver himſelf to be a relation. 2 Strange 934. Uſes may be made to a man and the wife he ſhall marry, or to his firſt, ſecond, or third wife, &c. And if parties to a deed declare, that one of them ſhall make a feoffment, or levy a fine to the uſe and intent that one ſhall hold the land for life, and after his death another in tail, and after that a third in fee-ſimple, &c. the eſtate ſettleth according to the uſes declared by the deed. 1 Rep. 13, 121.

A deviſe may be to an uſe, and be ſo executed: A man makes a feoffment to the uſe of his will, he hath the uſe in the mean time; and when the feoffor by will limits the eſtate purſuant to his power, the eſtate takes effect by the feoffment, and the uſe is directed by the will. Lutw. 823. 6 Rep. 17, 18. If uſes are ſettled upon condition, the condition muſt firſt be performed; and a future uſe may well ariſe upon the non-performance of a condition. 2 Lil. Abr. 668.

There may be a future ſpringing uſe, without a precedent eſtate made to ſupport it, as a man covenants to ſtand ſeiſed after his death to the uſe of his kinſman and his heirs, the eſtate in the mean time is in him; for it cannot paſs out of him during his life, and therefore in caſe of covenant he hath ſuch eſtate. 1 Rep. 154. 2 Lev. 77.

An uſe is conſtrued as favourably as may be, to comply with the intent of the party: Intention is the foundation of uſes, but it ought to be out of the words of the deed, to be agreeable to law, and collected and taken from the intire deed. 1 Mod. 98. Lutw. 700, 790. If the meaning of the party doth appear, that he intended to paſs his eſtate by way of raiſing an uſe; there the words give, grant, &c. ſhall enure as a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed: But where it doth not appear, that he intended to paſs it by way of uſe, but by conveyance at Common law, no uſe is raiſed. March 50. Lands being once ſold and ſettled to uſes, the party that makes the uſe may not create any farther uſes: Where the eſtate out of which an uſe ariſeth is gone, the uſe is gone likewiſe; and uſes may be made void by releaſe, or power of revocation. Dyer 186. 1 Inſt. 237. Deeds of gift of goods, &c. made in truſt to the uſe of the grantor, ſhall be void. 3 Hen. 7. c. 4. And no uſe will prevent dower of a woman after her huſband's death, &c. See Covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, Gilbert's Law of Uſes, Lord Bacon's Law Tracts, 5 New Abr. and 22 Vin. Abr. tit. Uſes, and Black. Com. 2 V. 327, &c.

Superſtitious uſes. By ſtatute, a deviſe of lands or goods to ſuperſtitious uſes, is where it is to find or maintain a chaplain or prieſt to pray for the ſouls of the dead, or lamp in a chapel, a ſtipendiary prieſt, &c. Theſe, and ſuch like, are declared to be ſuperſtitious uſes; and the lands and goods ſo deviſed are forfeited to the King. 1 Ed. 6. c. 14. But a man deviſed lands to truſtees and their heirs, to find a prieſt, to pray for his ſoul, ſo long as the laws of the land would permit; and if the laws would not permit it, then to apply the profits to the poor, with power to convert the profits to either of the ſaid uſes; adjudged this was not a deviſe to any ſuperſtitious uſe. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 259. And where certain profits ariſing out of lands are given to ſuperſtitious uſes, the King ſhall have only ſo much of the yearly profits, which were to be applied to the ſuperſtitious uſes; though when the land itſelf is given to the teſtator, declaring that the profits, without ſaying how much, ſhall be employed for ſuch uſes, in this caſe the King ſhall have the land itſelf. Moor 129. If a ſum certain is given to a prieſt, and other goods which depend upon the ſuperſtitious uſe, all is forfeited to the King; yet if land, &c. is given to find an obit, or anniverſary, and for another good uſe; and there is no certainty how much ſhall be employed to the ſuperſtitious uſe, the gift to the good uſe ſhall preſerve the whole from forfeiture. 4 Rep. 104. 2 Rol. 205. It has been held, where a ſuperſtitious uſe was void, ſo that the King could not have it, that it was not ſo far void, as to reſult to the heir at law; and therefore the King might apply it to charity. 1 Salk. 163. See the Stat. 23 H. 8. under Mortmain; and the 1 Geo. 1. Title Forfeiture.

Uſer de Action, Is the purſuing or bringing an action, in the proper county, &c. Broke 64.

Uſher, (Fr. Huiſſier, a door-keeper) Is an officer in the King's houſe, as of the privy chamber, &c. And there are uſhers of the courts of Chancery and Exchequer.

Uſucaption, (Uſucaptio) Signifies the enjoying by continuance of time; a long poſſeſſion, or preſcription. Terms de Ley.

Uſufructuary, (Uſufructuarius) One that hath the uſe and reaps the profit of a thing.

Uſurious contract, Is any bargain or contract, whereby any man is obliged to pay more intereſt for money than the law allows. See Uſury.

Uſurpation, (Uſurpatio) Is the uſing that which is another's; an interruption or diſturbing a man in his right and poſſeſſion, &c. And uſurpations in the Civil and Canon law are called intruſions; and ſuch intruders having not any right ſhall ſubmit, or be excommunicated and deprived, &c. by Boniface's Conſt. Gibſ. Codex 817. The uſurpation of a church benefice is, when one that hath no right, preſenteth to the church, and his clerk is admitted and inſtituted into it, and hath quiet poſſeſſion ſix months after inſtitution before a quare impedit brought: It muſt commence upon a preſentation, not a collation; becauſe by a collation the church is not full, but the right patron may bring his writ at any time to remove the uſurper. 1 Inſt. 227. 6 Rep. 30. And by uſurpation, the fee of an advowſon may be gained, as well as the avoidance upon which the uſurpation is made: And the true patron cannot remove the incumbent to regain the poſſeſſion, without a writ of right advowſon, which he is driven to for recovery of the inheritance. 6 Rep. 49. See poſt.

It has been formerly held, that upon an uſurpation the uſurper gains a fee-ſimple in the advowſon; in like manner as he who enters into land during a vacation, and claims the ſame as his inheritance by wrong: But as the dying ſeiſed of lands in that caſe, will not take away the entry of the ſucceſſor; no more ſhall the uſurpation on a vacancy, take away his right of preſentation when the church becomes void. 2 Co. Inſt. 360. 17 Ed. 3. c. 37. At Common law the patron in fee was put out of poſſeſſion by an uſurpation, and was put to recover the advowſon itſelf by a writ of right; but he hath no remedy for the preſentation hac vice, nor if another avoidance happen, unleſs he bring his writ of right of advowſon, and re-continue the advowſon: If the patron had the advowſon in tail, or for life, this turn and alſo his whole advowſon was gone. 3 Salk. 388. vide Infra. An uſurpation upon a leſſee for years, gains the fee-ſimple, and puts the true patron out of poſſeſſion; and tho' by the Stat. Weſtm. 2. he in reverſion after the determination of the leaſe for years, may have a quare impedit when the church is void, or may preſent; and if his clerk is inſtituted and inducted, then he is remitted to his former title; yet till that is done, the uſurper hath the fee, and the writ of right of advowſon lies againſt him. Hut. 66. 3 Salk. 389. Upon the Stat. 1 Eliz. c. 19. If an uſurpation be on a biſhop, it ſhall bind him; but his ſucceſſor may preſent to the next avoidance, or bring a quare impedit, although he is out of poſſeſſion: All uſurpations ſhall bind the biſhop who ſuffers them, not their ſucceſſors. 2 Cro. 673.

No one can uſurp upon the King; but an uſurpation may diſpoſſeſs him of his preſentation; ſo as he ſhall be obliged to bring a quare impedit; though it will not ſo diveſt his eſtate in an advowſon, as to bind his inheritance, and put him to a writ of right. 3 Salk. 389. One Coparcener or jointenant, &c. cannot uſurp upon the other: But where there are two patrons of churches united, if one preſents in the other's turn, it is an uſurpation; for they are not as coparceners, who are privy in blood. Dyer 259. 17 Ed. 3. If one preſents to a church in time of war, the preſentment ſhall not put the rightful patron out of poſſeſſion: And a preſentation which is void in law, as in caſe of ſimony, or to a church that is full, &c. makes no uſurpation. 2 Rep. 93. Wood's Inſt. 160. Now by a late ſtatute, no uſurpation on any avoidance, ſhall diſplace the eſtate or intereſt of any perſon intitled to an advowſon; or hinder him to preſent upon the next avoidance, or to maintain a quare impedit to recover poſſeſſion, &c. 7 Ann. c. 18. This ſtatute hath quite altered the law concerning uſurpations of churches. Mallor. Q. Imped. 146. See Black. Com. 3 V. 242.

Uſurpation of Franchiſes and Liberties, Is when a ſubject unjuſtly uſes any royal franchiſes, &c. And it is ſaid to be an uſurpation upon the King, who ſhall have the writ of quo warranto againſt the uſurpers. See Quo Warranto, and Black. Com. 3 V. 262.

Uſury, (Uſura) Is money given for the uſe of money; and is particularly defined to be the gain of any thing by contract above the principal, or that which was lent, exacted in conſideration of loan thereof, whether it be of money, or any other thing. 3 Inſt. 151. Some make uſury to be the profit exacted for a loan made to a perſon in want and diſtreſs; but properly it conſiſts in extorting an unreaſonable rate for money, beyond what is allowed by ſtatute. The letting money out at intereſt, or upon uſury, was againſt the Common law; and in former times, if any one after his death had been found to be an uſurer, all his goods and chattels were forfeited to the King, &c. And according to ſeveral ancient ſtatutes, all uſury is unlawful; but at this time neither the Common or Statute law abſolutely prohibit uſury, 3 Inſt. 151, 152. By this is meant Intereſt for money lent, not exceeding what is the ſettled rate of intereſt, by the ſtatute law.

Though exceſſive uſury is liable to forfeiture of treble value of the money taken by ſtatute; and if judgment cannot be given on the ſtatute, if it be fonnd that a perſon took money for forbearance by corrupt agreement, judgment may be given againſt him at Common law, which is fine and impriſonment. 3 Salk. 391.

Reaſonable intereſt may be taken for the uſe of money at this day: The Stat. 27 Hen. 8. cap. 2. allowed 10 l. per cent. for money lent on mortgages, &c. The 13 Eliz. c. 8. ordained 8 l. per cent. And the 21 Jac. 1. c. 17. the like intereſt. The 12 Car. 2. c. 13. lowered the intereſt to 6 l. per cent. And the 12 Ann. cap. 16. to 5 l. per cent. per annum. But it is ſaid, that the Stat. 13 Eliz. and 21 Jac. 1. allowed not uſury, but puniſhed the exceſs of it; and the 12 Ann. is called the Statute againſt Exceſſive Uſury.

By the Stat. 12 Ann. c. 16. no perſon ſhall take directly or indirectly, for loan of any money, or any thing, above the value of 5 l. for the forbearance of 100 l. for a year, and ſo proportoinably for a greater or leſs ſum; and all bonds, contracts, and aſſurances made for payment of any principal ſum to be lent on uſury, above the rate of 5 l. per cent, ſhall be void: And whoever ſhall take, accept or receive by way of corrupt bargain, loan, &c. a greater intereſt, ſhall forfeit treble the value of the money lent; and ſcriveners, ſolicitors, and drivers of bargains, are not to take above 5 s. for procuring the loan of 100 l. for a year, on pain of forfeiting 20 l. &c.

It hath been adjudged on this ſtatute, that a contract for 6 l. per cent. made before the ſtatute, is not within the meaning of it; and therefore that it was ſtill lawful to receive ſuch intereſt, in reſpect of any ſuch contract: And if a man, when intereſt was at 6 l. per cent. lent money at that rate, and after the ſtatute comes and ſinks the intereſt to 5 l. per cent. if he continues the old intereſt on that bond, the bond ſhall not be void as uſurious; but it is ſaid the party ſhall be liable to forfeit treble value. 1 Hawk. 246. 1 Mod. 69. The receipt of higher intereſt than is allowed by the ſtatute, by virtue of an agreement ſubſequent to the firſt contract, doth not avoid an aſſurance fairly made; and a bond made to ſecure a juſt debt, payable with lawful intereſt, ſhall not be avoided by a corrupt uſurious agreement between others, to which the obligee was no ways privy: Nor ſhall miſtakes in drawing writings make void a fair agreement. Ibid.

If the original contract be not uſurious, nothing done afterwards can make it ſo; And a counter-bond to ſave one harmleſs againſt a bond made upon a corrupt agreement, will not be void by the ſtatutes. But if the original agreement be corrupt between all the parties, and ſo within the ſtatute, no colour will exempt it from the danger of the ſtatutes againſt uſury. 1 Brownl. 73. 2 And. 428. 4 Shep. Abr. 170.

A fine levied, or judgment ſuffered as a ſecurity for money, in purſuance of an uſurious contract, may be avoided by an averment of the corrupt agreement; as well as any common ſpecialty, or parol contract: And it is not material, whether the payment of the principal and the uſurious intereſt, be ſecured by the ſame, or by different conveyances; for all writings whatſoever for the ſtrengthening ſuch a contract are void; alſo a contract reſerving to the lender a greater advantage than allowed, is uſurious, if the whole is reſerved by way of intereſt, or in part only under that name, and in part by way of rent for a houſe, let at a rate plainly exceeding the known value; ſo where part is taken before the end of the time, that the borrower hath not the profit of the whole principal money, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 248. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 509.

By Holt chief juſtice, if A. owes B. 100*l.* who demands his money, and A. acquaints him, that he hath not the money ready, but is deſirous to pay it, if B can procure it to be lent by any other perſon; and thereupon B. having preſent occaſion for his money, contracts with C. that if he will lend A. 100*l* he will give him 10*l.* on which C. lends the money, and the debt is paid to B. this is a good and lawful contract, and not uſurious between B. and C. Carthew's Rep. 252. It is not uſury, if there be not a corrupt agreement, for more than the ſtatute intereſt; and the defendant ſhall not be puniſhed, unleſs he receive ſome part of the money in affirmance of the uſurious agreement. 3 Salk. 390.

There can be no uſury, without a loan; and the court hath diſtinguiſhed between a bargain and a loan. 1 Lutw. 273. Sid. 27. If a man lend another 100*l.* for two years, to pay for the loan 30*l.* and if he pays the principal at the year's end, he ſhall pay nothing for intereſt; this is not uſury, becauſe the party may pay it at the year's end, and ſo diſcharge himſelf. Cro. Jac. 509. 5 Rep. 69. And it is the ſame where a perſon, by ſpecial agreement, is to pay double the ſum borrowed, &c. by way of penalty, for non-payment of the principal debt; the penalty being in lieu of damages, and the borrower might repay the principal at the time agreed, and avoid the penalty. 2 Inſt. 89. 2 Roll. Abr. 801.

A man ſurrenders a copyhold eſtate to another upon condition that if he pays 80*l.* at a certain day, then the ſurrender to be void; and after it is agreed between them that the money ſhall not be paid, but that the ſurrenderor ſhall forfeit, &c. In conſideration whereof, the ſurrenderee promiſes to pay to the ſurrenderor on a certain day 60*l.* or 6*l.* per annum from the ſaid day pro uſu & intereſſe of the ſaid 60*l.* till that ſum is paid: This 6*l.* ſhall be taken to be intereſſe damnorum, and not lucri, and but limited as a penalty for non payment of the 60*l.* as a nomine pœnæ, &c. 2 Roll. Rep. 469. 1 Danv. Abr. 44. On a loan of 100*l.* or other ſum of money for a year, the lender may agree to take his intereſt half-yearly, or quarterly: or to receive the profits of a manor or lands, &c and be no uſury, though ſuch profits are rendered every day. Cro. Jac. 26.

If a grant of rent, or leaſe for 20*l.* a year of land which is worth 100*l.* per annum, be made for one hundred pounds, it is not uſurious; if there be not an agreement, that this grant or leaſe ſhall be void, upon payment of the principal and arrears, &c. Jenk. Cent. 249. But if two men ſpeak together, and one deſires the other to lend him an hundred pounds, and, for the loan of it, he will give more than legal intereſt; and, to evade the ſtatute, he grants to him 30*l* per Annum out of his land for ten years, or makes a leaſe for one hundred years to him, and the leſſee regrants it upon condition that he ſhall pay 30*l.* yearly for the ten years: In this caſe it is uſury, tho' the lender never have his own hundred pounds again. 1 Cro. 27. See 1 Leon. 119.

A man granted a large rent for years, for a ſmall ſum of money: The ſtatute of uſury was pleaded; and it was adjudged, that if it had been laid to be upon a loan of money, it had been uſurious; though it is otherwiſe if it be a contract for an annuity. 4 Shep. Abr. 170. If one hath a rent-charge of 30*l.* a year, and another aſketh what he ſhall give for it, and they agree for 100*l.* this is a plain contract for the rent-charge, and no uſury. 3 Nelſ. 510. The grant of an annuity for lives, not only exceeding the rate allowed for intereſt, but alſo the proportion for contracts of this kind, in conſideration of a certain ſum of money, is not within the ſtatutes againſt uſury; and ſo of a grant of an annuity, on condition, &c. Cro Jac. 253. 2 Lev. 7. See 1 Sid. 182. Where intereſt exceeds 5 l per cent. per annum on a bond, if poſſibly the principal and intereſt are in hazard, upon a contingency, or caſualty; or if there is a hazard that one may have leſs than his principal, as when a bond is to pay money upon the return of a ſhip from ſea, &c. theſe are not uſury. 2 Cro. 208, 508. 1 Cro. 27. Show. 8. Though where B. lends to D. three hundred pounds on bond, upon an adventure during the life of E. for ſuch a time; if therefore D. pays to B. twenty pounds in three months, and, at the end of ſix months, the principal ſum, with a further præmium, at the rate of 6 d. per pound a month; or if before the time mentioned E. dies, then the bond to be void: This, differing from the hazard in a bottomry bond, was adjudged an uſurious contract. Carthew 67, 68. Comberb. 125. See the next caſe.

One hundred pounds is lent to have 120*l* at the year's end, upon a caſualty; if the caſualty goes to the intereſt only, and not the principal, it is uſury: The difference in the books is, that where the principal and intereſt are both in danger of being loſt, there the contract for extraordinary intereſt is not uſurious; but when the principal is well ſecured, it is otherwiſe. 3 Salk. 391.

Diſcounting notes beyond legal intereſt held uſurious. 2 Strange 1243. A perſon ſecures the intereſt and principal, if it be at the will of the party who is to pay, it is no uſury. 2 Cro. 509. And a lender accepting a voluntary gratuity from the borrower, on payment of the principal and intereſt; or receiving the intereſt before due, &c. without any corrupt agreement, ſhall not be within the ſtatutes againſt uſury. 2 Cro. 677. 3 Cro. 501. Alſo if one gives an uſurious bond, and tenders the whole money; yet if the party will take only legal intereſt, he ſhall not forfeit the treble value by Statute 4 Leon. 43. Judgment on an indictment for uſury was arreſted, becauſe it only laid a corrupt agreement, without any loan, or taking exceſſive intereſt in purſuance of it. 2 Strange 816.

On an information upon the ſtatute of uſury, he who borrows the money may be a witneſs, after he hath paid the money. Raym. 191. But cannot be a witneſs to prove the repayment of the money, becauſe till that is proved he is no witneſs at all. 1 Strange 633. In action for uſury, a corrupt agreement muſt be ſet forth: It is not ſufficient to plead the ſtatute, and ſay that for the lending of 20*l.* the defendant took more than 5*l.* per cent without ſetting forth a corrupt agreement or contract Lutw. 466. 2 Lill. 672. 3 Nelſ. 514. Wage, (Vadiare, from Fr. Gage) Signifies the giving of ſecurity for performance of any thing; as to wage or gage deliverance, to wage law, &c. Co. Lit. 294. But ſee Wager of Law.

Wager of Battle. A ſpecies of trial of great antiquity, but much diſuſed; though ſtill in force if the parties chuſe to abide by it. This mode of trial was uſed in the court-martial, or court of chivalry and honour: In appeals of felony; and on iſſues joined in writs of right. See Black. Com. 3 V. 337, 339. iii. 4 V. 340, 411, 414, 417.

Wager of Law, (Vadiare Legem) Is where an action of debt is brought againſt a man upon a ſimple contract between the parties, without deed or record; and the defendant ſwears in court in the preſence of his purgators, that he oweth the plaintiff nothing in manner and form as he hath declared: And the reaſon of waging of law is, becauſe the defendant might have paid the plaintiff his debt in private or before witneſſes who may be all dead, and therefore the law allows him to wage his law in his diſcharge; and his oath ſhall rather be accepted to diſcharge himſelf, than the law will ſuffer him to be charged upon the bare allegation of the plaintiff. 2 Inſt. 45. Wager of law is uſed in actions of debt without ſpecialty; and alſo in action of detinue, for goods or chattels lent or left with the defendant, who may ſwear on a book, and certain perſons with him, that he detaineth not the goods in manner has the plaintiff has declared, and his compurgators are to be ſix, eight, or twelve of his neighbours, as the court ſhall aſſign him. Terms de Ley.

The manner of waging law is thus: He that is to do it, muſt bring ſix compurgators with him into court, and ſtand at the end of the bar towards the right hand of the chief juſtice; and the ſecondary aſks him whether he will wage his law? If he anſwers that he will, the judge admoniſheth him to be well adviſed, and tells him the danger of taking a falſe oath; and if he ſtill perſiſts, the ſecondary ſays, and he that wages his law repeats after him: Hear this ye juſtices, That I A. B. do not owe to C. D. the ſum of, &c. nor any penny thereof in manner and form as the ſaid C. D. hath declared againſt me: So help me God. Though, before he takes the oath, the plaintiff is called by the crier thrice; and if he do not appear he becomes nonſuited, and then the defendant goes quit without taking his oath; and if he appear, and the defendant ſwears that he owes the plaintiff nothing, and the compurgators do give it upon oath that they believe he ſwears true, the plaintiff is barred for ever; for when a perſon has waged his law, it is as much as if a verdict has paſſed againſt the plaintiff: If the plaintiff do not appear to hear the defendant perform his law, ſo that he is nonſuit; he is not barred, but may bring a new action. 1 Inſt. 1[illegible]5. 2 Lil. Abr. 674.

In an action of debt on a by-law, the defendant waged law; a day being given on the roll for him to come and make his law, he was ſet at the right corner of the bar, and the ſecondary aſked him if he was ready to wage his law; who anſwering that he was, he laid his hand on the book, and then the plaintiff was called: Then the judges admoniſhed him and his compurgators not to ſwear raſhly; and thereupon he made oath, that he did not owe the money modo & forma as the plaintiff had declared; and then his compurgators, who were ſtanding behind him, were called, and each of them laying his right hand upon the book, made oath that they believed what the defendant had ſworn was true. 2 Vent. 171. 2 Salk. 682. The defendant cannot wage his law in any action, but perſonal actions, where the cauſe is ſecret; and wager of law has been denied on hearing the caſe, and the defendant been adviſed to plead to iſſue, &c. Alſo this wager of law being, it is ſaid, abuſed by the iniquity of the times, the law was forced to find another way to do juſtice, and that was by turning actions of debt on ſimple contract, &c. into action upon the caſe by indebitat. aſſumpſit, which hath ouſted the defendant of his ley gager. 2 Lil. 675, 676. See the Statute.

Waifs, (From the Sax. Waſian, Fr. Choſe guaive, Lat. Bona Waviata) Are goods which are ſtolen and waved, or left by the felon, on his being purſued, for fear of being apprehended; which are forfeited to the King or lord of the manor. Kitch. 81. If a felon in purſuit waives the goods, or, having them in his cuſtody, and thinking that purſuit was made, for his own eaſe and more ſpeedy flight, flies away and leaves the goods behind him; then the Kings officer or the bailiff of the lord of the manor, within whoſe juriſdiction they are left, who hath the franchiſe of waif, may ſeize the goods to the King's or lord's uſe and keep them; except the owner makes freſh purſuit after the felon, and ſue an appeal of robbery within a year and a day, or give evidence againſt him whereby he is attainted, &c. In which caſe, the owner ſhall have reſtitution of his goods ſo ſtolen and waived. 21 H. 8. c. 11. 5 Rep. 109. Goods waived by a felon, in his flight from thoſe who purſue him, ſhall be forfeited: And tho' waif is generally ſpoken of goods ſtolen; yet if a man be purſued with hue and cry as a felon, and he flies and leaves his own goods, theſe will be forfeited as goods ſtolen; but they are properly fugitive's goods, and not forfeited till it be found before the coroner, or otherwiſe of record, that he fled for the felony. 2 Hawk. 450. The law makes a forfeiture of goods waived, as a puniſhment to the owner of the goods, for not bringing the felon to juſtice: But if the thief had not the goods in his poſſeſſion, when he fled, there is no forfeiture: If a felon ſteals goods and hides them, and afterwards flies, theſe goods are not forfeited; ſo where he leaves ſtolen goods any where, with an intent to fetch them at another time, they are not waived; and in theſe caſes the owner may take his goods where he finds them, without freſh ſuit, &c. *Cro. War, (Bellum) A fighting between two Kings, princes, or parties, in vindication of their juſt rights; alſo the ſtate of war, or all the time it laſts. By our law, when the courts of juſtice are open, ſo that the King's judges diſtribute juſtice to all, and protect men from wrong and violence, it is ſaid to be a time of peace: But when by invaſion, rebellion, &c. the peaceable courſe of juſtice is ſtopt, then it is adjudged to be a time of war: And this ſhall be tried by the records and judges, whether juſtice at ſuch a time had her equal courſe of proceeding or not. For time of war gives privilege to them that are in war, and all others within the kingdom. 1 Inſt. 249. In the civil wars of K. Char. 1. it was computed that there were not fewer than 200,000 foot and 50,000 horſe in arms on both ſides; which was an extraordinary hoſt, conſidering it compoſed of Britains ſufficient to have ſhaken Europe, though it was otherwiſe fatally employed. And in ancient times, when the Kings of England were to be ſerved with ſoldiers in their wars, a knight or ſquire that had revenues, farmers and tenants, would covenant with the King by indenture inrolled in the Exchequer, to furniſh him with ſuch a number of military men; and thoſe men were to ſerve under him, whom they knew and honoured, and with whom they muſt live at their return. 1 Inſt. 71. This was an excellent inſtitution; but we have had many ſtatutes which have altered this method of recruiting the army, by introducing the liſting of ſoldiers, and retaining them by virtue of money paid and advanced, &c. The ſtatute 25 Edw. 3. enacted, That none ſhould be conſtrained to find men of arms but by tenure of land, or grant in parliament. Warrant of Attorney, Is an authority and power given by a client to his attorney, to appear and plead for him; or to ſuffer judgment to paſs againſt him by confeſſing the action, by Nil dicit, non ſum informatus, &c. And although a warrant of attorney given by a man in cuſtody to confeſs a judgment, no attorney being preſent, is void as to the entry of a judgment; yet it may be a good warrant to appear and file common bail. 2 *Lill. A warrant of attorney which warrants the action, is of courſe put in by the attornies for the plaintiff and defendant; ſo that it differs from a letter of attorney which paſſes ordinarily under the hand and ſeal of him that makes it, and is made before witneſſes, &c. Though a warrant of attorney to ſuffer a common recovery by the tenant, is acknowledged before ſuch perſons as a commiſſion for the doing thereof directs. Weſt's Symb. par. 2. Warrantia Chartae, is a writ that lieth where a man is infeoffed of lands with warranty, and then he is ſued or impleaded. And if the feoffee be impleaded in aſſiſe, or other action, in which he cannot vouch or call to warranty, he ſhall have this writ againſt the feoffor, or his heirs, to compel them to warrant the land unto him; and if the land be recovered from him, he ſhall recover as much lands in value againſt the warrantor, &c. But the warrantia chartæ ought to be brought by the feoffee depending the firſt writ againſt him, or he hath loſt his advantage. F. N. B. 134. Terms de Ley 372, 588. And if a perſon doth infeoff another of lands by deed with warranty, and the feoffee make a feoffment over, and taketh back an eſtate in fee, the warranty is determined; and he ſhall not have the writ warrantia chartæ, becauſe he is in of another eſtate: Alſo where one makes a feoffment in fee with warranty againſt him and his heirs, the feoffee ſhall not have a warrantia chartæ upon this warranty againſt the feoffor or his heirs, if he be impleaded by them; but the nature of it is to rebut againſt the feoffor and his heirs. Dalt. 48. 2 Lill. Abr. 684.

This writ may be ſued forth before a man is impleaded in any action, but the writ doth ſuppoſe that he is impleaded; and if the defendant appear and ſay, that he is not impleaded, by that plea he confeſſeth the warranty, and the plaintiff ſhall have judgment, &c. and the party ſhall recover in value of the lands againſt the vouchee, which he had at the time of the purchaſe of his warrantia chartæ; and therefore it may be good policy to bring it againſt him before he is ſued, to bind the lands he had at that time; for if he have aliened his lands before the voucher, he ſhall render nothing in value. New Nat. Br. 298, 299. If a man recover his warranty in warrantia chartæ, and after he is impleaded; he ought to give notice to him againſt whom he recovered, of the action, and pray him to ſhew what plea he will plead, to defend the land, &c. And where one upon a warranty doth vouch and recover in value, if he is then impleaded of the land recovered, he may not vouch again, for the warranty was once executed. 23 Ed. 3. 12. In a warranty to the feoffee in land, made by the feoffor; upon voucher if ſpecial matter be ſhewn by the vouchee, when he entered into the warranty, viz. That the land at the time of the feoffment was worth only 100 l. and now at the time of the voucher it is worth 200 l. by the induſtry of the feoffee; the plaintiff in a warrantia chartæ, &c. ſhall recover only the value as it was at the time of the ſale. Jenk. Cent. 35. If the vouchee can ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not warrant, that muſt be tried, &c.

Warrantia Diei, Is an ancient writ lying where one having a day aſſigned perſonally to appear in court to any action, is in the mean time employed in the King's ſervice, ſo that he cannot come at the day appointed: And it is directed to the juſtices to this end, that they neither take nor record him in default for that time. *Reg. Warranty, (Warrantia) Is a promiſe or covenant by deed made by the bargainor, for himſelf and his heirs, to warrant or ſecure the bargainee and his heirs, againſt all men for the enjoying of the thing granted. Bract. lib. 2 & 5. Weſt's Symb. par. 1.

A warranty is real or perſonal; real, when it concerns lands and tenements, granted in fee, or for life, &c. perſonal, when it concerns goods and chattels; and it is created by implication; for the purchaſer of goods may have a ſatisfaction from the ſeller, if he ſells them as his own, and the title proves deficient although there be no expreſs warranty to that purpoſe. And real warranties are either in deed, as by the word warrantizo or warrant expreſly; or in law, by the word dedi, &c. And a deed of gift and exchange, hath a warranty in law implied. Lit. 697. Sir Edward Coke defines a real warranty to be a covenant real annexed to lands, whereby a man and his heirs are bound to warrant the ſame to ſome other and his heirs; and that they ſhall quietly hold and enjoy the lands, and upon voucher, or by writ of warrantia chartæ, to yield other lands and tenements to the value of thoſe that ſhall be evicted by elder title: And warranty being a covenant real, bindeth to yield lands in recompence. 1 Inſt. 365, 384.

Warranty is alſo of three ſorts, viz. Warranty lineal, warranty collateral, and warranty that commences by diſſeiſin: Warranty lineal is where a man ſeiſed in fee makes a feoffment, and binds himſelf and his heirs by the deed to warranty, and hath iſſue a ſon and dies, and the warranty deſcends to his ſon and heir; for if no deed with warranty had been made, then the right of the lands ſhould have deſcended to the ſon as heir to his father, and he would have conveyed the deſcent from father to ſon: This warranty binds the right of fee-ſimple; but not the right of an eſtate-tail, unleſs the lineal warranty be with aſſets in fee-ſimple. Lit. 697, 703. 1 Inſt. 370.

Collateral warranty is when the party upon whom the warranty deſcends, cannot convey the title which he hath in the land from him that made the warranty, or ſhew that he is his heir, &c. As if tenant in tail diſcontinues the tail, or alienates the land, and then dieth, leaving iſſue, and the uncle of the iſſue releaſes to the diſcontinuee with warranty, and dies without iſſue; this is a collateral warranty to the iſſue in tail, and bindeth his right, without aſſets, it deſcending upon him, and he cannot make a title to the intail from his uncle. Lit. 704. 1 Inſt. 373, 376.

Warranty by diſſeiſin, is where one that hath no right to the freehold of another, entereth and conveyeth it away with warranty; which ſhall not bind or bar the perſon diſſeiſed, or the right heir that ought to have the land: And if where tenant for life, remainder in tail, leaſes for years with agreement with the leſſee, that he ſhall make a feoffment of the land, and then he will releaſe with warranty, which is done accordingly; adjudged, that this collateral warranty commencing by diſſeiſin, ſhall not bind the heir in tail, upon whom it deſcended. Lit. 698. 1 Inſt. 366, 367. Cro. Car. 483. Accomp. Conv. 1 V. 56.

He that makes a warranty, may make it as large, or as ſtrait, as he pleaſes; as for himſelf and his heirs, and what heirs, &c. And if the warranty be made for life, or in tail, it is good, and ſhall bind for ſo long only. 1 Inſt. 387. 1 And. 262, 305. But no warranty can inlarge an eſtate granted; for if the leſſor by deed doth releaſe to his leſſee for life, and warrant the land to him and his heirs, it ſhall not make his eſtate greater. 1 Inſt. 389. And where one binds him and his heirs to warranty; by this they are not bound to warrant new titles, or any right that commences after warranty made, but ſuch as were in eſſe at that time. Bridgm. 77. If one make an eſtate, and grant to warrant the land, but doth not ſay for how long; it ſhall be taken for ſo long as the eſtate to which the warranty is knit doth laſt: A man grants to warrant lands to another, and ſays not againſt what perſons; here it will be held a general warranty againſt all men. 1 Rep. 1.

A warranty may be annexed to eſtates of inheritance or freehold, and that not only to houſes and lands, but alſo rents, advowſons, commons, &c. which iſſue out of lands or tenements. 1 Inſt. 366, 389. And to every good warranty in deed, to make it binding; the perſon that doth warrant muſt be a perſon able; it is neceſſary that there be ſome eſtate to which the warranty is annexed, to ſupport it; that the warranty deſcend upon him who is heir of the whole blood by the Common law, to him that made it, and not upon another; and that the heir claim by the ſame right as the anceſtor; that it take effect in the life-time of ſuch anceſtor; and he be bound thereby; and the eſtate of freehold, which is to be barred, be put to a right before, or at the time of the warranty; and that he to whom the warranty deſcends, have then but right to the land. 1 Inſt. 367, 370, 384, 388. 10 Rep. 96, 97. If one be a ſucceſſor only in caſe of a corporation, he ſhall not be bound by the warranty of his natural anceſtor; and he that comes into land merely by act of law, as the lord by eſcheat, &c. ſhall never take advantage of a warranty; but it is otherwiſe where the eſtate ariſes by limitation of uſe, or a common recovery, which is the act of the party. 1 Inſt. 370. 3 Rep. 62. Though if the eſtate the warranty is annexed to be ſpent, the warranty is gone: So if a feoffment with warranty be made to two or more, and they, being jointenants, do after by deed make partition.

But where one enfeoffs two men and their heirs, and a feoffment is made in fee by one of them; the other may, notwithſtanding, have the benefit of the warranty. 6 Rep. 12. 10 Rep. 96. 1 Inſt. 385. Two perſons make a feoffment with warranty, the ſurvivor ſhall not be charged alone, without the heir of the other; and if both die, the heirs of both ſhall be equally bound. 3 Rep. 14.

All warranties before the Statute of Glouceſter, which deſcended to thoſe who were heirs to the warrantors, were bars to the ſame heirs to demand any of the lands; except the warranty began by diſſeiſin; That ſtatute hath ordained, that the warranty of the father ſhall be no bar to his ſon for the lands which come by the heritage of the mother; nor the warranty of the mother be binding to the ſon for the lands which come by the heritage of the father; but neither the ſtatute 11 H. 7. c. 20. nor any other ſtatute hath provided any remedy againſt a collateral warranty; therefore ſuch warranty is yet in force, and ſhall be a bar to the iſſue in tail. Terms de Ley 370, 371. * See Lit. tit. Warranty. But by the 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. for amendment of the law, warranties made by tenant for life, of any lands, coming or deſcending on him in reverſion or remainder, ſhall be void; and all collateral warranties made of any lands, &c. by any anceſtor, who hath not an eſtate of inheritance in poſſeſſion therein, ſhall be alſo void againſt the heir.

If lands are held of a man and his heirs, by certain ſervice, without any clauſe of warranty, they are bound to warranty: But when the deed is dedi & conceſſi, &c. to be holden of the chief lord of the fee, or of others, and not of the feoffors and their heirs, reſerving no ſervice, and without the aforeſaid clauſe; here the heirs of the feoffor ſhall not be bound to warranty. Stat. de Big. 4 Ed. 1. ſt. 3. c. 6. A warranty, according to law, is intire, and extends to all the lands, and is a bar to every perſon on whom it deſcends; and where ſeveral have a right, jointly or ſeverally, every one of them are barred: Though there is this difference as to warranties; where the entry is gone, and only a right of action is left, there a warranty deſcending upon the heir at law, ſhall bind: And where there is a right of entry, it ſhall not bind. 8 Rep. 54. 2 Lil. Abr. 684. And if any perſon make a deed with warranty, by which his heir ſhould be barred, and after the warrantor is attainted of felony; his heir ſhall not be bound by ſuch warranty, for it cannot deſcend upon him, the blood being corrupted. Lit.

If a warranty deſcend upon an infant, it ſhall not bind him, in caſe his entry into the lands be lawful; but he muſt take care not to ſuffer a deſcent after his full age, before he hath made his re-entry. 1 Rep. 140. Poph. 71. Warranty may be added to any conveyance of lands, tenements, or hereditaments; as upon fines, feoffments, gifts, releaſe, and confirmation, &c. And the ancient form of a warranty is in this manner——Et ego præfatus A. B. & hæredes mei prædict. meſſuag. & decem acras terræ cum pertinentiis ſuis, præfato D. hæredibus & aſſignatis ſuis contra omnes gentes warrantizabimus in perpetuum per præſentes, &c.

Warren, (Warrenna, from Germ. Wahren, i. e. Cuſtodire, or the Fr. Garenne) Is a franchiſe or place privileged, by preſcription or grant from the King, for the keeping of beaſts and fowls of the warren; which are hares and conies, partridges, pheaſants, and ſome add quails, woodcocks, and water-fowl, &c. Terms de Ley 589. 1 Inſt. 233. A perſon may have a warren in another's land, for one may alien the land, and reſerve the franchiſe: But none can make a warren, and appropriate thoſe creatures that are feræ naturæ, without licence from the King, or where a warren is claimed by preſcription. 8 Rep. 108. 11 Rep. 87. A warren may lie open; and there is no neceſſity of incloſing it, as there is of a park. 4 Inſt. 318. If any perſon offend in a free warren, he is puniſhable by the Common law, and by Stat. 21 Ed. 3. And if any one enter wrongfully into any warren, and chaſe, take or kill any conies, without the conſent of the owner, he ſhall forfeit treble damages, and ſuffer three months impriſonment, &c. by 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 25. When conies are on the ſoil of the party, he hath a property in them by reaſon of the poſſeſſion, and action lies for killing them; but if they run out of the warren, and eat up a neighbour's corn, the owner of the land may kill them, and no action will lie. 5 Rep. 104. 1 Cro. 548. In waſte, &c. againſt a leſſee of a warren, the waſte aſſigned was for ſtopping coney-boroughs; and it was held, that this action did not lie, becauſe a man cannot have the inheritance of conies; and action may be brought againſt him who makes holes in the land, but not againſt him that ſtops them, by reaſon the land is made better by it. Owen 66. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 530.

Waſte, (Vaſtum) Hath divers ſignifications: Firſt, It is a ſpoil made either in houſes, woods, lands, &c. by the tenant for life or years, to the prejudice of the heir, or of him in the reverſion or remainder. Kitchin, fol. 168. Whereupon the writ of waſte is brought, for the recovery of the thing waſted, and treble damages. Waſte of the foreſt is moſt properly where a man cuts down his own woods within the foreſt, without licence of the King, or Lord Chief Juſtice in Eyre. See Manwood, part 2. cap. 8. numb. 4 & 5.

Secondly, Waſte is taken for thoſe lands which are not in any man's occupation, but lie common; which ſeem to be ſo called becauſe the lord cannot make ſuch profit of them as of his other lands, by reaſon of that uſe which others have of it in paſſing to and fro; upon this none may build, cut down trees, dig, &c. without the lord's licence.

Thirdly, Year, day and waſte, Annus, dies & vaſtum, is a puniſhment or forfeiture belonging to petit treaſon or felony, whereof ſee Staundf. Pl. Cor. lib. 3. cap. 30. And ſee Year, Day and Waſte.

Upon waſte committed in houſes, lands, &c. by tenants, to the damage of the heir, or of him in reverſion or remainder: The writ or action of waſte is brought for the recovery of the thing waſted, and damages for the waſte done. 5 New Abr. 459.

There are two kinds of waſte, viz. voluntary or actual, and negligent or permiſſive. Voluntary waſte may be done by pulling down or proſtrating houſes, or cutting down timber-trees: negligent waſte may be by ſuffering a houſe to be uncovered, whereby the ſpars or rafters, planches or other timber of the houſe are rotten. 1 Inſt. 53. a. Vide Dyer 38. pl. 35. Owen 92. Dyer 281. pl. 21.

The ſtatute of Marlebridge, 52 Hen. 3. c. 23. ſect. 2. enacts, that "Farmers, during their terms, ſhall not make waſte, ſale, nor exile, of houſes, woods, and men, nor of any thing belonging to the tenements that they have to farm, without ſpecial licence had by writing of covenant, making mention that they may do it; which thing if they do, and thereof be convict, they ſhall yield full damage, and ſhall be puniſhed by amerciament grievouſly."

This act provideth remedy for waſte done by leſſee for life, or leſſee for years, and it is the firſt ſtatute that gave remedy in thoſe caſes: For the rule of the Regiſter is, that there are five manner of writs for waſte, viz. two at the Common law, as for waſte done by tenant in dower, or by the guardian; and three by ſtatute or ſpecial law, as againſt tenant for life, tenant for years, and tenant by the curteſy. 2 Inſt. 145. This ſtatute is a penal law, and yet, becauſe it is a remedial law, it has been interpreted by equity. Arg. 10 Mod. 281. In caſe of Hammond v. Webb.

Farmers] Here farmers do comprehend all ſuch as hold by leaſe for life or lives, or for years, by deed or without deed. 2 Inſt. 145. It has been reſolved likewiſe that it ſhould extend to ſtrangers. Arg. 10 Mod. 281. In caſe of Hammond v. Webb. Although the Regiſter ſays ſciend' that per ſtatutum de Marlebridge, cap. 23. data fuit quædam probibitio vaſti verſus tenementum annorum, which is true; yet the ſtatute extends to farmers for life alſo, but this act extended not to tenant by the curteſy, for he is not a farmer, but if a leaſe be made for life or years, he is a farmer though no rent be reſerved. 2 Inſt. 145.

Shall not make waſte] By theſe words they are prohibited to ſuffer waſte, for it has been reſolved that this act extends to waſte omittendo, tho' the word is faciant, which literally imports active waſte. Arg. 10 Mod. 281. In caſe of Hammond v. Webb.

Nor of any thing] Houſes, woods, and men were before particularly named, and theſe words do comprehend lands and meadows belonging to the farm. 2 Inſt. 146. Alſo theſe general words have a further ſignification, and therefore, if there had been a farmer for life, or years, of a manor, and a tenancy had eſcheated, this tenancy ſo eſcheated did belong to the tenement, that he held in farm, and therefore this extended to it; and the leſſor ſhall have a writ generally, and ſuppoſe a leaſe made of the lands eſcheated by the leſſor, and maintain it by the ſpecial matter. 2 Inſt. 146.

Special licence by writing] This grant ought to be by deed, for all waſte tends to the diſinheritance of the leſſor, and therefore no man can claim to be diſpuniſhable of waſte without deed. 2 Inſt. 146. Likewiſe this ſpecial grant is intended to be abſque impetitione vaſti; without impeachment of waſte. 2 Inſt. 146.

Yield full damage] And this muſt be underſtood ſuch a prohibition of waſte upon this ſtatute as lay againſt a tenant in dower at the Common law, and ſingle damages were given by this ſtatute againſt leſſee for life, and leſſee for years. 2 Inſt. 146.

But waſte may be committed not only in houſes and lands, but in gardens, orchards, timber-trees, dove-houſes, warrens, parks, fiſh-ponds, and other ſubjects of property, as will be ſhewn. 1 Inſt. 53. a.

2. What acts ſhall be deemed waſte.

It has been laid down as a general principle, that the law will not allow that to be waſte, which is not any way prejudicial to the inheritance. Hetl. 35. Barret v. Barret. Nevertheleſs it has been held, that a leſſee or tenant cannot change the nature of the thing demiſed: though, in ſome caſes, the alteration may be for the greater profit of the leſſor. Thus if a leſſee converts a corn-mill into a fulling-mill, it is waſte; although the converſion be for the leſſor's advantage. Cro. Jac. 182. Civit. Lond. v. Greyme. Alſo converting a brewhouſe of 120*l. per ann.* into other houſes let for 200*l.* a year, is waſte; becauſe of the alteration of the nature of the thing, and of the evidence. 1 Lev. 309. Cole v. Green.

We will now conſider what ſhall be deemed waſte with reſpect to particular ſubjects of property.

Waſte in lands. If the tenant converts arable into wood, or é converſo, it is waſte; for it not only changes the courſe of huſbandry, but alſo the proof of evidence. Hobart's Rep. caſe 296. p. 234. But if a leſſee ſuffers arable land to lie freſh, and not manured, ſo that the land grows full of thorns, &c. this is not waſte, but ill huſbandry. 2 Roll. Abr. 814. Likewiſe the converſion of meadow into arable is waſte, for it not only changes the courſe of huſbandry, but the proof of his evidence. 1 Inſt. 53. b. But if meadow be ſometimes arable, and ſometimes meadow, and ſometimes paſture, there the plowing of it is not waſte. 2 Roll. Abr. 815. Neither is the diviſion of a great meadow into many parcels, by making of ditches, waſte; for the meadows may be better for it, and it is for the profit and eaſe of the occupiers of it. 2 Le. 174. pl. 210.

Likewiſe converting a meadow into a hop-garden, is not waſte; for it is employed to a greater profit, and it may be meadow again; per Windham and Rhodes J. But Periam ſaid tho' it be a greater profit, yet it is alſo with greater labour and charges. 2 Le. 174. pl. 210. But converting a meadow into an orchard, is waſte, tho' it be to the greater profit of the occupier. Per Periam. Id. ibid. If a leſſee ploughs the land ſtored with conies, this is no waſte; unleſs it be a warren by charter or preſcription. 2 Rol. Abr. 815. So if a leſſee of land deſtroys the coney-boroughs in the land, it not being a free warren by charter or preſcription, it ſeems is not waſte; for a man can have no property in them, but only a poſſeſſion. Id. ibid. Ow. 66. Moyle v. Moyle.

It is waſte to ſuffer a wall of the ſea to be in decay, ſo as by the flowing and reflowing of the ſea the meadow or marſh is ſurrounded, whereby the ſame becomes unprofitable. But if it be ſurrounded ſuddenly by the rage and violence of the ſea, occaſioned by wind, tempeſt, or the like, without any default in the tenant, this is not waſte. Yet if the tenant repair not the banks or walls againſt rivers or other waters, whereby the meadows or marſhes be ſurrounded and become ruſhy and unprofitable, this is waſte. 1 Inſt. 53. b. So a fortiori, if arable land be ſurrounded by ſuch default; for the ſurrounding waſhes away the marle and other manurance from the land. 2 Rol. Abr. 816.

Waſtes in trees and woods. Trees are parcel of the inheritance, and therefore, if a leſſee aſſigneth his term, and excepts the timber-trees, it is void; for he cannot except that which doth not belong to him by law. 5 Rep. 12. Saunders's caſe. The leſſor, after he has made a leaſe for life or years, may by deed grant the trees, or reaſonable eſtovers out of them, to another and his heirs; and the ſame ſhall take effect after the death of the leſſee. But ſuch a gift to a ſtranger is void during the eſtate for life, becauſe of the particular prejudice which might be done to the leſſee. 11 Rep. 48. Liford's caſe. The leſſee hath but a particular intereſt in the trees, but the general intereſt of the trees doth remain in the leſſor: for the leſſee ſhall have the waſte and fruit of the trees, and the ſhadow for his cattle, &c. But the intereſt of the body of the tree is in the leſſor, as parcel of his inheritance. Therefore if trees are overthrown, by the leſſee or any other, or by wind or tempeſt, or by any other means disjoined from the inheritance, the leſſor ſhall have them in reſpect of his general ownerſhip. 11 Rep. 81. Bowles's caſe.

With reſpect to timber-trees, ſuch as oak, aſh, elm, (which are timber trees in all places) waſte may be committed in them, either by cutting them down, or lopping of them, or doing any act whereby the timber may decay. Alſo in countries where timber is ſcarce, and beeches or the like are converted to building for the habitation of man, they are alſo accounted timber. 1 Inſt. 53. a. 54. b. Thus, waſte may be committed in cutting of beeches in Buckinghamſhire, becauſe there by the cuſtom of the country it is the beſt timber. 2 Roll. Abr. 814.

So waſte may be committed in cutting of birches in Berkſhire, becauſe they are the principal trees there for the moſt part. Ibid. If the tenant cut down timber-trees, or ſuch as are accounted timber, as mentioned above, this is waſte; and if he ſuffer the young germins to be deſtroyed, this is a deſtruction. So it is, if the tenant cut down underwood (as he may by law), yet if he ſuffer the young germins to be deſtroyed, or if he ſtub up the ſame, this is deſtruction. 1 Inſt. 53. a. If leſſee or his ſervants ſuffer a wood to be open, by which beaſts enter and eat the germins, tho' they grow again, yet it is waſte; for after ſuch eating they never will be great trees, but ſhrubs. 2 Roll. Abr. 815. If a termor cuts down underwood of hazel, willows, maple, or oak, which is ſeaſonable, it is not waſte. 2 Roll. Abr. 817. If aſhes are ſeaſonable wood to cut from ten years, it is not waſte to cut them down for houſe-boot. Ibid.

But if the aſhes are groſs of the age of nine years, and able for great timber, it is waſte to cut them down. Id. ibid.

If oaks are ſeaſonable, and have been uſed to be cut always at the age of twenty years, it is not waſte to cut them at ſuch age, or under, for in ſome countries, where there is a great plenty, oaks of ſuch age are but ſeaſonable wood. Id. ibid. But after the age of twenty-one years oaks cannot be ſaid to be wood ſeaſonable, and therefore it ſhall be waſte to cut them down. Id. ibid. Cutting down of willows, beech, birch, aſp, maple, or the like, ſtanding in the defence and ſafeguard of the houſe, is deſtruction. If there be a quickſet fence of white thorn, if the tenant ſtub it up, or ſuffer it to be deſtroyed, this is alſo deſtruction: And for all theſe and the like deſtructions an action of waſte lieth. 1 Inſt. 53. a. The cutting of horn-beams, hazels, willows, ſallows, though of forty years growth, is no waſte, becauſe theſe trees would never be timber. Per Meade Juſt. Godb. 4. pl. 6.

If the leſſee covenant, that he will leave the wood at the end of the term as he found it; if the leſſee cut down the trees, the leſſor ſhall preſently have an action of covenant: For it is not poſſible for him to leave the trees at the end of the term. So that the impoſſibility of performing the covenant ſhall give a preſent action on a future covenant. But it is otherwiſe in the caſe of a houſe; for there, though the leſſee commit waſte, yet he may repair the waſte done, before the term expires. 5 Rep. 21. Mayne's caſe.

The cutting down of trees is juſtifiable for houſe-boot, hay-boot, plow-boot, and fire-boot. 1 Inſt. 53. b. Hob. Rep. c. 296. Br. Waſte, 130. By the Common law leſſee ſhall have them, though the deed does not expreſs it; but if he takes more than is neceſſary he ſhall be puniſhed in waſte. Bro. Waſte, pl. 30. The tenant may take ſufficient wood to repair the walls, pales, fences, hedges and ditches as he found them, but he cannot make new. 1 Inſt. 53. b. Cutting of dead wood is no waſte. 1 Inſt. 53. But converting trees into coals for fuel, where there is ſufficient dead wood, is waſte. Id. ibid.

Waſte in digging for gravel, mines, &c. If the tenant digs for gravel, lime, clay, brick, earth or ſtone, hid in the ground, or for mines of metal or coal, or the like, not being open at the time of the leaſe, it is waſte. 1 Inſt. 53 b. If a man hath land in which there is a mine of coals, or the like, and maketh a leaſe of the land (without mentioning any mines) for life or for years, the leſſee for ſuch mines as were open at the time of the leaſe made, may dig and take the profits thereof. But he cannot dig for any new mine that was not open at the time of the leaſe made, for that would be adjudged waſte. 1 Inſt. 54. b. Likewiſe if there be open mines in the land, and the owner leaſes it to another, with the mines in it, he may dig in the open mines, but not in the cloſe mines; but otherwiſe it would be if there was not any open mine there; for then the leſſee might dig for mines, otherwiſe the grant would take no effect. Id. ibid. If leſſee dig ſlate-ſtone out of the land, it is waſte. And, digging for ſtones, unleſs in a quarry, is waſte, though the leſſee fill it up again. 2 Roll. Abr. 816. Ow. 66. Moyle v. Moyle. Likewiſe, if he have a leaſe of land, in which there was a coal mine, but not open at the trme of the leaſe; if the leſſee open it, and aſſigns his intereſt, it is ſtill waſte in the aſſignee; but where the leaſe is of lands, and all mines in it, there he may dig in it. 5 Rep. 12. a. b. Saunder's caſe.

But if leſſee of land, with mines of coals, iron, and ſtone, digs the coals, iron, and ſtones, ſo much as is neceſſary for him to uſe without ſelling, it is not waſte. 2 Roll. Abr. 816. q. if this does not mean open mines? If a leſſee digs earth, and carries it out of the land, action of waſte lies. Id. ibid. If a leſſee digs for gravel or clay, for reparation of the houſe, not being open at the time of the leaſe, it is not waſte, any more than the cutting of trees for reparation. 1 Inſt. 53. b.

Waſte in gardens, orchards, fiſh-ponds, dove-houſes, parks, &c. If the tenant cut down or deſtroy any fruit-trees growing in the garden or orchard, it is waſte: But if ſuch trees grow upon any of the ground, which the tenant holdeth out of the garden or orchard, it is no waſte. 1 Inſt. 53. a. Breaking a hedge alſo is no waſte. Id. ibid. Likewiſe deſtruction of ſaffron heads in a garden, is not waſte. Bro. Waſte, pl. 143. cites 10 H. 7. c. 2. If the tenant of a dove-houſe, warren, park, vivary, eſtangues, or ſuch like, takes ſo many that ſo much ſtore is not left as he found at the time of the demiſe, it is waſte. 1 Inſt. 53. a. Hob. Rep. c. 296. Likewiſe if the leſſee of a pigeon-houſe ſtops the holes, that the pigeons cannot build, it is waſte. 1 Inſt. 53. a. So likewiſe, ſuffering the pales of a park to decay, whereby the deer are diſperſed; is waſte. Id. ibid. Alſo, if the leſſee of a hop-ground plow it up and ſow grain there, it is waſte. Ow. 66. Moyle v. Moyle.

The breaking a weare is waſte, and ſo of the banks of a fiſh-pond, ſo that the water and fiſh run out. Ow. 66. Moyle v. Moyle.

Waſte with reſpect to houſes. Waſte may be done in houſes, by pulling them down or proſtrating them, or by ſuffering the ſame to be uncovered, whereby the ſpars or raſters, planches or other timber of the houſe are rotten. 1 Inſt. 53. a. Default of coverture of an houſe is waſte, though the timber be ſtanding. 2 Roll. Abr. 815. But if the houſe be uncovered, when the tenant cometh in, it is no waſte in the tenant to ſuffer the ſame to fall down. 1 Inſt. 53. a. Though there be no timber growing upon the ground, yet the tenant at his peril muſt keep the houſes from waſting. 1 Inſt. 53. a. If a leſſee raſes the houſe, and builds a new houſe, if it be not ſo long and wide as the other, it is waſte. 2 Roll. Abr. 815. So if he rebuilds it more large than it was before, it is waſte; for it will be more charge for the leſſor to repair it. 1 Inſt. 53. a.

But if a leſſee of land makes a new houſe upon the land where there was not any before, this is not waſte; for it is for the benefit of the leſſor. 2 Roll. Abr. 815. But, according to lord Coke, if the tenant build a new houſe, it is waſte; and if he ſuffer it to be waſted, it is a new waſte. Yet if the houſe be proſtrated by enemies or the like, without default of the tenant, or was ruinous at his coming in, and fall down, the tenant may build the ſame again with ſuch materials as remain, and with the other timber, which he may take growing on the ground, for his habitation; but he muſt not make the houſe larger than it was. 2 Roll. Abr 815. 1 Inſt. 53. a. If the houſe be uncovered by tempeſt, the tenant muſt in convenient time repair it. 1 Inſt. 53. a. If a leſſee flings down a wall between a parlour and a chamber, by which he makes a parlour more large, it is waſte; it cannot be intended for the benefit of the leſſor, nor is it in the power of the leſſee to tranſpoſe the houſe. 2 Roll. Abr. 815. So if he pulls down a partition between chamber and chamber, it is waſte. Bro. Waſte, 143. Or if a leſſee pulls down a hall or parlour, and makes a ſtable of it, it is waſte. 2 Roll. Abr. 815. If a leſſee pulls down a garret over head, and makes it all one and the ſame thing, it is waſte. Id. ibid. If a leſſee permits a chamber fore in decaſu pro defectu plauſtrationis, per quod groſſum maheremium devenit putridum, & camera illa turpiſſima & fædiſſima devenit, action of waſte lies for it. Id. ibid. So if a leſſee permits the wall to be in decay for default of daubing, per quod maheremium devenit putridum, action of waſte lies. Id. ibid. Breaking of a pale or of a wall uncovered, is not waſte. Bro. Waſte, pl. 94. But breaking of a wall covered with thatch, and of a pale of timber covered, is waſte. Id. Ibid. Burning the houſe by negligence or miſchance, is waſte. 1 Inſt. 53. a. But by the 6 Ann. c. 31. No action is to be proſecuted againſt any perſon in whoſe houſe, or chamber, any fire accidentally begins.

If the tenant do or ſuffer waſte to be done in his houſes, yet if he repair them before any action brought, there lieth no action of waſte againſt him, but he cannot plead, quod non fecit vaſtum, but the ſpecial matter. 1 Inſt. 53. a.

Waſte in things annexed to the freehold. The removing a poſt in a houſe is waſte. 42 Edw. 3. 6. So the removing of a door. Id. ibid. 1 Inſt. 53. So the removing of a window. 42 Edw. 3. 6. The digging up a furnace annexed to the frank-tenement, and ſelling it, is waſte, Bro. Waſte, pl. 143. The removing of a bench is waſte, though annexed by the tenant himſelf. Bro. Waſte, pl. 143. 1 Inſt. 53. a. But theſe are ſuch trifles that a landlord would now ſcarce obtain a verdict in an action of waſte, it being ſo very penal—unleſs very great injury was done by the act. As to the furnace he might maintain Trover for the value. If wainſcot annexed to the houſe be taken away, it is waſte. 1 Inſt. 53. a. Of tables dormant and fixed in the land, and not to the walls by termor, and taken off within his term, waſte does not lie; for the houſe is not impaired by it. Per Kingſmill J. and Grevil Serj. Bro. Waſte, pl. 104.

Beating down a wooden wall, or ſuffering a brick wall to fall, is no waſte, unleſs it be expreſſly alledged, that the walls were coped or covered. Dyer 108. b. pl 31, Earl of Bedford v. Smith. If waſte be aſſigned in pulling up a plank floor and mangers of a ſtable, plaintiff muſt ſhew that the ſame were fixed. Id. ibid. If leſſee erects a partition, he cannot break it down without being liable to an action of waſte, for he has joined it to the frank tenement. Mo. 178. Cook's caſe. Shelves are parcel of the houſe, and not to be taken away; and though it is not ſhewn that the ſhelves were fixed, it ought to be intended that they were fixed. Per Coke Chief Juſtice. 2 Bulſt. 113. Lady St. John v. Piott. Pavement is a ſtructure, for they uſe lime to finiſh it. Id. ibid. If the tenant ſuffers the groundſels to waſte, in his default of defence or removing the water from off them, or of dirt or dung or other nuſance which lies or hangs upon it, the tenant ſhall be charged, for he is bound to keep it in as good caſe as he took it. Ow. 43. Strickleborne v. Hatchman.

It may be obſerved in general, that waſte which enſues from the act of God is excuſable: Thus if a houſe falls by tempeſt, the tenant ſhall be excuſed in action of waſte; but if it be uncovered by tempeſt, and ſtands, there, if the tenant has ſufficient timber to repair it, and does not, the leſſor, if the leaſe be made on condition of re-entry for waſte, may re-enter, but not immediately upon the tempeſt, for it is no waſte until the tenant ſuffers it to be ſo long unrepaired, that the timber be rotted, and then it is waſte. Per Hull. Br. Cond. pl. 40.

Likewiſe, if a houſe be abated by lightning, or thrown down by a great wind, it is not waſte. 1 Inſt. 53. a. So if apple-trees are torn up by a great wind, if leſſee afterwards cuts them, it is not waſte. Bro. Waſte, pl. 39. If the banks are well repaired by the leſſee, and the water notwithſtanding ſubverts them, and ſurrounds his meadow, by which it is become ruſhy, it is not waſte. 2 Rol. Abr. 280. Contra, 20 H. 6. c. 1. b. The leſſor cannot give trees during the tenant's leaſe. But if he grants them to a ſtranger, and commands the tenant to cut and deliver them, who does it, this ſhall excuſe him in an action of waſte. And yet the tenant was not bound by law to obey and execute this command. Bro. Done, &c. 13. Tenant in tail may commit waſte in houſes as well as in all other parts of the eſtate, notwithſtanding any reſtraint to the contrary, and no inſtance can be ſhewn, where a tenant in tail has been reſtrained from committing waſte by injunction of the court of Chancery. Caſ. Temp. Ld. Talb. 16. Glenorchy v. Boſville.

If tenant in tail grants all his eſtate, his grantee is diſpuniſhable of waſte; ſo ſuch grantee's grantee is alſo diſpuniſhable; Per Clerk J. 3 Le. 121. pl. 173. Anon. If a man deviſes land to two in tail, and after the one deviſee dies without iſſue, by which the reverſion in fee of one moiety reverts to the heir of the donor; but the other deviſee is tenant for life of the whole, and after he commits waſte, action of waſte lies againſt him by the heir of the donor for the one moiety New Abr. 469. But action of waſte does not lie againſt tenant in tail after poſſibility, for the greatneſs of the eſtate of inheritance which was once in him; and alſo, as ſome ſay, becauſe the eſtate was not within the ſtatute at the creation. 11 Rep. 80. a. Lewis v. Bowles.

If lands are given to the huſband and wife, and to the heirs of the body of the huſband, the remainder to the huſband and wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies begotten, and the huſband dies without iſſue: The wife ſhall not be tenant in tail after poſſibility; for the remainder in ſpecial tail was utterly void, for that it could never take effect. For, ſo long as the huſband ſhould have iſſue, it ſhould inherit by force of the general tail; and if the huſband die without iſſue, then the ſpecial tail cannot take effect, inaſmuch as the iſſue, which ſhould inherit in ſpecial tail, muſt be begotten by the huſband; and ſo the general, which is larger and greater, hath fruſtrated the ſpecial, which is leſſer; and the wife, in that caſe, ſhall be puniſhed for waſte. 1 Inſt. 28. b.

It has been agreed, that tenant for years may cut wood; but it has been doubted, if tenant at will may; but it ſeems, that as long as tenant at will is not countermanded he may cut ſeaſonable wood, &c. Bro. Waſte, pl. 114. Where a man leaſes a wood which conſiſts only of great trees, the leſſee cannot cut them. Hobart's Rep. Caſ. 296. Nevertheleſs, if the leſſee cuts trees for reparation, and ſells them, and after buys them again, and employs them in reparation, yet it is waſte by the ſale. 1 Inſt. 53. b. So if leſſee cuts trees, and ſells them for money, though with the money he repairs the houſe, yet it is waſte. Id. ibid. As to the cutting of timber-trees for repairs by leſſee, there is no difference whether the leſſor or leſſee covenants to repair the houſes; for in either caſe it is not waſte, if leſſee cuts them. Mo. 23. pl. 80. Anon'.

If a houſe be proſtrated by enemies of the King, or ſuch like, without default of the leſſee, the leſſee may rebuild it again with the ſame materials that remain, and may cut other timber upon the land to rebuild it, but he muſt not make the houſe larger than it was. 1 Inſt. 53. a. So if the houſe was ruinous at the time of the leaſe, and fell within the term, this is not waſte in the tenant. 1 Inſt. 53. a. Bro. Waſte, pl. 130. But the leſſee ſhall not cut trees to make a new houſe where there was not any at the time of the leaſe. Hobart's Rep. Caſ. 296. So if a leſſee ſuffers a houſe to fall for default of covering, which is waſte, he cannot cut trees to repair the houſe Br. Waſte, pl. 39. And in general, if the tenant ſuffer the houſe to be waſted, he cannot juſtify the felling of timber to repair it. 1 Inſt. 53. b. If a houſe be ruinous at the time of the leaſe, though the leſſee is not bound to repair it, yet he may cut trees to repair it, 1 Inſt. 54. b. The tenant may likewiſe dig for gravel or clay for the reparation of the houſe, though the ſoil was not open when the tenant came in; and it is juſtifiable as well as cutting of trees. 1 Inſt. 53. b. So with regard to a ſtable, if it fall without default of the leſſee in time of the leſſor, the leſſee may take trees of the heir to make a new ſtable, if it be of neceſſity. Bro. Waſte, pl. 67. But if the ſtable falls in default of the leſſee, in time of the leſſor, he cannot in time of the heir cut trees to make a new ſtable. Br. Waſte, pl. 67.

Cutting wood to burn, where the tenant has ſufficient hedge-wood is waſte. F. N. B. 59. (M.) Where leſſee for years has power to take hedge-boot by aſſignment, yet he may take it without aſſignment; for the affirmative does not take away the power which the law gives him. Dy. 19. pl. 115. If leſſor excepts his trees in his leaſe, the leſſee ſhall not have fire-boot, hay-boot, &c. which he ſhould have otherwiſe; and the property of the trees is in the leſſor himſelf. 4 Le. 162. pl. 269 Sir Richard Lewkner's caſe. Yet it has been ſaid, that leſſee for years, the trees being excepted, has liberty to take the ſhrouds and loppings for fire-boot; but if he cuts any tree, it ſhall be waſte, as well for the lopping as for the body of the tree. Noy 29. Rich. v. Makepeace. If a tenant that has fire-boot to his houſe in another man's land, cuts wood for that Intent to make his boot-wood, and the owner of the land takes it away, an action of trover and converſion lies againſt him by the tenant of the land who hath ſuch fire-boot. Clayt. 40. pl. 69. Coram Berkley, Anon'. See Dyer 36. pl. 38. Clayt. 47. pl. 81. 1 Lev. 171. Cutting of dead wood is no waſte. F. N. B. 59. (M)

If a man leaſes lands with general words of all mines of coals, where there is not any mine of coals open at the time of the demiſe, and after the leſſee opens a mine, he cannot juſtify the cutting of timber-trees for making puncheons, corſes, roll-ſcoops, and other utenſils in and about the mine, though without them he could not dig and get the coals out of the mine: And this is like a new houſe built after the demiſe, for the reparation of which he cannot take timber upon the land; and it had been waſte to open it, if it had not been granted by expreſs words: And it was ſaid by Hobart, that the law had been the ſame if the mine was open at the time of the demiſe. Hobart's Rep. c. 296. Lady Darcy v. Aſhwith. And ſee Hutt. 19. where the caſe is more fully reported.

4. Who may bring an action of waſte, and againſt whom it may be brought.

By Stat. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 28. the action of waſte is given to one tenant in common againſt another.

Where there are tenants in common for life, the one ſhall not have treſpaſs of trees cut againſt the other, but ſhall have waſte pro indiviſo, though they are only tenants for term of life, &c. Br. Waſte, pl. 79. If one coparcener before partition makes feoffment to another, and one of them does waſte in the trees, waſte lies. 11 Rep. 49. a. Lifford's caſe. Likewiſe, if two jointenants do waſte, and after the one enters into religion, waſte lies againſt the other alone. 2 Rol. Abr. 828.

By the 20 Edw. 1. Stat. 2. An action of waſte is maintainable by the heir for waſte done in the time of his anceſtor, as well as for waſte done in his own time.

This action muſt be brought by him that hath the immediate eſtate and inheritance in fee ſimple or fee-tail, but ſometimes another may join with him. 1 Inſt 53. a. 285. a. It is ſaid that the reverſion muſt continue in the ſame ſtate that it was at the time of the waſte done, and not granted over; for tho' the reverſioner taketh the eſtate back again, the action is gone, becauſe the eſtate did not continue: But in ſome ſpecial caſes an action of waſte ſhall lie; tho' the leſſor had nothing in the reverſion at the time of the waſte done: for if a biſhop makes a leaſe for life or years and dies, and the leſſee, the fee being void, doth waſte, the ſucceſſor ſhall have an action of waſte. This is allowed, though the ſtatute of 20 Edw. 1. ſpeaks of thoſe that are inheritors. 1 Inſt 53. b. 356. a. 2 Roll. Abr. 825.

A tenant for life cannot have this action, but a parſon, &c. may have an action of waſte, and the writ ſhall ſay, Ad exhæredationem eccleſiæ, for it is the dowry of the church. If a tenant doth waſte, and he in reverſion dieth, the heir ſhall not have an action of waſte for waſte done in the life of the anceſtor: For he cannot ſay that the waſte was done to his diſinheriſon, neither ſhall a biſhop, maſter of an hoſpital, parſon, &c. have an action of waſte done in the time of their predeceſſors. 1 Inſt. 341. a. 1 Inſt. 53 b. 356. a. See Supra. & 94. If a leaſe is made to A. for life, the remainder to B. for life, remainder to C. in fee; no action of waſte lieth againſt the firſt leſſee during the eſtate in the mean remainder, for then his eſtate would be deſtroyed. Otherwiſe if B. had a mean remainder for years, for that would be no impediment, the recovery not deſtroying the term of years. 5 Rep. 76, 77. 1 Inſt. 54. a. Sed. qu. if an action on the caſe, in nature of an action of waſte, for the the recovery of damages, would not lie?

If leſſee for years commit waſte, and the years do expire, yet the leſſor ſhall have an action of waſte for treble damages, tho' he cannot recover the place waſted; but if the leſſor accepteth of a ſurrender of a leaſe after the waſte done, he ſhall not have his action of waſte. Sed qu. as above? It is ſaid that if a tenant repairs before action brought, he in reverſion cannot have an action of waſte; but he cannot plead that he did no waſte, therefore he muſt plead the ſpecial matter. 1 Inſt. 283. a. 285 a. 306. 5 Rep. 119. 2 Cro. 658. Likewiſe, by 11 H. 6. c. 5. where tenants for life, or for another's life, or for years, grant over their eſtates, and take their profits to their own uſe, and commit waſte, they in reverſion may have an action of waſte againſt them. 2 Inſt. 302. He in the remainder as well as the reverſioner may bring this action, and every aſſignee of the firſt leſſee, mediate or immediate, is within this act, 5 Rep. 77. Paget's caſe. 2 Inſt. 302.

It has been ſaid, that there are five writs of waſte, two at the Common law, as for waſte done by tenant in dower, or by guardian; three by ſtatute, as againſt tenant for life, tenant for years, and tenant by the curteſy. It has been ſaid however, that tenant by the curteſy was puniſhable, for waſte by the Common law, for that the law created his eſtate as well as that of the tenant in dower, and therefore the law gives like remedy againſt them. 1 Inſt. 54. a. 2 Inſt. 145, 299. 301, 305. But on this ſubject the authorities in the books are very contradictory, as the reader will perceive by attending to the note ſubjoined to the following clauſe of the ſtatute of Glouceſter, 6 Ed. 1. cap. 5. which enacts, that, “ A man from henceforth ſhall have a writ of waſte in the Chancery againſt him that holdeth by the law of England, or otherwiſe for term of life, or for term of years, or a woman in dower.

No action of waſte lay before the ſtatute of Glouceſter, but againſt tenant in dower and guardian, and by the ſtatute action of waſte is given againſt the tenant by the curteſy, tenant for term of life, and tenant for term of years. Br. Waſte, pl. 88. Lord Coke ſays, a reaſon is required, (that ſeeing as well the eſtate of the tenant by the curteſy, as the tenant in dower are created by act in law,) wherefore the prohibition of waſte did not lie as well againſt tenant by the curteſy as the tenant in dower as the Common law; and the reaſon he aſſigns is this, for that by having iſſue the ſtate of the tenant by the curteſy is originally created, and yet after that he ſhall do homage alone in the life of the wife, which proves a larger eſtate; and ſeeing that at the creation of his eſtate he might do waſte, the prohibition of waſte lay not againſt him after his wife's deceaſe; but, in the caſe of tenant in dower, ſhe is puniſhable of waſte at the firſt creation of her eſtate. 2 Inſt. 145. But 2 Inſt. 299 ſays, that, at the Common law, waſte was puniſhable in three perſons, (viz.) tenant in dower, tenant by the curteſy, and the guardian, but not againſt tenant for life or tenant for years; and the reaſon of the diverſity was, for that the law created their eſtates and intereſt; and therefore the law gave remedy againſt them; but tenant for life and for years came in by demiſe and leaſe of the owner of the land, &c. and therefore he might in his demiſe provide againſt the doing of waſte by his leſſee; and if he did not, it was his negligence and default.

Shall have a writ of waſte] Neither this act, nor the ſtatute of Marlebridge, doth create new kind of waſtes, but gives new remedies for old waſtes; and what is waſte, and what is not, muſt be determined by the Common law. 2 Inſt. 300, 301.

Againſt him] If two are jointenants for years or for life, and one of them does waſte, this is the waſte of them both as to the place waſted, notwithſtanding the words of the act are, (him that holds) 2 Inſt. 302.

Holds by the law of England] Here tenant by the curteſy is named for two cauſes. 1ſt, For that albeit the common opinion was, that an action of waſte did lie againſt him, yet ſome doubted of the ſame in reſpect to this word (tenet) in the writ, for that the tenant by the curteſy did not hold of the heir, but of the lord Paramount; and after this act, the writ of waſte grounded thereupon doth recite this ſtatute; 2dly, for that greater penalties were inflicted by this act than were at the Common law. 2 Inſt. 301.

Or otherwiſe for term of life or for term of years] A leſſee for his own life, or for another man's life, is within the words and meaning of this law, and in this point this act introduces that which was not at the Common law. 2 Inſt. 301. If feme leſſee for life takes huſband, the huſband does waſte, the wife dies, the huſband ſhall not be puniſhed by this law; for the words of this act be (a man that holds, &c. for life) and the huſband held not for life; for he was ſeiſed but in right of his wife, and the eſtate was in his wife. 2 Inſt. 301. He that hath an eſtate for life by conveyance at Common law, or by limitation of uſe, is a tenant within the ſtatute. 2 Inſt. 302. Tenant for years of a moiety, 3d or 4th part, pro indiviſo, is within this act; and ſo it is of a tenant by the curteſy, or other tenant for life of a moiety, &c. 2 Inſt. 302.

Or a woman in dower] This is to be underſtood of all the five kinds of dower whereof Littleton ſpeaks, viz. dower at Common law, dower by the cuſtom, dower ad oſtium eccleſiæ, dower ex aſſenſu patris, and dower de la pluis beale; and againſt all theſe the action of waſte did lie at the Common law. 2 Inſt. 303. If tenant in dower be of a manor, and a copyholder thereof commits waſte, an action of waſte lies againſt tenant in dower. 2 Inſt. 303. Action of waſte lies againſt an occupant for life, becauſe he has the eſtate of the leſſee for life, and holds for life, as the ſtatute mentions. 6 Rep. 37. b. Dean and chapter of Worceſter. If a leſſee forlife be attainted of treaſon, by which the leaſe is forfeited to the King, who grants it over to I. S. and he afterwards does waſte, though he comes en le poſt, yet action of waſte lies againſt him. 2 Rol. Abr. 826. So if a man diſſeiſes the tenant for life, and does waſte, yet action of waſte lies againſt the tenant for term of life; for he may have his remedy over againſt the diſſeiſor. Br. Waſte, pl. 138. Likewiſe, if an eſtate be made to A. and his heirs, during the life of B. A dies, the heir of A. ſhall be puniſhed in an action of waſte. 1 Inſt. 54. a.

But an action of waſte does not lie againſt tenant by ſtatute merchant, elegit or ſtaple, becauſe it is not an eſtate for life or years, and the ſtatute mentions thoſe who hold in any manner for life or years. Contra, Fitzh. Nat. 58 H. and there ſaid, that in the regiſter is a writ againſt him. 6 Rep. 37 Some books give the reaſon of it to be, becauſe the conuſor, if he commits waſte, may have a venire facias ad computandum, and the waſte ſhall be recovered in the debt. Fitz. Nat. 58. b. (K.) If a man makes a leaſe for years, and puts out the leſſee, and makes a leaſe for life, and the leſſee for years enters upon the leſſee for life, and does waſte, the leſſee for life ſhall not be puniſhed for it 2 Inſt. 303. If leſſee for years makes a leaſe of one moiety to A. and of the other moiety to B. and A. does waſte; the action ſhall be againſt both; for the waſte of the one is the waſte of the other. Brownl. 38. Anon'.

An action of waſte lies againſt a deviſee, and the writ may ſuppoſe it ex legatione, for it is within equity of the ſtatute. Br. Waſte, pl. 132. If an eſtate of land to be made to baron and feme, to hold to them during the coverture, &c. if they waſte, the feoffor ſhall have writ of waſte againſt them. Lit. ſect. 381. If feme leſſee for life marries, and the huſband does waſte, action lies againſt both. 2 Rol. Abr. 827. And if, in the above caſe, the huſband dies, action of waſte lies againſt the feme for the waſte he committed. Id. ibid.

But if tenant in dower marries, and the huſband does waſte and dies, the feme ſhall not be puniſhed for this. Id. ibid. Likewiſe, if baron and feme are leſſees for life, and baron does waſte, and dies, the feme ſhall be puniſhed in waſte, if ſhe agrees to the eſtate. Id. ibid. 1 Inſt. 54. Kel. 113. But if ſhe waives the eſtate, ſhe ſhall not be charged. 2 Roll. Abr. 827. So upon leaſe for years made to the baron and feme, waſte lies againſt both. Id. ibid. And if baron and feme are joint leſſees for years, and baron does waſte, and dies, action of waſte lies for this againſt the feme. Id. ibid. Upon leaſe for life, to baron and feme, waſte lies againſt both. Id. ibid. Likewiſe, if feme commits waſte, and then marries, the action ſhall be brought againſt both. Id. ibid. And the writ may be Quod fecerunt vaſtum, or Quod uxor, dum ſola fuit, fecit vaſtum. Br. Waſte, pl. 55.

If baron, ſeiſed for life of his wife in right of his wife, does waſte, and after the feme dies, no action of waſte lies againſt the baron in the tenuit, becauſe he was ſeiſed only in right of his wife, and the frank-tenement was in the feme. 1 Inſt. 54. 5 Rep. 75. b. But if the baron, poſſeſſed for years in right of the feme, does waſte, and after the feme dies, action of waſte lies againſt the baron, becauſe the law gives the term to him, 1 Inſt. 54. See Godb. 4, 5. pl. 6. Ow. 49.

It is proper before we cloſe this diviſion to obſerve, that few caſes, if any, can happen of waſte or injury done to premiſes, but the landlord, or perſon whoſe inheritance, or even who has a longer term in the premiſes, or who is himſelf liable to anſwer over, may maintain an action on the caſe in nature of an action of waſte, againſt the perſon committing the injury, for damages.

5. In what caſes in general, waſte may be reſtrained by injunction in equity.

If a tenant for life plant wood on the land, which is of ſo poiſonous a quality that it deſtroys the principles of ve-vegetation, without an expreſs power in his leaſe, where it is uſual to have ſuch powers, it may be conſidered as waſte; and the court of Chancery may grant an injunction. 5 New Abr. 493. MSS. Rep. Marquis of Powis v. Dorall, Canc'.

If there be leſſee for life, remainder for life, the reverſion or remainder in fee, and the leſſee in poſſeſſion waſte the lands, though he is not puniſhable for waſte by the Common law, by reaſon of the mean remainder for life; yet he ſhall be reſtrained in Chancery, for this is a particular miſchief. Moor 554. S. P. 1 Vern. 23. S. P.

But if ſuch leſſee has in his leaſe an expreſs clauſe of without impeachment of waſte, he ſhall not be injoined in equity. 1 Vern. 23.

If A. is tenant for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to firſt and other ſons of B. in tail male, remainder to B. in tail, &c. and B. (before the birth of any ſon) brings a bill againſt A. to ſtay waſte, and A. demurs to this bill, becauſe the plaintiff had no right to the trees, and no one that had the inheritance was party; yet the demurrer will be over-ruled, becauſe waſte is to the damage of the public, and B. is to take care of the inheritance for his children, if he has any, and has a particular intereſt himſelf, in caſe he comes to the eſtate. Darpel v. Chapneſs. 1 Eq. Caſ. Abr. 400. See ibid. Cook v. Whaley, and Carew v. Carew.

It ſeems to be a general principle, that tenant in tail, after poſſibility, ſhall be reſtrained in equity from doing waſte by injunction, &c. becauſe the court will never ſee a man diſinherited; per Chan. Finch. And he took a diverſity where a man is not puniſhable for waſte, and where he hath a right to do waſte; and cited Uvedale's caſe, 24 Car. 1. Ruled by lord Roll, to warrant that diſtinction. 2 Show. 69. pl. 53. Abrahal v. Bubb.

A. deviſed lands, on which timber was growing, to his wife for life, remainder to B. in fee, paying ſeveral legacies within a limited time, and in default of payment, the remainder to C. he paying the legacies; and on a bill brought by B. the court gave him leave to cut timber for the payment of the legacies, though it was oppoſed by the tenant for life and the deviſee over, he making ſatisfaction to the widow for breaking the ground by carriage, waſte, &c. 2 Vern. 152. Claxton v. Claxton. See ib. 218. Aſſimwale v. Leigh & al'.

A leaſe without impeachment of waſte takes off all reſtraint from the tenant of doing it; and he may in ſuch caſe pull up or cut down wood or timber, or dig mines, &c. at his pleaſure, and not be liable to any action. Plowd. 135. But though the tenant may let the houſes be out of repair, and cut down trees, and convert them to his own uſe; yet where a tenant in fee-ſimple made a leaſe for years without impeachment of waſte, it was adjudged that the leſſor had ſtill ſuch property, that if he cut and carried away the trees, the leſſee could only recove damages in action for the treſpaſs, and not for the trees: Alſo it hath been held, that tenant for life, without impeachment of waſte, if he cuts down trees, is only exempt from an action of waſte, &c. 11 Rep. 82. 1 Inſt. 220. 2 Inſt. 146. 6 Rep. 63. Dyer 184. And if the words are, to hold without impeachment of waſte, or any writ or action of waſte, the leſſor may ſeize the trees, if the leſſee cuts them down, or bring trover for them. Wood's Inſt. 574.

In many caſes, likewiſe, the court of Chancery will reſtrain waſte, though the leaſe, &c. be made without impeachment of waſte. For—the clauſe, of without impeachment of waſte, never was extended to allow the deſtruction of the eſtate itſelf, but only to excuſe for permiſſive waſte, and therefore ſuch a clauſe would not give leave to fell or cut down trees ornamental or ſheltering of a houſe, much leſs to deſtroy or demoliſh a houſe itſelf. See 5 New Abr. 495. MSS. Rep. in Chan. 1744. Packington v. Packington, and 2 Freem. Rep. 53. Abraham v. Bubb. Where A. on the marriage of his eldeſt ſon, in conſideration of 10,000 l. portion, ſettled (inter alia) Raby caſtle on himſelf for life, without impeachment of waſte, remainder on his ſon for life, and to his firſt and other ſons in tail male; afterwards, having taken ſome diſpleaſure to his ſon, he got two hundred work-men together, and of a ſudden ſtripped the caſtle of the lead, iron, glaſs, doors, and boards, &c. to the value of 3000 l. And the court, on the ſon's filing his bill, granted an injunction to ſtay committing waſte in pulling down the caſtle, and, upon hearing the cauſe, not only the injunction to continue, but that the caſtle ſhould be repaired, and put in the ſame condition it was in; and for that purpoſe a commiſſion was to iſſue to aſcertain what ought to be repaired, and a maſter to ſee it done at the charge and expence of the father, and the ſon to have his coſts. 2 Vern. 738, 739. 1 Salk. 161, S. C. Vane v. Ld. Bernard. Vide 1 P. Wil. 527.

A bill was brought to reſtrain tenant in dower from getting peat; Lord Chancellor diſmiſſed it with coſts, as it appeared to be vexatious; the peat ſhe ſold not being above the value of 10 d. But herein it was ſaid, that digging peat is in many places the ordinary boot; and perhaps the only fruit that can riſe from the land. They do not carry away the ſoil, for they dig off the turff, then take away the peat, and lay the turff down again: And the tenant for life can no more dig peat to ſell, than cut down timber to ſell; and the Chancellor ſaid, if he was to give any relief, he muſt direct an iſſue; but that the cauſe was of too frivolous a nature to maintain the expence. 5 New Abr. 496. MSS. Rep. Wilſon v. Bragg. 1742. Vide 2 Vern. 392. Hanſon v. Derby.

A. tenant for life, remainder to truſtees to preſerve, &c. remainder to D. the plaintiff in tail, remainder over, with power to A. with conſent of truſtees, to ſell timber, and the money ariſing to be veſted in lands, &c. to the ſame uſes, &c. A. felled timber to the value of 3000 l. without conſent of truſtees, who never intermeddled; and A. had ſuffered ſome of the houſes to go out of repair, D. by bill prayed an account and injunction. The maſter of the rolls ſaid, that the timber might be conſidered under two denominations, to wit, ſuch as was thriving and not fit to be felled; and ſuch as was unthriving, and what a prudent man and good huſband would fell, &c. and ordered the maſter to take an account, &c. and the value of the former, which was waſte, and therefore belongs to the plaintiff, who is next in remainder of the inheritance, is to go to the plaintiff, and the value of the other is to be laid out according to the ſettlement, &c. but as to repairs, the court never interpoſes in caſe of permiſſive waſte, either to prohibit or give ſatisfaction, as it does in caſe of wilful waſte; and where the court hath juriſdiction of the principal, viz. the prohibiting, it does in conſequence give relief for waſte done, either by way of account, as for timber felled, or by obliging the party to rebuild, &c. as in caſe of houſes, &c. and mentioned Lord Bernard's caſe as to Raby Caſtle. 2 Vern. 738. But as to repairs, it was objected, that the plaintiff here had no remedy at law by reaſon of the demeſne eſtate for life, to the truſtees, between plaintiff's remainder in tail, and the defendant's eſtate for life, and that therefore equity ought to interpoſe, &c. and that it was a point of conſequence. Sed non allocatur. 5 New Abr. 496. MSS. Rep Mich. vac. 1733. Caſtlemain v. Lord Craven.

A lord of a manor may bring a bill for an account of ore dug, or timber cut, by the defendant's teſtator. Thus,

A cuſtomary tenant of lands, in which was a copper mine, that never had been opened, opened the ſame, and dug out and ſold great quantities of ore, and died; and his heir continued digging and diſpoſing of great quantities out of the ſame mine. The lord of the manor brought a bill in equity againſt the executor and heir, praying an account of the ſaid ore; and alledged that theſe cuſtomary tenants were as copyhold tenants, and that the freehold was in the plaintiff as lord of the manor and owner of the ſoil; and that the manner of paſſing the premiſſes, was, by ſurrender, into the hands of the lord to the uſe of the ſurrendree. It was inſiſted for the defendants, that it did not appear, that the admittance in this caſe was to hold ad voluntatem domini ſecundum conſuetudinem, &c. without which words, it was inſiſted, that there could be no copyhold, as had been adjudged in Lord Ch.

Juſt. Holt's time. And Lord Chan. Cowper ſaid it would be a reproach to equity to ſay, that where a man has taken another's property, as ore, or timber, and diſpoſed of it in his life-time, and dies, there ſhould be no remedy. *P. One ſeized in fee of lands in which there were mines, all of them unopened, by a deed conveyed thoſe lands, and all mines, waters, trees, &c. to truſtees and their heirs, to the uſe of the grantor for life, (who ſoon after died) remainder to the uſe of A. for life, remainder to his firſt, &c ſon in tail male ſucceſſively, remainder to B. for life, remainder to his firſt, &c. ſon in tail male ſucceſſively, remainder to his two ſiſters C. and D. and the heirs of their bodies, remainder to the grantor in fee. A. and B. had no ſons, and C. one of the ſiſters died without iſſue, by which the heir of the grantor, as to one moiety of the premiſſes, had the firſt eſtate of inheritance: A. having cut down timber and ſold it, and threatned to open the mines; the heir of the grantor, being ſeiſed of one moiety ut ſupra, by the death of one of the ſiſters without iſſue, brought his bill for an account of the moiety of the timber, and to ſtay A.'s opening of any mine: And it was adjudged the right of this timber belongs to thoſe, who at the time of its being ſevered from the freehold, were ſeiſed of the firſt eſtate of inheritance, and the property becomes veſted in them. 2 P. Wil. 240. Whitfield v. Bewit.

A bill was brought againſt the executors of a jointreſs, to have a ſatisfaction out of aſſets for permiſſive waſte upon the jointure of the teſtatrix, &c. But by Cowper J. the bill muſt be diſmiſſed, for here is no covenant that the jointreſs ſhall keep the jointure in good repair; and in the common caſe, without ſome particular circumſtances, there is no remedy in law or equity for permiſſive waſte after the death of the particular tenant. Vin. Abr. tit. Waſte, p. 523. cites MSS. Rep. 1 Geo. 1. in Canc'. Turner v. Buck.

It has been ſaid in equity, that remainder-man for life ſhall, in waſte, recover damages in proportion to the wrong done to the inheritance, and not in proportion only to his own eſtate for life. 1 Vern. 158. Brown v. Brown.

A. being tenant for ninety-nine years, if he ſhould ſo long live, with truſtees to preſerve remainder to his firſt and other ſons in tail, remainder to B. in tail. A. and B. before iſſue born of A. fell timber. The eldeſt ſon of A. afterwards brings his bill, for an account and ſatisfaction of the timber againſt B. Per Lord Chan. Plaintiff has no remedy at law either in his own name, or in the name of his truſtees. A. if he had not conſented to it, ſhould have brought treſpaſs; for tenant for years is conſidered as a fiduciary for remainder-man or his leſſor. If A. had an eſtate for life, and no limitation to truſtees, the plaintiff could have had no remedy; becauſe tenant for life might have barred, or ſurrendered the whole eſtate to the remainder-man: But here the freehold was in the truſtees; and the poſſeſſion of leſſee for years is in law the poſſeſſion of the owner of the freehold. The truſtees however could not here have maintained waſte, becauſe the Common law gave no action of waſte, but to the owner of the inheritance; and the ſtatute of Glouceſter gives the writ to the ſame perſon; but the truſtees are in no other condition than remainder-man for life. Truſtees may bring a bill in equity to ſtay waſte, before the contingent remainder comes in eſſe. If the truſtees had brought ſuch a bill, the court, as to trees actually cut, would have obliged them to have made ſatisfaction in money, to have been ſecured to attend the contingent uſes. Where there is tenant for life or years ſubject to waſte, and timber is blown down, the owner of the firſt remainder in tail veſted, ſhall have it; for the Common law conſiders an eſtate in contingence as no eſtate; and when the tree is ſevered the property veſts in ſomebody. If there be tenant for life, remainder for life, remainder in fee, remainder-man can have no action for waſte, becauſe plaintiff muſt recover the place waſted, which would be injuſtice to the remainder over; but ſuch a remainder-man of the inheritance after the intervening eſtate may have trover for the trees, and if remainder-man for life dies in the life of remainder-man in fee, he may bring waſte.—Though an injunction is a proper remedy, yet it has never been determined that a bill for an account cannot be maintained afterwards: And though a recovery was ſuffered after waſte done, it was to the uſe of plaintiff and his heirs, which is no new uſe, and ought not to bar waſte in equity. It is true, action of waſte dies with the perſon, but though waſte will not lie at law, as the perſon committing is dead, yet he may have relief in this court. It has been held in all caſes of fraud, the remedy never dies with the perſon, but relief may be had againſt the executor out of aſſets; and this court will follow the aſſets of the party liable to the demand; and colluſion in this court is the ſame as fraud. Decreed a ſatisfaction to be made to the plaintiff for the value of the timber, as he is now tenant in fee of the eſtate; but would not give any intereſt, as that would be carrying it too far. 5 New Abr. 499. Garth v. Cotton.

7. Of the proceſs, &c. in waſte

The proceſs incident to action of waſte, is firſt a writ of ſummons made by the curſitor of the county where the land lies, and on the return of this writ the defendant may eſſoin, and the plaintiff adjourn, &c. Then a pone is to be made out by the filazer of the county, on the return of which a diſtringas iſſues for the defendant to appear, and upon his appearing the plaintiff declares, and the defendant pleads, &c. Or, if the defendant makes default, a writ of enquiry goes to the ſheriff to enquire by the oath of twelve jurors what damage the plaintiff hath ſuſtained, and then the party hath judgment to recover the treble of it; alſo, after judgment entered, a writ of ſeiſin is awarded to the ſheriff to give poſſeſſion to the plaintiff of the place waſted. Comp. Attorn. 250, 251, 258, 259. And a plaintiff ſhall have coſts in all actions of waſte, where the damages found do not exceed twenty nobles, which he could not by the Common law. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11.

Weigh, (Waga) Is a weigh of cheeſe or wool, containing two hundred and fifty-ſix pounds; and in Eſſex the weigh of cheeſe is three hundred pounds. A weigh of barley or malt is ſix quarters, or forty-eight buſhels: And we read of a weigh of ſalt, &c. 9 H. 6. c. 8.

Weights, (Pondera) and Meaſures, Are uſed between buyers and ſellers of goods and merchandiſe, for reducing the quantity and price to a certainty, that there may be the leſs room for deceit and impoſition. There are two ſorts of weights in uſe with us, viz. Troy-weight and Averdupois: Troy-weight contains twelve ounces to the pound, and no more; by which are weighed gold, ſilver, pearl, jewels, medicines, ſilk, wheat-bread, &c. and Averdupois contains ſixteen ounces in the pound, by which grocery wares, copper, iron, lead, fleſh, cheeſe, butter, tallow, hemp, wool, &c. are weighed: and here twelve pounds over are allowed to every hundred, ſo as one hundred and twelve pounds make the hundred weight. Dalt. 248.

In the compoſition of Troy-weight, twenty pennyweights make an ounce, twenty-four grains a pennyweight, twenty mites a grain, twenty-four droits a mite, twenty perits a droit, and twenty four blanks a perit: And the Troy-weight is ſaid to be 20 s. ſterling in the pound; and the Averdupois weight 25 s. ſterling. 4 Shep. Abr. 194.

Fleta mentions a weight, called a Trone-weight, being the ſame with what we now call Troy-weight; and, according to the ſame author, all our weights have their compoſition from the penny ſterling, which ought to weigh thirty-two wheat-corns of the middle ſort; twenty of which pence make an ounce, and twelve ſuch ounces a pound; but fifteen ounces make the merchants pound. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 12.

By Magna Charta, 9 H. 3. c. 25. 14 Ed. 3. c. 12. 25 Ed. 3. c. 10. 27 Ed. 3. &c. There is to be but one weight, &c. throughout the kingdom; but this is to be underſtood of the ſame ſpecies of goods, otherwiſe the Troy and Averdupois weights would not be permitted. Every city, borough, and town, ſhall have a common balance, with common weights ſealed; on pain of 10 l. in the city, 5 l. the borough, and 40 s. the town. 8 H. 6. c. 5. But only cities and market-towns are injoined to have common balances, weights and meaſures, by 11 H. 7. c. 4. And by this ſtatute, weights are to be marked by the chief officers of places, and ſealed, &c. Refuſing or delaying to do it, is liable to a penalty of 40 s. And allowing weights not agreeable to the ſtandard, incurs a forfeiture of 5 l. &c.

And the mayors and ſuch officers are once a year to view all weights and meaſures, and burn and deſtroy thoſe which are defective; alſo fine the offenders, &c. And two juſtices of peace have power to hear and determine the defaults of mayors. Will, Defect of. An involuntary act, as it hath no claim to merit, ſo neither can it induce any guilt: The concurrence of the will, when it hath its choice either to do, or to avoid, the fact in queſtion, being the only thing that renders human actions either praiſe-worthy or culpable. See Black. Com. 4 V. 20. 21. But note, treſpaſs will lie for an accidental hurt. Yet ſuch actions now, meet with little or no encouragement.

Will, Eſtates at. An eſtate at will is where lands or tenements are let by one man to another, to have and to hold at the will of the leſſor; and the tenant by virtue of this leaſe obtains poſſeſſion, Every eſtate at will is at the will of both parties, landlord and tenant, ſo that either of them may determine his will, and quit his connections with the other at his own pleaſure. Note, if tenant at will ſows his lands, and the landlord before the corn is reaped, puts him out, yet the tenant ſhall have the emblements and free ingreſs, egreſs, and regreſs, to cut and carry away the profits. See Black. Com. 2 V. 145, 146. A tenancy at will is now ſeldom known.

Will of the Lord. Though in general copyholders are ſtill ſaid to hold their eſtates at the will of the lord, yet it is ſuch a will as is agreeable to the cuſtom of the manor; which cuſtoms are preſerved and evidenced by the rolls of the ſeveral courts baron in which they are entered or kept on foot by the conſtant immemorial uſage of the ſeveral manors in which the lands lie. See Black. Com. 2 V. 95, 147.

Will, vitious. In all temporal juriſdictions an overt act, or ſome open evidence of an intended crime, is neceſſary in order to demonſtrate the depravity of the will, before the man is liable to puniſhment. And, as a vitious will without a vitious act is no civil crime, ſo, on the other hand, an unwarrantable act, without a vitious will is no crime at all. So that to conſtitute a crime againſt human laws, there muſt be, firſt, a vitious will; and, ſecondly, an unlawful act conſequent upon ſuch vitious will. See Black. Com. 4 V. 20, 21.

Will, or Laſt Will and Teſtament, (Teſtamentum, ultima voluntas) Is a ſolemn act or inſtrument, whereby a perſon declares his mind and intention, as to the diſpoſal of his lands, goods or effects, and what he would have done after his death. Co. Lit. 111.

The Common law calls that a will when lands or tenements are given; and where it concerns goods and chattels alone, it is termed a teſtament: In a will of goods there muſt be an executor appointed, but not of lands only without goods; an executor having nothing to do with the freehold. 1 Inſt. 111. If lands are given by will, it is called a deviſe; and goods and chattels a legacy: And there is this diverſity between lands and goods given by a will, that when lands are deviſed in fee, or for life, the deviſee ſhall enter without the appointment of others: In caſe of goods and chattels there muſt be the aſſent of the executor, &c. Swinb. 24. If lands are given and deviſed by will, the will ought to be proved in the Chancery; and of goods it muſt be in the ſpiritual court: A will both of lands and goods, may be proved in the ſpiritual court. Ibid. A will hath not force till after the teſtator's deceaſe; but then without any further grant, livery, &c. it gives and transfers eſtates, and alters the property of lands and goods, as effectually as any deed or conveyance executed in a man's life-time; and hereby deſcents may be prevented, eſtates in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life or years, &c. be made: And he that takes land by deviſe, is in nature of a purchaſer. Litt. 167. A deviſee is in by act executed in the deviſor's life-time, tho' it be not conſummated till his death. Roll. Rep. 478. And therefore a deviſe ſhall take effect, before a deſcent: But an heir may be in the land by deſcent, notwithſtanding a deviſe made to him; and to give a thing by will to ſuch a perſon to whom the law gives it, is as if it had not been given. 2 And. 11. *Moor. He who makes the teſtament, is called the teſtator; and when a man dies without a will, he is ſaid to die inteſtate. Shep. Abr. part. 4. voc. Teſtament. A teſtamentary ſchedule without witneſſes, or an executor, has been declared a will. 2 Lord Raym. 1282. Powell v. Breresford. There are two ſorts of wills or teſtaments: Firſt, in writing, which is, where the mind of the teſtator, in his life-time, by himſelf, or ſome other by his appointment, is put in writing: Or, ſecondly, by word, or without writing, which is, where a man is ſick, and for fear that death, or want of memory or ſpeech, ſhould ſurprize him, that he ſhould be prevented, if he ſtaid the writing of his teſtament, deſires his neighbours and friends to bear witneſs of his laſt will, and then declares the ſame preſently, by word, before them: And this is called a nuncupative or nuncupatory will or teſtament; and this being after the death proved by witneſſes, and put in writing by the ordinary, is of as great force for any other thing, but land, as when at the firſt in the life of the teſtator it is put in writing. 1 Inſt. 111. Perk. ſ. 476. Wood. part 1. 187. See poſt Div. 8. A codicil is alſo in writing or by word, as a will or teſtament is. The civilians have other diviſions of wills and teſtaments, ſolemn and unſolemn, privileged and unprivileged, whereof the Common law makes no mention. Id. ibid.

2. Who are capable of making a will or teſtament.

An infant, until he be of the age of 21 years, can make no will of his lands by ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 1. But by ſpecial cuſtom in ſome places, where land is deviſeable by cuſtom, he may deviſe it ſooner; and of his goods and chattels, if he be a boy, he may make a will at fourteen years of age, and not before; and if a maid, at twelve years of age, and not before: And then they may do it without and againſt the conſent of their tutor, father, or guardian. 32 H. 8. c. 1. 34 H. 8. c. 5. Swinb. part 11. ſect. 2.

If he or ſhe hath attained to the laſt day of 14 or 12 years, the teſtament by him or her in the very laſt day of their ſeveral ages aforeſaid, is as good and lawful, as if the ſame day were already then expired. Ibid. Likewiſe, if after they have accompliſhed theſe years of 14 or 12, he or ſhe do expreſsly approve the teſtament made in their minority, the ſame by the new will and declaration is made ſtrong and effectual. Swinb. part 11. ſect. 2. And yet ſome ſay an infant cannot make a will of his goods and chattels until he be of 18 years of age. 1 Inſt. 89. b. It has however been agreed in equity, that a female may make a will at 12 years of age of a perſonal eſtate, and a male at 17 years of age or 15, if he be a perſon of diſcretion. 2 Vern. 469.

A feme covert cannot make a will of her lands and goods, except it be in ſome ſpecial caſes: For of her lands ſhe can make no will with or without her huſband's conſent, ſtat. 32 H. 8. c. 1. 4 Rep. 51. Bro. Teſtament, 13. But of the goods and chattels ſhe hath, as executrix to any other, ſhe may make an executor without her huſband's conſent; for if ſhe does not ſo, the adminiſtration of them muſt be granted to the next akin to the deceaſed teſtator, and ſhall not go to the huſband. 12 H. 7. c. 24. Perk. ſect. 502. Fitz. Exec. 40. But now even of them ſhe can make no deviſe with or without her huſband's leave, for they are not deviſeable; and if ſhe deviſes them, the deviſe is void. Plowd. 526.

Of the things due to the wife, whereof ſhe was not poſſeſſed during the marriage, as things in action, and the like, ſhe may make her will, at leaſt ſhe may make her huſband executor of her paraphernalia, viz. her neceſſary wearing apparel, being that which is fit for one of her rank. Some ſay, ſhe may make a will without her huſband's leave, others doubt of this; however all agree, that ſhe, and not his executor, ſhall have this after her huſband's death; and that the huſband cannot give it away from her, and of the goods and chattels her huſband has either by her or otherwiſe, ſhe may not make a will without the licence and conſent of her huſband firſt had ſo to do: But with leave and conſent ſhe may make a will of goods, and make him her executor if ſhe will. And it is ſaid alſo, that if ſhe does make a will of his goods in truth without his leave and conſent, and after her death he ſuffers the will to be proved, and delivers the goods accordingly, in this caſe the teſtament is good: And yet if the huſband gives the wife leave to make a will of his goods, and ſhe does ſo, he may revoke the ſame at any time in her life-time, or after her death, before the will is proved. But a woman after a contract with any man, before a marriage, may make a will as well as any other, and it is not at all diſabled hereby. 12 H. 7. 24. 18 Ed. 4. 11. Perk. ſect. 501. Fitz. Exec. 28, 109. Bro. Teſta. 11. But if ſhe marries afterwards, the marriage will be a revocation of the will.

A wife, whoſe huſband is baniſhed by act of parliament for life, may make a will as a feme ſole. 2 Vern. 104.

A mad or lunatick perſon, during the time of his inſanity of mind, cannot make a will of lands or goods; but ſuch a one as hath his lucida intervalla, clear or calm intermiſſions, may, during the time of ſuch quietneſs and freedom of mind, make his will, and it will be good; Swinb. 11. ſ. 3. An ideot, i. e. ſuch an one as cannot number twenty, or tell what age he is, or the like, cannot make a will or diſpoſe of his lands or goods; and although he make a wiſe, reaſonable, and ſenſible will, yet it is void: But ſuch a one as is of a mean underſtanding only, that has groſſum caput, and is of the middle ſort, between a wiſe man and a fool, is not prohibited to make a will. Id. part 11. ſ. 4. An old man likewiſe, who, by reaſon of his great age, is childiſh, again, or ſo forgetful that he forgets his own name, cannot make a will, for a will made by ſuch an one is void. Id. ibid. par. 11. ſ. 1. 6 Rep. 23. Marquis of Wincheſter's caſe. So alſo it ſeems a drunken man, who is ſo exceſſively drunk that he is deprived of the uſe of his reaſon and underſtanding, during that time may not make a will, for it is requiſite that when the teſtator makes his will, he ſhould be of ſound and perfect memory, i. e. that he have a competent memory and underſtanding to diſpoſe of his eſtate with reaſon. Swinb. part 11. ſ. 1. and ſect. 6.

A man who is both deaf and dumb, and is ſo by nature, cannot make a will. But qu. if a will made by ſuch a perſon who hath from long uſe and frequent practice converſed by ſigns, and is clearly proved to underſtand others, and convey his own ideas, &c. may not make a valid will.

A man who is deaf and dumb by accident, may by writing or ſigns make a will. Swinb. par. 11. ſ. 1. & 10. And ſo alſo may a man that is blind. Id. part 1 ſ. 1. & 11. But an alien enemy, perſons convicted and attainted, and recuſants convict, cannot make a teſtament of lands or goods. Wood's Inſt. 335. Neither may the head, or any of the members of a corporation, make a will of the lands or goods they have in common, for they ſhall go in ſucceſſion. Fitz. Abr. Teſt. 1. Perk. 498.

A traitor attainted, from the time of the treaſon committed, can make no will of his lands or goods, for they are forfeited to the King: But after the time he has a pardon from the King for his offence, he may make a will of his lands and goods to another man. Swinb. part 11. ſ. 12. 5 & 6 Edw. 6. c. 11. ſ. 9. A man who is attainted or convicted of felony cannot make a teſtament of his lands or goods, for they are forfeited; but if a man be only indicted, and dies before the attainder, his will is good for his lands and goods both; and if he be indicted, and will not anſwer upon his arraignment, but ſtands mute, &c. in this caſe his lands are not forfeited, and therefore he may make a will of them. Swinb. part 11. ſ. 13. N. B. If a man kill himſelf, his will as to his goods and chattels is void, but as to his lands it is good. Plowd. 261. Hales v. Pettit.

A man likewiſe, who is outlawed in a perſonal action, cannot make a will of his goods and chattels, ſo long as the outlawry continues in force, but of lands he may make a will. Swinb. part 11. ſ. 21. But note, that however the wills of traitors, aliens, felons, and outlawed perſons are void as to the King or lord that has right to the lands or goods by forfeiture or otherwiſe; yet the will is good againſt the teſtator himſelf, and all others but ſuch perſons only. Shep. Abr. part 4. voc. Teſtament. And note alſo, by the civil law the wills of divers others, as excommunicate perſons, hereticks, uſurers, inceſtuous perſons, ſodomites, libellers, and the like, are void; but by our law the wills of ſuch perſons, at leaſt as to their lands, are good by the ſtatutes that enable men to deviſe their lands. Id. ibid.

In ſhort, all perſons whatſoever, male or female, old or young, lay or ſpiritual, at any time before their death, whilſt they are able to ſpeak ſo diſtinctly, or write ſo plainly, that another may underſtand them; and perceive that they underſtand themſelves, may make wills of their lands, goods and chattels, and that although they have ſworn to the contrary; and none are reſtrained of this liberty, but ſuch as are before named. Id. ibid.

3. What are the requiſites to conſtitute a good will.

To conſtitute a good will it is neceſſary,

1. That the teſtator be a perſon legally capable of making a will.

2. The ſecond thing required to the making of a good teſtament, is, that there be a perſon to take, and one that is capable; for in all gifts by deviſe, or otherwiſe, that are good, there muſt be a donee in eſſe, and not poſſe only, and one that ſhall have capacity to take the thing given, when it is to veſt, or the gift ſhall be void. Shep. Abr. part 4. ſ. 13. voc. Teſt.

And hence it is, that where the deviſee of lands or goods, or an executor of a will, doth die before the deviſor, or him that makes the will, the deviſe and will is void, and neither the heir or executor (of the deviſee) ſhall have the thing deviſed. Id. ibid. Plowd. 345. Brett. v. Rigden A deviſe to the wife for life, and after to the children unpreferred, is good. 1 And. 60. Amner v. Luddington. But a deviſe by a man to his heir and his heirs, is void. 2 And. 11. Garmyn v. Arſtate.

One deviſed his leaſe of lands to B. his eldeſt ſon, except the ſum of 140 l. to be paid out for portions for his daughters, and made B. his executor; and held a good deviſe to them after this manner, and that the daughters might ſue for it in the eccleſiaſtical court, or court of equity. Shep. part 4. p. 13. voc. Teſt'.

If one deviſe to the ſon in tail, and if he die without iſſue, to the next of his name; the daughter after married cannot have it, for ſhe is not of his name. Cro. Eliz. 532. Bon v. Smith. One ſeized of a manor and lands, deviſeth the ſame to his ſon, and after, by another part of his will, deviſeth part of the ſame to another of his ſons; theſe deviſes are good, and they ſhall be jointenants. 3 Leo. 11.

3. That the teſtator, at the time of making his will, have animum teſtandi, i. e. a mind or ſerious intention to make ſuch a will.

For it is the mind, not the words of the teſtator that gives life to the will: Since if a man raſhly, unadviſedly, incidently, jeſtingly or boaſtingly, and not ſeriouſly, writes or ſays, that ſuch a one ſhall be his executor, or have all his goods, or that he will give to ſuch a one ſuch a thing; this is no will, nor to be regarded. And the mind of the teſtator herein is to be diſcovered by circumſtances; for if at the time he be ſick, or ſets himſelf ſeriouſly to make his will, or requires witneſſes to bear witneſs of it, it ſhall be deemed in earneſt; but if it be by way of diſcourſe only, or ſomewhat he will do hereafter, or the like, it ſhall be taken for nothing. Swinb. part 1. ſ. 3.

4. That the mind of the teſtator in making his will be free, and not moved by fear, fraud, or flattery.

For when the teſtator is moved to make his teſtament by fear, or circumvented by fraud, or overcome by ſome immoderate flattery, the ſame is void, or at leaſt voidable by exception: And therefore, if a man, by occaſion of ſome preſent fear or violence, or threatning of future evil, does at the ſame time, or afterwards by the ſame motive, make a will, it is void, not only as to him that puts him in fear, but as to all others, altho' the teſtator confirms it with an oath; but if the cauſe of fear be ſome vain matter, or, being weighty, is removed, and the teſtator afterwards, when the fear is paſt, confirms the teſtament, in this caſe, perhaps, the will may be good. And if a man, by occaſion of ſome fraud or deceit, be moved to make a will, if the deceit be ſuch as may move a prudent man or woman, and if the end be evil alſo, the will is void, or voidable at the leaſt; but if the deceit be light and ſmall, or if it be to a good end, as where a man is about to give all his eſtate to ſome lewd perſon, from his wife and children, and they perſuade the teſtator that the lewd fellow is dead, or the like, and thereby procure him to give his eſtate to them, this is a good will. And one may, by honeſt interceſſions, and modeſt perſuaſions, procure another, to make himſelf or a ſtranger executor to him, or the like, and this will not hurt the will; alſo a man may uſe fair and flattering ſpeeches to move the teſtator to make his will, and to give his eſtate unto himſelf or ſome friend of his; except it be in caſe where the flatterer firſt threatens him, or puts him in fear, or to his flattery joins fraud and deceit; or where the teſtator is a perſon of weak judgment, or under the government of the flatterer, or in danger from him; as when the phyſician ſhall perſuade his patient under his hand to make his will, and give his eſtate to himſelf: or the wife in his ſickneſs ſhall neglect him, and in the mean time flatter him to give her all: Or where the perſuader is importunate, and will have no denial: Or where there is another teſtament made before; for in all theſe caſes, the will will be in danger to be avoided. If I be much privy to another man's mind, and he tells me often in his health how he intends to ſettle his eſtate, and, he being ſick, I of my own head draw a will according to his mind, before declared to me, and bring it to him, and aſk him whether this ſhall be his will or no; and he conſiders of it, and then delivers it back to me, and ſays, yes; this is a good will. But if otherwiſe, ſome friends of a ſick man, of their own heads ſhall make a will, and bring it to a man in extremity of ſickneſs, and read it to him, and aſk him, whether this ſhall be his will, and he ſays, yes, yes. Or if a man be in great extremity, and his friends preſs him much, and ſo wreſt words from him; eſpecially if it be in advantage of them, or ſome friends of theirs; in theſe caſes the wills are very ſuſpicious. Id. ibid. part 11. ſ. 25. and part 7. ſect. 2, 3, & 4.

5. That the will be made in the form preſcribed by law.

4. Of wills to paſs lands and tenements.

By the Common law, no lands or tenements (except by particular cuſtom) were deviſeable by any laſt will or teſtament, neither could they be transferred from one to another, but by ſolemn livery of ſeiſin, matter of record or ſufficient writing. Becauſe it was preſumed, that the teſtator would do that in extremis, that he would not do in his health; that it proceeded from the diſtemper of his mind by the anguiſh of his diſeaſe, or by ſiniſter perſuaſion to which in his ſickneſs he was more ſubject. 1 Inſt. 111. b. 1 Roll. Abr. 608.

The true reaſon ſeems to be from the nature of the feudal tenure, and the relation that was firſt eſtabliſhed betwixt the lord and his tenant. For though donations after length of time were made to the tenant and his heirs, or the heirs males or females of his body, under certain duties and ſervices, expreſly reſerved, or which the law created; and though the word heirs, &c. be words of limitation, and appropriated to meaſure out the length or continuance of the eſtate: yet they were always underſtood, the heirs of the preſent tenant, who being liable to the ſame ſervices when they came into the tenancy, the lord was to have the tuition and education of ſuch heirs, in caſe they happened, by reaſon of their minority, to be incapable of performing the ſervices, that ſo he might, by his care and diſcipline, ſecure to himſelf tenants always capable thereof, either in their own perſons, if they happened to be males, or by proper marriages with his tenants if they proved to be females; and therefore by no act of the tenants could he diſpoſe of the feud, ſo as to defeat the lord of the advantages of his ſeigniory; and hence it was, that a tenant could not deviſe it even to his own heir, ſo as to make him a purchaſer thereof; for then he coming in, not by the donation of the lord, but the diſpoſition of the tenant, though he remained liable to the naked ſervices, yet the lord loſt the advantages of wardſhip, marriages, &c. which were annexed only to thoſe who came in upon the terms of his own donation by deſcent. 1 Eq. Caſ. Abr. 401.

The Stat. 32 H. 8. cap. 1. uſually called the ſtatute of wills, enacts, "That every perſon having manors, lands, &c. ſhall have power to give, diſpoſe, will, and deviſe by will, in writing or otherwiſe, by act executed in his life-time, all his ſaid manors, &c. any law, ſtatute &c. to the contrary notwithſtanding."

There have been ſeveral reſolutions concerning wills made purſuant to this ſtatute ſince the making thereof: But as the Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. (vide infra) is now the proper pattern to follow, having altered the forms, by requiring more ceremony and greater exactneſs, it will be ſufficient barely to mention ſome of the caſes on this ſtatute of 32 H. 8. c. 1. viz. That the lands muſt be ſua, and therefore lands purchaſed after a will is made will not paſs. Vide Plow. 344. A deviſe of an authority to executors to ſell is within the act. Moor 341. A man beyond ſea wrote a letter, in which he declared his will to be, that his lands ſhould go in ſuch a manner; and adjudged a good will. Moor 177. So if a man had ordered one to make his will, and thereby to deviſe Whiteacre to A. and his heirs, and Blackacre to C. and his heirs, and he had written the deviſe to A. but, before the deviſe to C. was wrote, the deviſor died, yet as to A. this had been a good deviſe. 3 Co. 31. b. So a will was held good where a lawyer took only ſhort notes, with deſign to reduce it into form, which he afterwards did, but the deviſor died before it was read to him. 1 And. 34. A will wrote without the appointment of the teſtator, if read to him, and approved by him, was held good; ſigning and ſealing was not neceſſary. Cro. Eliz. 100. Dyer 72. a. 2 Leon. 35. As to ſigning ſee infra.

By the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſ. 5. All deviſes and bequeſts of any lands or tenements deviſeable by the ſtatute of wills, or by any particular cuſtom, ſhall be in writing, and ſigned by the party deviſing the ſame, or ſome other perſon in his preſence, and by his expreſs directions, and ſhall be atteſted and ſubſcribed in the preſence of the ſaid deviſor by three or four credible witneſſes, or elſe they ſhall be utterly void and of none effect.

And by ſect. 6. "No deviſe in writing of lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any clauſe thereof, ſhall be revocable other than by ſome other will or codicil in writing, or other writing declaring the ſame, or by burning, cancelling, tearing or obliterating the ſame by the teſtator himſelf, or in his preſence, and by his directions and conſent: But all ſuch deviſes and bequeſts ſhall remain in force until the ſame be burnt, &c. in manner aforeſaid, or unleſs the ſame be altered by ſome other will or codicil in writing, or other writing of the deviſor, ſigned in the preſence of three witneſſes, declaring the ſame."

Therefore, if a will be of lands or tenements, it muſt be in writing, and it muſt be committed to writing at the time of the making thereof; and it is not ſufficient that it be put in writing after the death of the teſtator, being firſt made by word of mouth only, for then it is but nuncupative ſtill. See Wood, part 1. 798. Dyer 72. Plowd. 345.

5. In what language a will may be written, and of the circumſtances of ſigning, ſealing, atteſtation and publication.

It is not material in what matter or ſtuff, whether in paper or parchment, nor in what language, whether in Latin, French, Dutch, or any other tongue, or in what hand or letters, whether in ſecretary hand, roman hand, or court hand, or in any other hand, a will be written, ſo that it be fair and legible, that it be read and underſtood; neither is it material whether the ſame be written at large or by notes or characters uſual or unuſual, as XX. for twenty, or when the figure 1 is uſed inſtead of the letter A. if it be uſual in the teſtator's writings, or the like; for the will is good notwithſtanding. So alſo, if ſome words be omitted, or improper ſentence uſed, when the intent and meaning is apparent; as where a man ſays, I make my wife of this my laſt will and teſtament, leaving out the word executrix, yet the will is good; and this ſhall be underſtood. But if it be ſo done as it cannot be read, or by reading the mind of the teſtator cannot be known, then the will is void and of no force, in like manner as a nuncupative will is when the words ſpoken are ſo ambiguous, obſcure, and uncertain that thereby the meaning of the teſtator cannot be known or underſtood. Swinb. part 4. ſect. 28.

The clauſes of the 29 Car. 2. c. 3. above recited, having rendered the circumſtances of ſigning, &c. neceſſary, it is next to be inquired, when, in legal conſtruction, theſe requiſites ſhall be deemed to have been complied with; which may be beſt collected by an attention to the following caſes.

It has been held, that ſealing of a will, is a ſigning within the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries. 2 Str. 764. Warneford v. Warneford. But a will in writing need not be ſealed. Perk. 477.

Where the teſtator owns his hand before the witneſſes who ſubſcribe the will in the teſtator's preſence, the will is good, though all the witneſſes did not ſee the teſtator ſign; and it is obſervable that the ſtatute of frauds does not ſay that the teſtator ſhall ſign his will in the preſence of three witneſſes; but requires theſe three things,

Firſt, That the will ſhould be in writing. Secondly, That it is ſigned by the teſtator. And thirdly, That it ſhould be ſubſcribed by three witneſſes in the preſence of the teſtator. 3 P. Wil. 254. Stonehouſe and ux' v. Evelyn.

Nevertheleſs a will has been held to have been well executed, though it was not mentioned in the atteſtation to have been ſigned in the preſence of the teſtator. 2 Str. 1109. Croft v. Pawlet. If a will be atteſted by three witneſſes, who ſeverally ſigned their names, not being preſent together; yet each ſigning being in the preſence of the teſtator, makes it a good will within the ſtatute. 2 Chan. Caſes 109. Anon'.

But if a man ſubſcribes his will in the preſence of two witneſſes, and they ſubſcribe it in his preſence, and after makes a codicil in writing, reciting that he had made a former will and confirmed the ſame, (except what was excepted by the codicil) and declares, that the codicil ſhall be taken as part of his will, and publiſhes it in the preſence of one of the witneſſes to the firſt will, and another new witneſs, this is not a good will, for there were not three ſubſcribing witneſſes in the preſence of the teſtator; and one of the witneſſes to the codicil never ſaw the will. Adjudged, though it was objected, the will and codicil made but one will, and the circumſtance of three witneſſes wanting, the will was perfected by the codicil. 3 Mod. 263. Lea v. Lib. Sed qu. So if a man makes a will in ſeveral pieces of paper, and there are three witneſſes to the laſt paper, and none of them ever ſaw the firſt, this is not a good will. 3 Mod. 263. v. infra.

A will of lands was originally executed in the preſence of two witneſſes only, and, at the diſtance of four years afterwards, the teſtator re-executed his will, by drawing a pen on the old ſtrokes, in the preſence of one other perſon, who likewiſe ſubſcribed his name as a witneſs to it. Upon an ejectment brought by the heir at law, and on a ſpecial verdict, it was determined by the court, that this will was properly executed, and atteſted, under the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries. 5 New Abr. 509. MSS. Rep. Jones v. Dale, B. R. Hill. 16 Geo. 2.

It was determined by the lord chancellor, that a will is well proved, though the witneſſes did not ſee the teſtator ſign his name; if he declares it to be his hand-writing to them, and they atteſt it in his preſence, and in the preſence of each other. 5 New Abr. 509. MSS. Rep. Grayſon v. ——— in Chan. 25, 26 Geo. 2.

A will was atteſted by three witneſſes, in the preſence of the teſtator and of each other, but the teſtator did not write his name or put his ſeal in their preſence, but pointed to the paper, and ſaid, that was his will, and he had writ it, and that his name, William Ellis ſubſcribed, was his writing and name; and laid his hand on the ſeal, and ſaid, that was his ſeal. Determined by Lord Hardwicke, aſſiſted by Lord Ch. J. Willes, Strange maſter of the Rolls, and the Ch. Baron, on a queſtion in this cauſe, whether this will ſo executed, was good as a revocation of a former will, under the ſixth ſection of the ſtatute of frauds? And held clearly that it was; it not being doubted but that it was good, as an original will, according to the authorities determined on this head, that the owning it to be his hand-writing was ſufficient. 5 New Abr. 509. MSS. Rep. Ellis v. Smith, Hill. & Mich. 27 Geo. 2.

The teſtator deſired the witneſſes to go into another room, ſeven yards diſtance, to atteſt his will, in which there was a window broken, through which the teſtator might ſee them. And it was held, that this will was according to the ſtatute of frauds; for though the ſtatute requires atteſting in his preſence, to prevent obtruding another will in the place of a true one, yet it is enough if the teſtator might ſee. It is not neceſſary that he ſhould actually ſee them ſigning; for, at that rate, if a man ſhould but turn his back, or look off, it would vitiate the will: And the ſigning was in the view of the teſtator; he might have ſeen it, and that is enough. So if the teſtator, being ſick, ſhould be in bed and the curtain drawn. 2 Salk. 688. Shires v. Glaſcock.

But where one deviſed lands to I. S. and his heirs, and duly ſubſcribed his will in the preſence of three witneſſes; who, for the eaſe of the teſtator, went down ſtairs into another room, and atteſted the will there, which was out of the preſence of the teſtator; and the heir at law was prevailed on to join in a leaſe and releaſe of the deviſed premiſſes, in truſt for the deviſee; the will and the releaſe were both ſet aſide, for the releaſe reciting that the will was duly executed, was ſuggeſtio falſi, and the concealing from the heir, that it was not duly executed, was ſuppreſſio veri; either of which circumſtances are good reaſons for ſetting aſide a releaſe or conveyance. 1 P. Wil. 239. Broderick v. Broderick.

If the teſtator writes the will with his own hand, though he does not ſubſcribe his name, but ſeals and publiſhes it, and three witneſſes ſubſcribe their names in his preſence, it is a good will; for his name being wrote in the will it is a ſufficient ſigning: And the ſtatute does not direct, whether it ſhall be at the top, bottom, &c. and by three judges againſt one, ſealing is a ſigning within the act. And note, it is not ſaid in the act, that the ſigning ſhall be in the preſence of the three witneſſes at the ſame time. 3 Lev. 1. Lemayne v. Stanley. See Comyn's Rep. 197. Peate v. Ougley. 2 Raym. 1282.

A. by will in writing, atteſted by three witneſſes, deviſed a copyhold eſtate to his wife: And afterwards the teſtator, on the day of his death, directed his nephew to obliterate ſome deviſes, but ſaid nothing as to the copyhold deviſed to his wife, and then cauſed a memorandum to be written, that he examined, peruſed, and approved of the will as ſo obliterated and altered by his nephew, in his preſence, but did not republiſh it in the preſence of three witneſſes, but directed his nephew to have it wrote out fair; but before it was brought back he became delirious; and this was held a good will as to the copyhold. 2 Vern. 498. Burkitt v. Burkitt.

It has been determined, that a truſt of an inheritance muſt be deviſed in the ſame manner as a legal eſtate. Vide 2 Wil. Rep. 258.—Wagſtaff v. Wagſtaff.

J. S. poſſeſſed of a term of five hundred years in Blackacre, afterwards purchaſes the fee-ſimple in B.'s name, and deviſes Blackacre by will, all of his own hand-writing, to C. in fee; but the will was neither dated, ted, ſubſcribed, or atteſted. Decreed per his honour, that as this was a term which would have attended the inheritance, and in equity have gone to the heir, and not to the executor, in which reſpect it was to be conſidered as part of the inheritance; ſo the will which was not atteſted by three witneſſes, as the law required it to be, when land was to paſs, ſhould not carry this term. 2 Wil. Rep. 236. Whitchurch v. Whitchurch.

An ejectment by the heir at law, the queſtion for the opinion of the court was, whether it ſhould be left to a jury to determine, whether the witneſſes to a will (being all dead) ſet their names in the preſence of the teſtator, and this merely upon circumſtances without any poſitive proof? Per Cur. This is a matter fit to be left to a jury, which is all that is referred to the court. The witneſſes, by the ſtatute of frauds, ought to ſet their names as witneſſes in the preſence of the teſtator; but it is not required by the ſtatute that this ſhould be taken notice of in the ſubſcription to the will: And whether inſerted or not, it muſt be proved: If inſerted, it does not conclude but it may be proved contra, and the verdict may find contra; then if not concluſive when inſerted, the omiſſion does not conclude it was not ſo, and therefore muſt be proved by the beſt proof the nature of the thing will admit. In caſe the witneſſes be dead there cannot probably be any expreſs proof, ſince at the execution of wills few are preſent but the deviſor and witneſſes; then, as in other caſes, the proof muſt be circumſtantial, and here are circumſtances. Firſt, three witneſſes have ſet their names, and it muſt be intended they did it regularly. Secondly, one witneſs was an attorney of good character, and may be preſumed to underſtand what ought to be done, rather than the contrary. And there may be circumſtances to induce a jury to believe, that the witneſſes ſet their hands in the preſence of the teſtator, rather than the contrary; and it being a matter of fact, was proper to be left to them; as whether the livery was given on a feoffment, when no livery is indorſed; whether a deed was executed when only a counterpart was produced, &c. And the court was of opinion, that the plaintiff ought to be nonſuited. Comyns's Rep. 531. Hands v. James. See alſo Vin. Abr. tit. Deviſe. (N. 9.) Ca. 4, p. 128. Croft on Dem'. of Dalby v. Pawlet.

A will ſhall not be read in proof of a witneſs's hand, unleſs there be poſitive proof that he is dead. Comyns's Rep. 614. Biſhop v. Burton.

If a copyholder, after admittance, ſurrenders the lands to the uſe of his laſt will, and by his will gives them to A. but the will is not atteſted by any witneſſes; yet A. is well intitled to the lands. Per Lord Chan. Barnard Rep. in Chan. 11, 12. Tuffnel v. Page.

N. B. It was conſidered as ſufficient to declare the uſes of the ſurrender.

A ſurrender was made of a copyhold eſtate to truſtees, to the uſe of the will; which was made with only two witneſſes to it. It was admitted, that a will of a copyhold eſtate does not require three witneſſes. Select Ca. in Chan. 42. Appleyard v. Wood.

A will made beyond-ſea, of lands in England, muſt be atteſted by three witneſſes. 2 Wil. Rep. 293. See Vin. Abr. tit. Deviſe, (N. 2.) ca. 16. p. 119. and (N. 10.) ca. 3. p. 128.

If a teſtator ſigns his will, but delivers it as his act and deed; yet this will be a ſufficient publication. Vin. Abr. tit. Deviſe, (N. 7.) ca. 13. pl. 125.

An uncle having deviſed his eſtate from his nephew and heir at law, a younger brother of the heir at law, at the uncle's funeral, ſnatched the will out of the hands of the executor, and tore it in many ſmall pieces, but moſt of them, and particularly ſuch part wherein was the deviſe of the land, were picked up and ſtitched together again: And on a bill to have he will eſtabliſhed, it was decreed that the deviſee ſhould hold againſt the heir, and he to convey him, although there was no direct proof made that the heir directed the tearing of the will. 2 Vern. 441. Haynes v. Haynes.

6. Of re-publiſhing a will; and what ſhall amount to a re-publication, and where a re-publication ſhall make a deviſe good.

If a man deviſes certain lands, and after aliens the land to a ſtranger, and re-purchaſes; and after ſhews his intent, that the ſaid will ſhall be his will: This is a new publication, and the land ſhall paſs by the deviſe. 1 Vern. 330. Hall v. Dunch.

So the teſtator's ſaying his will was in a box in his ſtudy, amounted to a new publication. 2 Vern. 209. Cotton v. Cotton.

If a man ſeiſed of lands, deviſes all the lands to I. S. and afterwards purchaſes the manor of D. and afterwards writes his will that I. D. ſhall be his executor: yet this is not any new publication, to make the land paſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 618.

But if after the purchaſe of the manor of D. he delivers the firſt will as his will, and ſays, that it ſhall be his will, without putting any words thereto: yet this is a new publication to make the lands newly purchaſed paſs. Id. ibid. 1 Salk. 237.

So if a man ſeiſed of lands in D. deviſes to another, by his will in writing, all his lands in D. and after purchaſes other lands in D. and after one I. S. comes to him, and requeſts him to give him the buying of the lands laſt purchaſed: And he anſwers him, that he will not, but that his intent was, that thoſe lands ſhould go to the executors (the deviſee being made executor by the will) as his other lands ſhould: And after the deviſor cauſes a codicil to be written, in which there is a deviſe of ſeveral perſonal things, as corn and implements of houſhold, and annexes it to his firſt will: And after dies without other publication; yet this ſhall be a ſufficient publication to make the lands newly purchaſed to paſs by the will, for there need no other words in the will than there were before; and his intent appears, that it ſhould be his will, by the annexing the codicil. 1 Rol. Abr. 618.

But if a man has iſſue two daughters A. and B. and he deviſes lands to A. and to the heirs of her body, and for want of iſſue to B. and A. dies in the life-time of the teſtator, leaving iſſue; though after the teſtator annexes a codicil to his will, and thereby diſpoſes of ſome part of his perſonal eſtate; yet this will not amount to a republication of the will, nor give any title to the iſſue of A. though the teſtator had declared in his will, that B. had married againſt his conſent, and that what he had given her was in full of her portion, and in bar of any further part of his real eſtate. 1 Abr. Eq. Caſes 407. 2 Vern. 722. Hutton v. Simpſon.

It has been ſaid, that if a codicil be executed after making a will and purchaſing lands, it will amount to a republication, and paſs the land purchaſed after making the will, and that it was ſo determined by all the judges in the caſe of Acherley and Vernon; which ſee infra, ſed Q. Unleſs it appears he had his real eſtate under conſideration. 5 New Abr. 516. MSS. Rep. Gibſon v. Rogers, in Chanc. Trin. 23 Geo. 2.

A. having given a legacy inter alia to his ſon Joſeph; Joſeph died, and he afterwards had another Joſeph, and then by a codicil to his will, confirming his will, he took notice, that, ſince the laſt, it had pleaſed God to give him another ſon, and gave him a ſmaller legacy. Determined, that this was a re-publication of his will, and amounted to a ſubſtituting Joſeph in the place of the firſt; and gave him the firſt legacy as well as the ſecond. MSS. Rep. Perkins v. Micklethwaite. See Cro. Eliz. 422. 1 Lev. 243. 1 Vent. 341. 2 Jones 135. Raym. 408.

J. S. after making his will, and deviſing his real and perſonal eſtate, to truſtees, for particular purpoſes, purchaſes ſeveral fee farm-rents, aſſarts rents, and other lands and tenements, and then by a codicil he recites that he made a will, dated 17th Jan. 1711, and then ſays, "I hereby ratify and confirm the ſaid will, except in the alterations hereafter mentioned. The portion to my niece L. ſhall be made up 6000*l.* and what I have given to my ſiſter and niece, ſhall be accepted by them in ſatisfaction of all they may claim out of my real and perſonal eſtate, and on condition they releaſe all right, &c. to my executors and truſtees in my will named; and thus having provided for my ſiſter and niece, I deviſe all the lands by me purchaſed ſince my will, to my truſtees and executors in my will named, to the ſame uſes, and ſubject to the ſame truſts, to which I have mentioned to deviſe the manor of H. and the bulk of my eſtate; and I revoke that part of my will, whereby I appoint A. B. and C. three of my truſtees, in my will, and I deſire K. and N. to be two of my truſtees, and deviſe my ſaid real eſtate to them accordingly." Lord Maccleſfield, 20th Nov. 1723, decreed, that the will was confirmed by the codicil; that I. S. ſigning and publiſhing his codicil in the preſence of three witneſſes was a republication of his will, and both together made but one will; and by the ſaid will and codicil, his fee-farm rents, aſſart rents, and lands, contracted to be purchaſed, and all his real and perſonal eſtate (except the copyhold purchaſed before his will) did well paſs. On appeal to the lords, the decree was affirmed. Comyns's Rep. 381. Acherley v. Vernon.

It was determined upon the opinon of all the judges, that if a will be made, and afterwards another will without cancelling the former; and then, by an act ſubſequent to both, the firſt will be confirmed, the limitations in that will ſo confirmed will take place: Alſo that if there are two inconſiſtent wills of the ſame date, neither of which can be proved to be laſt executed; they are both void by the Common law for uncertainty, and will let in the heir at law: Alſo, that although the wills are dated the ſame day, the limitations may take place if they are conſiſtent in both, to the diſinheriſon of the heir at law: And, upon this opinion, the order appealed from, which was a diſmiſſion of the plaintiff's bill in the court of Exchequer in Ireland, was confirmed in favour of Lord Angleſey, by the houſe of lords. 5 New Abr. 517. MS. Rep. Phips v. Angleſey in Dom. proc. June 1751. See the printed copy.

7. What ſhall be a ſufficient proof of a will; and in what caſes deviſees, legatees, and creditors may be admitted to prove a will.

A written will, when it is written with the teſtator's own hand, proves itſelf, and therefore needs not the help of witneſſes to prove it; and for this cauſe, if a man's will be found written fair and perfect, with his own hand, after his death, although it be not ſubſcribed with his name, ſealed with his ſeal, or have any witneſſes to it, if it be known or can be proved to be his hand, it is held to be a good teſtament, and a ſufficient proof of itſelf; but if it be ſealed with his ſeal, and ſubſcribed with the name of the teſtator, and can be proved by witneſſes, it is more authentic; and when it is found amongſt the choiceſt evidences of the teſtator, or faſt locked up in a ſafe place, it is the more eſteemed, for if it be written in another hand, and the teſtator's hand and ſeal, or one of them, not to it, although it be found in ſuch a place as before, yet ſome proof will be expected of it further by witneſſes in that caſe; and if a writing be found under the teſtator's own hand, yet if it be but a ſcribling writing, written copywiſe, with a great diſtance between every line, without any date, in ſtrange characters, with many interlineations, and lying amongſt his void papers, or the like: This will not be eſteemed a ſufficient will, nor a good proof of it, but it ſhall be accounted rather a draught or image of the teſtator's will, for a direction to him after to make his will by; and yet, if it can be proved that the teſtator did declare himſelf that this ſhould be his will, this will be a good will, and a good proof of it. Swinb. part 4. ſect. 28. and part 7. ſect. 13. This as to perſonal.

If it be proved, that the teſtator ſaid his teſtament was in ſuch a ſchedule, in the hands of J. S. and J. S. produces a writing, depoſing it to be the ſame, this is a ſufficient proof; qu. But if he ſays withal, it is written with his own hand, then it ſeems ſome other proof, as by comparing hands, or the like, that it is his hand wherein it is written, will be expected. Id. Ibid. If the witneſſes will prove the writing produced to be the laſt will of the teſtator, or that he ſaid it was, or it ſhould be his laſt will, or that it was the ſame writing that was ſhewn to them, and whereunto they are witneſſes, although they never heard it read, or ſet their hands to it, it is a ſufficient proof. Id. ibid.

Where there is no queſtion or oppoſition moved or had about or againſt a will, there the oath of the executor alone is eſteemed a ſufficient proof of it; and in that caſe regularly no other proof is required; and where more proof is neceſſary, it is in the diſcretion of the ordinary what proof to admit and allow: And thoſe witneſſes, for number, nature and quality, or ſuch other proof that he deems and accepts for ſufficient, is ſufficient; and the will ſo proved by ſuch witneſſes, or ſuch other proof, is ſufficiently proved. 5 New Abr. 519. This as to perſonal.

All perſons, male and female, rich and poor, are eſteemed competent witneſſes to prove a will, ſave only ſuch as are infamous, as perjured perſons, and the like; ſuch as want underſtanding and judgment, as children, infants, and the like; and ſuch as are preſumed to bear affection, as kindred, tenants, ſervants, &c. Swinb. par. 4. ſect. 24. Qu. as to the latter ſort.

But an intereſted witneſs, ſuch as a legatee, &c. was not, (before the ſtat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 6.) a credible witneſs, 5 New. Abr. 519. MSS. Rep. Anſty v. Dowſing. Mich. 1746. B. R.

J. the regiſter's book is good evidence to prove a will concerning lands. 1 Ld. Raym. 731. St. Leger v. Adams. One of the ſubſcribing witneſſes to the atteſtation of a will, having an annuity deviſed to his wife, was held not to be a credible witneſs within the ſtatute. 2 Str. 1253. Holdfaſt on dem. of Anſty v. Dowſing. Parol evidence is not admitted to contradict the words of a will. Id. 1261. Lowfield. v. Stoneham, and *Caſ. Deviſees, legatees, and creditors, are now made competent witneſſes to wills, for by the act of the 25 Geo. 2. c. 6. for avoiding and putting an end to certain doubts and queſtions, relating to the atteſtation of wills and codicils, concerning real eſtates, in that part of Great Britain called England, and in his Majeſties colonies and plantations in America, it is enacted, That if any perſon ſhall atteſt the execution of any will or codicil, which ſhall be made after the 24th of June 1752, to whom any beneficial deviſe, legacy, eſtate, intereſt, gift or appointment of, or affecting any real or perſonal eſtate, (other than and except charges on lands, tenements, or hereditaments, for payment of any debt or debts which ſhall be thereby given or made,) ſuch deviſe, &c. or appointment, ſhall, ſo far only as concerns ſuch perſons atteſting teſting the execution of ſuch will or codicil, or any perſon claiming under him, be utterly null and void; and ſuch perſon ſhall be admitted as a witneſs to the execution of ſuch will or codicil, within the intent of the act of 29 Car. 2. notwithſtanding ſuch deviſe, &c.

And it is alſo enacted, That in caſe by any will or codicil made or to be made, any lands, tenements, or hereditaments are or ſhall be charged with debts; and any creditor whoſe debt is ſo charged, hath atteſted, or ſhall atteſt, the execution of ſuch will or codicil, ſuch creditor ſhall be admitted as a witneſs to the execution of ſuch will or codicil, within the intent of the ſaid act. That if any perſon hath atteſted the execution of any will already made, or ſhall atteſt the execution of any will, &c. made on or before the 24 June 1752, to whom any legacy is or ſhall be thereby given, whether charged upon lands, tenements or hereditaments, or not; and ſuch perſon before he ſhall give his teſtimony concerning the execution of ſuch will, &c. ſhall have been paid, or have accepted or releaſed, or ſhall have refuſed to accept ſuch legacy or bequeſt, upon tender made thereof; ſuch perſon ſhall be admitted as a witneſs to the execution of ſuch will, &c. within the intent of the ſaid act. Provided that in caſe of tender and refuſal, ſuch legatee ſhall in no wiſe be intitled to ſuch legacy.

This act not to extend to the caſe of any heir at law, or of any deviſee in a prior will or codicil of the ſame teſtator, executed and atteſted according to the act of 29 Car. 2. or any perſon claiming under them reſpectively, who has been in quiet poſſeſſion for two years next preceding the 6th of May 1751; as to ſuch lands, tenements, or hereditaments, whereof he has been in quiet poſſeſſion as aforeſaid. This act not to extend to any will or codicil, the validity or due execution whereof hath been conteſted in law or equity by the heir of ſuch deviſor, or deviſee, in any ſuch prior will or codicil ſo conteſted, or any part thereof, or for obtaining any other judgment or decree for the lands, &c. mentioned to be deviſed, in any other judgment, or decree relative thereto, on or before the ſaid 6th of May 1751, and which has been already determined in favour of ſuch heir at law, or deviſee in ſuch prior will or codicil, or any perſon claiming under them reſpectively, or which is ſtill depending, and has been proſecuted with due diligence; but the validity of every ſuch will or codicil, and the competency of the witneſſes thereto, ſhall be adjudged and determined in the ſame manner as if this act had never been made.

No poſſeſſion of any heir at law, or deviſee in ſuch prior will or codicil as aforeſaid, or of any perſon claiming under them reſpectively, which is conſiſtent with, or may be warranted by or under any will or codicil atteſted according to the intent of this act, or where the eſtate deſcended or might have deſcended to ſuch heir at law, till a future or executory deviſe by virtue of any will or codicil atteſted according to this act, ſhould or might take effect, ſhall be deemed to be a poſſeſſion within the intent of the clauſe herein laſt contained. This act ſhall extend to ſuch of the Britiſh colonies in America, where the 29 Car. 2. is by act of aſſembly made, or by uſage received as a law; or where, by act of aſſembly or uſage, the atteſtation and ſuſcription of a witneſs or witneſſes, are made neceſſary to deviſes of lands, &c. And ſhall have the ſame force and effect in the conſtruction of, or for the avoiding of doubts upon the ſaid acts of aſſembly, and laws of the ſaid colonies, as the ſame ought to have in the conſtruction of, or for the avoiding doubts, upon the ſaid act in England. Provided always, that as to the caſes ariſing in any of the ſaid colonies, no ſuch deviſe, legacy, or bequeſt aforeſaid, ſhall be made null and void by virtue of this act, unleſs the will or codicil whereby ſuch deviſe, &c. ſhall be given, ſhall be made after March 1. 1753.

In the caſe of Wyndham v. Chetwynd in B. R. Bur. Rep. 414 to 431. On a will of land, dated 14 May 1750, and a codicil of the ſame date, an objection was made, "that the ſubſcribing witneſſes to the will were not, at the time of their atteſtation, credible witneſſes," the witneſſes being creditors. But in that caſe, it was reſolved they were credible witneſſes.

In another caſe, which afterwards came before the court of Common Pleas for determination (the preſent Lord Camden Chief Juſtice,) viz. the caſe of Doe on the demiſe of Hindſon v. Kerſey, the principles laid down in the former caſe, were controverted.

In the latter caſe, there was a deviſe to certain poor perſons, of the pariſh of A. Some of the pariſhioners were witneſſes; and adjudged they were not credible, for that a deviſe to the poor of any place, being in eaſe of the poor rate, the pariſhioners were intereſted. Theſe two laſt caſes, and the arguments at length, as delivered in the reſpective caſes, by Lord Mansfield and Lord Camden, are publiſhed together, in a quarto pamphlet, to which we refer, as being too long to ſtate fully, in a work of this kind.

8. Of nuncupative wills.

By the ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſ. 19. For the preventing fraudulent practices, it is enacted "That no nuncupative will ſhall be good where the eſtate thereby bequeathed ſhall exceed the value of 30 pounds, that is not proved by the oaths of three witneſſes, at the leaſt, that were preſent at the making thereof, and bid by the teſtator to bear witneſs that ſuch was his will, or to that effect." And by ſtat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſ. 14. it is declared, "That all ſuch witneſſes, as are and ought to be allowed to be good witneſſes upon trial at law by the laws and cuſtoms of this realm, ſhall be deemed good witneſſes to prove any nuncupative will, or any thing relating thereto. Nor unleſs ſuch nuncupative will were made in the time of the laſt ſickneſs of the deceaſed, and in the habitation where he or ſhe has been reſident for ten days next before making of ſuch will, except where ſuch perſon was ſurpriſed or taken ſick, being from his own home, and died before he returned. That after ſix months paſſed after the ſpeaking of the teſtamentary words, no teſtimony ſhall be received to prove any will nuncupative, except the ſaid teſtimony, or the ſubſtance thereof, were committed to writing within ſix days after the making of the ſaid will. That no letters teſtamentary, or probate of any nuncupative will, ſhall paſs the ſeal of any court, till fourteen days, at the leaſt, after the deceaſe of the teſtator be fully expired, nor ſhall any nuncupative will be at any time received to be proved, unleſs proceſs have firſt iſſued to call in the widow, or the next of kindred to the deceaſed, to the end they may conteſt the ſame, if they pleaſe. That no will in writing concerning any goods or chattels, or perſonal eſtate, ſhall be repealed; nor ſhall any clauſe, deviſe, or bequeſt therein, be altered or changed by any words, or will by word of mouth only, except the ſame be in the life of the teſtator committed to writing, and after the writing thereof read to the teſtator, and allowed by him, and proved to be ſo done by three witneſſes at the leaſt."

"Provided that any ſoldier in actual military ſervice, or any mariner or ſeaman being at ſea, may diſpoſe of his moveables, wages, and perſonal eſtate, as before the making of this act."

A. being ill, deſired B. to make her will, who wrote down only names and initial letters to this effect, viz. to Tho. Weſt 200 l. to Jo. Dav. 100 l. to Reb. Cro. 50 l. to ſelf, 10 l. and to ſeveral other perſons in like manner, to above 400 l. which being more than her eſtate, B. made an alteration in the ſecond column, by ſubſtracting part of the ſums of the legatees, as ſet down in the ſecond column, and then told A. the ſenſe of the propoſed deviſes: There were two perſons in the room that did not hear any thing that paſſed between A. and B. but only heard the teſtatrix at laſt pronounce, that all was well. B.

went to a ſcrivener to have the deviſes drawn out at length and in form, and before ſhe returned the teſtatrix died: The judge below pronounced for this will; but, upon appeal to the delegates, it was reverſed; and in this caſe it was agreed that if the will had been written in words at length, ſo as they had carried a ſenſe and meaning in themſelves, it had been a good will; for that there was one witneſs that wrote it, and two that heard the teſtatrix pronounce, that it was well: Which would have been intended to have amounted to a ſecond witneſs, in regard it appeared on all hands, by ſeveral witneſſes, that the teſtatrix did then ſeriouſly diſpoſe herſelf to make her will; and for that was quoted the caſe of one Pepper, where a perſon diſpoſed herſelf to made her will, and dictated it to a perſon who wrote it down; and another, not called in as a witneſs, lay behind the hanging out of curteſy; and yet ſuch will was allowed to be good, being proved by theſe two witneſſes: But they diſtinguiſhed this caſe becauſe the will was not ſubſtantive, but was to take its ſenſe from the interpretation of the witneſſes; and ſo there would be innuendo upon innuendo, which made purely a nuncupative will: And as ſuch, not being atteſted by the number of witneſſes appointed by the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, the will and legacies were void. 1 Abr. Eq. Caſ. 403.

Dr. Shallmer, by will in writing, gave 200 l. to the pariſh of St. Clement's Danes, and after, Prew the reader coming to pray with him, his wife put him in mind to give 200 l more towards the charges of building their church, at which, tho' Dr. Shallmer was at firſt diſturbed, yet after, he ſaid he would give it, and bid Prew take notice of it: And the next day he bid Prew remember of what he had ſaid to him the day before, and died that day. Within three or four days after, the doctor's wife puts down a memorandum in writing of the ſaid laſt deviſe, and ſo did her maid. Prew died about a month after, and amongſt his papers was found a memorandum of his own writing, dated three weeks after the doctor's death, of what the doctor ſaid to him about the 200 l. and purporting that he had put it in writing the ſame day it was ſpoken: But the writing which was mentioned to be made the ſame day it was ſpoken did not appear, and theſe three memorandums did not expreſsly agree. About a year after, on application by the pariſh to the commiſſioners of charitable uſes, and producing theſe memorandums and proof by Mrs. Shallmer and her maid, they decreed the 200 l. but, on the exceptions taken by the executors, the decree was diſcharged of this 200 l. and Lord Chancellor held it not good, becauſe it was not proved by the oath of three witneſſes; for tho' Mrs. Shallmer and her maid had made proof, yet Prew was dead; and the ſtatute in that branch requires not only three to be preſent, but that the proof ſhall be by the oath of three witneſſes. 1 Abr. Eq. Caſ. 404.

A daughter depoſits 180 l. in the hands of her mother (the defendant), and afterwards makes her will in writing, and thereby deviſes ſeveral legacies, and makes her mother executrix, but takes no manner of notice of this 180 l. afterwards, by word of mouth, ſhe deſires her mother to give this 180 l. to the plaintiff, if ſhe thought fit, and then ſoon after died: The mother proved the will, and this bill was brought againſt her, to have the 180 l. paid. The mother, by her anſwer, admits ſhe had ſuch a ſum in her hands, and that her daughter did make ſuch a requeſt to her, but that ſhe left it to her election, whether ſhe would give it to the plaintiff or not, by the very form of the deviſe: And inſiſted that ſhe did not think fit to give it to the plaintiff. And in this caſe it was agreed, that this was not as a nuncupative will, being above 30 l. and not reduced into writing within ſix days after the ſpeaking, as the ſtatute requires. 2dly, That if the defendant had inſiſted on the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, the court could not have relieved the plaintiff as upon a truſt: But in this caſe the defendant having by anſwer confeſſed the truſt, there was no danger of perjury from variety of proof, which was the miſchief the ſtatute intended to provide againſt; and therefore the court took it to be in nature of a truſt, and decreed for the plaintiff: Tho' the defendant expreſsly ſwore, ſhe did not think fit to give it to the plaintiff, and that the teſtatrix had left her at liberty, But this decree was againſt the opinion of ſeveral at the bar, who thonght it too hard on the election left in the mother: But the court principally relied on the caſe of Kingſman v. Kingſman, where a man deviſed away an eſtate of 2000 l. per ann. and upwards, from his ſon and heir to a bargeman. And by his will deviſed 20 l. per ann. to his ſon, with this clauſe, that if he behaved himſelf well, and gave no trouble or diſturbance concerning his will, that he might make it up 80 l. if he thought fit. And the court decreed the 80 l. per ann. to the ſon. But note, the 80 l. per ann. in the caſe of Kingſman v. Kingſman ſeems to have been decreed purely upon the circumſtances and hardſhips of the caſe: But in the preſent caſe there were no ſuch circumſtances or ingredients of hardſhip on the plaintiff: But qu. for it ſeems to be a truſt in the hands of the mother. Id. ibid. Gil. Eq. Rep. 146. Jones v. Nabbs.

9. Of the nature and effect of a will or teſtament, and of a codicil; and how wills ſhall be conſtrued.

A will or teſtament is of that nature, that it differs much from other acts and deeds that men do and execute in their life-time: For although it be made, ſealed, and publiſhed in ever ſo ſolemn a manner, yet it has no life, no virtue in it, until the teſtator's death; For it is a maxim in law, Omne teſtamentum morte conſummatum eſt, & voluntas eſt ambulatoria uſque ad extrèmum vitæ exitum; it is therefore reſembled until death to the interlocutory ſentence, and after death to the definitive ſentence of a judge; and hence it is ſaid, Sed legum ſervanda fides, ſuprema voluntas quod mandat fierique jubet parere neceſſe eſt. 1 Inſt. 112. 4 Rep. 61. b. Forſe v. Hembling's caſe.

And for this reaſon a man may alter or make void his will at his pleaſure; and he may make as many new wills and teſtaments as he pleaſes, and there is no way to bar a man of this liberty. Shep. Abr. par. 4. p. 9. Voc. Teſt'.

And the latter teſtament always revokes and overthrows the former: But otherwiſe it is of a codicil, for a man may make as many of theſe as he will, and make no teſtament at all: Or if he makes a teſtament, he may afterwards make as many codicils as he will, and one of them will not overthrow the other; for in the firſt caſe they muſt be all annexed to the letters of adminiſtration, and the adminiſtrator muſt perform them; and in the latter caſe they muſt be all annexed to the teſtament, and the executor muſt take care to perform them. Lit. 168. Swinb. p. 1. ſect. 5. Br. Teſtament 20.

A teſtament therefore is ſaid to have three degrees. 1ſt, An inception, which is the making of it. 2dly, A progreſſion, which is the publication of it. 3dly, A conſummation, which is the death of the teſtator. Shep. Abr. part 4. p. 9. Voc. Teſt'.

In grants therefore the firſt is of the greateſt force, but in teſtaments the laſt is of greateſt force. 1 Inſt. 112. b.

But when a teſtament is perfect by the death of the party, it as effectually gives and transfers eſtates, and alters the property of lands and goods, as acts executed by deed in the life-time of the parties: For hereby deſcents of lands are prevented. And a man may make eſtates in fee-ſimple, or fee-tail, for life or years, of lands, teſtaments, rents, reverſions or ſervices, as effectually as by deed; and theſe eſtates alſo will be good without any livery of ſeiſin or attornment, and hereby alſo rents and power er to diſtrain for them, may be reſerved, conditions created and annexed to eſtates or things deviſed. Shep. Abr. part. 4. p. 10. Voc. Teſt'. And therefore they that take by deviſes of land, are ſaid to take in the nature of purchaſers. And therefore if a tenant in tail makes a feoffment to the uſe of himſelf in fee, and after deviſes the ſame to his wife in fee, and dies, the ſon is not remitted though the father dies ſeiſed, for the deviſe prevents the deſcent.

It is to be obſerved, that where the words of a will have a plain ſenſe, and no doubt is in any matter within or without the words, touching the matter of the deviſe, there the words of the will ſhall always be taken to be the intent of the deviſor, and his intent to be what the words ſay. 2 And. 17. Lowen v. Bedd. That all the words of a will are to be carried to anſwer the intent of the deviſor; but this is to be underſtood in caſes where the intent of the party may be known by the words that are in the will. 2 And. 10, 11, 134. That if there are inconſiſtent and contradictory words in a will, ſome words muſt be rejected to make it ſenſe. Thus where a teſtator gave the intereſt of a ſum of 6000*l.* to Mary Comfortle, his daughter, for her life, and after her deceaſe gave the money between Charles Comfortle her huſband, and their children: And in another part of the will he ſaid, and in caſe there be no ſuch child or children, I give it to Charles Comfortle and ſuch children.—Lord Chancellor rejected theſe latter words, as they were abſurd and contradictory. 5 New Abr. 525. MS. Rep. Boon v. Comfortle, Paſc. 24 Geo. 2. in Chan'.

A. having a wife and no children, made his will, and ſaid, leſt it ſhould pleaſe God that he ſhould not return, he gave and deviſed a real and perſonal eſtate, or to that effect. He returns, has children and dies, without altering his will: The plaintiff being a legatee, and there being a direction in the will, for the ſale of the real eſtate to pay his legacy; Lord Chancellor was of opinion, that the diſpoſition was merely contingent, and that no part of the will was to take effect but on the contingency of his return. 5 New Abr. 525. MSS. Rep. Parſons v. Lenow, Hill. 22 Geo. 2. in Chan'.

That a will muſt have a favourable interpretation, and as near to the mind and intent of the teſtator as may be, and yet ſo withal as his intent may ſtand with the rules of law, and not be repugnant thereunto; it being a rule or maxim of law, Quod ultima voluntas teſtatoris perimplenda eſt, ſecundum veram intentionem; and that, ſed legum ſervanda fides, ſuprema voluntas quod mandat fierique jubet parere neceſſe eſt. In deeds the rule of conſtruction is, that the intention muſt be directed by the words, but in wills, the words muſt follow the intent of the deviſor; and ſuch a conſtruction is to be made of them, as to make uſe of all the words, and not of part, and ſo as they may ſtand together, and have no contrariety in them. Shep. Abr. part 10. Voc. Teſtament. Bridg. 105. Standiſh v. Short.

That ſuch a ſenſe ſhall be made of a deviſe, that it may be for the profit of the deviſee, and not to his prejudice. Shep. Abr. 11. p. 11. Voc. Teſt.' That general and doubtful words in a will, ſhall not alter an expreſs deviſe before, nor carry any thing contrary to the apparent intent. Id. ibid. That the clauſes and ſentences of a will ſhall be ſeverally tranſpoſed to ſerve the meaning of it. And conſtruction ſhall be made of the words to ſatisfy the intent, and they ſhall be put in ſuch order as the intent may be fulfilled. Id. ibid. That no ſenſe may be framed upon the words of a will, wherein the teſtator's meaning cannot be found. Id. ibid. That to give a thing to ſuch a perſon to whom the law gives it, is as if it had not been given; and ſo a deviſe of a man's land to his heirs is void. Styles 148, 149. That a conſtruction of a will muſt be gathered out of the words of the will, and not by any averment. Shep. Abr. part 11. p. 11. Voc. Teſt.'

That though a parol averment ſhall not be admitted to explain a will, ſo as to expound it contrary to the import of the words, yet, when the words will bear it, a parol averment may be admitted. As, for inſtance, to aſcertain a perſon, but in no caſe to alter the eſtate. 1 Freem. 292. Sleede v. Bertier. 5 Rep. 68. Lord Cheyney's caſe.

That one part of a will ſhall be expounded by another: as where a man leaves an eſtate to another and his heirs, and afterwards mentions to have given him an eſtate tail, heirs ſhall be taken to mean heirs of the body, and the deviſee ſhall take only an eſtate tail. 2 Freem. 267. Bamfield v. Popham. See farther on this ſubject, the caſes of Strong, Clerk, v. Teatt, leſſee of Mervyn, & al'. Bur. Rep. 912—924.—Doe ex Dm. Long, v. Laming. Bur. Rep. 1110—1113.—Bagſhaw v. Spencer, & al'. 1 Vezey, 142, &c. before Lord Hardwicke on an appeal from the rolls.

The caſe in ſhort was, Benjamin Aſhton, by will of 7 September 1725, deviſed all his manors, lands, &c. to five truſtees, in truſt, int. al'. as to one moiety to Benjamin Bagſhaw for his natural life without impeachment of waſte, and after determination of that eſtate to the truſtees to preſerve contingent uſes, but to permit Benjamin Bagſhaw to receive the rents for his natural life, and after his deceaſe, then to the uſe and behoof of the heirs of the body of the ſaid Benjamin Bagſhaw lawfully begotten, and to be begotten, and in default of ſuch iſſue, then, &c.

Benjamin Bagſhaw ſuffered a common recovery of his moiety: At the rolls, his honour declared, that Benjamin Bagſhaw took an eſtate-tail, and decreed accordingly.

On the appeal, the caſe was reduced by the chancellor to two general queſtions, viz.

1. Whether the eſtate deviſed to Benjamin Bagſhaw was a legal eſtate, that is an uſe executed by the ſtatute of uſes, or a mere truſt in equity?

2. Suppoſing it to be a mere truſt in equity, whether it was an eſtate-tail, or an eſtate for his life only, with contingent remainders over to all the iſſue of his body reſpectively?

As to the firſt queſtion, Lord Hardwicke was of opinion, that it was a truſt in equity.

As to the ſecond queſtion, his lordſhip obſerved, it would depend on the conſtruction of the words, "heirs of the body of Benjamin Bagſhaw, lawfully begotten or to be begotten," as they ſtood in the will. If they were to be taken as words of limitation, then he was tenant in tail, and his recovery was good in equity: if words of purchaſe, then he was tenant for life only, and his recovery was void.

And his lordſhip was of opinion, that he was tenant for life only, and therefore his recovery was void. And his judgment was to reverſe ſo much of the decree made at the rolls, as declared that Benjamin Bradſhaw took an eſtate-tail by the will, &c. See the reaſonings at large in Vezey.——It is a caſe of great conſequence and treated in a very maſterly manner by the chancellor.

10. Of revoking a will; and where a will ſhall be ſet aſide for fraud.

By Stat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. it is enacted, "that no deviſe in writing of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any clauſe thereof ſhall be revocable, otherwiſe than by ſome other will, or codicil in writing, or other writing, declaring the ſame, or by burning, cancelling, tearing or obliterating the ſame, by the teſtator himſelf, or in his preſence, and by his directions and conſent, but ſhall continue, &c. unleſs altered by ſome other will or codicil in writing, or other writing of the deviſor, ſigned in the preſence of three or more credible witneſſes, declaring the ſame: And by the ſame act, no will in writing, concerning perſonal eſtates, ſhall be repealed, nor any clauſe or bequeſt therein altered by words, or will by word of mouth only, except the ſame be, in the life of the teſtator, committed to writing, and read to and allowed by him, and proved to be done by three witneſſes."

But where a man, by will in writing, deviſed the reſidue of his perſonal eſtate to his wife, and after, ſhe dying, he, by a nuncupative codicil, bequeathed to J. S. all that he hath given to his wife, it was reſolved good; for, by the death of the wife, the deviſe of the reſidue was totally void; and the codicil was no alteration of the former will, but a new will for the reſidue. Raym. 334.

Revocations by the act of the party are either expreſs, as where the deviſor expreſsly declares his mind, that his will ſhould be revoked; or implied, as where the eſtate or thing deviſed is altered after making of the will. 2 Abr. Eq. Caſ. 769. Sir Richard Templeman's caſe. Mich. 4 Ann. in C. B.

Lord Hardwicke Lord Chancellor: The general principle is, that at the time of the deviſe the deviſor muſt have a diſpoſing capacity, and an eſtate in the land deviſed; and the eſtate muſt remain in the ſame plight and condition until his death: For the leaſt alteration, by an act of his, makes it a different eſtate, and ſhews a different intention, and therefore is an actual revocation. Thus if one ſeiſed in fee deviſes, then inſeoffs another to the uſe of himſelf in fee, tho' it is the old uſe that remains, yet it is a revocation, though it is his own feoffment. So of a bargain and ſale without inrolment. So if a man, thinking himſelf tenant in fee, deviſes, and then, apprehending himſelf to be only tenant in tail, ſuffers a recovery, with intent to confirm his will, it is a revocation. As to mortgages, they are exceptions out of the rule. At law a mortgage for years, and in equity a mortgage in fee, are revocations pro tanto only; and the reaſon is, that a mortgage is only a ſecurity; and tho' it be a conveyance of a real eſtate, yet in this court it is a chattel intereſt only, and goes to the executor, and it gives no dower. In the caſe wherein theſe leading principles were eſtabliſhed, after the teſtator had deviſed all the manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, he by a deed conveyed an advowſon which he was ſeiſed of at the time of making his will, to and to the uſe of truſtees and their heirs; in truſt to preſent the church when void to a particular perſon, if qualified, on the terms preſcribed therein: And if ſuch a perſon ſhould be incapable, then to preſent ſuch clerk as A. ſhould nominate; and in default of nomination by him, as the truſtees ſhould think fit. The perſon intended was preſented; and on a bill brought by the heir at law of the teſtator, to have a legal conveyance of the reſidue of the advowſon, the queſtion was, Whether this deed, being only a truſt for a particular purpoſe, as it was alledged, was a total or partial revocation? And determined by Lord Chancellor, after arguing as above, that it was a total revocation; it being a grant of the legal intereſt; and the truſt was a real and beneficial intereſt given by it to the truſtees, that of nominating themſelves in default of A.'s nominating: And he decreed, a conveyance to be made according to the prayer of the bill. 5 New Abr. 527. cites MS. Rep. Sparrow v. Hardcaſtle in Canc. Paſc. 17 Geo. 2.

I. S. ſeiſed of a leaſe for lives, deviſes it; and afterwards I. S. ſurrenders the old leaſe, and takes a new one to him and his heirs for three lives. Decreed by Lord Chancellor King, that this renewal of the leaſe was a revocation of the will, as to this particular. 3 P. Will. Rep. 166, 170. Marwood v. Turner.

So where a teſtator deviſed by his will, a leaſehold eſtate under Magdalen College Oxon, and after the making of this will, before his death, renewed his leaſe, by ſurrendering the old one, and taking a new leaſe. Determined by Lord Chancellor, that this was a revocation of his will. And tho' the teſtator, after the renewal, looking amongſt his papers, had ſaid, this is my will, that was held to be no republication. 5 New Abr. 527. cites MS. Rep. Sir Tho. Abney v. Miller, in Canc. Trin. 1743.

If the latter part of a will is inconſiſtent with the former part of it, it ſuperſedes and revokes it. Per Reynolds Ch. B. and Comyns and Thompſon, Barons in Scacc. Fitzgibbons 195. Attorney General v. Governor and Co. of Chelſea water-works.

It was agreed to be the conſtant rule of this court, that where a legacy was given to a child, who afterwards upon marriage, or otherwiſe, hath the like or greater ſum, it ſhould be intended in ſatisfaction of the legacy, unleſs the teſtator ſhould declare his intent otherwiſe; and it was ſaid the words of ratifying and confirming do not alter the caſe, though they amount to a new publication, being only words of form, and declaring nothing of the teſtator's intent in this matter. 2 Freem. Rep. 224. Irod v. Hurſt.

Defendant's teſtator by his will gave his four daughters 600*l.* a-piece and afterwards married his eldeſt daughter to the plaintiff, and gave her 700*l.* portion; after that he makes a codicil, and gives 100*l.* a-piece to his unmarried daughters, and thereby ratifies and confirms his will, and dies. Plaintiff preferred his bill for the legacy of 600*l.* given to his wife by the ſaid will. And his honour held, that the portion given by the teſtator in his life-time, ſhould be intended in ſatisfaction of the legacy. Id. ibid. See farther, Prec. in Chan. 183. Ward v. Lant. Vin. Abr. tit. Deviſe, (R. 2.) ca. 16. p. 140. Parker v. Lamb. Prec. in Chan. 263. Hoſkins v. Hoſkins. Vin. Abr. tit. Deviſe, (P.) Ca. 10. p. 136. Prec. in Chan. 298. Bird v. Hooper.

A man makes his will duly executed and atteſted according to the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, and at the ſame time, in like manner, executes a duplicate thereof; ſome time after, the teſtator, having a mind to change one of his truſtees, orders his will to be wrote over again, without any variation whatſoever from the firſt, ſave only in the name of that truſtee. And when it was ſo wrote over, he executes it in the preſence of three witneſſes, and the three witneſſes ſubſcribed their names, but not in his preſence. After this the teſtator cancels the duplicate, by tearing off the ſeal, and then dies. And the queſtion was, Whether this ſecond will, not being good, as a will to paſs lands, ſhould yet be a revocation of the firſt, and if it ſhould not, whether the cancelling the other ſhould be a revocation thereof within the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries. And it was decreed, that neither the making of the ſecond, nor the cancelling the firſt, was a revocation thereof; though in the ſecond there was an expreſs clauſe, that he did thereby revoke all former and other wills; wherein my Lord Chancellor took this diſtinction, that the ſecond was not intended barely a revocation of the firſt, ſo as to ſignify his intention of dying inteſtate, or without any will; but it was intended as an effectual will to paſs the lands to the perſons, and in the manner thereby deviſed: And therefore if it was not good as a will to that purpoſe, it was no revocation of the firſt, but as it was ſuppoſed to be valid as a will for paſſing the lands by the ſecond: And if a man by his will deviſes land to A. and after makes a ſecond will, and thereby deviſes the lands to B. if this ſecond will be not good, as a will to paſs the lands to B. it ſhall be no revocation of the deviſe in the firſt to A. for it is plain A. was to loſe only what B. was to gain; and if B. gains nothing by the ſecond, A. ſhall loſe nothing that was given him by the firſt: But if a man executes a ſecond will, which appears to have no other intention than to revoke the firſt, and to die inteſtate, though this ſecond be not in all circumſtances duly executed as a will whereby to paſs lands, yet it will operate as a revocation of the firſt: And as to the cancelling or tearing of the firſt will, that is no revocation of it in this caſe, becauſe that was no ſelf-ſubſiſting independent act, but done to accompany, or in a way of affirmation of the ſecond: It was done from an opinion, that the ſecond had effectually revoked the firſt, and therefore he tears the firſt as of no uſe: But the firſt was not effectually revoked by the ſecond: And the act of tearing the firſt will, not deſtroy it neither: For though a man may, by the ſtatute of frauds, as effectually deſtroy his will, by tearing or cancelling it, as by making a ſecond; yet if he does make a ſecond, and intends that as revocation of the firſt, if it be inſufficient for that purpoſe, as in the principal caſe, the tearing and cancelling being only in conſequence of his opinion, that he made a good ſecond will, it ſhall not deſtroy the firſt; but it ought to be ſet up again in equity. 1 Abr. Eq. Caſes 407. See as to part, Cont. 10 Mod. 233. Vin. Abr. tit. Deviſe, (R. 3.) p. 141.

But if a man cancels or revokes either the duplicate or original will, this is an effectual avoiding of both, they being both but one will, and therefore muſt ſtand or fall together. 2 Vern. 742. Onions v. Tyrer.

A man makes his will in writing, and thereby deviſes all his real and perſonal eſtate to his wife, her heirs and executors, in truſt to pay his debts and legacies; and then deviſes ſeveral legacies to his children and other perſons, and concludes, "In witneſs whereof I have, to this my laſt will and teſtament, containing nine ſheets of paper, and to a duplicate thereof, to be left in the hands of ſuch a one, ſet my ſeal to every ſheet thereof, and to the laſt of the ſaid ſheets my hand and ſeal, in the preſence of three witneſſes, who all ſubſcribed their names in due form of law." Afterwards the teſtator, being minded to add other truſtees to his wife, and make ſome alterations in his will, ſends for a ſcrivener, and gave directions to prepare a draft of inſtructions for another will, which the ſcrivener does accordingly, and the teſtator read it over and approved of it very well, and ſets his hand to it; and being at a tavern, thinking he had now made a new will, he pulls out of his pocket the firſt will and tears off the ſeal from the firſt eight ſheets, which the ſcrivener ſeeing, aſked him what he was doing; why ſays he, I am cancelling my firſt will. Pray ſays the ſcrivener hold your hand, the other will is not perfected; it will not paſs your real eſtate for want of being executed purſuant to the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries. I am ſorry for that, ſays he, and immediately deſiſted from tearing off any more of the ſeals; and in ſome ſhort time dies without having done any thing further to perfect the ſecond will, or to cancel the firſt.

Lord Chancellor held, that the ſubſequent will could be no revocation as to the real eſtate, not being executed according to the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries: And that as to the tearing off the ſeals from the firſt eight ſheets, that not being done animo cancellandi, was no revocation; and that the ſeal remaining whole to the laſt ſheet was ſufficient, and in ſtrictneſs it was not neceſſary that all the ſheets ſhould be ſealed. Abr. Eq. Caſ. 409. Hyde v. Hyde. 3 Chan. Rep. 155. S. C. See Vin. Abr. tit. Deviſe, (R. 4.) Ca. 3. p. 142. Townſend v. Pearce.

If A. deviſes lands to B. and his heirs, and afterwards mortgages the ſame lands to J. S. for years, or in fee, though a mortgage in fee be a total revocation at law, yet in equity it ſhall be a revocation pro tanto only. 1 Vern. 97, 141, 182, 329, 342. 1 Salk. 158. S. P. So if a man ſeized in fee deviſes to J. S. in fee or for life, and afterwards makes a leaſe to J. D. for years, this, even at law, ſhall not be a revocation, but during the years: for his intent does not appear further than during the term for years. 1 Rol. Abr. 616. Montague v. Jeffries. So if a huſband poſſeſſed of a term for forty years, deviſes it to his wife, and after leaſes the land to another for twenty years, and dies; this leaſe is not any revocation of the whole eſtate; but only during the twenty years, and the wife ſhall have the reſidue of the deviſe. Id. ibid. Wilcox's caſe.

But if A. deviſes lands to B. and his heirs, and twelve years after leaſes the ſame lands to B. for ſixty years, to commence after his death, and delivers the deed to a ſtranger, to the uſe of B. who does not deliver it to B. till after the death of A. This is a revocation of the whole eſtate, for both eſtates are not conſiſtent nor can veſt in B. at the ſame time; and it was plainly the intention of the deviſor, that B. ſhould have the leſs eſtate only And it was ſo adjudged, though objected, that it was the intention of A. that B. ſhould have his liberty to take by the leaſe or deviſe, B. not having agreed to the leaſe in the life time of A. 1 Abr. Eq. Caſ. 410. But if the leaſe made to the deviſee had been to begin either in præſenti or futuro, in the life of the deviſor, it had not been a revocation, for inaſmuch as the leaſe might have determined in his life, it was conſiſtent with his will. Cro. Jac. 49. Coke v. Bullock. So where A. by will deviſed to his younger ſon a certain meſſuage for ninety-nine years, if three lives lived ſo long, yielding and paying to his ſiſter the plaintiff 20 l. per ann. until twelve years old, and thence 40 l. per ann. for life: And afterwards the ſaid A. for 300 l. fine, demiſed the ſaid meſſuage to J. S. for ninety-nine years, if three lives lived ſo long, yielding and paying 50 l. per ann. to A. the teſtator, his heirs and aſſigns; and though it was held at the Rolls to be a revocation, yet, on an appeal to my Lord Keeper, he decreed it to be no revocation, and that the daughter ſhould be paid her annuity; and he ſaid, that the rule is, where a ſubſequent act ſhall amount to a revocation by implication, it muſt be a neceſſary implication: And the act muſt be wholly inconſiſtent with the deviſe. 2 Vern. 495. Lamb. v. Parker. 2 Freem. 284. S. C.

So if A. deviſes lands to truſtees to pay his debts, and then to pay his wife 200 l. per ann. for her life; and the teſtator living ſeveral years after, his debts increaſed from 2000 l. to 10,000 l. for 8000 l. whereof his ſaid truſtees were bound, and afterwards A. the teſtator, by deed and fine, conveys his lands to his ſaid truſtees, to ſell to pay his debts, and the ſurplus to him and his heirs, and tho' the wife joined with him in the fine and conveyance, yet this ſhall be no revocation of the wife's 200 l. per ann. and ſhe ſhall have the 200 l. per ann. out of the ſurplus money after the debts are paid. 2 Vern. 241. Vernon v. Jones. 2 Freem. 117. A. having iſſue four daughters, and no male iſſue, deviſes lands to truſtees, in truſt to permit his daughter S. to receive the rents and profits until her marriage or death, and in caſe ſhe married with the conſent of two of the truſtees and her mother, then to convey the premiſſes to her and her heirs: But if ſhe died before marriage, or married without ſuch conſent, then to convey to other perſons: Afterwards S. married in the lifetime of her father, and with his conſent, and he ſettled part of thoſe lands on her and her huſband, and died. And it was held, that this ſettlement was no revocation of the will, as to the deviſe of the other lands. 2 Vern. 720. Clarke v. Berkley. See *Vin. Abr. tit. If A. by his will deviſes all the reſidue of his perſonal eſtate to B. and C. and makes them executors; and after, by a codicil, cancels and revokes every legacy, thing, and part relating to B. and revokes his being executor; C. ſhall have the whole. A revocation, with a new gift, ſhall have the ſame effect as if it had been expreſsly given; and whether it be by codicil or obliteration, it is the ſame. 5 New Abr. 535. MSS. Rep. Humphries v. Taylor, in Chan. Hil. 25 Geo. 2.

Though marriage and the having of children has been deemed a revocation of a will, yet it is only a preſumptive revocation; for if it appears by any expreſſion, or other means, to be the intent of the deviſor, that his will ſhould continue in force, the marriage will be no revocation of it. 1 *Ld. If lands are deviſed to one in fee, and afterwards mortgaged to the ſame deviſee, it is a revocation in toto, being inconſiſtent with the deviſe; though it was agreed, if the mortgage had been to a ſtranger, it had been a revocation quoad the mortgage only. I. S. on his marriage with F.'s daughter, ſettled 500 l. per annum on her; he afterwards ſurrendered ſome copyhold eſtates to the uſe of his will which he made, and gave the copyhold to his wife. Afterwards I. S. on the death of his wife's father, became intitled to 1500 l. in right of his wife; then I. S. levied a fine, and made a new ſettlement, and increaſed her jointure 300 l. per annum, but never altered his will. And per Lord Chancellor, The ſettlement is a revocation of the will, for ſuch lands as are comprized in it; but the copyhold is not, and therefore paſſes by the will. Select Caſes in Chan. 48. Lannoy v. Lannoy. See Select Caſes in Chanc. 63. Vin. Abr. tit. Deviſe, (R. 6.) Ca. 30. p. 148. Luther v. Kirby.

By marriage articles it was agreed, that the wife's lands, whereof ſhe was ſeiſed in tail, ſhould be conveyed to the huſband in fee; they married, the huſband made his will and deviſed theſe lands; then the huſband and wife ſuffered a recovery of theſe lands, to ſuch uſes, and for ſuch eſtates, as they ſhould jointly appoint, and in default of ſuch appointment, to the uſe of the huſband and his heirs. She died without appointing. Per Hardwicke Chanc. This amounts to a revocation of the will. And in this caſe the following rules were laid down.

If a man ſeized in fee deviſes, and then makes a conveyance by fine, feoffment, or recovery, and takes back a new eſtate, it is certainly a revocation; and ſo if he takes back the old uſe unaltered, from a preſumption that he could not have made ſuch a conveyance, without an intention to alter his will: But if after making his will he had made a leaſe, or charged it with a ſum of money, &c. it would only have been a revocation pro tanto. The rules are the ſame in the deviſe of a real, and of a perſonal eſtate, with regard to charges made afterwards: But if a man, having an equitable eſtate in fee, deviſes it, and then takes a conveyance of the legal eſtate; it is no revocation. The equitable eſtate will not paſs by will, but the heir at law by deſcent of the legal eſtate, may become a truſtee for the deviſee, who may call for a conveyance of the eſtate. If a man contracts by articles for the purchaſe of lands, and before a conveyance deviſes the lands and dies; the deviſee ſhall have the lands, and call for a conveyance from the vendor. If a man, ſeiſed of a legal eſtate, makes his will, and then conveys the legal eſtate to another in truſt for himſelf, it is a revocation. If in this caſe the huſband had only taken the legal eſtate by the recovery to execute it into the equitable eſtate, it would have been no revocation; but new uſes are appointed, and tho' the wife died without making any appointment, that will not alter the caſe, for here he took the fee by the recovery differently qualified, ſubject to different conditions, differently conveyed. But if two parceners make partition, levy a fine, and declare the uſe, that will not be a revocation, becauſe it is to effectuate the partition. 5 New Abr. 538. MSS. Rep. Parſons v. Freeman. In 25 Geo. 2. Vide Fitzgib. Rep. 207.

Though a covenant or articles do not at law revoke a will, yet if entered into for a valuable conſideration, amounting in equity to a conveyance, they muſt conſequently be an equitable revocation of a will, or of any writing in nature thereof. As to ſetting aſide wills for fraud, Jekyl Lord Commiſſioner took a difference between a will and a deed gained upon a weak man, and upon a miſrepreſentation or fraud; for if a will be gained from ſuch by miſrepreſentation, this is not a ſufficient reaſon to ſet it aſide in equity; as was determined in the Duke of Newcaſtle's will, betwixt Lord Thanet and Lord Clare, and in the caſe of Bodvil and Roberts: But where a deed, which is not revocable as a will is, is ſo gained from ſuch a perſon, and without any valuable conſideration, the ſame ought to be ſet aſide in equity. 2 *P. Withernam, (From the Sax. Wither, i. e. altera, or, as ſome ſay, contra, & Nam, captio) Is where a diſtreſs is driven out of the county, and the ſheriff upon a replevin cannot make deliverance to the party diſtrained: In this caſe the writ of withernam is directed to the ſheriff, for the taking as many of his beaſts or goods, who did thus unlawfully diſtrain, into his keeping till the party make deliverance of the firſt diſtreſs, &c. It is a taking or repriſal of other cattle or goods, in lieu of thoſe that were formerly unjuſtly taken and eſloined, or otherwiſe witholden. F. N. B. 68, 69. 2 Inſt. 140. Stat. Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 2. This writ is granted on the return of the ſheriff upon the alias and pluries in replevin, that the cattle, &c. are eſloined, by reaſon whereof he cannot replevy them; and it appears by our books, that the ſheriff may award withernam on replevin ſued by plaint, if it be found by inqueſt in the county, that the cattle were eſloined according to the bailiff's return, &c. Though upon the withernam awarded in the county-court, if the bailiff doth return that the other party hath not any thing, there ſhall be an alias and pluries, and ſo infinite, and no other remedy there: But on a withernam returned in the King's Bench, or Common Pleas, if the ſheriff return that the party hath not any thing, &c. a capias ſhall iſſue againſt him, and exigent and outlawry. New. Nat. Br. 166. In replevin, &c. the ſheriff returns averia elongata ſunt by the defendant; thereupon a writ of withernam is awarded; and if he return nihil, the plaintiff proceeds to outlawry by alias and pluries cap. in withernam, and ſo to exigent: And there is ſome difference where the defendant appeareth upon the return of the pluries capias, and when he ſtays longer, and appears on the return of the exigent and not before; for in the firſt caſe his cattle ſhall not be taken in withernam: but he muſt find pledges to make deliverance, or be committed; and, in the laſt caſe, he ſhall not only find pledges for making deliverance, but ſhall be fined, and his cattle may be taken in withernam: In both caſes, the plaintiff may declare for the unjuſt taking, and yet detaining of his cattle, and ſo go to trial upon the right; and if 'tis found for him, then he ſhall recover the value of the cattle with coſts and damages, or may have the cattle again by a retorn. habendo directed to the ſheriff; but if it be found for the defendant, he ſhall keep the cattle, and have coſts and damages for the unjuſt proſecution. 1 Brownl. 180. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 553, 554.

A defendant in replevin may have a writ of withernam againſt the plaintiff; as if the defendant hath a return awarded for him, and he ſueth a writ de retorn. habendo, and the ſheriff return upon the pluries, quod averia elongata ſunt, he ſhall have a ſci. fac. againſt the pledges which the plaintiff put in to proſecute, &c. and if they have nothing, then he ſhall have a capias ad withernam againſt the plaintiff. Ibid. And the cattle taken in withernam are to be ad valentiam, i. e. to the value of the cattle that were firſt taken and detained; for it is to be underſtood not only of the number of the cattle, but according to the worth and value; otherwiſe he that brings the replevin and withernam, will be deprived of his ſatisfaction. 3 Lill. Abr. 690. Where cattle have been taken in withernam, they have been by a rule of court delivered back and reſtored to the owner, on his payment to the plaintiff of all his damages, coſts and expences. Ibid. Cattle taken in withernam may be milked, or worked reaſonably; becauſe they are delivered to the party as his own cattle, &c. Contra of cattle diſtrained. 1 Leon. 302. This word withernam alſo ſignifies repriſals taken at ſea by letters of mart ſhips. See Replevin.

Worceſters, and worſted cloths, are mentioned in many of our old ſtatutes, as 17 R 2. 7 E. 4. 14 & 15 Hen. 8. c. 3. &c. See Abr. Stat.

Words, Which may be taken or interpreted by law in a general or common ſenſe, ought not to receive a ſtrained or unuſual conſtruction: And ambiguous words are to be conſtrued ſo as to make them ſtand with law and equity; and not to be wreſted to do wrong. A Latin word in pleading, which ſignified divers things, was well uſed to expreſs that thing intended to be expreſſed by it: Incertain words in a declaration, are made good and certain by a plea in bar, where notice is taken of the meaning of them; and words which are in themſelves uncertain, may be made certain by ſubſequent or following words. The different placing of the ſame words may cauſe them to have a different ſenſe, and conſtruction: A word which is written ſhort or abbreviated, is not good without a daſh to diſtinguiſh it: And ſenſeleſs words are void and idle; though they ſhall not hurt where it is good without them. Nor ſhall words in deeds that are needleſs, impeach a clauſe certain and perfect without ſuch words. 2 Lill. Abr. 711, 712, 713, 714. Hob. 313. Vide Scilicet.

Words Defamatory that are actionable, and criminal, making libels, and high treaſon; words how expounded in wills, &c. See the Heads.

Words, treaſonable. It ſeems clearly to be agreed, that by the Common law, and the ſtatute of Edward 3. words ſpoken amount only to a high miſdemeanor, and no treaſon. See Black. Com. 4 V. 80.

Work-houſes. The moſt conſiderable work-houſe in the city of London, is that in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet; wherein ſome hundreds of idle perſons are conſtantly employed in beating hemp, &c. and a great many poor children maintained and educated. Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. And in the city of Briſtol a great work-houſe is erected, for the better employing and maintaining the poor, governed by a corporation, &c. 7 & 8 W. 3. Wort, or Worth, (From the Sax. Weorth) A curtilage or country farm. Mat. Weſtm. 870.

Worthieſt of blood. An expreſſion of the lawyers, ſignifying the preference given in deſcents, to ſons before daughters.

Worthine of Land, Is a certain quantity of ground, ſo called in the manor of Kingſland in the county of Hereford: And in ſome places the tenants are called Worthies. Conſuetud. Maner. de Hedenham in Com. Bucks. 18 Edw. 3.

Wreck, (Lat. Wreccum Maris, Fr. Wreck de Mer, ſometimes writ Wrecbe, Werec, & Seup werpe, quaſi Sea-up-werp, i. e. Ejectus Maris) Signifies in our law ſuch goods as, after a ſhip-wreck, are caſt upon the land by the ſea, and left there within ſome county; for they are not wrecks ſo long as they remain at ſea, in the juriſdiction of the Admiralty. 2 Inſt. 167. Where a ſhip periſheth on the ſea, and no man eſcapes alive out of it, this is called wreck: And the goods in the ſhip being brought to land by the waves, belong to the King by his prerogative, or to the lord of the manor. 5 Rep. 106. By the Common law all wrecks belonged to the crown; and therefore they are not chargeable with any cuſtoms, and for that goods coming into the kingdom by wreck, are not imported by any body, but caſt aſhore by the wind and ſea: But it was uſual to ſeize wrecks to the King's uſe, only when no owner could be found; and in that caſe, the property being in no man, it of conſequence belongs to the King, as lord of the narrow ſeas, &c. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 5. And by the Stat. of Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 4. it is enacted, that when a man, or any living creature, eſcapes alive out of a ſhip caſt away, whereby the owner of the goods may be known, the ſhip or goods ſhall not be wreck; but the ſame ſhall be kept a year and a day by the ſheriff, to be reſtored to any perſon that can prove a property in the goods within that time; and if no body comes, then the ſame ſhall be forfeited as wreck. The year and day ſhall be accounted from the ſeizure; and if the owner of the goods dies within the year, his executors or adminiſtrators may make proof: And when the goods are bona peritura, the ſheriff may ſell them within the year; ſo as he diſpoſes of them to the beſt advantage, and accounts for them, &c. 2 Inſt. 167. 5 Rep. 106. Wood's Inſt. 214. If a man have a grant of wreck, and goods are wrecked upon his lands, and another taketh them away before ſeizure, he may bring action of treſpaſs &c. For before they are ſeized, there is no property gained, to make it felony. 1 Hawk. P. C. 94.

If goods wrecked are ſeized by perſons having no authority, the owner may have his action againſt them; or if the wrong-doers are unknown, he may have a commiſſion to enquire, &c. 2 Inſt. 166. Goods loſt by tempeſt, or piracy, &c. and not by wreck, if they afterwards come to land ſhall be reſtored to the owner. 27 Ed. 3. cap. 13. Where a ſhip is ready to ſink, and all the men therein, for the preſervation of their lives, quit the ſhip, and afterwards ſhe periſhes; if any of the men are ſaved and come to land, the goods are not loſt: A ſhip on the ſea was chaſed by an enemy; the men therein for the ſecurity of their lives forſook the ſhip, which was taken by the enemy, and ſpoiled of her goods and tackle, and then turned to ſea; after this by ſtreſs of weather ſhe was caſt on land, where it happened her men ſafely arrived; and it was reſolved that this was no wreck. 2 Inſt. 167. If a wreck happens by any fault or negligence in the maſter or mariners, the maſter muſt make good the loſs; but if the ſame was occaſioned by tempeſt, enemies, &c. he ſhall be excuſed: And making holes in ſhips, or doing any thing wilfully tending to the loſs thereof, is felony, by Stat. 12 Ann. Which act requires juſtices of peace to command aſſiſtance for preſerving ſhips in danger of wrecks on the coaſts; and officers of men of war, and other ſhips, are to be aiding, &c. under the penalty of 100 l. No perſon ſhall enter any ſuch ſhip without leave from the commander, or a conſtable, &c. And perſons carrying away goods from ſuch ſhips, are liable to pay treble value; but the perſons giving aſſiſtance, ſhall be paid by the maſters a reaſonable reward for ſalvage, &c. 12 Ann. St. 2. c. 18. See Pilot. Mariners ſhip-wrecked how relieved abroad, by Stat. 1 & 9 Geo. 2. See Stat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 19. For enforcing the laws againſt perſons, who ſhall ſteal or detain ſhip-wrecked goods, and for the relief of perſons ſuffering loſſes thereby: Whereby it is enacted (amongſt other things) That perſons convicted of plundering, ſtealing, &c. ſhip-wrecked goods, &c. or of obſtructing the eſcape of any perſon from a wreck, or of putting out falſe lights to bring any ſhip or veſſel into danger, ſhall ſuffer death. Vide Mariner.

Writ, (Breve in Sax. Writan, i. e. Scribere) In general is the King's precept, in writing under ſeal, iſſuing out of ſome court to the ſheriff, or other perſon, and commanding ſomething to be done touching a ſuit or action, or giving commiſſion to have it done. Terms de Ley. 1 Inſt. 73. Alſo a writ is ſaid to be a formal letter of the King's, in parchment ſealed with a ſeal, directed to ſome judge, officer, or miniſter, &c. at the ſuit or plaint of a ſubject, requiring to have a thing done, for the cauſe briefly expreſſed, which is to be diſcuſſed in the proper court according to law. Old Nat. Br. 4. Shep. Abr. 245. Of writs there are divers kinds, in many reſpects; ſome writs are grounded on rights of action, and ſome in nature of commiſſions; ſome mandatory and extrajudicial, and others remedial; and ſome are patent or open, and ſome cloſe or ſealed up; ſome writs iſſue at the ſuit of parties; ſome are of office, ſome ordinary, and others of privilege; and ſome writs are directed to the ſheriffs, and in ſpecial caſes to the party, &c. 1 Inſt. 289. 2 Inſt. 39. 7 Rep. 20.

The writs in civil actions are either original or judicial: Original writs are iſſued out in the court of Chancery, for the ſummoning a defendant to appear, and are granted before the ſuit is begun, to begin the ſame; and judicial writs iſſue out of the court where the original is returned, after the ſuit is begun: The originals bear date in the name of the King; but judicial writs bear teſte in the name of the chief juſtice: And it is obſerved, that a writ without a teſte is not good, for the time may be material when it was taken out, and it is proved by the teſte; and if it be out of the Common law courts, it muſt bear date ſome day in term, (not being Sunday) but in Chancery writs may be iſſued in vacation as well as term-time, as that court is always open; alſo there are to be fifteen days between the teſte and return of all writs, where the ſuit is by original; but by ſtatute delays in actions by reaſon of fifteen days between the teſte and return of writs in perſonal actions, and ejectments, are remedied. F. N. B. 51, 147. 2 Inſt. 40. Lutw. 337. 13 Car. 2. cap. 2.

Writs in actions are likewiſe real; concerning the poſſeſſion of lands, called Writs of Entry, or of right touching the property, &c. Perſonal, relating to goods, chattels, and perſonal injuries; and mixed, for the recovery of the thing, and damages. 2 Inſt. 39. And writs may be poſſeſſory, of a man's own poſſeſſion; or anceſtrel, of the ſeiſin and poſſeſſion of his anceſtor: And there are certain writs of prevention or anticipation; and of reſtitution, &c. But the moſt common writs in daily uſe, are in debt, detinue, treſpaſs, action upon the caſe, accompt, and covenant, &c. which with others muſt be rightly directed, or they will be naught. F. N. B. Style 42, 237. And in all writs care is to be taken, that they be laid and formed according to the cauſe or ground of them, and ſo purſued in the proceſs thereof: Though the writ in ſome caſes may be general; and the count or declaration ſpecial. Hob. 18, 84, 251. After the action is fixed on, for a wrong done, or right detained, ſuch a writ muſt be taken out as is ſuitable to the action; for the writ is different from the action; though they are often confounded: The writ is to be grounded upon the action, and is the means to bring the plaintiff to his right. Wood's Inſt. 560.

The King's writs cannot be denied to the ſubject; and it is regularly true, that no man ſhall be puniſhed for ſuing of writs in the King's courts, be it of right or wrong: But writs may be abated in ſeveral caſes, &c. Ibid. An original writ defective in form is abateable; but no abatement of the writ is admitted after judgment in the cauſe, the writ being allowed by the pleadings and proceedings; and a writ that did not purſue the exact form of the regiſter, has been held good. 2 Lill. Abr. 717. Hob. 51. 3 Nelſ. Abr. 575. Writs judicial, if erroneous, may be amended; original writs are not amendable, if the error be by default of the party who gave inſtructions; yet a new original may be taken out, where it is not amendable. 2 Lill. 716.

Writs may be renewed every term, until a defendant is arreſted; but in B. R. if the latitat be not renewed in five terms, a new writ is to be taken out, and the plaintiff may not renew the old one. The ſheriff's bailiffs cannot execute a writ directed to the ſheriff, without his warrant; and if in a writ ſeveral perſons are included, (for four defendants may be in one writ) there muſt be ſeveral warrants from the ſheriff to execute the ſame. Comp. Attorn. All writs are to be returned and filed in due time, to avoid poſt-terminums; and it is very unſafe to keep writs unfiled, becauſe the filing them is the warranty for the proceedings: And where a writ is iſſued out directed to the ſheriff, when it comes to his hands, though the plaintiff requires the writ back again, the ſheriff muſt return and file it in the court where returnable; unleſs the plaintiff procure a writ of ſuperſedeas. 2 Lill. Abr. 720. Attachment lies againſt ſheriffs, &c. for not executing a writ, or for doing it oppreſſively by force, extorting money thereon, or not doing it effectually, thro' any corrupt practice. Vide 8 Rep. 86. The court of B. R. cannot give judgment of a writ but where it is before them; and has deferred to quaſh it, becauſe the defendant was not preſent in court. 1 Ld. Raym. 618, 620. See Arreſts, Variance, &c.

Writ of Aſſiſtance, Is a writ iſſuing out of the Exchequer, to authoriſe any perſon to take a conſtable, or other publick officer, to ſeize goods or merchandize prohibited and uncuſtomed, &c. And there is a writ of this name iſſued out of the Chancery, to give poſſeſſion of land. Stat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 1.

Writ of Delivery, In what caſes grantable, 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 11. ſ. 30.

Writ of Entry. See Entry.

Writ of Inquiry of Damages, Is a judicial writ, that iſſues out to the ſheriff upon a judgment by default, in action, of the caſe, covenant, treſpaſs, trover, &c. commanding him to ſummon a jury to enquire what damages the plaintiff hath ſuſtained occaſione præmiſſorum; and when this is returned with the inquiſition, the rule for judgment is given upon it; and if nothing be ſaid to the contrary, judgment is thereupon entered. 2 Lill. Abr. 721. This writ lies on a nihil dicit, non ſum informatus, or a demurrer; but not upon a verdict; and it is executed before the ſheriff, or his deputy, at the which time both parties have the liberty of being heard before the ſheriff, by their counſel or attornies, and evidence may be given on both ſides: It is the duty of the jury diligently to inquire what damages have been ſuſtained by the plaintiff, and this cannot be without evidence given them; and if where an indebitat. aſſumpſit is brought for 100 l. for goods ſold, and the defendant lets this go by default; if the plaintiff, at the executing the writ of inquiry, gives no evidence to the jury of any goods ſold or delivered to the defendant: In this caſe, the jury muſt find ſome damages, becauſe the defendant hath confeſſed the action, and admitted that there is damage; but there not being any proved, they ought to find only a penny, or ſome ſuch ſmall matter. 2 Lill. Abr. 721, 722.

If a writ of inquiry be executed without giving due notice thereof to the defendant, it ſhall be quaſhed. 2 Lill. 721. In action of covenant, judgment was given for the plaintiff in the Common Pleas by default, and a writ of inquiry of damages executed, and final judgment for the plaintiff. And on a writ of error brought in B. R. amongſt other exceptions, one was, that no day was given on the writ of inquiry, and therefore it might be a diſcontinuance; but the court reſolved, that they never give a day in C. B. on this writ, nor is it neceſſary, becauſe nothing is done but to aſcertain the damages. 1 Ld. Raym. 388. A writ of inquiry was ordered to be executed before the Lord Chief Juſtice, the action being laid for very large damages: And ſuch writ hath been ſet aſide where the jury gave too little damages; and a new writ of inquiry ordered by rule of court, on payment of coſts, &c. Mod. Caſ. in L. and E. 213, 240. A judgment ſhall not be ſet aſide, after a writ of inquiry executed, unleſs in particular caſes.

Year, (Annus) In the full extent of the word, contains a ſyſtem or cycle of ſeveral months uſually twelve; and is the time wherein the ſun goes round his compaſs through the twelve ſigns, viz. three hundred and ſixty-five days, and about ſix hours. A year is twelve months, as divided by Julius Cæſar: And the church begins the year on the firſt day of January, called New year's day; but the civil account formerly, not till March the 25th. It appears by ancient grants and charters, that our anceſtors began the year at Chriſtmas, which was obſerved here till the time of William I. commonly called the Conqueror; but afterwards, for ſome time the year of our Lord was ſeldom mentioned in grants, only the year of the reign of the *King. Year, Day, and Waſte, (Annus, Dies, & Vaſtum) Is a part of the King's prerogative, whereby he hath the profits of lands and tenements for a year and a day of thoſe that are attainted of petit treaſon or felony, whoſoever is lord of the manor whereto the lands or tenements do belong; and the King may cauſe waſte to be made on the tenements, by deſtroying the houſes, ploughing up the meadows and paſtures, rooting up the woods, &c. except the lord of the fee agree with him for the redemption of ſuch waſte; afterwards reſtoring it to the lord of the Fee. *Staundſ. This appears by Glanvill to be due to the King by his ancient prerogative, 2 Inſt. 36. cites Glanvill 7. cap. 17. fol. 59.

This chapter of Magna Charta doth expreſs that which doth belong to the King, viz. the year and the day, and omits the waſte as not belonging to him; and this is notably explained by our ancient books with an uniform conſent. 2 Inſt. 36. cites Bracton, lib. 3. fol 129, & 137. and Britton, cap. 5. fol. 14. and Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 28. and Mirror, c. 5. ſ. 2. The mirror, ſpeaking of this chapter, ſaith, Le point des terres aux felons tener per un an, eſt de ſuſie, car per la ou le roy ne duiſt aver que le gaſt de droit, ou l'an in noſme de fine pur ſalver le fief de l' eſtripment preignont les miniſters le roy ambideux. Upon all which it appears, that the King originally was to have no benefit in this caſe upon the attainder of felony, where the free land was holden of a ſubject, but only in deteſtation of the crime. Ut pœna ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat; to proſtrate the houſes, to extirpate the gardens, to eradicate his wood and to plow up the meadows of the felon; for ſaving whereof, and pro bono publico, the lords, of whom the lands were holden, were contented to yield the lands to the king for a year and a day; and therefore not only the waſte was juſtly omitted out of this chapter of Magna Charta, but thereby it is enacted, that after the year and day the land ſhall be rendered to the lord of the fee, after which no waſte can be done. 2 Inſt. 37. Serjeant Hawkins ſays it ſeems agreed, that by the Common law, upon an attainder of felony, the King had a right utterly to waſte the lands holden of any but himſelf, whereof the perſon attainted was ſeiſed of an eſtate of inheritance, either in his own or in his wife's right. And it is ſaid by ſome, that the King hath both this right, and alſo a right to hold ſuch lands for a year and a day. But it is holden by others, that the right to hold over the lands for a year and a day was given to the King in lieu of the waſte, and it ſeems implied in Magna Charta, cap. 22. which ſaying, that the King ſhall uot hold over the lands of thoſe, convicted of felony but for one year and a day, and making no mention of the waſte, it ſeems plainly to intimate, that at the time of the making that ſtatute the King was thought to have no other right but only to the year and day, 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 449. cap. 49. ſ. 8. ibid. in marg. ſays it ſeems admitted, 8 Edw. 3. Fitz-Trav. 489. Preſcription 50. That the King was intitled to the waſte, as well as to the year and day ſince that ſtatute.

And where the treatiſe of prerogativa regis, made in 17 Edw. 2. ſays, Et poſtquam dominus rex habuerit annum, diem, & vaſtum, tunc reddatur tenementum illud capitali domino feodi illius, niſi prius faciat finem pro anno, die, & vaſto; which is ſo to be expounded, that foraſmuch as it appears in the ſaid old books, that the officers and miniſters did demand both for the waſte and for year and day, that came in lieu thereof, therefore this treatiſe named both, not that doth were due, but that a reaſonable fine might be paid for all that which the King might lawfully claim. But if this act of 17 Ed. 2. be againſt this branch of Magna Charta, then it is repealed by the act of 42 Ed. 3. cap. 1. 2 Inſt. 37. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 449. cap. 49. ſ. 8. ſays, that the ſtatute de prærogativa regis, made in 17 Ed. 2. having declared the King's right to the year and day, and alſo to the waſte, it ſeems to have been the more general opinion ſince that time, that he hath a right to both. Indeed if this ſtatute had been againſt the expreſs purview of Magna Charta, it would have been clearly repealed by thoſe many ſubſequent ſtatutes, which repeal all ſtatutes contrary to Magna Charta; but being not contrary to the expreſs words of it, but only to what is argumentatively drawn from it, it may be well argued that it is ſtill in force. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 449. cap. 49. ſ. 8.

Hereby it alſo appears how neceſſary the reading ancient authors is for underſtanding of ancient ſtatutes. And out of theſe old books you may obſerve, that when any thing is given to the King in lieu or ſatisfaction of any ancient right of his crown, when once he is in poſſeſſion of the new recompence, and the ſame in charge, his officers and miniſters will many times demand the old alſo, which may turn to great prejudice, if it be be not duly and diſcreetly prevented. 2 Inſt. 37.

If there be lord, meſne, and tenant, and the meſne is attainted of felony, the lord paramount ſhall have the meſnalty, preſently; for this prerogative belonging to the King, extends only to the land, which might be waſted, in lieu whereof the year and day was granted, 2 Inſt. 37. And this is to be underſtood when a tenant in fee ſimple is attainted: for when tenant in tail, or tenant for life is attainted, there the King ſhall have the profits of the lands during the life of tenant in tail, or of the tenant for life. 2 Inſt. 37.

That be convict] Here convict, in a large ſenſe, is taken for attincti: For the nature and true ſenſe of both theſe words, ſee the firſt part of the Inſtitutes; and likewiſe for this word felony there. 2 Inſt. 37.

Of felony] Muſt be underſtood of all manner of felonies puniſhed by death, and not of petit larceny, which notwithſtanding is felony. 2 Inſt. 38. If lord and tenant are, and the tenant is attainted of felony, and the King has annum, diem, & vaſtum, yet if the lord enters without due proceſs, and the writ ſued to the eſcheator, the land ſhall be re-ſeiſed, and he ſhall anſwer for the meſne iſſues and profits. Br. Re-Seiſer, pl. 36. cites Ed. 2. and Fitz. Traverſe, 48.

The ſtatute de prærogativa Regis, cap. 15. wills, that if a felon has land, tunc Rex ſtatim illam habeat, & habeat inde annum & vaſtum & terra deſtruetur, &c. & tunc reddatur capitali domino, &c. Quære, if this word (ſtatim) ſhall be otherwiſe intended but after office found. Br. Corone, pl. 209.

Tenant by copy of court-roll by the verge in ancient demeſne committed felony, and was attainted of it, and annum, diem, & vaſtum was awarded for the King; and the reaſon ſeems to be, inaſmuch as franktenants in ancient demeſne have no other evidence but copies of court-rolls; for otherwiſe it ſeems to be of a mere copyholder out of ancient demeſne for other frank tenement. Br. Tenant per copie, &c. pl. 22. cites 3 Ed. 3.

A man was ontlawed of felony, and aliened his land to J. N. on which ſcire facias iſſued againſt him, who came and would have traverſed the felony; and the court doubted if he might traverſe it, by reaſon that he is a ſtranger to the record; but per Pigot by 7 Ed. 4. c. 2. he cannot traverſe it in caſe of felony being a ſtranger to the record; contra in caſe of treſpaſs; on which it was prayed for the King, that year, day, and waſte be adjudged for the King immediately, and ſo it was immediately from that day till a year and a day next after; quod nota. Quære, if the King may take the year and the day at what time he pleaſes; it ſeems he cannot. Br. Corone, pl. 205. cites 49 Aſſ. 2.

The King ſhall have the firſt year and day and waſte of the land of him who is attainted of felony, which comes after the attainder, and whoſoever takes the profits this year ſhall anſwer the profits to the King; per Fitzherbert. But it ſeems that this is to be underſtood after office found, or that the inqueſt which attaints him finds alſo what lands he had at the time of the felony committed, or after. And in the caſe above of 49 Aſſ. 2. the outlawry of felony was 18 Ed. 3. and writ iſſued to the coroners to inquire of his goods, lands and tenements, 48 Ed. 3. which returned that he had land, and aliened to J. N. after the outlawry; and upon this ſcire facias iſſued againſt J. N. who came and would have traverſed the felony; and the year and day was awarded to the King with the waſte. And ſo it ſeems that the King cannot take it, unleſs after office, which was thirty years after, as there. But Quære if, upon the office found, he who receives the profits the firſt year after the felony ſhall not be charged; it ſeems he ſhall per Fitzb. above; Quære the experience thereof in B. R. Br. Corone, pl. 207. cites F. N. B. fol. 144.

Year books. Reports in a regular ſeries from the reign of King Edw. 2. incluſive, to the time of Hen. 8. which were taken by the prothonotaries, or chief ſcribes of the court, at the expence of the crown, and publiſhed annually, whence they are known under the denomination of the year-books. Black. Com. 1 V. 71, 72.

Years, Eſtates for. An eſtate for years is a contract, for the poſſeſſion of lands or tenements, for ſome determinate period: and it happens where a man letteth them to another, for the term of a certain number of years, agreed between the leſſor and leſſee, and the leſſee enters thereon. If the leaſe be but for half a year, or a quarter, or any leſs time, this leſſee is reſpected as a tenant for years, and is ſtiled ſo in ſome legal proceedings. See Leaſe and Black. Com. 2 V. 140.

Yeman, or Yeoman, or Yoman, A derivative of the Saxon, geman, i. e. communis. Theſe Camd. in his Brit. pag. 105. placeth next in order to gentlemen, calling them ingenuos, whoſe opinion the ſtatute affirms, anno 6 Rich. 2. cap 4. and 20 Rich. 2. cap. 2. Sir Thomas Smith in his Republ. Anglorum, lib. 1. c. 23. calls him a yeoman, whom our law calls legalem hominem, which (ſays he) is in the Engliſh a free-born man, that may diſpend of his own free-land in yearly revenues to the ſum of forty ſhillings ſterling. Verſtegan in his Reſtitution of decayed Intelligence, cap. 10. writes, That gemen among the ancient Teutonicks, and gemein among the modern, ſignifies as much as common, and the letter g being turned into y, is written yemen, which therefore ſignifies a commoner. Yeoman alſo ſignifies and officer in the King's houſe, in the middle place between the ſergeant and the groom, as yeoman of the chandry, yeoman of the ſcullery, 33 H. 8. cap. 12. yeoman of the crown, 3 E. 4, 5. The word youngmen is uſed for yeomen, in the ſtatute 33 Hen. 8. cap. 10. Cowell. See Black. Com. 1 V. 406.

Yeven, or Yeoven, (as we uſe at the end of indentures and other inſtruments, Yeoven, the day and year firſt above written) Is derived from the Saxon, ceorian, i. e. dare, and is the ſame with given. So Dictum de Kenelworth concludes with—Yeoven, and proclaimed in the caſtle of Kenelworth the day before the calends of Nov. anno 1256. Cowell.

Yew, Is derived from the Greek ἴπλω, to hurt, and probably becauſe before the invention of guns our anceſtors made bows with this wood, with which they annoyed their enemies, and therefore they took care to plant the trees in the church-yards, where they might be often ſeen and preſerved by the people. Minſheu.

York, Cuſtom of. In the city of London, and province of York, the effects of an inteſtate after payment of his debts, are in general divided, according to the ancient univerſal doctrine of the pars rationabilis. If the deceaſed leaves a widow and children, his ſubſtance, deducting the widow's apparel and furniture of her bed-chamber, which in London is called the widow's chamber, is divided into three parts; one of which belongs to the widow, another to the children, and the third to the adminiſtrator: if only a widow, or only children, they ſhall reſpectively, in either caſe, take one moiety, and the adminiſtrator the other: if neither widow nor child, the adminiſtrator ſhall have the whole. And this portion or dead man's part the adminiſtrator was wont to apply to his own uſe, 'till the Stat. 1 Jac. 2. c. 17. declared that the ſame ſhould be ſubject to the ſtatutes of diſtribution. So that if a man dies worth 1800*l.* leaving a widow and two children, the eſtate ſhall be divided into eighteen parts; whereof the widow ſhall have eight, ſix by the cuſtom, and two by the ſtatute; and each of the children five, three by the cuſtom, and two by the ſtatute: if he leaves a widow and one child, they ſhall each have a moiety of the whole, or nine ſuch eighteenth parts, ſix by the cuſtom, and three by the ſtatute: if he leaves a widow and no child, the widow ſhall have three-fourths of the whole, two by the cuſtom, and one by the ſtatute; and the remaining fourth ſhall go by the ſtatute to the next of kin. If the wife be provided for by a jointure before marriage, in bar of her cuſtomary part, it puts her in a ſtate of nonentity, with regard to the cuſtom only; but ſhe ſhall be intitled to her ſhare of the dead-man's part, under the ſtatute of diſtributions, unleſs barred by ſpecial agreement. and if any of the children are advanced by the father in his life-time, with any ſum of money, (not amounting to their full proportionable part) they ſhall bring that portion into hotchpot with the reſt of the brothers and ſiſters, (but not with the widow,) before they are intitled to any benefit under the cuſtom: but if they are fully advanced, the cuſtom intitles them to no farther dividend. Black. Com. 2 V. 518, 519. In the province of York, the heir at Common law, who inherits any lands in fee or in tail, is excluded from any filial portion, or reaſonable part. Black. Com. 2 V. 519.
